Dear Colleen,

We are pleased to know that Mennonite Church USA has received a grant to digitize the print files of Gospel Herald and The Mennonite.

You have our full permission to digitize all issues of The Mennonite and make them available for free, with full-text access.

Best wishes in this important endeavor.

Sincerely,

A Message For The New Year From An Ancient Prophet

By Paul Shelly

As we face the New Year many questions come to our minds. We are troubled by the many problems created by a world at war. We wonder about the place of God in the whole process. In the midst of all the suffering, sorrow, and bloodshed, caused by war we find it difficult to find an adequate faith for the New Year. A sense of futility comes over us.

The prophet Habakkuk faced similar issues. He saw Babylon approaching, knowing that it would be the nation that would lead Judah into captivity. He raised three significant questions in the light of this situation. Why do the wicked prosper while the righteous suffer? Why was Babylon chosen to conquer Judah even though it was less righteous than Judah. What was the place of God in all of these events?

These problems sound like contemporary problems and, therefore, the answer that God gave to the prophet may also be helpful to us. The three answers that were given to Habakkuk are the answers that God would give to us as we think of the future.

I. God Is Still at the Center of the World

The following are the words that came to the prophet: "For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. The Lord is in his holy temple: let all the earth keep silence before him." (2:14,20) These words were needed by the prophet Habakkuk and are needed by us as we face the New Year. Life can always be approached from two points of view. The first is to look at it only in the light of current conditions. The other is to look at it in the light of God and his eternal truths. This is the first message, then, that Habakkuk would give us as we face the New Year. We dare not look at our world only in the light of the current problems. We need to learn with the prophet that God has not left the world but is still at the center of it. He still has His plan for us and for the world.

II. Sin Will Always Be Punished

The prophet received a second message from God in answer to his questions. It was the message that sin would be punished. God told him that even though Babylon would lead Judah into captivity that in time Babylon too would be destroyed for its sins. Habakkuk had to learn that he had to take a long-range view, that he couldn't judge God's purposes only in the light of current conditions.

We need this message as we face the New Year.

Many people are living as though these words were not true. They have set aside the eternal truths of the Christian religion, putting in their place other principles which they feel must be used until this crisis is over. The prophet Habakkuk would teach us that there is but one set of principles that can be used and that these truths must be used regardless of the conditions of the world. He would teach us that sin is sin even in days like these, that God doesn't set aside his spiritual laws any more than his physical laws which govern the universe. Thus, Habakkuk would teach us that sin today, as in every generation, will be punished. God's nature hasn't changed nor have his eternal principles.

If we really believe this it will make a difference in the way we approach the New Year. It will mean that we dare not merely view events in the light of the present. We must view events in the light of God's eternal truths. Thus, we dare not compromise when eternal principles are at stake. Sin is involved and even though compromise may seem an easy way out, we must remember that the day of God's judgment will come.

Mennonite settlers in the 1870s struggled through Kansas winters with something less than running water, electric lights, and heater-warmed cars. Life for them was raw and hard—very different from the comfortable living they had had in Russia and which they gave up for conscience sake.

III. The Just Shall Live by His Faith

The third part of the message which the prophet received is our message of hope for the New Year. It is the familiar passage which is repeated by Paul and which is used by Luther. "The just shall live by his faith." This was a truth that was difficult for Habakkuk to learn; but after he fully learned it, he had received a full and complete answer to his questions. The person who is not a Christian lives in the light of his surroundings. This confused the prophet. The conditions of many people with no religious outlook seemed to be far superior to that of many people who were devout followers of God. He couldn't understand this because he felt that these experiences were an index to the happiness and to the fulfillment of the purpose of life. He later learned that this wasn't true, for he discovered that conditions of life may not be permanent. All were taken into captivity and Babylon was to fall. He discovered that people without a religious faith had nothing to live for after their physical surroundings were changed.

The prophet learned that the source of happiness for the righteous was different. The source of happiness for the righteous was his own faith in God which could never be shaken. He learned that it made little difference as to the outward conditions and circumstances in life as long as he had a vital faith in God. This was all that he needed. The prophet had a hard time learning this lesson but after he learned it he could face the future with hope. This discovery meant three things to him. (3:16-19) These three phases of the true meaning of faith constitute our hope for the New Year.

1. True faith enables us to face the future with patience. Habakkuk had tried to hasten the day of God's action. He was impatient. Now he realizes that the fulfillment of the plan was in God's hand and not in his. All that was needed on his part was faith in the ultimate outcome. Thus he said according to the Revised Version: "I must wait quietly for the day of trouble." We dare not become impatient as we face the future. We must put our faith in God knowing "that he which hath begun a good work in (us) will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ."

2. Circumstances do not shape our faith but rather our faith determines our attitude to circumstances. True faith must ultimately arrive at this point. At first Habakkuk wanted to see the outcome of his faith, but now he learned that the outcome of his faith was not important. All that mattered was his faith in God. "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labour of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls: yet I will rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation." This same type of testimony has been the testimony of Job, the three Hebrew children, Paul, and Christians down through the ages. We need to learn again that faith is not dependent on circumstances or on the outcome but is an inner attitude. It "is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence and response we have to God regardless of the future.

3. Faith enables the Christian to live an over-coming and victorious life. Habakkuk does not end with the idea that faith simply means endurance. He goes beyond this to the victorious element of faith. "The Lord God is my strength, and he will make my feet like hinds' feet, and he will make me to walk upon mine high places." (3:19) The illustration describes an animal that is nimble and speedy. Habakkuk learned that the righteous man who lives by faith is the only person who can overcome all obstacles in life. It reminds us of the eleventh chapter of Hebrews where we have the roll call of those who conquered through faith. With such an approach the New Year has much to offer for the Christian, for we too can live by our Faith and conquer through Him who loved us and gave Himself for us.

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

SURRENDERING A CHRISTIAN RESPONSIBILITY

It was on the Saturday afternoon before Christmas that flowers were being distributed to shut-ins. The persons distributing the flowers said to the recipient, "This is a gift of the community fund sponsored by the American Legion." I was in a Mennonite home where such a flower was being given. It struck me as strange indeed that the American Legion, an organization of war veterans, should be distributing Christmas gifts in the homes of church members generally and in a Mennonite home particularly. Upon inquiry I discovered that a substantial share of the money for this fund was raised by contributions from Christian churches, among them a Mennonite Church.

What Does It Mean?

Upon reflection of this incident a number of questions come to mind. Why upon the birthday of the head of the Church does an organization of war veterans distribute benevolences? Why do Christian churches raise funds and distribute gifts in the name of the American Legion instead of in the name of Christ? Why should the Christian churches leave this work to another agency rather than do it unitedly as the body of Christ in a community? Why of all churches should a Mennonite church contribute to a war veterans organization in the light of its own heritage as a peace church?

Can It Be?

Can it be that Christian churches are turning over the work of Christian charity to secular organizations as the churches have turned over education to the state, fellowship to service clubs, social fraternities, and secular societies, and the economic needs of its members to public welfare agencies? It is indeed strange fruit that the modern Christian Church is bearing. Through the years the Church has shed one responsibility after another much as a tree sheds its leaves each fall and stands there cold and bare through the long winter season.

Why don't churches accept responsibility instead of constantly rejecting it? Why doesn't the Mennonite Church stick to its course even if others depart? Why not fulfill the mission in life that God assigned to it? Will not our church if a member ask for bread give him bread rather than a stone?

THE SUPREMACY OF LOVE

VOLUME LX

There are many great virtues, but love is the greatest. There are many traits, which we may admire in people, but first place in our heart goes to those who love most freely. Righteousness is a great quality but it can easily sour into self-righteousness. Justice is admirable, but pushed too far it may become mercilessness. Faith gives purpose and integration to life, especially to Christians. We admire men of great faith. Spiritual diagnosticians tell us that the majority of people today are suffering from paralysis of analysis—that they lack faith. We very much need faith today, but it is not that which we need most. Hope does not come easily in a time like this. Our life burns to ashes without it, but it is not that which we need most. Love is what we need most. Love is the fundamental characteristic of a child of Him who is Love. Love never fails. Faith can, for it can be misplaced, as it is so tragically today. Hope can, for it may have an unsure foundation, as the tumbled dream-houses of history so clearly illustrate. But love is from God and of God. It is the core of all right relationships—between man and God, between man and man, and in man himself. We need men of great faith, we need men of great hope, but most of all we need men of great love. God grant us such men! "And now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love."

LOVE AND SUFFERING

We feel that we can generally tell whether someone loves us. That feeling pre-supposes a definition of love. It readily suggests that someone is concerned about our welfare. A friend of ours defines love as "A vital concern for the welfare of another personality." The question then arises, "What constitutes the welfare of anyone?" Does welfare mean protection from all hardship and suffering? For the answer we turn to the relationship between God the Father and His only begotten Son in whom he was well-pleased. The Father in love pointed to a cross, and the Son in love accepted it. Welfare includes hardship and suffering, but not for self at the expense of anyone else. Christ suffered, not to harm anyone in the world, but to make salvation available to all. Such suffering seems to be in God's definition of welfare. Such suffering no one is likely to resent. God's definition of love is written in the Cross of Calvary. But the Cross is foolishness to many today.

The Mennonite enters into its sixtieth volume with this issue. What will this volume be like? It will be much like its immediate predecessors, but it is to be better. Some high points of our aim for this volume are: 1. High quality articles. By this we mean articles of profound thought written in a very clear, understandable, and interesting manner. We believe that you want a discussion of subjects which touch the most vital issues in your life and that you want them written in such a way as to appeal. 2. Theological articles. These are not to be academic but vital for practical solutions. A series on "What Is the Church?" will appear in February. 3. Inspirational articles which will plant one's feet on higher ground. 4. Our general attitude is to be one of sounding the chimes instead of ringing a noisy gong. May we have your sustaining prayer for the publication of this paper.

A PICTURE VERSION OF THE SCRIPTURES

Pictoscript—the picture version of the Scriptures is something new and very unique in Sunday School material. Editor Thelma Diener says, "The idea of Pictoscript is just what the sub-title suggests. It is to translate the Bible, not from Greek or Hebrew into English, but from abstract words into life-like pictures. Our purpose consists of several purposes all flowing like branches of a river into one main stream. One small branch purpose is to utilize children's all-consuming fascination with 'comics' and direct it into religious educational channels. Another branch purpose is to present Christianity even more attractively than history and arithmetic and baseball are presented in public school. Another branch purpose is to stimulate Sunday School attendance. There are many others but our main and ultimate purpose is to show the Bible in such a way that boys and girls will, of their own free choice, learn it and love it and let it direct their lives. In order to do this, we are taking over the best in an art form which appeals to some 100,000,000 Americans everyday. That the comic strip technique can be dignified, you can see when you examine Pictoscript. That it is effective, no one can deny." Pictoscript does not attempt to interpret the Bible. It simply seeks to translate the Bible into visual impression. Its aim is to leave all interpretation to the local church. The editors believe that the Bible should be intimately known by all Christians. For a sample and information write to Young Readers Press Inc., 113 West 57th Street, New York 19, N. Y.

Peace-Time Conscription

Since there seems to be a concerted effort to foist peace time conscription upon our country before the present heartrending war has even ended. It appeared imperative that the Executive Committee of the General Conference should express its deep concern in the matter. The following letter was therefore addressed to President Roosevelt, to Vice President Wallace and to all members of both houses of Congress. It may not be amiss for individuals to address letters to their respective members of Congress.

November 29, 1944

The Executive Committee of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America appreciates and is heartened by the utilitarian, educational, humanitarian, moral, and other reasons advanced against peace-time conscription and military regimentation as documented, among others, by the following bodies:

The Railroad Brotherhood
Illinois State Federation of Labor
The Board of Trustees of the National Child Labor Committee
The United States Student Assembly
National Congress of Parents and Teachers
The United Council of Church Women
The National Catholic Women's Union
The National Commission of Christian Higher Education of the Association of American Colleges
The General Conference of the Methodist Church

The Northern Baptist Convention
The Annual Conference of the Church of the Brethren
The International Convention of the Disciples of Christ

However, for us these are not the main and binding reasons for being vitally concerned and unalterably against such a policy based on physical force. There is one ground higher and more compelling than any or all of these:

The Mennonite Church—sometimes designated with the Friends and the Brethren as the "Historic Peace Churches"—holds that it is definitely and irreconcilably incompatible with the life and teachings and the saving gospel of Jesus Christ for His followers to participate actively in carnal warfare; and that righteousness, goodwill, justice, mercy, and love must be the basis of national as well as of individual conduct and durable peace and well-being.

We therefore respectfully request and urge that you use your good offices in upholding this fundamental principle of religious liberty of our beloved country, and that you oppose any change in the pertinent American and constitutional provision, so that freedom of religion and conscience may not perish from the face of the earth.

To that end may Divine guidance ever be yours,
Very respectfully,
THE CONFERENCE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
C E. Krehbiel

Church Building Fund of the Western District Conference

Some of our churches operate on a budget plan; others arrange their program of collections for three months in advance. Therefore, when the Board of Trustees recently sent out letters to churches to send in contributions for the Church Building Fund by January 1, 1945, (in accordance with the resolution passed at the Western District Conference session October 18 and 19) we received a few replies similar to the following:

"The matter was discussed very favorably and the following action taken:

"I was to inform you that our church will do its part in meeting that quota. However, due to the fact that we follow a budget plan to finance our church program and so support our conference treasuries, we are unable to meet that obligation by the first of January 1945. . . . We want to do our part and do it gladly. . . . We hope you will understand and appreciate our situation. We wish you God's richest blessings in your work at Trustees."

"Since it is so near the close of the year, our Sundays, which might otherwise have been available for special offerings, are filled. It was decided to wait until the next year before we take further action on this request."

We thank the ministers and treasurers who have thus sent an explanation of their church program as it relates to this contribution. We know that in their systematic plan of giving they will not forget this work of building churches for needy communities. We shall gladly accept contributions at the time the collection is taken.

One minister also reported by saying that a collection had been taken on a certain Sunday but that, due to bad roads, not many people were able to attend. He said: "We plan to have another collection for this Church Building Fund as soon as more members can come to church again."

Send your contributions through your local church treasurer to Mr. Ferd Neufeld, Burrton, Kansas, Treasurer of the Board of Trustees of the Western District Conference.

We are thankful to all our ministers and all our church people for their interest in the work of the Western District Conference. We are also most thankful to our Heavenly Father who so bounteously has blessed us so that we might work for Him by helping in the work of our conference.

Sincerely,
A. Theodore Mueller,
Secretary

Why Don't More People In India Become Christians?

By John Thiessen

This question has been asked by serious minded Christians, both national and foreign, for many years. Before we make an attempt at suggesting replies to this question, let us remember that after all there are some six million people living in India today who are Christians. But to compare this number with a number now approaching four hundred million, then there is a place for the question why not more accept Christ.

One of our missionary neighbors, Rev. M. P. Davis, has made a careful study of this question, and in his study and observation he has found five answers to the above question; and I wish to pass these answers on to our friends and churches in America, in a very abbreviated form. My purpose in doing this is to help the readers, and all who are interested in India to intercede for India at the throne of grace with more understanding of the problem involved. The suggested answers are as follows:

I

Generally speaking all people interested in India feel that the caste system is India's greatest hindrance. That it is a formidable hindrance is certainly true. But there are hindrances which are still more subtle and more underlying than even the caste system. One of these debilitating sources of weakness or hindrance in becoming followers of Christ is the almost utter lack of character building in the child; especially in the son, and very especially in the oldest son. As a baby the child's will is never curbed or guided. If he wants food from mother's breast he must never be denied, even though he is four years old. If he wants anything from older children or adults, it must be given if at all physically possible. But very early in his life the pendulum swings into the other extreme for him. When the child comes to the age when he should begin to make intelligent choices he is absolutely denied all freedom. The whole household, which includes the parents and usually many relatives, forces him into absolute conformity to what is custom or to what is their will. He is not permitted to deviate to the right or to the left without the consent of those above him; even though he himself is already a man with grey hair. What does this situation do to the person's mind? He dares not think for himself. He never learns to make an independent decision. He is not an individual. He is only a subordinate part of a machine. When a question is asked of him, he looks around to see whether some elder is near to give him a hint or to answer for him. Now, will such a mind have the strength to determine to accept and follow Christ, when his whole environment pulls in the other direction? Can he break away from the clutches of conformity in which he has grown up? It is almost impossible.

With the girls and women it is still worse. The dictum is: "As a mother she is in charge of her father. As a married woman she is in charge of her husband.

As a mother she is in charge of her son." Yet she has enormous power. But this power is used almost to perfection to help keep the "status quo." If in any women's meeting, perhaps led by a lady missionary, any young woman becomes a bit free in responding to what is said, the older women just look up to her with a raised brow, and the bud of freedom is forthwith crushed. It is nothing short of a miracle if such initiative-crushed and personality-curbed individuals accept the way of Christ.

II

A second great hindrance which keeps people from becoming Christian is the importance of a son. "Through a son one conquers worlds. Though a son's son one obtains immortality. And through a son's grandson one attains the world of the sun." So says the great Hindu law-giver, Manu. The son has two purposes to fulfill in life. One is to perform his father's funeral ceremony, in order to keep the father's spirit out of hell, so that it may be incarnated in another body. And the other purpose is to have a son of his own. If the wife does not become the mother of a son, the husband is supposed to take another wife so that he perchance may have a son born to him. To hear the heartbreaking sobs and wailings of a father whose son has died, especially if he is an only son, is pathetic indeed. "Who will bury me; who will bury me," is the lamentation. And if a son changes his religious loyalty and becomes a Mohammedan or a Christian, the parents consider him dead, and the sorrow is exceedingly great. This faith of the immeasurable importance of a man has been propagated for twenty-five centuries, and has become a part of the soul of India. Is it a surprise that a son hesitates a long time before he becomes a Christian, where he knows he will be just "one of the brethren"? "Let me first go and bury my father."

III

Another difficulty that keeps the Hindu mind from Christ is Pantheism; which means: God in everything. This implies that all life, not only human life, is sacred, and worthy of being worshiped. This belief comes especially to the forefront in cow-worship. Now, the Christian religion does not hold to the sacredness of all life; thus the Hindu is repelled by a religion which permits the taking of animal life. The Hindu has no conception of the biological fact that life is destroyed all around us in order to maintain the higher forms of life. His pantheistic faith is offended when Christians do not admit that it is sin to take animal life. Mr. Gandhi, perhaps the leading Hindu mind, says: "The principle is that all life is one and we have to treat the sinner and the saint alike; as the Gita says, we have to look with equal eyes on a learned pandit (teacher, J. T.), a dog, and a dog eater" (In Harijan of September 5, 1936).

Again Mr. Gandhi says: "Rats and fleas are messengers of God. God speaks to us through them. They have as much right to live as I, and there is no reason why I should not exterminate myself rather than that I exterminate them." (Harijan, June 8, 1935.)

Now, will such a mind see uniqueness in Christ and Christianity and be able to grasp the great truth that man is created in the image of God? It is next to impossible.

IV

Another reason for the comparatively small number of people accepting Christ in India, is the indifference between what is true and what is false; between good and evil; between right and wrong. Good and evil are ascribed to the same source. White and black are simultaneously called the same. This lack of distinction between good and evil is a direct result of pantheism. It is a vagueness which sees no need of criticising itself. It has no standard of reference. The name "God" is only a convenient term, but has no unique content. This vagueness has no appreciation of, "Be ye perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect." It brings with it the dangerous tolerance of calling all religions equally good, thinking them all pathways to the same goal. So why accept, "I am THE way." For this reason the Hindu religious books are vague. There are very many very beautiful sayings, but there is no "Thus saith the Lord," or "But I say unto you." Such definite clearness is not acceptable to the Hindu leaders, nor to the common man. Vagueness and ambiguity are more pleasant and less exacting. To be told that God was in Christ, fully revealing Himself to the world (Col. 2:9) is offensive to a lover of vagueness and to one who is indifferent to an absolute standard. Therefore, to a pantheistic Hindu, who loves vagueness and who speaks and asserts as it seems expedient, the clear note of the gospel does not appeal, which says: "Ye must be born again." Such clearness sounds like a hard saying to him, "who can listen to it?" let alone accept it?

"Ye are divinities on earth. Sinner? It is a sin to call man so. It is a standing libel on human nature." Thus spoke the famous Hindu leader, Vivekanandan, to a Chicago audience in 1893 (see Cave: Hinduism or Christianity, p. 186). This shows us at a glance why comparatively few Hindus, especially of the upper ranks, accept Christ. There is no, or a perverted, conception of sin. Where there is no difference between truth and untruth; the difference between right and wrong is of no consequence; where ethics does not count; there one cannot look for a positive conception of sin. Israel had a keen conception that sin was something hateful to a righteous God. Sin was something that separates us from God. Hence, God could reveal Himself to Israel, but not to pantheistic Hinduism. The spiritual giants of Judaism said: "We and our fathers have sinned." When the Jew sought God it was along an ethical road and not along a road of abstractions, and merely in the intellectual sphere. To pantheistic Hinduism "the self" is one with God, yes, it IS God. Hence the self is unaffected by actions which belong to the body and to the material. There is no consistent doctrine of moral obligation toward God or man. This leads in practical life to an indifferent passivity in the presence of injustice, oppression, and evil. This belief that the self or the soul cannot be affected by wrongdoing excludes the idea of sin and the need for transformation of character. Therefore, the Hindu resents the Biblical conception of sin. It is repulsive to him. So the need of repentance, conversion, and especially the need of a Saviour is strange to his thinking.

Conclusion

The above five reasons why comparatively few Hindus accept Christ may seem like a solid mountain range with five high peaks. It is true that mountains cannot be easily removed. But the Christian question is, can it be removed? Or can a highway be built over it? By the grace of God we can say "yes indeed," there are already paths leading over it, and some six million people living today, have found those paths. Someday there will be highways. We read about the prodigal son, "when he came to himself," thought of coming to the Father came into his mind. In India many have come to themselves and have found the Father heart of God. There are today many signs of self-examination and self-criticism, which are signs of real life coming. It was asked of a Hindu, not of a Christian: what India needed most. He, the Hindu, replied: "A Christian conscience." Let us keep on calling India to the Father. Let us keep on praying for India.

Our Ministry of Education

"HOW MUCH DO YOU WANT?"

The above question has been asked repeatedly in an answer to the message addressed to our ministers and to other people whose interest in the Kingdom of God has found helpful expression. This message was sent out under the date of December 2, 1944, and was published in The Mennonite of December 12, with a brief comment by the Editor. The above question was one of the early and most frequent reactions to the message.

The question was always raised with evident sincerity and with real interest. That attitude is encouraging because it shows thoughtfulness, a willingness to understand and a consecrated, expectant effort Godward which leads people to become truly helpful.

The word want is often used in place of the word need. It is in this sense that we think of it as we face the future of our work. A need is a call to do something to meet that need. Real budgets are based on needs. The needs are estimated on the basis of what is not but ought to be. It is interesting to find human needs and to learn how to provide for them. The writer has been assigned the most interesting task to help all of us see more clearly the needs which are about us. Thus far he has tried to do this by visiting Freeman Junior College, Bluffton College, and Bethel College. He came not as an inspector but as a visitor in order to see and feel the life of the schools. He remained six or more days at each place. He has also visited Civilian Public Service camps, dairy units, farm units, hospital units, missions, and churches. At all of these places he brought messages but he was especially concerned about the messages which he could receive in order that he might relay them clearly to you.

In addition to these institutional contacts your Minister-at-Large has sought and found many personal contacts with those in service. This has come about both through face to face meetings and through letters. Every crowded train or bus affords opportunities for personal meetings which reveal needs that should be met. One may think of himself as a stranger among strangers but at a time like this all people feel needs as they never have before and they are receptive toward words and attitudes which encourage.

What is true of those in the service of the Government is also true of those in service of missions, schools, and the church. One learns to see in a larger perspective and also to see more clearly what is really needed.

The first answer to the question "How Much Do You Want?" is, we want your interest. It is still true, as in the days of Nehemiah when he was trying to rebuild ravaged Jerusalem, that people have "a mind to work" when they have become interested.

The question which we have just considered has given rise to other questions which will be considered week by week for a while. Meanwhile we wish you a New Year full of deep and abiding experiences and satisfactions.

—J. H. Langenwalter

Important Postscript! In the middle paragraph under the caption of "Our Ministry of Education," found on page 12 of The Mennonite dated December 12, 1944, we asked for "a list of the names and addresses of those of our Church who are in the 'service' and of their parents, or those nearest in relationship of blood or friendship." After more than two weeks less than 10 per cent of the lists have arrived. Some of them from the most distant churches. They were prepared and sent by busy ministers and laymen. Thanks.

The letters to be sent to those in service are ready to go. Answers to some of the letters which we could send have been received from as far as Atlantic and Pacific states. About half of these came by Air Mail. Let us remember that those in service are uprooted. They would go home tomorrow if they could. And they do not want a repetition of the present wave of moral insanity in the world. Some day some of them are going to return. Then their attitude toward the Church will be determined considerably by the attitude which we are taking toward them now.

Christmas is past now with all of its Martha-like busy ness. Will not somebody see to it in each group that the requested lists are made available shortly? Thank you.

We desire the lists of parents or others near of relationship because these also need helpful information and encouragement during these days of wistful waiting.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Orlando Wiebe, Chicago, Illinois

In Isaiah 5:8-24 we have a series of six "woes" pronounced against sins prevalent in the time of the prophet (about 700 B. C.), back before the Exile of Judah. The Northern Kingdom, Israel, had already fallen, but the foolish people of Judah took no heed, and the prophet undertook to warn them of their impending fate. In reading our Old Testament we find that certain problems are age old and not merely modern. Perhaps, the prophet has a word to say to us in our day.

JANUARY 9—"Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place, that they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth." Isaiah 5:8.

This is a Woe pronounced against a nation and a people who were guilty of the sins of greed and materialism. Isaiah is not condemning mere individual sins, but rather the collective sins of the whole nation. Woe No. 1 is upon "them that join house to house, that lay field to field." The rich were becoming richer, the poor were becoming poorer. A few at the top were getting everything, while the great mass of people were left landless and enslaved, although there could have been enough to go around. The prophet pronounces certain doom upon such a nation. Such a social order or nation in any age is steeped in the sin of the greed of its rulers and must reform or perish.

JANUARY 10—"Woe unto them that rise up early in the morning that they may follow strong drink; that continue until night, till wine inflame them!" Isaiah 5:11.

Woe No. 2 is upon those who waste their time at strong drink and riotous feasting. This sin leads directly out of the preceding one, for those who have more than their just share of this world's goods are tempted to become idle and vicious. Over-indulgence in any form goes against the Christian, and especially the Mennonite doctrine of the simple life.

JANUARY 11—"Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart rope: That say, Let him make speed, and hasten his work, that we may see it: and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel draw nigh and come, that we may know it!" Isaiah 5:18-19.

This Woe is directed against those who openly flout their disbelief in God's retributive justice, and actually in their sin dare God to do anything about it. In times of prosperity and good favor, Christians are prone to forget that God is not only a loving God, but that he is also a Just God. Even before the Israelites discovered that God was a loving God, they discovered him to be a Just God. We too must remember that God is also a Just God.

JANUARY 12—"Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter!" Isaiah 5:20.

Woe No. 4 is against those who try to justify themselves by calling their wickedness good. Someone has said that possibly the Unforgivable Sin is to be understood in terms of this verse. To get into the position where you could not distinguish good from evil, this would be the Sin from which there is no escape. Only when we are willing to call evil in ourselves and others, evil, can we also choose the good in ourselves and others.

JANUARY 13—"Woe unto them that are wise in their own eyes, and prudent in their own sight!" Isaiah 5:21.

The fifth woe is against those blinded by conceit. Here Isaiah points to a sin that is prevalent in all of us. Especially those of us who are concerned with education. It is so easy to feel that "we" in our knowledge have become self-sufficient, and yet it may be this very conceit which blinds us from our greater service to God and His kingdom.

JANUARY 14—"Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine, and men of strength to mingle strong drink: Which justify the wicked for rewards and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him!" Isaiah 5:22-23.

The sixth and final Woe reminds us again of the sinfulness of those who are intemperate in the use of strong drink, especially those who brag about their ability at drinking to distract attention from even worse misdeeds that they are committing. Isaiah was a prophet of doom and of woe because he lived in a time when sinning was at an excess. We again live in a time when sinning is at an excess, and the words of the prophet ring true for us across the centuries just as they did for Israel so long ago.

The German-English Academy, Rosthern, Saskatchewan

The German-English Academy at Rosthern was founded in 1903, at the first organization meeting held at the church of Eigenheim. The Mennonite pioneers of Saskatchewan had come from various European countries and from different states of the Union, and although there was a great diversity of opinion on most subjects, they were agreed that to preserve the "faith of their fathers" and to make their way of life both intelligible and acceptable to the growing generation, they must have a school. The aim of the school was to prepare teachers for the district schools and Christian church workers for the ministry, Sunday school, and community leadership in general.

Hundreds of teachers have since come from the Academy. Many ex-students are serving their communities as teachers, ministers, and Sunday school workers. Many others are serving outside of our Mennonite districts. There are about thirty of our graduates entering the teaching profession this year. Someone remarked recently that "there is no better way to repay the hospitality extended to our Mennonite people, than by giving our country good Christian teachers."

The Academy teaches all the subjects prescribed for the Saskatchewan high school grades from nine to twelve, grade twelve being equivalent to the freshman year of college. In addition, about one-fourth of the school time is devoted to the teaching of religion and German. All religious instruction, except Mennonite history, is taught in German. Although there are many students who have a good command of the German, they all probably find it easier to express themselves in English.

There are three full-time teachers engaged at the Academy. They are all ex-students of the institution. The principal, K. G. Toews, M.S., B.Ed.; and Mr. P. P. Rempel, B.A., B.Ed., received their education at the University of Saskatchewan. Mr. D. Paetkau took his teacher's training at the Saskatoon Normal School. Rev. J. G. Rempel, who teaches on two afternoons each week of the five winter months, received his education in South Russia.

The students of the Academy come from five provinces of the Dominion. About 80 per cent come from Saskatchewan, 12 per cent from Alberta, and the rest from Ontario, Manitoba, and British Columbia.

The student fees are kept at a very low level. The tuition fee ranges from twenty dollars for grade nine to fifty dollars for grade twelve. Room and board cost $145 for the nine-months term. In spite of the low fees the school has been self-supporting for the last few years. All gifts have been used to liquidate the old debt, and at present they are used to provide a fund for enlarging the school. The school at present is overcrowded, and a large number of applications had to be rejected. There are 142 students enrolled at present. Last year's enrollment was 129. All the students are housed in five dormitories and in a few private homes in town. Three of the dormitories belong to the school, the other two are rented temporarily.

The majority of our students today are preparing for the teaching profession. Two are planning to go to foreign mission fields, and many others are still undecided about their future.

Of Mennonite church papers, the students read Der Bote, Rundschan, Mennonite Weekly Review, Missionary News and Notes, etc. I don't know which is most widely read but I am sure they would also like to read The Mennonite.

There are plans for expanding the school into a junior college and also to enlarge the present high school facilities so that it may better serve more and more of our young people.

*This small gray stone
I found upon the beach;
The waves have washed its sides
And thrown it upon the rocky shore,
The storms have tossed it to and fro
And all its edges smoothed;
Its sharp rough corners, all
Are rounded off; until
It lies within my hand
A shapely thing and beautiful.
Is this the reason then, that storms are sent?
To make rough edges smooth
And take away the corners sharp,
And shape our lives through storm and stress?
And though we may be tossed on lonely shores
We may find voice to speak His praise,
And resting safe within God's hand
The marvel is, He finds us beautiful.*

Can We Help China in Her Present Difficulty?

By D. V. Wiebe

Upon my arrival at Kutsing, headquarters of the Friends' Ambulance Unit in China, the director of the Unit discussed with me the possibilities open for my services. Two medical teams of the Unit were at that time operating close behind the front lines. They were in momentary difficulties and were contemplating a change of location. At the best, it would take a number of months to make such a change and get started again. A number of requests had come in to the Unit for help from mission hospitals, the mission hospitals having had to reduce their personnel to that of a skeletal organization. One of these requests was from the Canadian Mission Hospital at Chungking, one of the best equipped hospitals in Free China. Even before I left the homeland it had been my desire to go to Chungking. I expressed by preference for Chungking, and the Unit approved. By truck and river boat I made the five hundred mile trip. It was made in six days, which was a record time for the conditions under which it had to be made.

In Chungking I was met by Dr. A. S. Allen, superintendent of the Canadian Mission Hospital, the only foreign doctor in the hospital, a hospital of 225 beds. In a few days I was quite at home in the hospital where I worked for the next twelve months. When the time came for me to leave this hospital I left with a heavy feeling of regret. I had learned to love the patients, the people in the surrounding community, and especially the staff with whom I worked. The farewell which was given me by the hospital personnel touched me deeply and will remain ever fresh in my memory.

It may interest the readers to know that for three months I lived in the house and ate at the table of a family which had been missionary neighbors to our General Conference Mission in Honan Province. They often spoke about our mission, and especially about our workers in that mission. Everything they said was highly complimentary. They had two children, the youngest born on the mission field, had been delivered by Dr. Pannabecker. He is held in high esteem by this family.

I had brought with me from America a number of letters of introduction to prominent men in Chungking. Through these letters personal friendships were soon formed. I value highly the contacts I had with the representatives of United China Relief, the American Red Cross, the American Bureau of Medical Aid to China, and others. Particularly do I value the frequent informal discussions we had in one of the offices. Here I want to mention especially two relief organizations, the International Relief Committee of China and the American Advisory Committee. These two organizations do a tremendous amount of work on the distributing end. They receive funds from all over the world, and the amount they distribute runs into high figures. There is very little overlapping. The International Relief Committee distributes medical and surgical supplies, while the American Advisory Committee is active in the field of famine relief. It would be interesting to write an article about each one of these organizations but here it will be sufficient to say that they both do their distribution mainly through mission channels. The International Relief Committee works directly through mission hospitals, and the American Advisory Committee through local committees composed of representatives of all the missions and churches in a famine area. Through time and experience these organizations have developed a very just and impartial method of distribution. It would be a point of interest to know if our two representatives of the Mennonite Central Committee have also attached themselves to such a local mission committee and thereby participate in the distribution of famine relief funds.

While in Chungking I had urgent request for help from four different hospitals, located in widely different areas. I accepted the request from an English Methodist Hospital located close behind the Honan front. While there I was working for the International Relief Committee and had to function as superintendent of the hospital. There also the work was extremely interesting, and when the time came for me to leave, I left with a heavy heart. I am emphasizing the requests from the mission hospitals because they offer an answer to the question of helping China in her present difficulty. Incidentally, it may interest you to know that where in California we had a population of 500 to one practicing physician, China has a population of 65,000 to one physician. Hospitals and nurses are in about the same ratio to the population. Also 80 per cent of all private hospitals in Free China are mission hospitals. Including government hospitals lately established, mission hospitals still comprise 65 per cent of the total. The professional standards of mission hospitals are high, and they hold a leading position in the field of medical service. In this connection I would like to bring out the point, that in my opinion, relief work in China, at present, should be anchored to the now existing mission stations. They are our pioneers in China, and they are all working together in this great program of relieving human suffering. Furthermore, they are Rocks of Refuge in an ocean of humanity. Independently, physical efforts, as well as financial investments, could easily be swallowed up by the cross currents of present-day China without leaving a justifiable effect. Also the ever-present danger of "leaks" is reduced to a minimum by operating through mission channels.

The great difficulty of present-day China is three-fold. It is the difficulty of isolation, transportation, and inflation. As I think back now and visualize in my mind the struggle those "little" people are making against terrific odds to overcome those difficulties, I feel that I could not possibly exaggerate them. There probably has never been a parallel case of a struggle on such a vast scale in history. And yet, China is overcoming and will in the future, in its own way, overcome these difficulties. Although China is overcoming these difficulties, it would be blindness not to admit that these difficulties are placing in actual jeopardy all missions and relief work in China at present.

Change of Workers in Portland Mission Church

Rev. and Mrs. Herman Wiebe, 5215 N. E. 23rd Avenue, Portland, Oregon, have served as leaders of the Alberta Community Church, 5138 N. E. 23rd Avenue since October 1, 1943. The agreement at that time was that Rev. Wiebe serve one year as interim minister until a permanent leader could be secured.

More than a year has elapsed, and during this time Rev. Wiebe has rendered acceptable and fruitful service. Now, however, he asked to be relieved in order to work in his own Conference again, the Mennonite Brethren Conference.

In the meantime a Committee, elected by the Alberta Community Church and the Home Mission Board, has cooperated and Rev. and Mrs. Clyde H. Dirks, Hutchinson, Kansas, have been called and have accepted the call after prolonged, prayerful consideration.

The change will be made at the end of May or early June, 1945 after the close of the regular school term. The Dirks' children are in school and Rev. Wiebe has been attending a seminary in Portland.

We solicit the earnest prayer that the Lord's work might be built up and His name glorified in this field.

Yours sincerely in Christ,
A. J. Neuenschwander,
Secretary

THIRD RURAL LIFE CONFERENCE

Held at Bluffton College, December 8-9, 1944

Conserving our resources—spiritual, social, economic—was the theme for the third annual Rural Life Conference of Brethren, Friends, and Mennonites, held at Bluffton College, December 8 and 9. These conferences are sponsored by the Rural Life Association which grew out of the first conference held at Earlham College three years ago.

Through brief individual presentations, panels, sectional and conference discussions we looked at our resources and tried to discover ways and means of conserving and enriching them. It was the feeling of the Conference that as historic peace churches we have a great tradition and a rich culture of normal and simple Christian living which our modern world greatly needs. It was felt that in order to withstand the terrific onslaught of a secularized paganism all about us we must somehow restore the vision of those who have gone before us. How shall this be done?

The answer was at least partly given in a panel discussion in which special attention was given to the family as the primary group in normal living, the neighborhood family gatherings for study, planning, discussion, and recreation as a secondary group, and the community as a whole as the fuller expression of wholesome group life.

Farm and Neighborhood Groups

Robert Eschelmann of Bethany Biblical Seminary spoke on the place of the family unit on a family-sized farm as the primary group. Great emphasis was placed upon the character-building qualities of the coordinated interrelatedness of the family on the land.

Carl Hutchinson of the Ohio Farm Bureau made a very significant contribution in his discussion of neighborhood groups as they are functioning throughout Ohio. These neighborhood groups are made up of ten or a dozen families living in a given area who meet in their homes one night each month. These families gather to share with one another their common lives and experiences. They discuss and plan and play and eat together. In the front rooms of these farm homes the seed-bed of democracy can be found.

Out of his wide range of experience and extensive travel J. Winfield Fretz brought to the conference the place and possibilities of the larger community in the conservation of our resources. The family is the basic unit. A group of families makes up a neighborhood discussion group. A group of neighborhood groups make up the larger community. As these three groups interrelate themselves the foundations are laid for clean, honest, wholesome, simple, normal, Christian living. Here are the real foundations for a just and durable peace.

Education for Rural Life

On the morning of the second day another panel discussion centered around the conserving of our resources through education. President Ramseyer spoke for our colleges. Dr. Ledwyn van Kersbergen of Grailville School, Loveland, Ohio, spoke for special training schools. And Mark Shellhaas, Superintendent of Trotwood, Ohio Public Schools, spoke for the public schools. This panel revealed very clearly and forcefully that our entire concept of education needs reevaluation. The heart of the discussion centered around the idea of education for clean, wholesome, simple, normal Christian living. A new curriculum must relate itself more directly to ongoing life.

Wayne Hostetler, a Brethren farmer, who had charge of the eighteen heifers shipped to Puerto Rico, spoke briefly of his rare experiences. These heifers were raised by Brethren and donated to the Brethren Service Committee. On the top deck of a new liberty ship they sailed for San Juan. They were sold to worthy Puerto Ricans for the cost of transportation. The effects of this great mission will be far-reaching. These people really were grateful for these fine animals. Wayne related how visiting a family where the heifer had dropped a heifer calf, he found the family keeping the calf in the living room.

Woman's Opportunity in Rural Life

Perhaps, the high light of the Conference was Dr. Ledwyn van Kersbergen and her four young ladies from Grailville School. This is a special training school for young women located on a 200 acre farm and relating itself directly to every phase of rural life. Everyone agreed with much enthusiasm that these four girls demonstrated with their very presence the uniqueness and profound significance of this school.

They interpreted the work of the school through four principles which they described. The first girl coming from Rochester, New York, spoke of the principle of a God and Christ centered day by day spirit filled life. She showed us by her words and by the very light in her eyes the marvelous way in which the things of the Spirit can permeate the whole of one's daily living.

The second girl coming from St Paul, Minnesota, spoke on the principle of womanhood. What a fine, wholesome, exalted, true picture of womanhood she gave. Her plea was for woman to find again her rightful place intended by God. Woman was created by God for motherhood, either material or spiritual. Woman is living normally when she is spending her life for others.

The third girl coming from New York City spoke on the principle of the dignity of work. Her face and hands showed that she had really earned the right to give this presentation. Work, the intelligent use of one's hands, this is a part of the eternal plan of God.

The fourth girl coming from Chicago spoke on the principle of the complete interrelatedness of all of life and of the value of training one's self in this manner.

The Conference closed with an evening of folk games of many nations, directed by Lynn Rohrbough, director of Cooperative Recreation Service, Delaware, Ohio.

Farmers, farm women, rural ministers, and teachers, and many others participated in this Conference. It was almost entirely a discussion conference. No attempt was made to solve great problems. However, unitedly the group gained a clearer vision of the vast possibilities which are before us to restore the vision of the "Faith of our Fathers."

—William H. Stauffer

(Note: The Home Mission Board member that was supposed to represent the Board could not arrange to be present. Rev. William H. Stauffer, Sugarcreek, Ohio, represented the Board and has kindly submitted this report.—A. J. Neuenschwander, Sec.)

RELIEF

New Director for England-Europe Relief

Sam Goering is on high seas enroute or England. After his arrival and period of orientation in assuming directorship of the M.C.C. relief work for England and Europe, Glen Miller will return to his teaching position at Goshen College.

Three M.C.C. Relief Workers Arrive in India

F. J. Isaac informed Akron Headquarters that Lawrence Burkholder, Clayton Beyler, and R. C. Kaufman arrived in India. These additional workers will relieve Brother Isaac and other missionaries of the rice distribution, work camp, and hospital responsibilities, as well as begin to convert the changing relief program into a rehabilitation program.

Women Appointees for Middle East Reach Lisbon

The four woman appointees traveling via neutral ship—Bertha Fast, Esther Detweiler, Marie Brunk, and Barbara Zuercher—are believed to have arrived in Lisbon, Portugal, according to a cable sent by fellow missionary travelers, December 9. Passage to points beyond Lisbon was still a prayer concern at the time of wiring.

Doctor Appointed for Paraguay

Dr. A. M. Lohrentz, former missionary to China, and practicing eye, ear, and nose specialist in McPherson, Kansas, has been appointed to serve in Paraguay for one year, beginning early in the new year.

C. P. S.

C.P.S. Canning and Drying Program

Again this year, the churches have responded liberally in preparing large amounts of food for the men in the camps. More than 235,000 quarts of fruits, vegetables and meats, and over 9,000 pounds of dried goods have been reported. This figure will be increased when reports for food taken to the camps after November 30 and all accounts from collection centers are sent in. Last year the reports covering this same period showed that 177,900 quarts were given.

At present all the food is in the camps with the exception of several carload shipments which are in transit to the western camps, and a similar amount in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. This stored food will be used in 1945 when it becomes clear at which camps it is needed. The possibility of camps and units closing making it inadvisable to store unusually large amounts there.

This year it was not necessary to ship any fruit from Pennsylvania and Virginia to the West since the Mid-West churches contributed more fruit than we expected. A number of cash contributions were received. These were used for defraying the expense of the canning program. Much good and hard work was done by the sisters in the churches in processing large amounts of food. Instructions given earlier in the year in the Gifts in Kind folder were followed quite carefully. There is good reason to thank the sisters and all others who had a part in providing for the material needs of the men in the camps.

IN MEMORIAM

Obituary of Rev. Froese

Abraham W. Froese, son of Abraham and Ida Froese, was born on March 11, 1879, at Council Grove, Kansas. Later he with his parents, moved to Hillsboro, Kansas, and again at the age of ten years moved to Halstead, Kansas. Then in 1890 his parents moved to Abilene, Texas, and from there in 1893 moved to northeast of Cordell.

In his early youth he gave his heart to the Lord and accepted Him as his personal Saviour. On July 4, 1897, he was baptized by Elder Jacob Toews and received into the membership of the Sihar Church.

On April 16, 1903, he was united with Marie

Thiessen in holy matrimony. This home was blessed with three daughters and one son.

On July 19, 1908, he was ordained as a minister of the gospel by Rev. H. R. Voth in the Sihar Church.

In 1912, he with his family moved to Tologa, where he served the Kidron Church for three years.

In 1915 he accepted the call from the Greenfield Church at Carnegie, Oklahoma, and later moved there.

On November 13, 1927, he was ordained as elder by Rev. P. H. Unruh.

On June 9, 1928, it pleased the Lord to take his beloved wife to her reward in Glory. For the next five years he made his home with his children.

On November 19, 1933, he was united in marriage to Mrs. Marie Frey. They then moved to Cordell, Oklahoma. However, he still served as a minister in the Greenfield Church for a few years. Then during his last few years, he again served the Kidron Church at Tologa, while living at Cordell.

Although in failing health it was still his greatest joy to serve his Lord and Master.

He became ill on November 18, 1944, and passed away very suddenly on November 25, 1944.

He leaves to mourn his departure his dear wife, three daughters, Mrs. Emma Unruh and Mrs. Ida Nightingale of Carnegie, Oklahoma; Mrs. Bertha Unruh of Hillsdale, Oklahoma; one son, David Froese of Carnegie, Oklahoma; and one step-daughter Hilda of Cordell.

EMILIE WIEBE REGIER was born in 1872 at Gurken, West Prussia, Germany. There too in 1888 she joined the Mennonite Church through baptism administered by the Rev. Henry Penner. With her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wiebe, she came to this country in 1890. She and John Regier were united in marriage in 1893. An outstanding event of her life was the Golden Wedding Anniversary held in 1943. She passed away November 18, 1944. She is mourned by her husband and the following children: Hans and Alfred of Whitewater; Marie, who is a missionary in China; Charlotte with the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa.; Margaret teaching near Wichita, and Minna, student at Bethel College. Three sisters survive: Mrs. Marie Dyck and Mrs. B. W. Harder, Whitewater, and Elise Wiebe of Newton.

CORRESPONDENCE

INMAN MENNONITE CHURCH Inman, Kansas

The Mission Festival, October 29, was a memorable day for all who attended. We listened to the following speakers: Sister Eva Pauls, Rev. Erland Waltner, Rev. S. J. Goering, Rev. Lester Hostetler, Dr. P. A. Penner, and Eleanor Thiessen. The attendance and offerings were large.

Our deacon and wife Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Wiens, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary October 26, the same evening their daughter, Florence, was married to Leonard Wiens of Ypsilanti, Michigan. After an impressive service, a delicious meal was served to about 400 guests.

Rev. Gerald Stucky spoke very interestingly about mission work in South America in our church Monday evening, November 20.

For our weekly prayer service this winter our pastor is conducting a study on scripture passages dealing with vital subjects such as prayer, faith, etc.

The ladies recently sent 152 pounds of clothing and soap to the M.C.C. depot in Newton and approximately 546 pounds of lard and 500 quarts of canned goods to C.P.S. At the annual Women's Missionary sale, a nice sum of money was realized by the sale of food and needle work. —Corr.

NEWPORT MENNONITE CHURCH Newport, Washington

From November 26 to December 1, we were blest by a series of messages from Rev. J. M. Franz. It was our privilege to hear Rev. P. A. Kliever twice on December 3. How we thank God for ministers who are still holding forth the true and living Word.

A missionary from South America spoke to us on Thanksgiving Day. At noon we had a fellowship dinner in the basement. This was followed by the missionary sale.

This past week a group of members met at the church and poured the concrete for the basement floor. The junior and senior choirs are practicing for Christmas. I wonder how many of us are turning our thoughts toward the Christ who came to earth to bring salvation! Or are we too busy with thoughts of Christmas packages, etc.? Do not misunderstand—this all has its place—but let us give more praise and adoration to our wonderful Redeemer.—Corr.

EICHER EMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH Noble, Iowa

On October 29, seven members were received into the church by baptism and two by letter. On November 5, the church observed its Fall Communion.

The Harvest Home Service was held in our church November 26. In the morning the pastor brought the morning message. A basket dinner was held at the noon hour, and in the afternoon the Ladies' Mission Society gave a very interesting program. An offering was received at this time which amounted to $149.22. This offering was sent to the M.C.C. for relief work.

The young people took a very active part in the county youth conference which was held in the Baptist Church at Washington, Iowa, on November 24. The young people had the devotions in the morning, and the pastor brought the morning message.

The churches of Wayland held a union Thanksgiving service in the Wayland Mennonite Church. Rev. Metzker brought the message at this time.

Judge E. C. Eicher, son of Benjamin Eicher the founder of our church, died at his home near Washington, D. C. of a heart attack. He was brought back to his home community for burial. Rev. Metzker had charge of the service, which was held in

Dr. L. L. Ramseyer, president of Bluffton College was in our community in the interest of the College. He brought the evening message on December 3.—Corr.

SWISS MENNONITE CHURCH Alsen, North Dakota

"Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits," Ps. 103:2. As we approach the end of another year we must humbly confess our own unworthiness and God's wonderful goodness to us. He has blessed this community again in a wonderful way both in a material and spiritual realm. Our hearts go out to Him with Thanksgiving and praise for what he has done.

Our harvest and mission festival was held October 8. Among the visiting ministers were Rev. and Mrs. Jake Hoffman. Rev. Hoffman recently graduated from the Moody Bible Institute and is now serving a church at Lustre, Montana. The following Sundays our church was invited to take part in the harvest and mission festivals of the other three Mennonite Churches in this community. We thank the Lord for another year of material blessings. The crops and gardens were fairly good this year even though the harvesting season was extended into the month of October on account of wet weather.

The wedding of Johnny Toews and Virginia Albright was held November 14. After the ceremony they left on a short trip into South Dakota and Minnesota.

Rev. Neufeld of the Chicago Mission Church served our church Sunday, November 19, in the interest of the C.P.S. and church visitation program.

Our pastor, Rev. Flickinger, conducted a series of meetings at the First Mennonite Church in Mountain Lake, Minnesota, throughout the Thanksgiving week.

We were sorry to see Mr. and Mrs. Jake Kunkel and Minnie, and also Mr. and Mrs. Jake Benke leave this community for the west coast. Evangeline and Viola Spent are attending the Grace Institute at Omaha this year.

On July 16, eight young people were baptized and received into the church upon their confession of faith. On December 19, three members were received into the church by the right hand of fellowship.

Our Young People's Fellowship was held last week in the church basement. The pastor is taking up a course of study with the young people for the winter months, on the topic, "The Second Coming of Christ." Twenty-five were present for the first meeting.

Sunday evening, December 3, Mr. Olaf O. Lunde, seaman from the Great Lakes, gave a very inspiring testimony of his conversion and of his experiences in witnessing for the Lord. He has been visiting Rev. and Mrs. Flickinger, whom he met while attending the Moody Bible Institute at Chicago.

Fred Metzler was home on furlough the past ten days. We are always glad to see our boys coming home, even if it is but for a few days. May God speed the day when they shall be able to come home to stay.—Corr.

PULASKI MENNONITE CHURCH

Pulaski, Iowa

As we come to the close of the year, we realize in a new way that we want to come to our Heavenly Father and say, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits." In this community we have been blessed in a material way and certainly all who have been in a condition to receive have also enjoyed many spiritual blessings.

Among the special features at the Church, first we enjoyed the inspirational candle light service at Easter time. Then in June the annual "Children's Day," program was given to a well-filled house. In July the Church had the pleasure of having the "Young People's Retreat." We felt it was very helpful to all who attended. On Sunday morning those of us who love young people were especially inspired to see a large group of young people march down the aisle and take their places in the choir to render their praise to God in the ministry of song. During the month of September we held special meetings with Rev. Harry Bertsche as guest speaker. The churches of the community co-operated, and a fine spirit of fellowship was manifested. On Thanksgiving evening the ladies and girls gave a program on stewardship which was very helpful, inspiring, and convincing to a large audience. Now a Christmas program is being prepared, which will be given on Christmas eve.

The ladies of the missionary society have worked faithfully and enthusiastically throughout the year. Much work for European relief has been done, also some canning, etc., for our C.P.S. camps. This organization meets twice a month.

A ladies' Sunday School class meets monthly, and they also have been making layettes and other garments for relief. They busied themselves at the last meeting, making stuffed dolls and animals which have been sent to the Salem Orphanage. Some of our ladies spent much of their spare time at home, working at these various projects.

Our church has been very much in need of renovating. After many of the members began to realize this need, a meeting was called for planning the work. The membership responded very graciously, both with material means and time. It seemed impossible to secure much paid help and so it became necessary for the members themselves to contribute much of their time. The ladies spent many afternoons there, working hard and persistently. Many evenings, groups of men gathered, after the day's work on the farm was finished, and put in several more hours of hard work. It was not an easy task in this day when both help and material are so hard to secure, but now we can go to our house of worship with pleasant surroundings, and we feel sure that all were blessed because of the special efforts. We know our Heavenly Father is pleased if we keep His house in good repair.

So far as Mennonites are concerned as a congregation, we feel rather alone in this part of Iowa and always appreciate having visiting brethren meet with us

Will you pray for this church and its pastor, so that together we may continue to serve our Heavenly Father in a way that glory may be brought to Him, and that our ministry in this community may be a blessing to all? —Corr.

BRUDERTAL MENNONITE CHURCH Hillsboro, Kansas

Grace, peace, and joy be unto you all. When we think of how marvelous God's grace is, we cannot help feeling happy and thankful, for by grace that we can live and work for Him.

The first Sunday in October the church celebrated Rev. Arnold Funk's birthday. All brought well-filled baskets along and had dinner together, making it a happy occasion. In the afternoon we had a short program.

Rev. Gerald Stucky was also in our church and gave a very interesting report of his trip to South America and of the plans for future mission work there. Rev. Henry Harder from Geary, Oklahoma, visited our church on Thanksgiving morning and preached two very interesting sermons. Our Elder, Rev. Funk, was in Fortuna, Missouri, and held a week of meetings there.

We had very beautiful fall weather until the last part of November, when the rain and snow started in. From then up to Christmas we had bad roads. Attendance at Sunday services was very small. On December 24 the church was filled once more, and so it was for our Christmas program in the evening.

Our church commemorated its seventieth anniversary on December 26. We will have our annual church meeting on December 28. The young people will give a watch-night program on New Year's eve.—Mrs. J. E. Rempel, Corr.

BETHEL COLLEGE MENNONITE CHURCH North Newton, Kansas

According to established custom the Sunday school of our church gave its Christmas program on the evening of December 24. The children, large and small, entered into this with a will and therefore did their part well. Christmas songs made up much of the program, but there were also those parts in which shepherds, wise men, and prophets in picturesque costume appeared in dialogue or tableau. These features added to the impressiveness of the program. The account of Christ's birth was read from Luke at the beginning, and the story of the Wise Men near the end of the program, which helps to keep in the foreground the historic event which has given us Christmas. "Mary kept all these things and pondered them in her heart." May we do so likewise.

This year again as in other years it was a "White Christmas." That does not mean that the children receive no gifts, but it does mean that each class makes a gift to some missionary, benevolent, or charitable enterprise. These gifts were all money gifts, and in some instances classes had apportioned theirs among several worthy causes. Among these the Student Fellowship Fund as well as various phases of the relief work in Puerto Rico had been remembered.

Next Sunday, the last in the year, will be Communion Sunday. On that day new members will also be received into the church.

In the evening there will be held a watch night service. The program includes pictures by Missionary P. A. Penner, refreshments and a consecration service. Verily, there is no better way of crossing the threshold of a new year than in prayer and consecration. May we all do this from the heart, presenting our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, our reasonable service, being not conformed to this world but transformed by the renewing of our mind, that we may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God, which will make a happy new year for all.

—Karl Friesen, Corr.

To the Churches of the Western District Conference:

Greetings:

Believing that the splendid work begun in McPherson in gathering and organizing our Mennonite people on and near McPherson into a church is definitely a concern of our conference and holds great promise for the future, and recognizing their need for a suitable meeting place of their own, we, the Home Mission Committee, would endorse their efforts to raise the necessary funds, first among themselves and then among friends and the churches of our conference, for the securing of such a meeting place. We would therefore recommend to the churches of our conference that they open their doors to the McPherson Mennonite Church for this purpose. The building of needed churches for the strengthening of the home base is a first essential in any permanent mission endeavor.

Buy Over Five Million Dollars Worth of Civilian Bonds

Subscriptions to civilian bonds totalled $5,009,059.50 on November 22, 1944, according to a statement released by M.C.C. Headquarters on December 20. Of this amount $3,629,456.00 was subscribed by Mennonites. The Civilian Bond program enables non-resistant people to register their convictions while supporting financially the civilian needs of the government. Orders for such bonds may be sent on approved order blanks to the Provident Trust Company of Philadelphia, which acts as a purchasing agent for these bonds.

Rev. Franz Albrecht Passes Away

Rev. Franz Albrecht, Pastor Emeritus of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, passed away on December 21. He had suffered from heart trouble for several years and had been in bed much of the time. He served the First Church at Beatrice for many years, having served it as assistant pastor from 1904 to 1920 and as pastor from 1920 to 1940. We hope to bring his obituary in this issue or the next.

Rev. Gerhard Friesen Visits Colby Church

Rev. Gerhard Friesen served the Meadow Mennonite Church at Colby, Kansas, on December 24 and 25. Colby is in the vast wheat plains of Western Kansas, and Rev. Friesen reported that two inches of snow covered the ground. The Colby Church, which has a membership of twenty-five, has been without a permanent pastor since Rev. John Epp left to assume the pastorate of the Zion Church near Kingman. The group, enriched by good wheat harvests, has contributed generously to conference work.

Makes Survey of Drafted Men

Buhler, Kansas, December 17: Twenty-three of the 325 members of the Buhler Church have been drafted, according to a survey made for the M.C.C. Ten are in C.P.S., six are in non-combatant service, and seven in regular. A total of sixty-nine have received some kind of deferment.

Rev. J. M. Franz and Dr. Kirby Page To Speak at Upland

Upland, California: Rev. J. M. Franz, Minister-at-large of the Pacific District, is to conduct a series of meetings at the First Mennonite Church from January 7 to 11. Rev. Franz is visiting all churches of the Pacific District. Dr. Kirby Page is to bring five messages during the month of March as follows: morning and evening of March 4 and the Sunday evenings of March 11, 18, and 25. Dr. Page is the author of many books, among them Must We Go to War and Living Abundantly, his latest work. A son of his is in C.P.S.

Grace Church at Pandora Plans to Build

Pandora, Ohio, December 3: The Grace Mennonite Church has voted to establish a building fund. A questionnaire was sent out. A total of 193 ballots were returned and only 7 objected. It is expected that no building will be done until several years after the war. The church is accepting government bonds for the building fund.

Can 1,648 Quarts for C.P.S.

The Alexanderwohl, Tabor, and Goessel Churches canned a total of 1,648 quarts for C.P.S. this year, and in addition contributed 45 gallons of lard and 33 quarts of meat. Last year they contributed 2,148 quarts.

Churches Adopt 100 Per Cent Plan

The First Church of Christian Mennonite, Moundridge, Kansas, has sent its list of names to the Publication Office, and soon all homes in that church will be getting one or both of our papers under the 100 Per Cent Plan. Other churches which have voted for the plan are: First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California; and Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota. Undoubtedly, others from which we have not heard have also voted for the plan.

Dr. A. M. Lohrentz to Go to Paraguay

Dr. A. M. Lohrentz, former missionary to China and practicing eye, ear, and nose specialist, is to leave sometime early this year for Paraguay, where he hopes to give a year of medical service under the auspices of the M.C.C. From 1921-1927 Dr. Lohrentz served as medical missionary in China. Upon his return to the United States he did two years of graduate work in ear, eye, nose, and throat work. According to present plans his skill should soon be available to the Mennonites of Paraguay, who have suffered a great deal from eye disease.

Is The Best Too Good For Our Children?

About 125 years ago a young man was graduated from Brown University. He spent four years in a law school. He practiced law for ten years. He was elected to the legislature and then to the senate of his state. He was made president of the latter body. "From the beginning of his public life, he showed a great enthusiasm for philanthropy and for educational reform."

In 1837 the state of Massachusetts appointed a board of education in order to remodel its educational system. Horace Mann, the young man referred to above, was made secretary of this board which did work of great importance to the nation as well as to the state of Massachusetts. Horace Mann gave up his law practice and the opportunities which opened their doors to him in law and statesmanship in order to devote himself to the well being of the children. He met with violent disapproval but he had a great objective and kept on. His objective was to give the best possible to children and youth.

In order to make his work most effective and place it on a sound basis he visited Europe at his own expense and reported his findings for the good of his country. He established the first training school for teachers in the United States. Later he was elected to Congress, where he opposed slavery—the great sin against a then childlike people. The last six years of his life were very fittingly spent in the President's chair of Antioch College at Yellow Springs, Ohio.

Horace Mann lived but sixty-three years, but he succeeded in stirring up new interest in raising the opportunities of children for greater living to a higher level. He sincerely believed that the best was none too good for our children. He had definitely sensed the spirit of Jesus who placed little children above men who take children for granted and subject them to their own interests. He looked upon the children of others as though they were his own. What it would cost to give the best to the children of his day was placed second to the value which he saw in childhood and youth.

What is good for our children? If and when this question is raised honestly, the answer is not hard to find. It is best answered by another question. What are the needs of our children as human beings? Children are not mere numbers or animals. He who thinks of them thus neither sees nor does what is good for them. That kind of attitude leads to neglect and then to condemnation of childhood and youth. It too often becomes the primary cause for crime waves. The opposite is true where people seek the good of those who cannot speak for themselves in the affairs of men.

If men and women took more time to visit our public and our church schools and became acquainted with what is being done they would learn lessons for which they would be thankful. The same is true when people become really interested in the problems which confront boys and girls in any neighborhood. A few years ago one of our churches engaged a man to give special attention to the boys of the neighborhood in which the church was located. The response came as a surprise. There were real difficulties to be met among the boys who came from seven different denominations and from no denomination. Within a short time the chief of police appeared at the study of the minister to thank him for the help that the church was giving to the attempts to solve the "boy problems" of that section! Then the chief added something which needs to be preached from more pulpits. He said: "I wish people would realize that nobody can train only his own children. Children learn so much from each other.

That leads to another question. Who are our children? They are all the children of our age. What we do for one we do for all. We either prepare them for the great opportunities which God has in mind for them or we bar them both from finding and learning to meet those opportunities.

Things have temporal values; children have eternal values. These values have been confused too long. We have secretaries and bureaus galore to deal with temporal values and still lack a department of education which places personality before things. Children have much to teach adults. Adults can learn much from children. Children normally challenge one to greater thinking. Men too often attempt great things in little ways and with superficial methods. Why? Because they have not learned to see that the best is none too good for our children. They have not learned to sense the importance of the statement by Jesus to His own disciples, "Permit the little children to come unto me; forbid them not: for of such is the Kingdom of God. Verily, I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the Kingdom of God as a little child, he shall in no wise enter therein."

Wherever people take the attitude that the best is none too good for our children, we find them solving the major problems which make the world a place of sorrow and of terror in our day.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

"THOU SHALT NOT COVET"

By J. R. Duerksen

The Christians of a certain Indian village had a surprise. The missionary and one of the leading Indian brethren had come for an important meeting, unannounced. It was near noon on a hot day in June, and good shade was essential. A large tree in Madhu's yard provided the shade.

Madhu, however, acted very strangely. He stood behind the ruins of an old mud wall. The rest of the Christians were gathering for the meeting, and they sat on the ever-present Indian beds provided for that purpose.

"Madhu," I called, "Come sit down."

"I am coming," he replied and smiled. The conversation with the rest continued, but after a while my attention again went to Madhu.

"Why don't you come here and sit down?" I asked.

"I am coming," he answered and smiled some more. Again the rest of us forgot about Madhu because there were other things to talk about.

At last his strange behavior caught my eye again and being a bit disgusted, I said sharply, "Madhu, come here at once and sit down."

Smiling much more than before, he said, "She is coming now." Then it dawned on me that the poor brother had sent his clothes, of which there was really only one single piece of cloth, to the river to be washed. His wife was now coming, and almost immediately he emerged from his hiding place, properly dressed in a clean, fresh, sunlight disinfected dhoti. His little son, too, came from the same place in like manner.

It might be expected that this man would certainly ask for his share of the generously provided relief funds from America, but here's where we have our surprise. This man and his family were so happy, they didn't know they lacked anything, even though they had to be in hiding while their one and only garment went to the laundry. Is not this an object lesson from I Tim. 6:8, "And having food and raiment let us be therewith content," or Heb. 13:5, "And be content with such things as ye have; for He hath said, I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

YOUTH ON VACATION

By O. A. Waltner

We're finding the Bethesda Leper Home and Hospital to be an excellent place where young people can do "extra curricular" work during their vacation days.

Our future leaders must be acquainted with principles of accounting, bookkeeping, and general office technique. They must learn to make sound business transactions. It is necessary that they be able to write well composed business letters. In our office we have two young men working right along with the superintendent and manager. Here they learn typing, accounting, and business. And what they learn will, we hope, be of value to the Mennonite Church of India.

A brilliant young lad is much interested in medicine and surgery. In a year he hopes to be in college doing work towards his pre-medics. In the meantime, he is spending his vacation working in the laboratory and hospital of our institution. Already he has learned to handle the microscope deftly and surely. Accompanying the doctor on his rounds in the hospital, he gets his medical knowledge first hand. For him, the medical career has already started.

Progressive farming is not for America only. India is in need of good farmers, and we hope to help train them. Proper care and feeding of a dairy herd is taught to the boys who come to milk our fine cows. Occasionally when I see the boys stroke and pat the cows I feel sure they are thinking of the time when they'll have good high producing milk cows of their own.

Five selected young students are teaching Sunday School classes in the Bethesda Leper Home Church. Along with teaching they are learning to be spiritual counselors. To help individuals understand their own problems and to guide them through the necessary steps to the victorious life calls for keen mental and spiritual application. Our institution provides the "cases" for the young students who find the work difficult but challenging and full of possibilities.

And so we the staff of the Bethesda Leper Home and Hospital go about our duties not only because there are over 550 patients who need our help, but also because each new day is a God-given opportunity to help mold the Christian character and improve the efficiency of young lives in the service of Jesus Christ our Lord.

ON KEEPING RESOLUTIONS

Perhaps, most of us have experienced difficulty in keeping good resolutions. We may have been severely discouraged by valient attempts to put certain good ideas into practice.

A psychologist, who teaches in a large city university, has analyzed this problem and suggests that we have expected far too much from will power. Furthermore what he says in psychological terms seems to be the doctrine of salvation by grace in theological terms.

This teacher suggests that reliance upon will power seriously handicaps the individual in his attempts at improvement. The greater the use of will power, the greater the disappointment in the results. The less he makes of will power the greater is his mental progress. We are told that the mass of people have made a fetish of will power.

Will power is then defined something like this: It is a freedom to hold on to a weaker tendency within us until this weaker tendency is reinforced and made the stronger thing of the moment only at the conclusion of the decision period. (For example, a student knows that he ought to study an assignment, but he would like to go and join in the game of baseball that is beginning. There are two tendencies within him. Let us assume that the tendency to study the lesson is the weaker one of the two at the beginning of the decision-situation. By the freedom that his will power gives him he keeps the stronger tendency—to go and play ball—at bay until additional desires come to him for studying his lesson. These additional desires or points for the weaker tendency are like reinforcements. Presently they have added so much to the weaker tendency that it has become the stronger—but for the moment only—and outweighs the tendency—to go and play ball—that had been strongest at the beginning of the decision period. And the student has used his will power for a decision to study the lesson.) Thus will involves a sense of effort, but it also very definitely concerns itself with an inspection of near and far interests. (See Matt. 5:29,30.)

Those who make a fetish of will emphasize the effort part of will and not the attraction part. Such individuals have a "Puritan Mind" and look upon life as a gnashing of teeth. Common words by them are "must," "should," and "ought." Life for them is a huge commandment. But with all their effort they fail. There is conflict within them. Their tendency system of effort conflicts with their natural tendency system of yielding to the appealing life, pleasure, harmony, beauty, love. Man's nervous system is made to function freely and smoothly. He wants abandonment and relaxation. But his effort-tendency system goes against this, and so he finds a lot of friction within himself. Such people are too much concerned with what they "ought to do." Their tendencies for ease and harmony pull one way, and their tendencies to do the hard thing pull the other way. With will power they hold the two systems at bay until the stronger tendencies toward duty win out. Consequently, they are always burdened with a sense of strain and effort. They find it hard to laugh heartily. The easier way (salvation by grace) is rejected.

Another way in which too much effort is used is in eradicating faults. It is pointed out that people often fail to eliminate criticism, harsh words, anger, and other undesirable habits by trying to do so. Concentrating upon the unwanted habit fixes it in the center of the mind, and there it controls behaviour. A golfer wants to tee off by a water hazard. He is so conscious of losing the ball in the water that he can hardly think of anything else, and the ball goes into the water. (People can walk on narrow boards or steel girders quite easily when these lie on the ground. When confronted with the problem of walking over the same boards or girder high up in the air, the thought of failure comes so strongly that most people will not dare to venture such a feat.) It is unwise and dangerous to depend upon will power for breaking a fault.

This psychologist then goes on to advocate the way of least resistance (the grace of God?). He upholds the "attraction method" for breaking habits. He suggests that to master a fault or undesirable habit a person should behave and think as though he did not have it. This is a positive approach to the matter and puts the right idea in the center of attention without convulsions of effort. It is the way of least resistance.

There is danger of failure when an idea is adopted in thought and behaviour by the effort method, for the old habit is still rooted in the person's behaviour in spite of any resolution he may have made.

The way of least resistance is the very opposite of the effort-method. It centers the attention on the act you want to adopt instead of on the act you want to avoid. The positive idea is kept in the place of full attention by attractiveness and not by effort. (This is suggestive of the attractiveness of the Good News of Jesus Christ.) The way of least resistance is not the way of "must" but the way of beauty and that which appeals. If one does not see in unselfishness something that is warm and glowing, then one should not practice it, he states. The point is to see the appealing. Thus an idea gets first place in the mind by its attractiveness. (Is it not our faith that Jesus Christ is so attractive that he will win out if adequately presented in all his loveliness?) Centering our mind upon what we want gives us a much better chance of success than fixing it upon what we do not want. Right living is a thing of beauty and harmony. (Jesus made people whole—harmonious.) We have here "appeal" instead of the drive of an "ought."

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

The attractiveness of an idea is the natural way. A child is moved by that which draws him and which he wants. Sweetness goes further with children than does vinegar. Children form habits easily. Adults can capitalize on this same ease for their own behaviour.

Before adopting the attraction method the individual needs first to realize the exact nature of the old habit that he wishes to overcome (confession and repentance?).

Secondly, it is important to use the imagination instead of the will under this method. To become "sold on an idea" or "captivated" by it releases a tremendous power for right behaviour. The imagination can enlarge the area of appeal. There must be inspiration. The way of attraction is not difficult. To be drawn towards the good and the right is not difficult. When we are interested in caring for the roses in the garden, we will also take care of the weeds. Imagination helps to make the right way so prominent that it becomes the stronger tendency of the moment, and the undesirable habit withdraws into the background.

Effort is needed to overcome resistance in life, but this is not effort that turns to overcome inner resistance. It turns outward and overcomes the world.

That a psychologist should say so many things that remind one of the doctrine of salvation by grace is significant.

The Hutterites

By C. Henry Smith

The Hutterites, or Hutterite Brethren, as they are sometimes called, though not usually classed with the Mennonites, yet have so much in common with the latter, both in doctrine and historical experience, that the story of one is not complete without some reference to the other. Both trace their religious beliefs to the same source—the Swiss Brethren in Zurich in the early part of the sixteenth century.

Their Origin

The Hutterites began their separate career in Moravia, on the estates of two tolerant noblemen, the brothers Liechtenstein, who granted them the greatest degree of religious liberty at a time when elsewhere Anabaptists and Mennonites of all branches were severely persecuted.

They owe their distinctive name to one of their early leaders, Jacob Hutter, a Tyrolean hatter, who in addition to all the distinctive Mennonite doctrines, such as separation of church and state, adult baptism upon confession of faith, opposition to the oath, non-resistance, and the Bible as a sole source of faith in addition to these, added the specific doctrine and practise of communism, that is the sharing of material as well as spiritual gifts.

Religious Communism

One hesitates to use the term Communism when referring to the Hutterites in these days when the word has acquired such a sinister meaning as it is applied to the Russian atheistic type of economic collectivism.

The Hutterite form of communism is based upon a purely religious foundation, with copious references in its confessions of faith to New Testament authority for the practise. It is no doubt due to this religious sanction, the most effective of all sanctions, that these Hutterite colonies have been able to survive against the bitterest persecution through these past four hundred years, when all other forms of collectivism based on a mere economic theory have vanished after only a short existence.

The Bruderhof

The economic unit, practically self-sufficient economically, consisting of from twenty to thirty families, was called a Bruderhof. Here all lived under the same roof, ate at the same table, shared all their common tasks according to their respective abilities, pooled all their resources and earnings, living together as one big Christian family, sharing all the benefits as well as obligations of the group, under the leadership of democratically elected superintendents.

Missionary Interest

Perhaps, no other religious group, during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, especially, displayed such a missionary interest as did the Hutterites. Their missionaries travelled all over south Germany and Switzerland during this period, risking all sorts of hardships for their faith, and many of them meeting a martyr's death. It is doubtful whether the Mennonite cause could have successfully weathered the terrible persecutions of those times and preserved its faith without the untiring zeal and hardy courage of these faithful witnesses of Christ.

The Hutterites in the days of their prosperity did not confine themselves to the gospel of salvation only; they were messengers also of the gospel of healing. They ministered to the diseased body as well as to the sick soul. Their doctors in those days of simple remedies and medical ignorance were among the best in the land. A chronicle of the year 1581 states that "in this year the emperor Rudolph sent for our doctor George Zobel. Through the grace of God he was again restored to health."

Schools

Very little attention was given several hundred years ago in Europe to formal education for the common people. Few could read. But the Hutterites, because of the great reverence they had for the Bible, which could not be read by the illiterate, taught all their children to read. Illiteracy among them was much lower than among others of their economic or social class. Their schools, too, were among the best, being attended frequently by the children of the landlords from whom they held their land. Their schools were practical, stressing especially religion, vocation, and good citizenship within the Bruderhof community. All were taught reading, writing, the history of the church, the catechism, and such other religious precepts as would make them not only good Christians, but good Hutterites as well.

Das Gemeinde Geschichtsbuch

Unlike their Mennonite brethren, who were unusually modest and fearful perhaps about recording their doings for posterity, the Hutterites, on the other hand, made notes rather completely of all their experiences, both religious and economic throughout the whole of their long and checkered career and all their wanderings across the south-eastern corner of Europe during the centuries. These annals were carefully compiled and preserved and carried by their elders through all their migrations, and finally brought to the Dakotas by the immigrants during the Seventies of the past century. Here they were discovered by the late Dr. Loserth, a prominent Anabaptist historian of Vienna, who for the first time committed them to print some years ago. Another more complete edition, edited by a German professor of Northwestern University, and published by the Carl Schurz Foundation has just recently come off the press.

Wanderings

Although enjoying a period of toleration in Moravia far above other Anabaptist groups elsewhere, and a time of great prosperity, during the reign of their early protectors, yet before the end of that century, bad times began. By the beginning of the seventeenth century they were driven out of Moravia into Hungary. Then finally in the reign of Maria Theresa, in the eighteenth century, at the instigation of the intolerant Jesuits who induced the empress to liquidate all those not of the three tolerated religions, the Hutterites were almost completely blotted out. They fled into Wallachia then under Turkish rule, to whom all Christians, Catholic, Lutheran, and Hutterite, looked alike. Frequently during these persecutions the Bruderhofs were broken up and the members scattered, only later on again to be reunited. Near the end of the century they finally found refuge in Russia, where they again reestablished their Bruderhofs and lived in comparative peace until the introduction by Russia of universal military service for all Russians, when the Hutterites joined the Mennonites in their trek to America for conscience sake. In the meantime, in Russia a division in the ranks had induced some of the members of the Bruderhofs out onto separate farms, so that at the time of the American migration many of the so-called Hutterites were no longer members of the colonies. These settled on individual farms when they came to Dakota. The others formed three Bruderhof colonies during the early Seventies along the James River. Here they grew in numbers and enjoyed great prosperity until the first World War when, due to persecution on the part of local super-patriots, most of the Bruderhofs migrated to Canada where they again reestablished the type of community life first inaugurated by Jacob Hutter in Moravia some four hundred years ago. Only a remnant of the original Hutterite colonies remains in South Dakota.

A Successful Experiment

Economically the Hutterite experiment has been a success. Life in the Bruderhof is simple. No money is wasted on luxuries. There is no question of unemployment, nor any problem of social security for old age. The sick, the poor, the feeble are all taken care of by the group. Surplus profits have always been invested in new Bruderhofs for the rapidly expanding population.

In the task of preserving the faith of the fathers, too, the Hutterite colonies have been more successful than most of the Mennonite groups, especially in the doctrine and practice of non-resistance in times of war. In both the first and second world wars, the former have furnished a much larger percentage of conscientious objectors than any of the Mennonite branches.

On the other hand, of course, it can not be denied that the seclusive life and restricted interest in the outside world has its disadvantages. Perhaps, we will have to find a more basic method of preserving our faith than by a complete withdrawal from the world.

Be that as it may, it remains that this Hutterite experiment at living the common life on the concept of Christian brotherhood, which has stood the test for over four centuries, is the outstanding historic example of successful cooperative living from which we can learn much.

Whether the Bruderhof type of cooperation can withstand the disintegrating influences of the radio, telephone, compulsory high school attendance, the automobile, and other modern channels through which common ideas are disseminated throughout the most obscure corners of the world for another four hundred years is quite questionable.

CORRESPONDENCE

WOODLAND MENNONITE CHURCH

Warroad, Minnesota

Our Christmas program was well attended, for no roads were blocked. Our choir is small in comparison to some choirs. However, it is not just the big things which are looked upon by our Father in heaven. The Church had its annual meeting on December 5. The prayer meetings were postponed during December because of practising the Christmas program. Rev. John T. Neufeld of the Chicago Bible Mission held several meetings in our church. These were very interesting. The Lord's Supper was observed on January 1. At the beginning of another new year it seems so easy to start it right, but it is not so easy to put the right finish to it.—Mrs. Otto Unruh

HUTTERTHAL MENNONITE CHURCH

Freeman, South Dakota

This I know is the first report of the secretary to The Mennonite, for until our annual meeting we did not have a permanent secretary. The Hutterthal Church is new in General Conference circles, so a little organization news will not hurt.

Our minister is Rev. Jacob B. Hofer. Our Sunday School superintendent is Paul E. Hofer. His assistant is Jos. J. Hofer. Our Sunday School teachers are: Mrs. Paul J. Decker, Sarah B. Hofer, Paul J. Decker, Alma Glanzer, Jos. K. Kleinsasser, Jos. J. Hofer, Mrs. Jake J. Kleinsasser, Paul L. Hofer, Peter J. S. Hofer, John B. Hofer, Jos. P. Clanzler, John J. B. Hofer, John L. Hofer, and Jos. P. Glanzer are our trustees. The treasurer is Jos. K. Kleinsasser; the secretary, John P. Kleinsasser. Our total receipts for various funds were as follows: Sunday School, $617.24; missions, $1,878.10; C.P.S., $1,072.82. We are making a special levy for next year to create a building fund. We have nearly 180 members. Two of our C.P.S. boys visited us during the holidays. They were John M. Hofer and Peter A. Hofer of Hill City. Also their wives were along. Our church shipped about 150 lbs. dressed ducks to the Hill City Camp. John P. Kleinsasser (We thank Brother Kleinsasser for this fine report, and we hope that he will send us many more.—Editor)

EMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Moundrige, Kansas

"O give thanks unto the Lord, for He is good: for His mercy endureth forever." Psa. 107:1.

We have organized our choir this last year with Roy Unruh as director. We have on the average about twenty-four in our choir.

Every three weeks our C.E. gives a program. In general good interest is shown by attendance. We have given two exchange programs at other churches, one at the Friedenstal Church and the second at the Hopefield Church. We enjoyed the spiritual fellowship of our sister C.E.'s. Our present officers are Roy Unruh, President; Leon Jantz, Secretary; Leola and Daton Wedel, Program Committee. Our last program was the "closing of year 1944" program, followed by a service conducted by our pastor, Rev. Garman Wedel. We had a blessed evening in the Word, period of testimony, and a season of prayer. We definitely felt the presence of the Holy Spirit.

A heart-touching Consecration Service was conducted by our pastor Rev. Garman Wedel on December 17th for Richard Keith Rishel, and Roger Marion Jantz. May we as a congregation remember these young lives and souls in our prayers to our Lord and may this service have been a reminder to reconsecrate our lives more fully to Him, whose birthday we have just celebrated.

Our Christmas program by the choir and the children of our church was given Christmas Eve with our Sunday School Superintendent Elmer Jantz as chairman. We had 100 per cent attendance of those on the program. Following the program a Christmas offering for relief was held, amounting to $54.29.

Our annual business meeting was held December 11, 1944. Total contributions to our church organization amounted to $2,530.66. The offering for Relief, C.P.S., Home and Foreign Mission, etc., for the last four years are as follows: 1940, $193.31; 1941, $454.56; 1942, $912.29; 1943, $959.21; and this year 1944, $1,102.82, the largest amount in the history of our church.

At the end of this old year, may we take inventory of our lives for the sake of improving them in the New Year, confessing our shortcomings and receiving God's cleansing—thus rededicating our lives more fully to Him, that we will pray more for our church, pastor, and fellowmen, all for the upbuilding of His kingdom; for prayer is the source of greatest power.—Corr.

HOME MISSIONS

THREE PLACES OF WORSHIP PURCHASED RECENTLY

A group of worshippers had been gathering here and there in Calgary, Alberta, for some time. The group was of a size and strength that it was hoped that a permanent place of worship might be secured. Suddenly the opportunity presented itself to buy a church all ready, when a committee was looking for a place to hold their annual Harvest Home and Thanksgiving Service. A meeting was called of all the worshippers, letters were written, and the Will of the Lord was also earnestly sought. Everything worked together and the building (frame 30x75 feet) with electric lights, gas furnace, hot and cold water facilities, pews, and musical instrument was bought. Locally subscriptions were made for the down price. The Alberta friends were invited to help. The Home Mission Board also helped with a gift and a substantial loan.

On Sunday, November 5, the worshippers held their first devotional Service in their newly acquired church which formerly had been a United Church. Rev. J. P. Vogt, Coaldale, Alberta, a member of the Canadian Home Mission Committee, has the direction of this church in hand. May the Lord continue to bless this field.

Huron, South Dakota

The Evangelization Committee of the Northern District Conference has been working on this project for some time. A building could be bought, but it had to be moved a long way. Two lots were bought and the basement was made. Naturally the building needs to be renovated, but there is great joy that a place of worship is in immediate prospect. Because the Lord moved willing hearts to give gifts, the Home Mission Board was able to make a contribution here and a loan to encourage the workers. Rev. Jacob A. Friesen, 313 Utah Street, S.E. Huron, South Dakota, is the leader of this happy and busy group of worshippers.

Blaine, Washington

For some time a small number of families lived near Blaine, Washington. Recently more joined this group. Rev. F. D. Koehn, Blaine Wash. ministers to this group. This past summer when Rev. J. J. Esau returned home from Vancouver, B.C., he stopped off at Blaine, and preached here at two or three services. The Evangelization Committee of the Pacific District Conference kept in close touch with this group, and recently Rev. J. M. Franz, their Conference Minister, held a number of services here. The group is now ready to be organized. They had purchased a schoolhouse just outside the community, expecting to remodel this building into a place of worship. The building was not located on a good hard road, but it was the best that could be done, so the people were happy in their anticipation.

The Lord had better things in store for these His children. A schoolhouse, conveniently located on good paved road, was offered for sale. Naturally the group was interested. The building is 30x72 feet and of frame, situated on a three-acre plot. The building is equipped with a fine electric water pressure system and lights. There is a double garage and another smaller building on the tract. At the sale the Committee bought this property at about 60% of the appraised worth! Immediately the other building was wanted by the Dutch Reformed people.

The organized church will have about forty members. Between sixty and seventy attended the meetings when Rev. Franz was there. The soil is good and markets close. Indeed this appears a real good prospect. Here again the Home Mission Board could make a gift toward the purchase, and a loan was offered to the grateful group.

What a joy and what a blessing it is to be able to help in such promising fields. The Home Mission Board has been able to give this help and encouragement to the small groups because of your loyal and constant prayers and gifts. Will you follow these three new groups as they get started and labor to save many souls and declare the riches and the glory of Jesus Christ as Saviour.

Gratefully your co-worker for Christ,

A. J. Neuenschwander, Sec.

The gifts for home mission work that you have given so regularly do go to support the itinerant ministers who visit the scattered groups of Mennonites and ministers in new fields, but they also go to support in part one of our very active church leaders in Canada. Add a prayer for this and many other workers in your regular devotions, will you?

The Home Mission Board desires to express to you the thanks of all the workers in the fields that are supported by your tithes and offerings. May the Lord richly reward you for your interest and prayers, as we enter the New Year.

—A. J. Neuenschwander.

Some "Mennonites" Are Missing

Some "Mennonites" are needed by the Mennonite Historical Library, North Newton, Kansas. This Library would like to complete its file of "The Mennonite." The following issues are missing: Those of October, November, and December, 1887; all those of 1888, all of 1889, and all those of 1900, and all those of 1901, and No. 19 of the year 1930.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Orlando Wiebe, Chicago, Illinois

We have been considering the six woes of Isaiah during the past few days. But the Christian religion is not only a religion of woe, it is also a religion of hope and faith. As we begin this new year, it may be well to remind ourselves again of some of these facts.

JANUARY 15—"For we are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope: for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for?" Romans 8:24.

It is characteristic of Christians to be optimistic, to be hopeful. This hope is well founded in the life of the church. Paul even says that it is by our hope that we are saved. How can it be that in a world of such evil and wrong Christians can yet hope? The answer is that the Christian has complete confidence in God and his working in the world. The Christian can see in Christ the saving hope of the world, regardless of the amount of evil that he also sees.

JANUARY 16—"And ye shall know the truth, and the truth, shall make you free." John 8:32.

The hope of the Christian is sufficient because it is based on truth. One of the reasons that the Anabaptists, and particularly the Mennonites, insisted upon the open and free use of the Bible by every believer, was that they knew that "the truth shall make you free." The truth was and is that God acted and is acting in history to redeem and save. This is why the Christian hopes! This is the truth that makes men free!

JANUARY 17—"Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." Romans 12:21.

One of the truths of the Bible that the historic peace churches considered to be all important is the truth expressed in our verse for the day. This was a truth, a hope, without which our forefathers could never have come through their many trying experiences.

Today we live in a world that also presents much evil and suffering. The sins are not only in our enemies, but the evil is also in ourselves, and yet we as Christians have the fundamental hope and conviction that this is God's world, and in God's world, good can overcome evil.

JANUARY 18—"Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Romans 5:1.

The eventual culmination of the hope of the Christian is in his faith. This faith is not blind and unreasoning, however, for it takes into account the awful sin in the world and in man himself. And yet it sees that even in all the sin and evil of the world, there is redemption. When any man can see this, then he has faith. Paul, who had grown up under the law, suddenly came to the conviction that no matter how hard he tried of himself, he could never live up to the law. But he also saw that greater thing, namely, the Grace of God, through which he could be justified and saved.

JANUARY 19—"Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Hebrews 11:1.

What is this faith? It is the Christian's belief that the Kingdom of God is a reality, even though the world is not yet redeemed. The Kingdom is living in the hearts of men. We cannot bring in the Kingdom, but in faith we can live in the Kingdom even now.

It is this faith, this hope, that has been with men since the days of Isaiah and before. It was this faith which led our forefathers to migrate from land to land, and it is the faith that even now keeps Christians from giving up in despair.

JANUARY 20—"Even so faith, if it hath not works, is dead, being alone." James 2:17.

Finally we are given the test of faith. Unless faith results in something, then it is surely dead. For example, if we were to say that we have faith in good overcoming evil and yet never perform any good deeds our faith would be meaningless. Traditionally the Mennonites have been a group of action. Our mission work, our relief work, and the work of the boys in C.P.S. give evidence of a faith with works. May the rest of us be as active in our faith.

A NEW YEAR'S MEDITATION

By Erland Waltner

"Forgetting those things which are behind... I press on." Phil.3:13

During the closing days of an old year it is good to make an inventory of our experiences of the past. It is good to see how far we have come—or gone. We also look upon the year which lies ahead and hope that it will bring happiness to us and to others. If we would have a "Happy New Year" is important that we should leave some things behind us as we pass another milestone of time.

Paul speaks of forgetting certain things which are behind. Paul knows that certain things of the past can be hindrances in the future, unless they are forgotten. Yet there are also some things that need to be remembered. Progress always involves forgetting some things and remembering others. It takes the grace of God to forget the things we ought and it takes the Spirit of God to discern the things we ought to remember.

Let us forget the failures of the past which would discourage us in days ahead, but let us remember the lessons they have taught us.

Let us forget the sins that God has forgiven us, let us remember the wonderful grace of God and the price that was paid on Calvary for this forgiveness.

Let us forget the sins of others who have repented and found the peace of God, and let us remember that we are all human and prone to err.

Let us forget the insults we have suffered, the slights we have felt, the resentments we have harbored, remembering that these can do us no good in the coming year but can make it very unhappy for us and for others. —Mountain Lake Observer

The Ideal C.P.S. Camper

By Roland Bartel

The ideal C.P.S. camper has not yet been inducted. Once in a while we catch a fleeting glimpse of him in one camp or another but he has never been known to settle down in one camp long enough for the fellows to get acquainted with him. Perhaps, we can best learn to know him by venturing a description of him as we would expect to find him if he were drafted.

The ideal camper is first of all one who gladly accepts the challenge of living in a C.P.S. camp. I suppose that even the ideal camper would prefer not to be drafted, but when the choices are before him he chooses civilian public service, not as the lesser of two or more evils, but as the greatest opportunity for consistent Christian living open to him under the circumstances. If, as history records, Paul and Silas were able to sing praises at midnight while confined in a Roman prison, I believe the ideal camper could find many opportunities for Christian living and growth in a C.P.S. camp. What are some of these opportunities?

One of the most disguised challenges is the possibility of demonstrating a Christian spirit toward those who differ from us. The majority of Mennonite men come to camp from a community and church in which all the members held similar religious beliefs and were quite well agreed on social customs, standards of personal conduct, etc. When these men go to a church-operated camp they generally expect to live in a similar homogenous environment. Instead they find themselves surrounded by many differences which they had never before encountered. I doubt if the ideal camper would try to agree with all these differences, but he certainly would try to discover the Christian way of dealing with them, and having found it, put it into practice.

One difference about which many campers feel quite deeply is the wide divergence in religious beliefs. Heretofore they have been able to avoid those who disagreed with them, but now they have no choice. They are all thrown together and forced to work, play, eat, sleep, loaf, study, and worship with men whose religious convictions range all the way from the ultra-conservative to the most liberal. When he finds himself in the midst of these differences, the ideal camper will be particularly careful to withhold condemnation and strive to apply the Christian principle of consideration and meekness.

Similarly differences in personality, education, talents, personal habits, economic status, etc., will test his ability to maintain the Christ-like spirit and produce the fruits of the spirit. Perhaps an unsympathetic work foreman or work crew will provide a similar test of his Christianity and offer an opportunity for genuine growth.

Another challenge that the ideal camper will face is the use of his free time. After the required day's work has been completed he still has at least four hours each day to do as he pleases. A good educational program may occupy a part of that time, but he will still have a lot of free time on his hands which can become unbearable drudgery if he doesn't make good use of it. I shall not try to list the large number of things that the ideal camper can do that will greatly enrich his life, but I am convinced that the large amount of free time which he must spend in camp is another severe test of his steadfastness of purpose and his zeal for abundant Christian living.

The ideal camper will also capitalize on the unusual opportunity he has in camp to develop a meaningful private devotional life. On Sundays, at the breakfast table each day, and at weekly prayer meeting he will probably participate in group worship with the rest of the camp. In addition to that he will feel the need to spend much time in private meditation and prayer. Christ worshiped in the synagogues and in other public gatherings, but he often retreated to the deserts and the mountains for private conference with his Father. The ideal camper will feel a similar need and utilize the opportunity to fill that need.

Living in a C. P. S. camp enables one to make an abrupt break with his past and make a fresh start in life. The ideal camper will regard his camp experience as a "time out" from his busy game of making a living. During this "time out" it is his unprecedented privilege to do some deep thinking about what he was doing and what he feels he should be doing. If he coasted into his occupation and feels he doesn't belong there, now is the time for him to make a definite decision. One person said that C.P.S. had meant just that to him—it helped him get out of the rut he was in and made it possible for him to choose an occupation in which he felt he would be most useful and happy. Another person said the government had forced him to do what he should have done voluntarily long ago—take time out to redirect his life.

Roland Bartel is Educational and Assistant Director of C.P.S. Camp No. 31, Camino, California. Previously he served as Educational Director of the Mulberry, Florida, Camp.

It is not necessary to point out many more opportunities to the ideal camper. He sees them for himself. The basic difference between the mediocre camper and the ideal camper lies in their outlook. One sees the camp experience as an unnecessary burden he is forced to bear. The other sees it laden with challenges and opportunities for Christian living, growth, and service.

R. C. Kauffman Writes from Calcutta, India

"We arrived at the Calcutta port late in the afternoon, two days ago. We had our supper on ship and then set foot on good terra firma for the first time in almost two months. That evening I went out to call the Lee Memorial Mission only to find that Isaac and Baer were away not to return until the next day and that we would have to find our way out from the dock to the Mission (about five miles) by taxi. (Here one and one-half lines were cut out by censor.) No taxis are permitted on the grounds. So we confronted the problem of getting all our luggage outside this area on to the road where it could be picked up. The only answer seemed to be to hire some coolies to carry it out for us. But the coolies want money, and we had not yet had a chance to change ours into local currency. So there we were in India but unable to get away from our ship! We finally decided to stay in our cabins on ship another night (what was one more night!). The next morning, then, I went out, got some money exchanged, rounded up a half-dozen coolies, called two taxis (one couldn't handle all four of us and our luggage), and we were off for the Mission. When we arrived, Baer met us at the front gate—he had just returned—and we were soon lodged. This little experience of getting from the ship to the Mission served to introduce us to the problems of doing business in a strange country. You should have seen those coolies carry our luggage. They were small emaciated fellows, but one of them would load a footlocker on his head and walk right off with it. Don't know why we never thought of trying that! The taxis were something too—old open touring cars, with Sikhs, wearing big beards and dresses, as drivers. Of course, they drive on the left side of the road, in good British fashion, and with cows, women, children, ox-carts, goats and what-not on the streets, it was a hair-raising experience. The vicarious driving had me all worn out and confused by the time we got to the Mission. Leaving the ship's crew was almost like parting from a family; there were many fond farewells and well-wishings. Most of them, though, thought we would be ready to go home in about a week—they think India is a terrible place in which to live. I suppose we could go back to the ship even now and have an American meal if we wanted it.

Now as for India. What a place! It seems almost like an ephemeral dream to be here. There is certainly no mistaking it for some part of the United States. One knows that one is in a foreign country and is reminded of it at every turn. Even the air seems different—that is, there is a musty smell to it and as one goes along the streets at night one is met by the aroma of incense coming from shops along the way. Most of the shops or stores are, by our American standard, just holes in the wall, though there are some quite nice stores too. They are rare, however, and are quite bare inside. But old and dilapidated as most buildings are, there is still a unique fascination about them—I suppose the fascination of age and that certain oriental tinge. I think what impressed me first and most upon coming into Calcutta was its throng of life, human and animal. Ox-carts go right through main street, if there is such a thing as 'main street,' cows—a peculiar humpbacked variety looking something like water-buffaloes, lie on the sidewalks and roam around in the city 'green,' crows and hawks sit on street-lights and city buildings like pigeons at home. Considering how wary our crows and hawks are this seems very odd to me. I wonder whether it might be a result of Indian philosophy prohibiting the taking of life. When one wakes up early in the morning, right here in the middle of Calcutta—a city of some 4,000,000—what one hears is not so much trolleys, trucks, and machinery as the chattering of crows. And people are everywhere, gobs of them. The very prevalence of human life makes it seem cheap. Women with little babies on their hips accost one with "Sahi, sahi" and the outstretched hand. Beggars of all kinds are prevalent and one meets them almost every time one goes out. Lots of them, perhaps most of them, are fakes and we are instructed not to pay any attention to them. But it's something to get used to. Indians aggregate a lot and for every little job there seem to be half a dozen workers. The other morning I looked out of the window and saw eight men sitting in a circle cracking nuts. A lot of natives are engaged in running rickshaws. Haven't had a ride in one yet. Others sit in little corners along the street rolling out "pan"—a peculiar sort of thing Indians buy to chew, like we use chewing gum. Only this is made out of a green leaf with some unts and tobacco ground up and strewn inside. The nut gives off color and colors their mouths a bright red. Looks as though they just had a few teeth knocked out. I mention these trades to show the small jobs at which hundreds of them try to eek out a living. Then, of course, many more are servants. Our meals are cooked, served, dishes washed, rooms cleaned, laundry done, etc.—all by coolies. It makes one sort of feel guilty. I'm not used to being waited on like that. Yet, they appreciate the employment as little as the salary is. Our cook at the relief station gets 20 rupees a month, i.e., a little over $6.00 and he considers himself well paid. But such poverty and such living conditions as these people, or rather the many even less fortunate, maintain are hard to imagine. We haven't really seen the slums yet, but what we have seen would make slum areas at home appear mild. Fortunately the weather is so mild, at least thus far, as to eliminate the problem of cold. Many sleep out on the sidewalk and if one isn't careful he stumbles over them. They wear all sorts of things. Most men seem to wear something that looks like a bed-sheet tucked about themselves, others wear skirts, and some anglocized clothing much like our own, including the short trousers and high socks which we will be wearing as soon as we have time to make the purchases . . . The women also drape themselves with a sheet much like some of the men. In fact, it's hard to tell some of them from men and mistakes could easily be made. Others, however, dress in real brightly colored shawls or robes. These are the more well-to-do women. Some of the girls and women are really very nice looking. As you perhaps know, the Indians are a sub-class of the white of Caucasian race and carry the same general features with the exception of their dark skin. Also, in general, they seem smaller—though this may be due mainly to nutritional factors. (To be continued.)

Meeting at Tabor Church

by Jean Riesen

Rev. P. H. Richert. After the Walton High School performed with music, Rev. Phillip Wedel gave the evening address. It was centered around the passages taken from Romans and Corinthians: "Abhor that which is evil and cleave to that which is good" and "Do all to the glory of God."

Training reflects the conduct of later life, but we cannot depend on training alone. We ourselves must fight a good fight and keep the faith." Then only righteousness prevails. We must strive for eternal things; what effervescence is to mineral water, that is your aim in life to eternity. Life is purposeful and meaningful; thus we should organize life around some central fact, and not organize this purpose around some triviality.

The program was concluded with music, given by the Goessel and Alexanderwohl churches.

The young people, who had community of interest, activity and feeling were then invited to the church basement. An atmosphere of friendliness and comradeship prevailed, for there was mutual relation between members. Cocoa and a wide variety of cookies were served, after which the youth conference was pleasantly concluded with song.

THE GIRL WE LIKE

- The girl who is sunny.
- The girl who has a conscience.
- The girl who is trustful and true.
- The girl who stands for the right.
- The girl who belongs to no clique.
- The girl who sings from her heart.
- The girl who believes in her home.
- The girl who talks to some purpose.
- The girl who dislikes to be flattered.
- The girl who believes in her mother.
- The girl who is neither surly, nor sour.
- The girl who knows how to say "No."
- The girl who abhors gossip.
- The girl whose religion shines in her life.
- The girl who is modest.
- The girl who is not afraid to be different from other girls.

IN MEMORIAM

ELIZABETH BARBARA LINGENFELDER

daughter of the late Rev. J. P. Miller and Magdalena Hubin Miller, was born December 3, 1884, and departed this life December 12, 1944. She came to the Hanston community with her pioneer parents in 1885. In this community she lived and served throughout her entire lifetime. When still a young girl she was baptized by her father and taken into the Mennonite Chr., of which she remained a loyal and active member the rest of her life. On May 12, 1910, she was united in marriage, by her father, to John Lingenfelder.

She and her husband spent their thirty-four years of wedded life in their home in Hanston which they had prepared before their marriage. Theirs was a truly happy home in which relatives and hosts of friends spent many delightful hours. Friendships meant so much to her, and nothing pleased her more than to be able to make someone happy. She possessed a wonderful memory, and many have been the tokens she sent to her relatives and friends in remembrance of some special days in their lives. In a poem she wrote on "Friendship," she expressed herself thus:

"Friendship, what a blessed word
Of which we have so often heard;
It to a higher plane does lift
When we possess this wondrous gift.

Friendship, how broad, how real,
Its very meaning we can feel.
It gives courage, hope, and cheer
And wipes away the bitter tear.

Friendship, what does it show?
That we have friends who love us so
By gifts and help they do bestow
Help us their love and sacrifice to show

Friendship—what value and worth
To all mankind on earth,
Of which we can give and also receive
And banish much of sorrow and grief."

She leaves her sorrowing husband, three brothers: J. A. and E. D. Miller of Hanston; A. R. Miller of Venice, California; and two sisters—Mrs. Minna Ewy, Abilene, Kansas, and Anna, Mrs. Paul Baumgartner, North Newton, Kansas. Her presence will be sorely missed in her home, in her church, and in her wide circle of friends and relatives. Those who knew her best loved her most and will keep her in loving remembrance.

Woman Appointed for England-Holland Unit

Elma Esau, who has been assisting the Kitchener, Ephrata, and Newton clothing centers, directing the work at the Newton center since its opening in September, has been appointed for the England-Holland unit. Mrs. Selma Linscheid is designated as the new director of the Newton center.

Doctor Views Tolumat Dietitian's Task

Dr. Richard Yoder requested that Mary Emma Showalter come to Tolumat to concentrate on diets for children confined to the hospital or slowly erasing the marks of starvation and malnutrition. A measure of her responsibilities are cited from his letter:

"Mary Emma has taken over her duties as dietitian by beginning in the hospital which needed the supervision and advice of an experienced person very urgently. She is rapidly effecting much needed changes and improvements and the results in terms of children's weights and appetites are already very evident. The much larger problem of an adequate diet for children feeding from the three camp kitchens has yet to be tackled and will be begun in about a week . . . But it will be difficult as the present cooks know absolutely nothing about nutrition in terms of vitamins, calories, and minerals. Their only criterion is a full stomach. . . Besides preparing the menus and supervising the preparation of the food she will first have to convince the kitchen staff that the food which is being prepared is best for the children and that if it is prepared properly will be approved by the children's tastes, always taking into account in the preparation of the diet that each nation has its own peculiar likes and dislikes so far as food is concerned. . ."

Enlargement of Middle East Relief Unit Continues

Three workers leaving for the Middle East early in the near year include two nurses, Helen Moser of Orrville, Ohio, and Martha Eimen of Wellman, Iowa. Arthur Jahnke, Canadian representative from Herbert, Saskatchewan, is already at Akron Headquarters awaiting sailing notice.

Twelve Ton Clothing Goal Realized in November

The contribution of 9,562 pounds of clothing at the Newton Clothing Center, 12,664 pounds at the Ephrata Clothing Center and approximately 2,721 lbs. received at the Kitchener Clothing Center made it possible for the goal of twelve tons per month to be generously realized during November. The response to the clothing need, during the months of September, October, and November, has amounted to 21,468 pounds for the Newton center, and 33,830½ pounds for the Ephrata center.

Henry Detwiler Becomes Accountant in El Shatt Camp

Henry Detwiler's accountant experience is being used in an understaffed office of one section of the El Shatt camp. Sam Yoder and he are in the same camp division and are tent mates:

"Sam showed me around his office and the various shops that they have to keep the men busy. Shoe repair and even manufacturing, tailor shops, tin-smithing, blacksmithing, artistry, sewing, mattress making, etc. These people seem to be very good with the use of their hands. They take great pride in their work, for it must be done just right or it isn't good enough. Slow but very thorough. They are quite happy, too. They go around singing, especially the younger group. They do a lot of harmonizing and it sounds very well."

Articles made in the Yugoslav refugee camps were scheduled to be displayed in Cairo. The variety of articles on display had been of surprising proportions the previous year, but our M.C.C. workers believe this year's display will be even more outstanding because the refugees have added many more items to their list of articles made.

M.C.C. Workers at Tolumat Unpack M.C.C. Bales

Dr. Richard Yoder was selected to supervise the distribution of the M.C.C. shipment of clothing at the Tolumat camp. Mary Emma Showalter and Nancy Hernley enjoyed the opportunity of assisting in the unpacking and expression of their joy is reflected in the following:

"We are quite thrilled to have the Mennonite clothing arrive in our camp at last. For all these weeks it has been held in customs office. Nancy and I thrilled beyond words to unpack and really handle those very bundles which were so neatly assembled at Ephrata Clothing Depot. The one bale was opened soon upon arrival for the hospital, as the supplies it contained were so much needed. I am hoping to be able to see more of it and to have a small share in its distribution. Nancy and I have said that we think it would be quite interesting to run across one of our own dresses which we shared with those who are more needy than ourselves. We may see them some day on some of the girls here in camp."

Special Projects Encouraged

Earlier in the year it was thought that the total number of men in Mennonite camps and units would fluctuate only a bit around 3,000. Since that time, however, the camp population has increased considerably. As of November 30 there were 3,606 men in the camps, and inductions are continuing at the rate of 75 to 100 per month. With this increase the C.P.S. Section at Akron has been faced with the task of deciding whether more base camps are to be opened or special projects expanded. The recently-opened camp at Powellsville, Maryland, has absorbed new men for the past several months but it is now necessary to make assignments elsewhere. In the light of this situation the M.C.C. has decided that C.P.S. men should be encouraged to volunteer for special projects, particularly mental hospitals, to take care of the increase in base camps.

Mississippi Public Health Unit

Application forms have been sent to all the Mennonite camps and units for C.P.S. men who are interested in volunteering for the Mississippi unit. Men in the camps who have expressed a desire to do relief work but because of certain circumstances cannot see their way clear to do foreign service are encouraged to volunteer. The intention is to select men for this project who have a strong desire to do greater Christian service. While the camp strength will be small, only twenty-five to begin with, it is hoped that this project will be able to do something to assist people who are living under adverse and unfortunate circumstances. The work project will consist in carrying out sanitation measures for the elimination of hookworm and malaria.

Civilian Bond Report

Subscriptions to civilian bonds have now gone by the five million-dollar mark. As of November 22, 1944, the cumulative total was $5,009,059.50. Of this amount $3,629,456.00 was subscribed by Mennonites.

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

ISN'T IT STRANGE?

The most distinctive doctrine of the Mennonite Church is its doctrine of non-resistance. This fact is pointed out to us in church histories and in encyclopedias; it is always the first thing to be mentioned by non-Mennonites when they wish to characterize us. Mennonites are known far and wide as a peace church. Even Mennonites when asked what is the uniqueness of their church can often not think of any other distinctions than that "our church doesn't believe in war."

Apologies in Order

Yes, it is true that the Mennonite church is the oldest existing peace church. The doctrine has been kept alive for four hundred and nineteen years, but it is an open question as to how much longer it is to be kept alive. There was a time when preaching about this doctrine was done at the risk of one's life, and it was under those dangerous circumstances that the doctrine of non-resistance was preserved. Today there are all too many Mennonite Churches where Mennonite preachers addressing Mennonite congregations dare not speak about this traditional Biblical doctrine except in the vaguest and most general terms. I have personally been embarrassed on numerous occasions when speaking to Mennonite audiences on the subject of non-resistance. Knowing the existing situation in many congregations it seemed to me that apologies would be appreciated by some of my listeners who seemed insulted by my affront. Didn't I know that many young men from this congregation were in military service? Didn't I know that many members of my audience were strongly opposed to the Civilian Public Service program? Didn't I know better than to speak in public about so delicate a matter?

Giving It Away

Yes, I knew all of these things, but unless something is said on this basic portion of the Christian Gospel, the very stones will cry out in defense of it. Jesus taught it clearly. It is plainly written in the Scriptures. It is fixed doctrine in our church. It was reaffirmed as late as the 1941 General Conference at Souderton, Pennsylvania. Why then are apologies in order when one wishes to discuss it? The fact is that we are voluntarily surrendering this doctrine of our faith. The State is not taking it away. Because so many have surrendered his portion of the "faith of our fathers," it becomes a controversial matter within the church. And because it is controversial many ministers refuse to preach about it. Ministers who avoid the subject or are vague about it give their parishioners the impression that it is a personal matter and that the church has no pronounced teaching against war or participation in it. And so while the State makes provision for those with a conscience against war and while other Christian groups take up the cause of peace and non-resistance, a large number of us in the Mennonite Church are saying we have no conscience against war and we let others take up what we are laying down. Isn't it strange?

SAYS NOW IS THE TIME

Dr. Albert Buckner Coe, who served as an artillery lieutenant in the first World War and who is now pastor of a large Congregational Church in Oak Park, Illinois, and also a member of the Commission on a Just and Durable Peace says:

I am inclined to think that Jesus would say that the time to preach "Thou shalt not kill!" is now, while the war is on. It is now, while the world is aflame, that point is given to the command. Whatever our individual view of this war, whether we are pacifist or militarist, or somewhere in between, it is right to proclaim now that killing is sin, and will be sin forever.

The church must preach this truth now. If the church doesn't—if the church refuses on the ground of policy to preach it—the church is no more than an adjunct of the state. Of what value is the church if it does not dare preach the truth when the going is hard? Now is the time to proclaim—Thou shalt not kill! Now is the accepted time, now may be the day of salvation.

JOTTINGS

— The Gnadenberg Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, at its annual business meeting on New Year's Day, voted to adopt the 100 Per Cent Church Paper plan. The congregation also voted to put out a monthly paper for those members who are gone from the home community. Mrs. Leo Voth, correspondent to The Mennonite was elected editor of the monthly paper. Rev. J. J. Voth of North Newton is pastor of the Gnadenberg Church.

—The Annual Bible Week at Bethel College will be held from March 12 to 16 with Dr. Rufus Bowman and Dr. D. D. Eitzen as speakers. Dr. Bowman is president of Bethany Biblical Seminary, the seminary of the Church of the Brethren. Dr. Eitzen, who is from the University of Southern California, will lecture in the field of personal counselling.

—Rev. Leonard Metzker has resigned as pastor of the Eicher Emmaunal Mennonite Church, near Noble, Iowa. He plans to continue his studies at seminary this fall.

—The Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, adopted the 100 Per Cent Plan at its annual meeting. Rev. J. M. Suderman, Manager of the Mennonite Publication Office, reports that the church has already sent in its list of names to which one or both of the church papers will go.

—Brother Verney Unruh brought the New Year's Day message to the Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota. His subject was, "Pressing Toward the Mark." On New Year's eve he addressed the young people of the "South" and "North" churches. He spoke on the theme of keeping resolutions, stressing the need of prayer.

—Wayland Mennonite Church, Wayland, Iowa: The choir presented the Christmas cantata "Chimes of the Holy Night." The young people went to the Eicher Church for a social on December 28. The Senior C.E. had a program on New Year's eve. Then the group went into the basement or social activities and refreshments. At 11:00 all met again in the assembly room for the Watch-Night service.

—Brother Jacob T. Friesen, student at Biblical Seminary, New York, brought the New Year's Day message to the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota. Newly elected church officers were also installed on that day.

—Henry T. Reimer Jr., who has served as Director of the C.P.S. camp at Fort Collins, Colorado, has accepted the position of Unit Leader of the C.P.S. group at Norristown, Pa.

—Selective Service has again resumed the drafting of men in the 26-37 age group. Since this past April the emphasis had been on the induction of men 18-26. —M.C.C. Peace Section.

—The First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, also had a Watch Night service. It included a social hour, singing of hymns, refreshments, short talks and devotions.

—"The raido work is continuing with growing interest... When we hear how shut-ins are inspired, comforted and encouraged, we feel that the work is infinitely worth-while. Probably no other project ever undertaken by our church has reached so far in to the outside world...It has always been the aim of the committee to use all the talent of the church in as many combinations as possible. —From the monthly bulletin of the Ebenezer Church, Bluffton, Ohio.

—The Bethel College Church held its annual meeting on New Year's Day. Abstracts of the annual reports of the officers and committees had been distributed on Sunday. Among the recommendations which were adopted, that of the pastor is the most far-reaching. He said, "I myself feel that the time is here for the Bethel College Church to have a home of its own, a house of the Lord dedicated to the worship of God and used for no other purpose." The congregation adopted his recommendation in this form: "That the Church Council appoint a representative committee to study the question of church building problems of site, architecture, materials, relations to the college, etc. and take steps to raise the necessary finances, and report to the congregation within three months." —Corr.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

Deep Run— The Bluffton College Girls' Gospel Team conducted a service in the church December 31. The message was brought by Arthur Keiser, a member of the West Swamp Church, who is also a student at Bluffton College.

Our Ministry of Education

How Much Are We Worth?

By J. H. Langenwalter

Who are "we"? You and I.

Some forty years ago two young men entered a large museum in one of our great cities. The guide was much interested in showing them a mummy which had recently been taken from one of the Pyramids in Egypt. This mummy was reported to be 3,700 years old. It was a rather interesting but not very attractive caricature of what had once been a human being, or the body thereof. The visitors wanted to know what kind of man had lived in this body when it was alive. The guide could not tell them. He was interested in the age of the mummy and in how well preserved it was.

One of the visitors asked him whether they had found anything else in the tomb. He told them that men had also found a vessel into which a small quantity of wheat had been placed at the same time and that some of it had shown a slight trace of germinating power. Not enough, of course, to plant it with success.

Some time later a student in an Egyptian University wrote a paper on this wheat in which he maintained that if this wheat had been sown with its increase, year by year, for forty years it would have yielded enough to have paid the Egyptian national debt and left that country free of debt and independent. In addition he claimed that there would have been enough left to be a guaranty against famine in his country. That gave food for thought. Just keeping a man's body or keeping a quantity of wheat does not reveal their true worth. What they were or might have been worth to others is the true indicator of their value.

The difference between food, freedom, and joy of achievement on the one hand and semi-starvation, slavery and a discouraged people on the other hand is often determined by the value of little or of few.

We are worth as much as we increase the true values of the people who spend their days on earth with us. Our true worth lies in what we are. What we have will leave us just as surely as did what the man back of the 3,700 year old mummy had.

What we do for, with and to others will live on in them. If we prove to be worthless in the true values of life there will be losses to more men, women, and children than we can estimate. If we succeed in accordance with the orderly arrangement of the Judge of us all there will be added values to more men, women, and children than we can realize.

Our interest in values determines what kind of human beings we are becoming. "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he (becoming)." We may become thing-minded persons who live with and for figures, weights, and measures. On the other hand we may become spirit-minded people who live with and for values that are always good, and good for something.

Things have value only as they may be put into service. That was graphically illustrated when the soldiers who had to leave the Philippines several years ago burned large sums of U. S. money as though it were of no value at all. They burned this money in order to keep it from falling into the hands of the Japanese for whom it might have had value. The United States was none the poorer because these bills were burned. They had lost their value because they were not in position to serve a helpful purpose to the nation which had issued them.

How much we are worth depends pretty largely upon our choice. We can either help or hinder people both in receiving what they need and in doing what they like to do. Many of the values in the history of human kind have been lost because those who were unwilling to sacrifice undercut the efficiency of those who were willing to go the "second mile." On the other hand there have been those whose influence through encouragement has been such that their beneficiaries can never be grateful enough for the strength which came to them because somebody dared to be worth much to his fellow men.

If the best is none too good for our children, in the broad sense of the word, then we, you and I, dare not neglect using the potential values which God has entrusted to us, whether they be in the form of ability, time, or possessions. Upon our use of these will depend how much we are worth.

Meditations on the Mennonites

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

The General Conference is now eighty five years old. The primary purpose of organizing the Conference in 1859 was to bring about a union of all Mennonite Church groups in America. It was hoped that agreements could be reached on matters of Bible doctrines, confessions of faith, customs, and religious practices.

The Situation Today

During these eighty-five years the General Conference has grown from the few churches and several hundred members represented at the organizational meeting at Donnellson, Iowa, to its present membership of over 36,000. Despite the numerical increase, it must be said that the chief objective of the founders is still far from realization. There have been no major mergers, and later the joining of the immigrant Mennonites from Russia in the 1870's. At the present time this goal as a Conference objective is non-existent in the minds of most General Conference members, and flickering only faintly in the minds of the rest. The Conference has from the beginning been characterized by the diversity of its cultural composition. Within the membership are those who reflect the culture of Switzerland, Germany, Holland, Poland, and Russia.

Diversity of Training

But diverse cultural backgrounds are not the great barrier to unity, it is diversity of training that is the real barrier to unity of purpose, unity of method, and unity of attitude. In eighty-five years we have not developed a philosophy of Christian education. We have given up the idea of an untrained ministry in favor of a trained ministry but have established no strong Bible School and Seminary to train our ministers and teachers. As a result we have teachers and preachers with no formal training, with little training, and with a great deal of training. The trained and untrained have been influenced by all manner of doctrine from the most orthodox to the most unorthodox by all sorts of strange religious teachings in denominational and undenominational schools in a variety of colleges in non-denominational religious magazines, by questionable radio evangelists, and traveling revivalists. How short-sighted we have been. What else can be expected than diversity of opinions in the Conference toward the program of promoting the gospel?

Respond to Training

We all respond to training and environment. If some go to college and seminary and some go only to non-denominational Bible school, if some study church history and others do not, if some read only The Mennonite while others read only the Moody Monthly, if some get their inspiration from militant non-Mennonite evangelists while others hear only their local pastor, if some do this and some do that in a score of other ways, we can expect only diversity of outlook, of attitude, of method, and indeed of objective. From this situation we must not be surprised to find that there is great diversity of scriptural interpretation in the various Conference Churches and sharp differences of doctrinal emphasis in our pulpits. Until there is unity of training for our preachers there will be no unity of spirit among our preachers and no agreement of emphasis in our preaching.

The Sin of Omission

It isn't so much the things you do, dear,
It's the things you leave undone
That gives you a bit of a heartache
At the setting of the sun.
The tender words forgotten;
The letters you did not write;
The flowers you did not send, dear,
Are your haunting ghosts at night.

The stone you might have lifted
Out of a brother's way;
The bit of heartsome counsel
You were hurried too much to say;
The loving touch of the hand, dear,
The gentle, winning tone
Which you had no time nor thought for
With troubles enough of your own.

Those little acts of kindness
So easily out of mind,
Those chances to be angels
Which we poor mortals find—
They come in the night and silence,
Each sad, reproachful wraith,
When hope is faint and flagging
And a chill has fallen on faith.

For life is all too short, dear,
And sorrow is all too great,
To suffer our slow compassion
That tarries until too late;
And it isn't the things you do, dear,
Its the things you leave undone,
Which gives you a bit of heartache
At the setting of the sun.

—Margaret E. Sangster.

EDITORIALS

REPETITION IS HELPFUL

Repetition helps us to remember to do the right. Often we want to do the right but we don't because we forget about it. This is also true of conference projects. An example of effective repetition is the publicity, which the Board of Trustees of the Western District has carried on since the last conference session. From October to the beginning of January that Board placed three appeals in The Mennonite. In addition it sent one letter to all the ministers in the district. This publicity has helped the churches to remember their action on the Church Building Fund as considered at the last conference. Remembering what they voted for, they are prompted to carry it out into action. The results have been encouraging. "I didn't think" and "I forgot" are often given as excuses for not doing the right. Repeating the right thoughts for action helps people to remember and to do the right.

ENDORISING THE RIGHT

The "Lesson Scope" feature has been added to the present number of the Mennonite Senior-Adult Quarterly. It gives the whole scope of scripture out of which the printed lesson text is taken. This number of the quarterly had been off the press but a little while when a church leader from Ohio sent the following appreciative message on a postcard: "I appreciate the new feature in the 1945 Senior Quarterly—Lesson Scope. For sometime I have felt that the entire lesson text should be indicated in the quarterly. . . I am glad that you found a way of getting it in without adding much additional material." This endorsement of the feature is encouraging. We thought that many who use the quarterly would like the lesson scope. This endorsement suggests that we did the right thing. Endorsing the right attitude of people helps them to do the right. Of the three: praise, blame, and neglect, praise works the best. An experiment with three groups of school children showed this. All three groups were equal in ability and studied the same material. One group was praised for good achievements. One group was only blamed for its failures. The efforts of the third group were ignored. No praise or blame was offered them. Tests showed that the "praise" group had done the best work. Endorsing the right action of another strengthens him in it. This is positive living. No wonder that Paul said, "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things."

SUGGESTING THE RIGHT

We often lack ideas for improving our work. Helpful are those friends who suggest ways of betterment. The lesson scope feature might not appear in the Senior-Adult Quarterly if two friends in a Washington church had not made the suggestion last fall. They had taken the Sunday School work seriously and had thought about it. As a result they had something to suggest when the opportunity came. Not only had they thought about means of improving, but they offered their ideas. A lot of good ideas go to waste because they are not shared. Civilization rests upon the sharing of ideas. If a new-born babe were cut off from all that others have learned, it would perhaps be a wonder child in reverse. The well-educated man knows what others have thought and are thinking. He seeks to get a wide knowledge of ideas, for he realizes that each human being has a unique opportunity to add to the collective insight of man. Scale all of this down to small areas of endeavor and the same holds true. We need to share our "bright" ideas with one another, for frequently they are the "right" ones.

SMOKE JUMPER

Smoke Jumper is the title of a forty-eight page book put out by the C.P.S. Smoke Jumper unit at Missoula, Montana. It has fifty-seven unusual pictures, several of them full-page. On page three you are invited to look for the sections entitled: "Torture Chamber," "Hitting the Silk," "Check and Triple Check," "Fire on the Mountain," "Between Fires," "This Is Our Country," "After Hours," and "Among Ourselves." Gregg Phifer, whose father edits Sunday School material for the large Methodist denomination, has edited this bi-annual. This book is attention arresting for young and old.

Copies of the Smoke Jumper will not pine away in any church or Sunday School library. We predict that in any case they are likely to be thumbed and worn in a short while, in spite of the high quality paper and workmanship of the book. Copies may be secured from the Bethel College Book Store, North Newton, Kansas, or from Art Wiebe, C.P.S. 103, Box 1511, Missoula, Montana. Cost per single copy is seventy-five cents.

Sunday School - Work or Play?

By J. S. Schultz

A brother Sunday School teacher from a church a few hundred miles from here, recently wrote as follows: "This week we have S.S. study courses every night for two hours; once a month we have teachers' meetings and we are supposed to contact every absentee each week. We are also supposed to visit the pupils in their homes. At every monthly meeting we are asked how many visits we have made in the homes. It is, of course, true that most of the time we are just playing at church and Sunday school work in comparison to our secular work." Is this last accusation fair?

For decades, perhaps centuries in certain churches, Christians assumed that the only qualification necessary to make a good minister was that of consecration and devotion to the cause. While we are well agreed that that is the first requirement for a true minister today, we are sure it is not enough; nor is it for a teacher or superintendent of a Sunday school.

We voice long and loud accusations against the public schools for giving us so little time with our children to teach religion and otherwise inculcate spiritual values into them, and there is ground for that. But until we really make better use of the time and opportunities we have in week-day religious education, summer vacation Bible schools, and especially in our Sunday Schools, we can hardly complain about our very limited results.

Would a banker, a grocer, or a farmer be willing to turn his organization over to one who had no other qualification for managing it for him than that of great interest in such work? For public school teaching it took centuries until effective teacher preparation became a requirement for accepting such a position, but in the last century only rarely have young men or women been given the responsibility of teaching unless they had a reasonable understanding of boys and girls to be taught and of subject matter to be studied. Is there any excuse for making no concerted effort in that direction if we really believe that we Sunday School teachers and superintendents have a God-given mission to perform, a responsibility for immortal souls of children and those older? What qualifications for teachers and superintendents could conferences or churches agree upon to apply that would improve our S. S. work? How would the following do to begin with: 1. Being an active Christian. 2. Having a working knowledge and understanding of the Bible. 3. Having had some experience of working successfully with children or young people. 4. Having an acceptable amount of schooling? Items one and three would have to be determined by several people of the church who knew the candidates; tests could decide the second, while the last would have to be decided upon by a committee or board.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Occasions for Praise and Prayer

Calvary Mennonite Church, Mechanics Grove, Pa. is enjoying the leadership of Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Regier. Sunday School and worship services in the morning are well attended. There was need for a new electric pump to be installed into the worker's home. The congregation, at the suggestion of the church council, contributed the money for the pump, which is a great convenience. The total outlay was $263.90 for the pump and installation. The Home Mission Board is deeply appreciative of this fine improvement. This is an occasion for praise to the Lord for the fine spirit of the congregation.

Problems Arise When People Move

There is always more moving about from one place to another in a city than in the country. A city church and church leaders know this and are prepared for such experiences. Recently, however, First Mennonite Church, Chicago, experienced an unusual amount of moving out of the vicinity of the church. I quote from a letter by Rev. A. E. Albrecht, 1500 West 72nd Place, Chicago 36, Illinois. "This fall four families moved out of this community and consider it too far to come back to the church. That reduced our Sunday School by fourteen members. Then there were several other children who were brought or at last influenced by those that left to the extent that they are not coming any more. Or in other words we lost about twenty members in one month." Some that left were in positions of leadership, and this makes the loss so much greater. Will you join the Board and the Congregation in earnest prayer that the Lord would so lead and guide that some might desire to come back, and that others might be found to fill the vacant places? Thank you."

Tribute to a Railroad Ticket Agent

Last summer, while Rev. J. J. Esau, blind evangelist, Bluffton, Ohio, was visiting all the Mennonite churches affiliated with the General Conference in Alberta and British Columbia, he unfortunately lost his Canadian Clergy Certificate. A new book could not be secured on the spur of the moment. Brother Esau had to travel a long way and hence had to pay full fare for his railroad ticket. Word was left with the ticket agent of that place that the book was lost. Sometime later on the clergy certificate was found and turned in to the agent, and he in turn forwarded it to Rev. Esau. Immediately Rev. Esau filled in the necessary certificate and sent it to this agent. Most promptly the agent acknowledged the receipt of the necessary stub and by check refunded the amount that was now due to Rev. Esau. The amount was $14.70. May the Lord reward such sincerity and devotion. Let us thank God for the many honest business men.

TEACHING THEM

The great Teacher gave this order to his disciples as his last command before departing from this earth. (Matt. 28:20) Many of us have the privilege of being a teacher. As for me I have to teach seven days a week. All my teaching from Monday to Sunday revolves around the Word of God and the person of our Saviour Jesus Christ.

We have forty pupils in Bible School right now, a cheerful group of young people eager to grasp with love and devotion whatever one has to offer them from God's Word and other subjects connected with the Word of God. We have pupils in three groups, and then we have two young ministers of the gospel who are taking a special course that should be a great help to them in their ministry.

Two days a week I have to walk to our German-English Academy here in Rosthern. There are about 140 students this winter from grade 9 to grade 12. I teach religion in all grades; in the lower grades besides the regular religion we are taking up our catechism; in some of the higher grades hymns and their origin in our Gesangbuch.

Though some of the classrooms are overcrowded, I must say to the credit of the students and the spirit of the school, the question of discipline hardly arises for me.

On Saturdays I meet a group of children of our Sunday School. We gather in the Academy and spend the three hours in the forenoon practicing in German reading and writing and in singing German songs. After singing in the morning I give a demonstration lesson in Biblische Geschichte (a Bible story). Certain groups of Bible School students observe and so learn how to teach children the Bible stories.

On Sunday I have, of course, my Sunday School class, and I have to take my turns in preaching in our Rosthern church or wherever my "Preachers List" requires me to go. After New Year on Sunday afternoons I teach catechism to candidates for baptism. The group sometimes adds up to fifty boys and girls, though of course not every one of them is ready at the end of the course to take the serious step of baptism.

Yes, "teaching them." How many do I reach daily or weekly this way? Two hundred? It certainly isn't far off. Where do they come from? Mostly, of course, from Saskatchewan, but we have quite a few students from Alberta, even from Manitoba, Ontario, and British Columbia. What a responsibility!

Because of the day-light-saving time I have to leave my home in winter when it is still dark. Then I have to walk one mile to the Bible School to be there at quarter before nine o'clock. That quarter of an hour goes for morning devotion. When the winter is at its peak we usually have lamps burning in the first period or periods. Needless to say, I am glad to get to warm myself at the radiator among the friendly faces of the boys and girls after having walked one mile in the darkness into the north and usually against a northerly wind.

From Bible School twice a week I walk another mile to the Academy and then another mile home. These walks sometimes make me tired, but they keep me healthy. The nights I like to spend at home, for other work has to be done. As secretary of the Canadian Conference I have a great deal of correspondence to do. Every week I provide our Canadian weekly, Der Bote, with "The Bible Story for Sunday." As editor of Der Kinderbote I have to do some thinking and some work. Our boys in camp or wherever they serve also demand my attention.

The nerve of my life's work, however, seems to be "Teaching them." Yes, it's a great responsibility, but then it is joy, too, and it gives me great satisfaction.

But before and after one has started "teaching them" one has to do a lot of learning oneself—from books, and still more—from the Book.

COULD YOU DO IT?

By C. Duerksen

"What shall we have for our closing program of the annual Bible Course," we wondered. We were to study the books of Revelation, Zechariah, and a simple course in the Gospel of John, which was to be taught later in the village churches.

One very interesting item in the closing program of Mr. Thiessen's school had been a spell-down in Bible verses. We decided to have such a number on our worker's program. In preparation for this, roll call in the Gospel of John class was answered by verses out of the Gospel. With a class of fifty you can imagine the variety of verses.

Closing day came. Songs, questions and answers on the book of Zechariah were given; then came the "spell down." The women and girls, numbering fifteen or so, were first. After the first two rounds no one was given another chance if they happened to repeat a verse that had already been given. Yet these women kept on for more than twenty minutes.

Then thirty men came forward. The older men were plainly nervous. Memorizing was not so easy for them. In this part of the program the judges found their task more difficult for the men used both Oriya and Hindi. During the first two times around they were given a second chance if they happened to start a verse that had already been quoted. After that he judges were strict, and the line grew appreciably shorter. Yet verses kept coming steadily for over half an hour. The winner was a young Oriya preacher. The runner up was a young chap who had just begun helping in evangelistic work. He had had an exceptionally good choice of verses and had recited them calmly.

As I listened to them, I knew I couldn't do it. How long do you think you could have quoted verses out of the Gospel of John without repeating? Try it sometime. And remember that the verses must be given accurately. You may surprise yourself.

TRAINING VILLAGE PASTORS AT JANJGIR

By S. T. Moyer

Certainly, to be educated is to become. If we do not become, we are only partially educated. And most certainly the supreme factor in education is a life centered in Jesus Christ as Lord and Saviour.

In the education of village pastors, we believe that one of the factors is guided experience in life situations. God has given us special opportunities here at Janjgir where we are the only training school for this grade of workers for all Chhattisgarh. With the foundations well laid by Rev. W. F. Unruh, and enlarged upon by Miss Burkhalter, God has suddenly opened up new doors for this educational process. Believers found in four or five nearby villages serve as the proving ground for these budding servants of the Lord.

(i) Here is the group in village S. When the first believer came a year and a half ago, the village furiously objected that he stay in their midst. "Why" asked Prabhu Din, "cannot he stay on his ancestral holdings?" "Because if he does, we fear we all may become Christians." What an objection! What a testimony!

July this year saw four adult believers in that village. Of course all does not go smoothly. Growing pains are to be expected. But every Sunday through mud and rain and sunshine and heat travels there on foot a third year student, Samuel Geer from Korba, and his apprentice Mantri Masih, from Bethesda Church, Champa. Teaching, shepherding, encouraging, they look after the flock.

(ii) For many years in Udeband there existed one family. To that was assigned John Paul, of Mauhadi, and Nanhe, of Dr. McGavran's field. The other Sunday John Paul took part in the Janjgir worship service, then on a rainy day walked the ten miles there and back, and then assisted in the burial of a young T B. whose coffin many were afraid to touch. When my wife mildly remonstrated that Nanhe might get sick, he better stay home, he stoutly declared that to walk these ten miles and do this service were the finest sort of medicine on top of a week of class room study; it made him feel fine and his brain clear.

(iii) To the S. W. in K. there now exist three believers. When recently we had placed there Martin Luther Ladar and his wife, the entire group of neighbors were so scared lest any should become converted that they strictly placed close scrutiny on any who entered that home where teaching was going on. But the music and teaching of Bible was too charming, and under cover of night, by stealth, the young men of the village would sneak in to listen and learn. To this group minister Simon Singh, of Dhamtari, with his helper, a young man from the great Methodist field of Bastar State.

(iv) One day our students were out as usual on Friday afternoon, in Gospel team work. Every Friday three groups go out. They came homeward bound through a section of P. a village to the S. E. A young man spoke up and said that he had been baptized in Champa some seven years previously, and had only recently returned from the coal mines. Why should he not become the center of a growing church in that village? I asked myself and the Lord. I then went myself and investigated. Then at once I sent two other young men there, one Peter Eliazer from Bastar State, and the other a first year student from Parsabadhar. This baptized believer receives them gladly, always gives his offering, seems eager to learn. I see hopes that his married Sister and her family too may come to Christ.

Now to make this training process complete, a great deal more is required than merely to send out the students. (a) One thing is preparation of heart and mind. Thus we meet every late Saturday afternoon for one hour of study of Bible Lesson and prayer, and counselling concerning the problems of worship and pastoral work. Then, (b) on Sunday is the work itself not theory, but in a life situation. I usually go out Sunday after Sunday from one place to the other. I indeed go to worship, but I also go with my mind and heart set to discern the student in action and for supervision. Thus, (c) supervision is a factor. The best supervision is that in which there is a maximum of vision, and a minimum of super. During the first period on Monday, the Chapel Period is given over to reports. Thus each encourages and spurs the other, and the entire school may bear up in prayer the work in its successes and difficulties. Thus, (d) there is a measuring and appraisal of results. These village believers have their problems. So when they come to the Station, I first refer them to their Shepherd, and if necessary, guide them in the handling of the problem or difficulty. This (e) is a vital element in training. Finally, (f) the usual Friday afternoon Gospel Team work goes on. Just as soon as Mr. Isaac comes back from Bengal Famine Relief to help with the work of the station, I wish to do everything possible in training under supervision so that during this Friday afternoon work the students will learn how to preach, how to teach, how to cooperate one with another, how to lead a Gospel Team, how to testify, how to sing, how to do personal work. This training in all phases of soul winning, is to supplement the training in pastoral work. We want these village pastors to be soul winners, and the soul winner to have a pastoral heart and mind. One object of prayer is that there may be a harvest, resulting in baptisms before Christmas. Please pray for this work, for the students, for a spreading, Bible-taught church.

CONTRASTS IN AN INDIAN VILLAGE!

By Mrs. P. W. Penner

How strange and remarkable it is! A Christian camp close by a Hindu shrine, and under an immense "Sacred Pepl Tree." How great the contrast! That was our situation in a village about eight miles from Mauhadei across the mile-wide river. Here we came, a large Christian group of ambassadors for Christ worshipping the living God, camped in tents pitched in the shade of this sacred tree approximately five feet from a small shrine, a very short distance onward stood a temple. At both places people worshiped "gods," the work of man's hands, that have eyes, but see not, that have ears, but hear not.

You might ask why the villagers would allow us in this sacred spot? Of course, permission has to be asked from village authorities, but the malgusar (village headman) gave us permission to this shady spot. Soon six tents were put up, a few huts from bamboo mattings besides. Years ago we could not have ventured this close to their "Holy Places." Many of the old prejudices and hatreds are gradually broken down. We must, however, promise to leave their shrine alone.

Sunday came, what a thrilling experience when from fifteen surrounding villages Christians appeared to worship with us and partake in the communion service which was held in front of our tent. As they were idol worshippers just a few years ago, now fifty-two partook in the Lord's Supper as humble children. The ground had been carefully swept and cleansed with fresh cow-dung. There we sat cross-legged in typical Indian fashion. The pulpit, a low table, also served as the communion table, no elaborate church building, no organ, no well-groomed elders and deacons marching down a carpet-isle, nevertheless, it was truly a "Worshipping place of God," where we worshiped Him in spirit and truth. No expensive silver communion set, but in an ordinary brass plate and cup passing from one to another, or with a teaspoon poured into the palm of the right hand from which they drank. Oh, the thrill and blessing! A few more could be added through baptism at this occasion.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By H. E. Nunemaker, Donnellson, Iowa

JANUARY 21—"The vessel that he made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter: so he made it again another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it." Jer. 18:4

In this experience Jeremiah received a new understanding of God. God is as the potter who shapes the unsightly clay into a vessel of beauty and usefulness. He is at work with man trying to make man holy and useful in His service. He is not aimless in His work. He works according to a plan. His plan envisions men and women free from sin. All of His efforts are directed toward this goal. In these studies may we consider reasons for His inability to realize His purpose with man and elements which make for its realization.

JANUARY 22—"The vessel . . . was marred . . . so he made it again." Jer. 18:4.

The potter did not realize his plan in the vessel. Something resisted his efforts and his skill. What should he do? Human impulsiveness and impatience would cause one to say, "Give it up and throw it away." But not so the Divine Potter, "He made it again." That is the most hopeful word the world has heard. When man neglects God, wanders from Him or rebels against Him, God gives him another chance. And that is not all. Through the power of the Holy Spirit He tries to make of the erring one a new person. Two truths to ponder—the God Who gives another chance and the possibilities for righteousness when one responds to His Spirit.

JANUARY 23—"Thou art the man." II Sam. 12:7.

D. L. Moody used to say, "People say that my meetings are doing good. They are reaching the drunkards, the gamblers and the harlots. But they never realize the need of the Grace of God for themselves." This suggests one cause for the failure of the Divine Potter. It is in ourselves. We recognize the power of God to lift the drunkard out of the gutter, clean him up and make a new man of him. But we are inclined to justify our own sins as weaknesses. We are slow to recognize our own need and his power to make us better Christians. The three thousands converts at Pentecost were not heathen. They were religious people who responded to the voice of God.

JANUARY 24—"Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world." I John 2:15.

Christians are placed in a peculiar position. We live our life in a world of things. In order to live we must constantly deal with things. Yet those things must not gain control of our affections. If our heart is set on them rather than on God we become less than Christian. Again, the body demands relaxation and recreation. If it becomes the thing for which we live or if it is un-Christian, we again fall below the standard of Christ. One of the most difficult tasks of the Divine Potter is to remove these foreign objects from the clay so the vessel will not be marred in His hands.

JANUARY 25—"Ye would not." Matt. 23:37.

Another reason for the failure of the Divine Potter to realize. His purpose in us is our own self-will. We will not respond. We have our plans which we have made according to our own desires instead of the Divine purpose. Our plans may be good and yet fall short of aspiring to the best. We become satisfied with the second-best and are no longer pliable in the Potter's hand. It is well to remember that the potter could not place such vessels on the market. They were discarded and thrown into the potters field. Neglecting to respond to Him results in this.

JANUARY 26—"Teach me thy way, O Lord, and lead me in a plain path." Ps. 27:11.

One element which makes for the realization of the Divine purpose is the discovery of that purpose. This is the first duty of man. Without its discovery he can never attain it. But God does not always reveal His will clearly, and He never reveals the entire way. How then can one find it? One essential step is to desire earnestly to find it. Another is to search diligently the Scriptures for the principles of life by which one should live. Another is the condition of the heart which will enable the Holy Spirit to reveal new truth. In contrast to the clay the individual determines his response.

JANUARY 27—"If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine." John 7:17.

At a recent ministers' conference Dr. Kirby Page said, "I am appalled at the ease with which people turn away from the revealed will of God for their lives." Obedience to His will is the vital step. "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice and to hearken than the fat of rams." The way may not be clearly revealed, but he who is obedient to the light he has today will receive the necessary light for his path tomorrow. In ways such as these the Divine Potter endeavors to reveal His plan for the life and to realize His purpose.

Moundridge Rally, Day of Rich Inspiration

By Marjorie Linscheid

The Mennonite Youth Rally held at Moundridge, Kansas, December 31, proved to be a day of rich inspiration as each speaker presented thought-provoking and soul-searching messages. It was also a special joy to experience the unity of Christian fellowship which prevailed during the meetings.

Music was presented by young people of the churches for whom the rally was planned; namely, West Zion, Eden, First Church of Christian, Hopefield, and Garden Township.

Rev. Henry Fransen emphasized in an interesting manner the three main decisions of life. 1. Choosing a vocation 2. Choosing a life mate 3. Choosing Christ as Master. The choice for Christ is by far the most supreme and essential.

A greater knowledge of the Christian life was revealed in the three individual discussion groups which met under the leadership of Rev. Ronald von Riesen, B. Bagen, Rev. Roland Goering, Dr. Krahn, Miss Ewy, and Mr. Ted Schmidt.

The first group on "Christian Recreation" concluded that any pastime which develops Christian personality is legitimate. Dr. Krahn's discussion topic on "Our Mennonite Heritage" deepened one's faith and appreciation of our forefathers and at the same time brought on the realization that first we should let people know we are Christians and then that we are Mennonites. Miss Ewy's and Mr. Schmidt's discussion on "Choosing a Vocation" emphasized the fact that whatever occupation we engage in, Christ must have preminence.

At 6 o'clock a dinner was enjoyed in the basement of the West Zion Church. Rev. Edwin Stucky spoke on the "Shadow of the Undone." The group then gathered and filled to capacity the Eden Church to hear the challenging messages of La Verne Rutchman and Dr. Little. Mr. Rutchman suggested that for a New Year's resolution we "Practice the Presence of God" and notice the change in our lives and personalities. Dr. Little made clear that in order to "Ring in the new" a rebirth and cleansing of heart is necessary. His sincere message was a fitting close to this day of abundant blessings.

Hold Successful Youth Rally at Beatrice, Nebraska

A youth rally banquet, sponsored by the Beatrice Young People's Fellowship was given, December 28, 6:30 p. m.

A three course dinner was served by candle light to about one hundred young people in the basement of the First Mennonite Church.

The purpose of the banquet, besides that of providing a wholesome fellowship, was to create interest in the various projects of the W. D. C. E. Convention.

Miss Anna Wiebe led an inspiring "Singspiration" between courses. Carl Claassen acted as toastmaster. He gave the welcome and reviewed the history of "The Fellowship." Miss Ruth Ewert, Western District representative on the General Conference Young Peoples' Union, explained briefly the purpose of the C. E. Projects. "God is Love" and "Only Jesus" were two selections sung by the Fellowship Quartet, composed by Edgar Wiebe, Edward Claassen, Theodore Jantzen, and Walter Schmidt, accompanied by Helen Ruth Jantzen.

The Misses Edna Penner, Anna Margaret Reimer, and Elsie Jantzen were in charge of the banquet. About forty other young people were enlisted to carry out details of the arrangements. The M. B. A. students served.

Following the banquet, those present were ushered into the main auditorium of the church to take part in a general service. William Andres, chairman of the Fellowship, presided. Miss Anna Wiebe, again led in the singing of several hymns. Rev. Elbert Koontz, Pastor of the Second Mennonite Church, read the scripture lesson and led in prayer. Rev. Walter Gering, Pastor of the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, was guest speaker. He gave an illustrated talk on "Glimpses of Puerto Rico." The offering taken at the meeting was devoted to the support of these projects. This offering, in addition to the proceeds of the banquet, amounted to nearly $100. "The Light of the Cross" was sung by the Fellowship Quartet. "Let There Be Light" was the theme of Rev. Walter Gering's inspirational message. He presented a challenge in the words of the Apostle Paul as spoken to Timothy, "Be not thou ashamed of the testimony of our Lord."

Our young people will long remember this profitable occasion.—Corr.

R. C. Kauffman Writes From Calcutta, India

Yesterday Isaac and Baer took us out to our rice-distributing relief station in Sonarpur, a village about ten miles south of Calcutta. This is where we will do some of our work, and we were immediately introduced to it. Natives who cannot afford to buy rice at full price come there to purchase it from us for half-price. They line up in a row, one by one, each with a ticket and a little money to get their portions. My job yesterday was to take in the money and make the change, which gave me an excellent opportunity to become acquainted with the prevailing money system. Indians do not have the decimal system we do at home, and it is something of a trick to get on to. Their money is in rupees, annas and pice. A rupee is about 32 cents in our money, an anna is $1/16$ of a rupee, and a pice is $1/2$ an anna. Then they have a still smaller denomination, not much in circulation, called a pie. This is $1/2$ of an anna. To make change with this sort of a system demands a little concentration at first. Toward the latter part of the afternoon I had the thing pretty well under control. We also made a beginning on learning the language—that is, we acquired a few words, such as those for the numbers from one to ten, for hello and goodbye, yes and no, etc. I think we will get at least an elementary usage of the language before too long. It is so different from our own, however, that it is rather difficult. One thing that helps is that a lot of Indians, especially those in business and those in our employ, speak considerable English and so are in a position to help us get the Bengali equivalents. There is also much Industani spoken here, which means that there are really two languages one should learn.

In Sonarpur the M. C. C. has been conducting a little hospital and relief station for homeless and destitute in addition to the rice-feeding program. This will now be taken over by the government and we will have to add to other projects. The rice-feeding may go on for some time. The famine is over, but there are still many who would have to go hungry if they were not offered help. Some destitution and starvation is normal in India. Children still have the distended stomachs and thin legs characteristic of famine victims. There is right now also another malaria epidemic in this general region. Mosquitoes have by no means given up for the winter, and the first thing we bought was a mosquito net under which we sleep every night. They advise us here not to take atrabrine or quinine as a regular thing, but only when exposed or feeling malaria coming on. Taking it regularly, we are told, accommodates the body to it so that it is less effective when really needed.

Going out to Sonarpur yesterday was an interesting experience. We had our first Indian train ride. The train cars are chubby, high wheeled affairs, with solid wooden benches. The people hang out on all sides like turnips, and the top speed is perhaps thirty miles an hour. The engine has a thin little whistle that sounds like a pop-corn whistle. Our trip out there was interesting also in that we saw our first Indian village which, as they say, is the "real India." Most tourists who visit simply Calcutta, Bombay or Delhi never get to see the conditions under which most of India's 400,000,000 people live. The homes of the villagers are crude huts built of bamboo and thatched roofs. The floors and sometimes the walls are smoothed over with cow dung. I was in a couple of shacks yesterday that had these cow-goleum floors and they are really quite the thing—hard, smooth and easily swept. In spite of these rather primitive living conditions in the villages, there is a certain beauty about them. They are located amidst a wealth of natural tropical growth—palm, mango, and banana trees—and are kept quite clean. Small rice fields, many smaller than our garden at home, surround them and groups of people work in them picking the rice by hand. This is the harvest season. Children run around naked absorbing the warm sun. Life goes on leisurely.

While most of our work will be in Sonarpur and other villages like it we have our "home" in Calcutta. We eat our breakfast and supper at the Lee Memorial Mission and have our rooms in an immense school building near by. It isn't very home-like, but crowded as Calcutta is now, we are fortunate in obtaining these quarters. The food at the Mission is English-American and good; the noon meal at the village is more of the native type, but still enjoyable. We commute by train between villages and Calcutta, although we have a right-hand drive 1938 Plymouth here which we will no doubt use sometimes. I am not particularly anxious to use it until I get used to the traffic conditions here. This Lee Memorial Mission is an interesting place. It was founded in the late 1800's by the Methodists and has served as sort of a home for missionaries in transit ever since I guess. Right now there is a group of some thirty or forty people there consisting mainly of missionaries who have just come from China, where they've been asked to evacuate. It gives one an opportunity to meet many interesting people and gain much valuable information, though to eat every day at a table of some thirty or forty is not very home-like. There are four meals a day here. Teach, which is a very light breakfast served at 7:00 A. M., then breakfast proper at 9:30, luncheon at 2:00 and supper at 7:30, with sometimes another tea between luncheon and supper. We get plenty of fruit, mostly oranges, and the best fish I've ever tasted."

A Challenge Tested and Tried

By Darlyne Jane Schrag

The very universe seemed to have reeled in protest as the creator of it hung on the cross. The earth quaked, the cliffs and rocks rent, and darkness covered the earth while the love of God faced the greatest, brutal enemy this world has ever known; faced him in human flesh and human weakness.

This challenge of love had already gone out to man in the ministry of Jesus with whomever he came in contact. Now as he hangs on the cross it goes out to all the world with emanating principles, with life-ebbing, life-flowing love. And so the penitent thief crucified with him grasps this love and goes out into eternity with paradise in his soul. Jesus rises from the grave and having commissioned his disciples to carry this love forward, ascends into heaven.

Loyally these disciples carried this challenge forward penetrating brutal opposition, leaving a trail of martyrs' blood, yet carrying its banners high under the fiercest of persecution, only losing its power when men compromised it with brutal force. And so the darkness of the Middle Ages takes hold, and after centuries of this spiritual darkness this challenge of love is seen again and looms up as a great morning star; again in love penetrating brutal force and again leaving a trail of martyrs' blood upon the sands of time, again carrying its banners high under fierce persecution but ever going onward and onward. Our forefathers have lived for it, have died for it, and while living towered it o'er the trail and sacrifice and so have handed it down to us to take up and carry on. And now, so commissioned with a challenge of undying eternal love, are we in this generation willing at all times under all circumstances to be good dependable soldiers of our crucified Lord, willing to stay in his workshop of tender loving kindness, of infinite love, of marvelous grace, or are we also going to lose, to compromise? Is not a trail of martyrs' blood prompted by the love of Christ stronger than brutal force?

TEST QUESTIONS ON EVIDENCES OF THE NEW BIRTH OF A PERSON

1. Has his sin and guilt been dealt with?
2. Does he hold himself to the promises of God?
3. Has he made a promise of surrender to the Lord?
4. Can he honestly say that he loves the Lord Jesus Christ more than any one else, and that he trusts Him as Savior?
5. Is he in his own way serving the Lord by doing His will?
6. What evidence of a changed life can he point out?
7. Does he "love the brethren," that is, does he love the fellowship of God's children?
8. Does he have that quiet, peaceful, inward assurance that he is saved, that is, does the Spirit bear witness with our spirit that we are children of God? —Bulletin, West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas

C. P. S.

Director Appointed for Mississippi Unit

Harold S. Martin, director of the C.P.S. camp at Mulberry, Florida, has been appointed to take charge of the unit opening near Gulfport, Mississippi. This new unit is a public health project and will be developed along lines similar to the La Plata unit in Puerto Rico.

Attitudes of M.C.C.-C.P.S. Men toward Camp

Albert Gaeddert, director of Mennonite camps and units, pointed out in his annual report, given at the M.C.C. Annual Meeting, that the men in the camps may be divided into four groups according to their attitude toward the camp experience:

"This experience of nearly four years now has had various effects upon different individuals. A small percentage of our men have grown somewhat resentful and bitter, having found nothing but weariness and gloom in their experience. They are dissatisfied, they 'gripe' and too often they seek avenues of escape rather than face the problem squarely.

"Another group of men are resigned to the situation; they have adopted the attitude of 'sitting out the war.' This group, though not large, likewise presents a concern to us. It is almost impossible to challenge them to a new level where they think in terms of the contribution they can make.

"Again, there are those who seriously question the wisdom of the church administering a conscription program. They say that the Church is compromising, its position and is no longer clear on its lines of separation between Church and State. By and large, this is true of political objectors. This group is not large on our camps and units.

"Then there is the group that finds in this program a very distinct challenge. There is little question but that this group is in the majority. This is the group that takes the situation, although often adverse, and turns it into a distinct opportunity. This is the group that triumphs, and, no doubt, it is this group toward which the churches will look for future leadership."

Peace Section Notes

Appointment to Peace Section

Donovan Smucker, Wadsworth, Ohio, was appointed as the sixth member of the Peace Section. Other members of this Section are H. S. Bender, Chairman; J. W. Hoover, Secretary; P. C. Hiebert, O. O. Miller, J. N. Smucker.

Booklet on Conscription to Be Prepared

Because nonresistant Christians are facing the possibility of permanent military conscription, and the issue is discussed widely in the camps and churches, the Peace Section is planning a booklet on this subject. The booklet is to appear in the late spring of this year.

RELIEF

J. N. Byler Visits Relief Work in England

Returning from the Middle East, Brother Byler has stopped of in England to get a perspective of the England-Europe relief work before returning to Akron Headquarters.

S. Floyd Pannabecker and P. P. Baltzer have received India residence permits, but have been advised by the Akron office to remain in the Middle East until the four women relief workers have arrived from Lisbon and are located in their assigned work.

Yearly M.C.C. Meeting Held

The 1944 Annual Meeting of the Mennonite Central Committee was held December 28 and 29. Members of the Executive Committee were re-elected with the exception of Allen Yoder who asked to be relieved of his work. C. F. Klassen, Winnipeg, Manitoba, Chairman of the Mennonite Central Relief Committee of Canada, was elected to succeed Brother Yoder as fifth member of the Executive Committee. Raymond F. Hartzler was appointed to succeed Brother Yoder as representative of the Central Conference of Mennonite on the Mennonite Central Committee.

"Relief for War Sufferers" Folder Ready

The annual relief folder has recently come off the press and is being sent to all the churches in sufficient quantity to be distributed on the basis of one per family. Should you fail to receive one or desire additional copies they may be secured free of charge upon request at the Mennonite Central Committee Headquarters, Akron, Pennsylvania. The folder briefly presents the need for relief and outlines the work being done.

WHY HUSBAND AND WIFE SHOULD BELONG TO THE SAME CHURCH

(1) Because they are married and thus have agreed to share in all other things, why not the church? (2) Division herein betrays lack of harmonious cooperation. (3) Whole-hearted service in the church is difficult when the home is divided. (4) Attendance in either church, or both churches, may be irregular. (5) The couple owes financial support to both churches. Can they do it? May unequal support cause ill feelings in the home? (6) Which will become the church home for the children? Or will they become indifferent and drift? (7) Which church shall it be? The couple must decide, and decide soon! —Church Bulletin, First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska.

CORRESPONDENCE

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Pretty Prairie, Kansas

As we again enter a new year we stop and review once more the blessings received and meditate on God's tender care.

Our gracious heavenly Father, we are indeed not worthy of this loving kindness and merciful guidance which Thou hast given us. Guide Thou our affairs of life that this may be a place where Thy glory dwells and Thy will shall be done.

On December 3 we had the privilege to have with us Rev. L. W. Jantzen of the O. B. A., Meno, Oklahoma. He spoke on the second coming of Christ and the signs of our time pointing to the imminency of His return. In the evening Rev. and Mrs. Jantzen and a girls' trio gave an interesting program. Sunday December 10 we again had Holy Communion service and December 24 child consecration services. "Unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given." And He shall be the Saviour of the world. As this thought was emphasized in our Christmas program given by the children, a special offering was taken for those that are not as fortunate as we and are in need physically and spiritually. Rev. Victor Graber was ordained as elder on December 31. He has been called to that office by a church at Mountain Lake, Minnesota. January 7, Miss Lillian Schrag, our returned missionary from Nigeria, gave a very interesting account of the Lord's work there. She emphasized the differences existing there but also the glorious fact that God can and does save to the uttermost. —Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Bluffton, Ohio

On December 11 the Missionary Society of the First Mennonite Church of Bluffton entertained all the women of the church at a Christmas party. A dinner was served by the society, after which Mrs. Henry Buller talked on the Relief work of the M.C.C. It was the evening of our snow storm but many ladies enjoyed this evening of fellowship.

The White Gift Christmas has been observed in our church for about fifteen years. The church was beautifully decorated and the children of the Sunday School gave the program. Classes are privileged to choose the recipient for their White Gifts. Many worthy causes of the church and community were benefited. The total gifts amounted to $507.08.

The annual business meeting of the church was held Friday evening, January 5. The officers were elected for 1945 and reports for 1944 were given. Among many important recommendations adopted, was a proposed church building improvement plan, greater support to the Relief work, and 100 per cent membership subscription list to The Mennonite.

PINE GROVE MENNONITE CHURCH Bowmansville, Pa.

The Sunday School did not give any gift to the scholars this Christmas, instead of this (an old custom) it was decided to double the amount paid for these gifts and give it to the M.C.C. for War Relief; the amount sent was $25.00.

This decision was made for two reasons, first to teach the children that we can do without these things, especially, in these times when so many are without the essential things; second, it is more blessed to give than to receive.

A Christmas service was rendered by the Sunday School on Christmas Eve, the senior class presented a play, "The Christmas Truant." The service was well attended and enjoyed.

The annual business meeting and election of officers was held on December 31. The election both in Sunday School and in Church have brought no changes in officers or trustees. The Pastor, R. V. Stubbs, has faithfully served the congregation for sixteen years, and again as in previous years has given the members a motto for the year, "God is able." Eph. 3:20.

There are three members serving in C.P.S. and six members are in the nation's armed forces. The prayers of our small congregation are that the end of this terrible war be near and that a just peace will be enjoyed by all men in all nations. Respectfully submitted, —A. J. Groff, Deacon.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Burns, Kansas

We were privileged to use our new Mennonite Hymnaries for the first time on December 24. The books had been ordered for some time but were not available sooner. We were happy to have them for the Christmas holidays.

Our Christmas Eve program this year, as formerly, consisted of numbers rendered by family groups or individuals. Each family was requested to render one or more numbers. For the most part it was the children that participated. The program was varied and indeed interesting and inspirational. With eighty-one people present, the largest attendance at any one service thus far, our building was filled to capacity.

At our annual church meeting last week the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan was adopted, and several families will now receive not only one but both of our church papers.

Our Women's Mission Society, which organized recently, undertook for the first project the packing and distributing of Christmas baskets for the needy. The eight baskets that were given out were very graciously received.

Four of our young people were privileged to attend the youth conference at the Tabor Church on December 29.—Henry Goossen, Corr.

FIRST SWAMP MENNONITE CHURCH

Quakertown, Pa.

The East Swamp Mennonite congregation was deeply moved Sunday morning, December 10, 1944, when the Secretary of the Church read the resignation of our pastor, Rev. Harold D. Burkholder. This will take effect in May.

We as a church and all organizations of the church and community will miss the Burkholder family and the services rendered by them more than can ever be told. The Lord surely has done great things for the congregation through their faithful ministry in the church as well as through the radio broadcast over the WSAN Broadcasting Station, Allentown, Pa. The East Swamp Gospel Messenger Program, in charge of Rev. Burkholder, celebrated their second anniversary of one-half hour weekly broadcast December 2, 1944.

We may not understand at this time why the Lord has called them to Los Angeles, California, to serve as pastor of the Emmanuel Church, but we trust that He will someday reveal it unto us.

Praying and trusting the Lord for another faithful servant to carry on the work here at East Swamp Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa., and also praying God's blessing on Rev. and Mrs. Burkholder and family in their new field of service.—Mrs. Marie Landis, Corr.

BETHEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Perkasie, Pa.

A tidy sum of money was given the pastor, Rev. Ward W. Shelly, and his wife on December 31 in token of appreciation for their services. The Bluffton College Gospel Team gave a very fine service on December 30. The quartet, which was composed of Clara Anna Bauman, Arlene Hartzler, Vera Soldner, and Elizabeth Waterstraw, sang a number of selections, and Clymenia Hammon gave a talk. Other speakers accompanying the quartet were Griselda Gehman, Maynard Shelly, and Arthur Keiser. Marked ability and efficient training was shown in the program. Rev. Paul R. Shelly of the Bluffton faculty accompanied the group. The attendance, however, was not large due to icy roads and snow. Their itinerary included the following churches: East Swamp, West Swamp, Perkasie, Deep Run, Lansdale, and Zionsville, —Fannie Landis, Corr.

Mountain Lake, Minnesota

The first sermon of the New Year in Bethel Church was preached by Jake T. Friesen, student home for Christmas vacation from Biblical Seminary, New York, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Jake L. Friesen.

In true Biblical Seminary method, young Mr. Friesen stayed with Scripture and gave an exposition of the fourteenth chapter of Exodus. Like the Israelites, we seem to have the Red Sea in front of us, and the Egyptians behind us, as we look into the troubled world of 1945; but "the Lord said unto Moses, "Wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward."

A square of candle flames reaching around the walls of the church, lit up the faces of over a year passed and the New Year came in. Each hundred young people found in prayer as the old worshiper held a candle, held a hand, and prayed a prayer for the one next to him.

Bethel Church's three regular choirs joined in one mass choir to sing the Hallelujah Chorus, and or to the Christmas music at four different programs this Christmas season under the directorship of Mountain Lake High School's versatile agricultural teacher, J. H. Tschetter. —Winifred Waltner, Corr.

JOTTINGS

— Rev. John Schrag served the New Hutterthal Church, Bridgewater, South Dakota, on January 7.

— Two more churches adopt 100 Per Cent Plan. The Salem-Zion Mennonite Church of Freeman South Dakota, decided at its annual business meeting to adopt the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan. Rev. J. J. Regier is the pastor of this church. As indicated in the correspondence column of this issue, the First Mennonite Church, Burns, Kansas, has also voted to adopt the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan. Rev. Henry W. Goossen is pastor of the Burns Church.

— The First Mennonite Church of Berne, Indiana, is to have an assistant pastor. So states the Berne Witness in a report of the annual business meeting. The motion authorizes the church board to hire an assistant pastor. The board has not announced as to who will serve in that capacity. "Rev. J. P. Suderman, who has been here the past year is still serving in the capacity as temporary or supply pastor." This church also said something about conscription at its annual meeting. The Witness reports, "A resolution was also adopted by the congregation setting forth the policy and attitude of the church regarding post war conscription. The congregation voted to oppose such conscription and ordered the church official board to notify representatives in Washington of the stand taken by the local church." "The congregation also voted to increase the rate of taxation during the present era when wages and incomes are high to set up a reserve to meet a number of expenditures that are imminent as soon as the assistant pastorage is established, and also when certain needed improvements and repairs can be made."

— The Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio, at its annual meeting considered the following items: the publication of a year book for 1945, the installation of a stoker, and the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan. This church is adding to its parsonage fund, which on December 17 amounted to $3,573.87. Rev. A. S. Rosenberger is the pastor of this church.

— The Hebron Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas, is another church which is taking offerings for the post-C.P.S. needs of its members in C. P. S. Twelve women from this church recently spent a day at the Clothing Depot in Newton mending clothes.

— Rev. Edmund Miller, Pastor of the Menno Mennonite Church, Lind., Washington, is preaching a series of sermons from Revelation. A recent sermon subject was "The Dead Church," based on the fifth letter to the early Christian churches, Rev. 3:1-6.

— The 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan has also been adopted by the Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas. The church voted for the plan at its annual meeting. Rev. P. P. Tschetter conducted special meetings during the first week in January. The Week of Prayer services were combined with these meetings which were held afternoon and evening. Rev. Henry Franzen is the pastor of the Buhler Church.

— According to present plans the General Conference is to convene from May 31 to June 5. So states Dr. C. E. Krehbiel, President of the General Conference.

— Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The following programs were given on the Week of Prayer evenings: Christian Endeavor Society Program, Bible Study on Prayer Principles, Ladie's Aid and Mission Society Program, Puerto Rico Pictures, Volunteer Program, Musical Program. The church hopes to have special meetings this spring. The library committee is adding children's books to the library, for these are in demand. Library books are exhibited in the rear of the auditorium at the Wednesday night service. Rev. Walter Gering recently spoke at a youth rally in Beatrice, Nebraska. He also showed slides of Puerto Rico. Communion was attended by 457 on January 1. The church must wait with securing a new pulpit Bible until after the duration. Average Sunday School attendance during the past year was 640. The Junior department had an attendance average of 73 per cent. The current issue of the church paper has a map showing where all the Sunday School classes are located and who is teacher. For several years a Junior church service has been conducted in the basement. The deacons have charge of this. The Junior service for December 31 included two musical numbers, two poems, a missionary letter, Bible questions, and a talk. The offering at the Christmas program this year amounted to $2,115.00. Rev. Walter Gering is pastor of the Eden Church.

— The Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, is another church which seeks to keep up its C.P.S. quota.

— The Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon, had special services from November 12 to 19, with Rev. Paul Roth from Canby, Oregon, as special speaker.

— First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio: Rev. Donovan Smucker reviewed Abundant Living by E. Stanley Jones at a recent meeting of the Missionary Society. The annual meeting on January 8 was postponed because of road conditions, which were the worst for many years. Main roads have snow banks from three to ten or more feet high.

— The Mennonite Deaconess Hospital at Beatrice, Nebraska, admitted over 1000 patients last year. This thirty-bed hospital had an average daily adult census of 29.75 patients or a bed occupancy of 98.64 per cent.

— The First Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio, is another church that adopted the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan at its annual meeting. Rev. J. N. Smucker is pastor of this church.

— "The Grace Mennonite Church (Pandora, Ohio) yesterday adopted the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan. Names and addresses will be sent to the Publication Office this week."—Mrs. S. W. Steiner, Corr.

—Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles: Rev. John M. Franz, Minister-at-large of the Pacific District, served us morning and evening on December 31 and also on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Miss Aganetha Fast, traveling matron of the C. P. S. camps, spoke to the Women's Missionary Society on January 4. The first quarterly communion service was held on the morning of January 7. At noon we enjoyed a meal of stew, baked apples, cookies, rolls, and coffee. In the afternoon we had our annual business meeting. Rev. Harold D. Burkholder, who has been pastor of the East Swamp Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa., since 1938, has accepted a call from our church to become its pastor.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio: "January 14th the pastor will preach on a topic of unusual interest and importance: Revivalism in America." It is a fascinating study based on William Warren Sweet's new book by the same name. It will help point the way to a revival in our own congregation.

—The Ph. D. thesis which Professor Paul Shelly has completed is entitled "Religious Education and Mennonite Piety Among the Mennonites of Southeastern Pennsylvania: 1870-1943. It "is a comparative study of the methods used by the Old Order Amish Mennonites, the Old Mennonites and the Eastern District Conference Mennonites to maintain their way of life." Brother Shelly states, "All of these groups with most of Protestantism, have felt that they have failed to maintain their way of life in the midst of a secular culture. This is true of all of the Mennonite groups, particularly in the midst of the present crisis. I felt that it would be well to make this comparative study at this time in order to find some helpful suggestion whereby each of these groups could more effectively maintain its way of life in the future." The thesis will evidently be published, for Brother Shelly continues, "I am at present going over the corrections which were made by my major professor. In order to get the degree I will have to publish the thesis. I hope to have it ready for publication by late spring, but this is not certain as yet. At present I am looking for a reliable publisher and also for some group to finance the printing. The manuscript is 388 pages double-spaced."

—A farewell for Dr. A. M. Lohrentz was held at the Hebron Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas, on January 14. Dr. H. A. Fast, who is Vice-President of the Mennonite Central Committee, was the guest speaker. Dr. Lohrentz is leaving presently for Paraguay where he plans to give a year of service for the M.C.C. as ear, eye, nose, and throat specialist. Mrs. Lohrentz and Harold will remain in McPherson, where Mrs. Lohrentz teaches religious education in the grade schools. The Hebron Church has joined the ranks of those who are putting out a church bulletin.

—Dr. C. Henry Smith is sitting in as "observer" at the second peace conference that is being held at Cleveland, Ohio, January 16-19. Brother Smith was appointed by Dr. C. E. Krehbiel, President of the Conference, to visit this conference as "observer." No official connection whatsoever is implied. Over four hundred representatives of Protestant leadership are participating in this conference. They are "to decide upon the course of action they will recommend to Christian citizens in achieving The first peace conference was held at Delaware, the goal of a peace based on spiritual principles." Ohio, three years ago. Both conferences were called by the Commission on a Just and Durable Peace. According to a previous report in these columns the M.C.C. has appointed Donovan Smucker, Jesse Hoover, and Harold Bender to visit this conference as observers.

—Pastoral Work and Personal Counseling by Dr. R. L. Dicks is a new book that is recommended as "very good" by Brother Orlando Wiebe, who took a course in pastoral counseling under Dr. Dicks at Wesley Memorial Hospital, Chicago. He says that the book covers the lecture notes of the course.

— First Mennonite Church, Newton: The "Foreign Relief Committee" recently purchased three dozen out-of-style overcoats for two dollars each. These will go for M.C.C. relief. During the last fiscal year the church nearly reached its quota of $6.00 a member for C.P.S.

— First Church, Geary, Oklahoma: "The records of the treasurer show that more individuals have made contributions this year than in the previous year. The individual gifts were larger too."

— $310.50 was the amount of the offering taken on November 26 by the First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, for the personal needs of its members in C.P.S.

Saravati and Her Friends

Mrs. S. T. Moyer

It was four P. M. The regular studies of the day were over. As we were waiting for all the women students to gather for the Gospel song practise, Saravatti shared some of her vacation experiences. With her husband and children they had served the Manakoni circuit.

"I had taken a lot of itch salve along. One day I looked for it and it was all gone. Also some small change that I had with it in that trunk was gone. I inquired about. My little son Nelson had given it to the village children. When I took him to task, he said, "But Mother! Can't I help those children? They are filled with itch, and they are so poor! Didn't the Memsahib help me with wheat when I was so sick a long time when we couldn't get any and she brought me of her eggs and milk? "Then what could I say?" she added with a merry twinkle.

Saravatti Bai is a bundle of dedicated energy and good-will always living the Gospel in some telling way.

On evangelistic tours the family is up in time. The children are clean and neat and fed, and she is ready for the morning, afternoon, or evening teaching-preaching programs. The children play cheerfully about the tent door and sing. She is always adept in finding some means to help needy cases.

Called to a pleurisy stricken sister, she went regularly to massage, and lay on hot compress. Prayer, comfort and service healed. A very sick woman called needing enema service. Saravatti devised an apparatus with a hollow papaya leaf stem, bought half a cents worth of soap from a village shop, and the doctoring was successful. In one village a baby had thrush very bad. The mother was too frightened to do anything. Daily Saravatti washed out its mouth with mild boric solution, and before we left it was well again. It seems that mothers do not bathe the babies. Some dirty mid-wife comes occasionally, takes a small fee, and does this delicate performance!

According to tradition Menno Simons preached to his first followers in this building which was located in the outskirts of Witmarsum, Friesland (The Netherlands). Some decades ago it was torn down and replaced by a monument. When our Mennonite pioneers in America heard of this, most of them disapproved of setting a "monument of stone" to someone's memory. But the European brethren said, "Do not you American Mennonites put tombstones on graves?" and went right on. In 1936 Mennonites from all over the world met here as a "living monument" and testimony. One of the American representatives picked a head of wheat from the field and said, "Like kernels of wheat spread and multiply so has the seed sown by Menno Simons spread and multiplied."

spread and multiply so has the seed sown by Menno Simons spread and multiplied." —Cornelius Krahn

Hence the babies are fretful and sometimes actually unwell because they don't get bathed. Saravatti obliges on a wide scale, and teaches mothers how to bathe. She sews bits of cloth into tiny dresses or shirt-lets. She is the obliging kind.

Saravatti is one of the daughters of the former Basna evangelist, Thirtonand. Her husband is Paul John, son of Johannes Baboo of Mauhadi, now in Jagdeeshpur as a book seller. She and her husband are taking their third year work in the Bible Training School at Janjgir. Together with eight others in senior class, they are so thankful for this opportunity. Paul takes charge of the Sunday worship each Sunday in the villages of Udeband and Kanai, five miles from Janjgir. In addition he is a leader in one of the three evangelistic bands of young men which go out every Friday afternoon evangelizing. This year all the students have enjoyed very good health so far. A total of twenty-six are enrolled. The students work very hard. Will you pray for a special unction of the Holy Spirit upon each one as they prepare to be soul winners and church-builders?

WHAT CAN WE LEARN FROM "KUNG HOU"?

J. H. Langenwalter

A few evenings ago we were trying to find something of interest and of value on the radio. While we were seeking we heard a new voice which uttered a new phrase. The voice was that of Col. Evan Carlson. He was speaking about his famous Raiders. The phrase which he emphasized and used again and again was "Kung Hou." He told the story of how that phrase had worked wonders among his men. He spoke of it as meaning cooperation and loyalty. He described how gradually his men had caught the spirit of this phrase, even though a few needed some personal help. The Colonel showed a fine insight into human nature by the way in which he convinced men rather than coerced them to see the values of this Chinese phrase of "Kung Hou". The part of the program which we had heard was closed with a song with "Kung Hou" as its theme. That was the only convincing singing which we had heard from the lips of soldiers during this war.

The whole experience made one feel that we had thus far apprehended only a part of the possibilities which we felt must lie back of the phrase which was so new to us, and yet so fascinating in what we had caught of its meaning. We called two friends who had spent a number of years in China for further information. We found that "Kung Hou" is a Chinese phrase with varied and rich meanings. Together, cooperation, loyalty, work, good, excellent, official rank, quality of character, and morale—these were some of the suggestions which came to light.

Then came some questions. If this phrase could be used to such advantage in an undertaking of destruction, what might not its possibilities be if it were used to the full in a pursuit of constructive activities and relationships? We were told that that was the original intention of the phrase. That affords yet greater reason why it might and should be used for the achievement of great and helpful ends for all who may be or may become our neighbors in the best sense of that word. Perhaps the Chinese have a contribution to make to us whose value we might have learned long ago, and under more favorable circumstances than now.

Another question confronted us. If the Chinese have made so valuable a contribution to the thinking of the world through "Kung Hou," may they not have other contributions to make? That brings one face to face with the value of learning to know others, their ways of thinking, and why they think and act as they do. Such interest usually leads to the kind of understanding which brings out the rich meanings of culture and views of life to be found among those of the human race whom we have learned to know and appreciate too little.

Still another question presented itself. Have we nothing to equal or exceed "Kung Hou"? One successful way of learning to understand and appreciate the values which we have inherited is to understand and appreciate the values which we find in the possession of others, whoever they may be.

For nearly two thousand years men have learned about and professed to believe in Him who taught and lived that the spirit of unity is of primary importance for the good of mankind. When people have accepted that principle seriously they have called Him, who personified it, The Way! Whenever and wherever people have consistently followed that "Way" their lives have brought forth fruits of great richness and value. On the other hand, whenever and wherever the Teacher's words have been encased in phrases and pretentious rites, the resulting lives have displayed great barrenness of character as well as of deeds for the good of all mankind.

THE GOOD LEADER

The good leader is objective, that is, self-forgetful and out-going, and he has a capacity for genuine fellowship. That these qualities make a good leader is especially evident in times of danger and also in the long run of time. Such a person is by no means always the most influential at first. He may remain in the background for a long time, for he does not feel impelled to push himself forward.

Sometimes it is very evident as to whether an individual has assumed leadership for selfish or unselfish reasons. Suppose a group of twenty people get lost in a large forest. The greater the danger, the more readily will the leadership in that group be given to the person who has the greatest courage or presence of mind to meet the emergency. The more objectivity this leader possesses, the more ready he will be to surrender his leadership when the interests of the group no longer require it. With no lust for power he seeks to make himself superfluous. The more objective he is, the more he seeks to serve his cause. The good leader fears no competitor, for he welcomes him who would serve the cause better. The good leader has no desire to be a dictator. He would be the servant of all. —The foregoing thoughts are taken from the book What It Means To Grow Up by Fritz Künkel.

ENABLING THE MINISTER

A legislature may pass an ever so magnificent piece of legislation, but before it can be put into effect there must be an enabling act which provides the necessary funds. A church calls a minister to a tremendously significant task. Before that task can be accomplished there must be an enabling act. Ministers can't do their best work if handicapped by a lack of funds. No matter how consecrated a minister is, he cannot make his fullest contribution if he has to devote a lot of attention to that which more adequate funds could take care of. Two men equally consecrated will not render the same service if one of them has to work at some trade to make his living. Just as a farmer needs his tractor and other equipment, a doctor his tools, operating table, and good car, a groceryman his store and fixtures, so the minister needs certain material means to do his work effectively.

Churches are seeing this and doing something about it. From South Dakota comes the report of a church that has called its minister for another three years with a raise in salary. From Washington comes another report of a raise in salary. Two such reports come from Kansas. A church in Oklahoma has installed a hot water heater in the parsonage. The pastor's description of this easily suggests that he was encouraged by this gesture. Another Oklahoma pastor recently told us about his study in the new parsonage which was purchased by the congregation. He has been strengthened in his task. These churches are enabling their ministers to do what they feel called to do.

Today a pastor suggested to us that congregations with good spiritual insight will deem the work of the church as important as that of the public high school and will pay their minister a salary equal to that of the high school teachers. It would seem that a pastor had needs equal to those of a public school teacher. "... go thou and preach the kingdom of God." That is no mean task, and it is worthy of no mean support.

AVAILABLE BOOKS

Books are available in various ways. The following are some of them: the Western District Loan Library, city libraries, Sunday School or church libraries, an exchange with friends.

In the last issue of this paper we printed a list of books added to the Western District Loan Library in 1943 and 1944. There are many others available besides these. A catalog of these may be secured by addressing the Loan Library at North Newton, Kansas. A pastor of a large Kansas church and the library committee of that church occasionally come to the library and pick out the books they want to use. A pastor from Oklahoma and one from Nebraska "stock up" on books before they return to their homes. CPS camps send in large orders. Churches and individuals send in their orders by mail. Some of the books are nearly always out in use. More books for children are now being added.

Libraries in cities and those in villages often have a variety of books and magazines, which are spiritually constructive. These libraries often contain a children's library or division.

Sometimes Sunday School libraries contain very good books. Some library committees make it their concern to watch for good books and to add them. Some have unique ways of advertising the books. One church in Minnesota has its library in the hall. Some put the covers of new books on the bulletin board. One church displays books at the midweek meeting, and another one in the hall on Sunday morning. The church bulletin is also used sometimes.

A very worthwhile exchange can often be made with friends. When a number of mutual friends pool their books for exchanging, there are often very choice selections. One can often come upon a good book by asking esteemed people about the books they are reading.

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

PLAIN PEOPLE

The purpose of this article is to remind ourselves that we are among those who are called by the world, "the plain people." It is not that we are so plain that we are easily distinguishable from the rest of society, but it is a vestige of the days when General Conference Mennonites along with other Mennonite branches were in reality plain. They were plain not only in dress, but plain in taste, speech, action, manner of worship, and, indeed in the whole manner of living. Their prayer was that of the Psalmist who beseeched God to "lead me in a plain path." (27:11).

Destruction of the Plain Way

Most of our parents are among those who still wore plain clothes or remember distinctly their parents wearing them. But plain clothes are only a symbol of something greater, of a principle that holds that God's will is plain, that truth is plain, that goodness and beauty are plain, that His way of salvation is plain, that the Christian way of life is plain. This belief and action in accordance with it is what gave those who believed it the name of "plain people." We say we believe it but we don't. We don't because we have become corrupted and secularized and sophisticated. We have become corrupted by a love of material things more than we love plain truths and simple values. We have become secularized because we have surrendered much which once was sacred for that which is profane. We have become sophisticated because we have tried to follow the world's way of living, and acting, and thinking. Sophisticated persons are basically dishonest because they try to be somebody they are not. With our many social contacts today we can often falsely impress people because the people we meet don't know us.

An Appeal to Preserve the Plain Way

It is not a disgrace to be numbered among the plain people. It is indeed a glory and we should be glad to say: "The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places; yea, I have a goodly heritage." High thoughts and plain living generally accompany one another, but high living and plain thoughts never do. My appeal to Mennonites is that we try to reclaim our heritage, not because it is Mennonite but because it is Christian. All great Christians are plain people because they are God-filled people. Jesus was so plain throughout his life on earth that we can't conceive of him as sophisticated or unnatural. On the boat he lay down and slept. By the seaside he sat down and taught. When he rebuked the accusers of the adulteress he knelt down and wrote in the sand with his fingers. The great truths in the Bible are all plain and simple. For example: I John 4:8, "God is love;" I Cor. 13:8, "Love never fails;" Matt. 5:48, "Be ye perfect." Here there is no philosophizing, no rationalizing, no speculation, just three great truths plainly stated. Let us who believe in God continue to be careful to maintain good works that these things may be good and profitable unto all men. (Titus 3:8)

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

REPORT BY J. R. DUERKSEN

October 10, 1944

It is time to send in my third quarterly report. Again we have numerous reasons to praise God. The Lord's work has gone on even though we ourselves have had only a small part in it. Being gone from the station from July 10th to September 23rd our margin for direct mission work was very small. It was not our choice to remain in the hills so long but due to my getting diphtheria we were in quarantine four weeks, and so instead of the regular six weeks we had a vacation of ten weeks.

The latter part of June and the beginning of July was the time for opening our primary schools in the villages. I was able to visit every one of the ten schools and in my opinion they had a fairly good beginning. Though the rains had begun I was fortunate in being able to make the trip by bicycle (130 miles round trip) without being caught by the rain while on the road. Only once did I need a man to carry my bicycle because of sticky clay. While on this same trip, the Lord's Supper was observed in fifteen different villages.

About this same time one of our churches, the Emmanuel Church, had decided to choose an Indian pastor who was to be fully ordained as elder. A committee was chosen to record all the votes. This committee consisted of Dr. Dester, Joseph Nag, and myself. In two busy days we were able to visit nearly all the members of that church and we recorded 247 votes. There were two candidates and they had nearly the same number of votes. The rule is that in order to be elected one candidate must have three-fourths of the total number of votes cast. According to that neither of the two is elected, and we will have to try again some time. It is encouraging that the Indian church wants Indian pastors and that they are willing to give their support.

Just before leaving for the hills we also had our semi-annual conference of the Phuljhar churches. As usually we did not only have our regular business sessions, but in connection with them we had devotional meetings, Bible readings, and sermons. Rev.

A. C. Brunk from Dhamtari gave us five excellent messages from the Word of God. The number of delegates was between sixty-five and seventy. The two evening meetings which we had were attended also by a large number from Jadeeshpur so that the church was nearly full.

Our Indian co-workers did not have a vacation while we were having one. They taught the Bible course in at least ten different villages. The same course had been studied by them here in Jagdeeshpur in May. Our Indian pastor, Rev. S. Philip, had given the Lord's Supper in fourteen different places. He also married two couples during this time. Our preachers helped 144 widows and other needy people by distributing nearly two hundred rupees. They have kept a record of this so that it can be checked in case there is any complaint.

We thank God for "grace given, that we should preach—the unsearchable riches of Christ."

A NEW BOOK ABOUT OUR MISSION IN CHINA

Recently Missionary H. J. Brown sent me a copy of his new book In Japanese Hands. It contains the history of an important part of our mission in China during war time. It shows how strenuous war experiences on the mission field are and how the Lord leads and protects. It can be ordered from the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas.

Trials of Faith

By H. P. Fast

"And the Lord said unto Satan, Behold, all that he hath is in thy power;—" Job 1:12

"And the Lord said unto Satan, Behold, he is in thine hand; but save his life." Job 2:6

Nothing in this world has been so sorely tried as the faith of the believer. A good portion of the Bible and church history deals with accounts of how believers were tried and came out of those trials with greater faith.

A believer, according to the New Testament, is one who, by the work of the holy Spirit, has been convicted of his sinfulness and then led to accept Jesus Christ as his personal Savior. He is one who accepts the whole Bible as the inspired Word of God.

The believer's faith must be tried. No faith, in the real sense of the word, is true faith which has not been tried. No one can truly believe who never was tempted to doubt. "Wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season, if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations (trials): That the trial of your faith, (That your faith may become true—German translation) being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ:" I Peter 1:6,7.

The faith of the believer is of such nature that God is not afraid to let it be tried. He knows whence it came. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God:" Eph. 2:8 "Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith;" Heb. 12:2.

Another reason why God is not afraid to challenge Satan is because he knows in whom the believer's faith is anchored. Paul said, when there was little hope for survival, "I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me." Acts 27:25 The believer's faith is anchored in God and his Word.

The trials of faith come in manifold ways. Sometimes God tries the faith of the believer as in the case of Abraham when he was commanded to offer Isaac. At other times the experiences of life plunge him into fiery trials. John sat behind prison bars and began to ask questions. Again trials may come through our fellow men. Paul writes, "Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil—" In the case of Job it was a personal attack by Satan.

The believer's faith stands the trials. In Job 1:21 we read, "In all this Job sinned not, nor charged God foolishly." And again in chapter 2, verse 10, "In all this did not Job sin with his lips." To Peter Christ said, "I have prayed for thee that thy faith fail not (cease not)." We do not believe in eternal security, but in the security of the believer. In John 17 Christ prays for all believers.

God honors the believer's faith which has stood the trials. After Abraham had stood the test God said to him, "Because thou hast done this thing, and hast not withheld thy son, thine only son; That in blessing I will bless thee, and in multiplying I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heaven, and as the sand which is upon the sea shore; and thy seed shall possess the gate of his enemies; and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice." After Joseph had proved his faith by going to prison and suffering rather than yielding to sin, Pharaoh said, "See, I have set thee over all the land of Egypt.—without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt." In Daniel 6:28 we read, "So this Daniel prospered—" That was after his experience in the den of lions. Job's story ends thus: "And the Lord turned the captivity of Job, when he prayed for his friends: also the Lord gave Job twice as much as he had before. —So the Lord blessed the latter end of Job more than his beginning: for he had fourteen thousand sheep, and six thousand camels, and a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she asses. He also had seven sons and three daughters.—And in all the land were no women found so fair as the daughters of Job:—After this lived Job an hundred and forty years, and saw his sons, and his son's sons, even four generations."

The Reader Says

Not So Non-resistant

Editor, The Mennonite:

Don Smucker's review of "War, Peace and Non-resistance," by Guy Hershberger, is a stimulating article, but also disappointing on one score. Both the book and Mr. Smucker's review seem to indicate that "Biblical Nonresistance," (as interpreted by Mennonites of 1944-45), is the only alternative to violence, modern pacifism, or Gandhi's Satyagraha. (Soul Force).

Few people will contend that modern social-political-religious Pacifism (or Gandhi's Satyagraha) has all the answers. But my heritage—born and reared in a Mennonite tradition, educated in a Mennonite college and seminary, a number of years in several active Mennonite pastorates, plus a three-year period with the Mennonite Peace Society—has thoroughly convinced me that "Biblical Nonresistance," as held and practiced by the majority of present Mennonites, falls just as far short, if not more so, than does either modern Pacifism or Gandhian Satyagraha.

Pacifism and Satyagraha too often deteriorate into a force which is destructive rather than redemptive—all the more diabolical because it professes to be "non-violent" and "spiritual." However, too often we praise loudly Mennonite "Biblical Nonresistance," while using plenty of subtle force to aid or "resist" certain movements—inside and outside the church.

Jesus was far more than a "Nonresister," and asks more of us. When Jesus "set his face steadfastly to go to Jerusalem, "He was getting ready to resist something. When Jesus decided to stay in Jerusalem, he was getting ready to resist something. When Jesus decided to face the mob and go to the Cross (over the protests of his disciples), Jesus was consecrating every ounce of blood and energy in his system to resist something.

No matter what interpretation or play upon words we make concerning Jesus' words and acts, Jesus resisted. We too often quote Jesus without trying to follow Him. "He that doeth the will of my Father, will know of the doctrine," whether it be "Non-Resistance," or far more than "Non-Resistance."

When Jesus stayed in Jerusalem, instead of fleeing to safety, he forced Pilate, the Scribes, and Pharisees, the people to make decisions for or against him. Jesus forced their hand as much (if not actually more so) than they forced His. Define what happened there, and what happened in the Early Church, and it goes far beyond the present-day Mennonite doctrine and of "Biblical Non-Resistance."

Mennonites have a great heritage, and a great contribution to make in the present world crisis. Too often I have fallen far short of my many opportunities in helping Mennonites come into the fullness of their message. For that I am genuinely sorry. I think

I should fail in one more instant if I passed by in silence, instead of saying as emphatically as I can: "Biblical Non-Resistance," as held and practiced by our Mennonite people today is not the role to which God calls Mennonitism in the present crisis.

I don't presume to know the role to which God does call Mennonitism, and, certainly, standing on the outside looking in, I would not be presumptuous enough to tell Mennonites with what role God challenges them. But of this I am certain—as certain as I am of anything—that present-day "Biblical Nonresistance" (as held and practiced by Mennonites) is a far cry from what Menno Simons lived. No matter what word play you frame upon Menno Simon's words and life, or his colleagues, men are not imprisoned, burned at the stake, executed, nailed to a cross, precisely because they do resist with something, in some way. Therefore, with all of its weakness, Modern (Gandhian) Pacifism has a real contribution to make to Mennonites, and Mennonites have a real contribution to make to it.

Mennonites make a serious mistake by "withdrawing" from the main stream of Pacifism. My plea is that Mennonites come into that stream, say through The Fellowship of Reconciliation, and leaven that stream, and be leavened by it, purifying it, and being purified. When we refuse to get into the main stream of God's movement, God sets us aside, and moves on. That happened to the Jews and Judaism; that happened to the Christian Church of Russia; it can happen to Mennonitism.

In closing, may I repeat, in choosing the Cross, Jesus used force, and Pilate, the Jews, the people were forced to choose, and do or not do certain things. No system or religious group has ever probed the depths of this most powerful force God has ever entrusted to Man. But God is going to reveal that force anew in the present crisis. Will Mennonites make their fullest, best contribution? May God grant so.

—Carol J. Landes, Merom, Indiana

(Editor's Note: Jesus viewing his life on earth did not say, "I have resisted the world." He said, "I have overcome the world." How did He overcome the world? With "good!" Doing good, however, is much different from resistance. Doing good is a force if force is defined as a "Power to persuade or convince." However, the exertion of this force is a matter of overcoming and not a matter of resisting, for resistance usually takes place on the same level as that which is resisted. The doing of good rises above the evil of the evil-doer and draws the latter's attention to that which is most appealing to all human beings in the long run. The doing of good is to the advantage of the evil-doer. It is a force that He seldom cares to oppose and therefore it wins him in

ZION MENNONITE CHURCH

Donnellson, Iowa

On the evening of December 17 the chorus of thirty-five voices sang the cantata, "Carols of Christmas" by Lorenz, and on Christmas Eve the Christmas program was given by the children and young people of the Sunday School.

The annual congregational meeting was held January 8, at which time the following officers were elected: Deacon — Ernest Krehbiel; Trustee — Samuel J. Krehbiel; Treasurer — Gordon Krehbiel; Organist — Miss Hilda Krehbiel; Correspondent for The Mennonite — Rev. H. E. Nunemaker; Correspondent for the Bundesbote — Miss Mary Krehbiel; Trustee of the Cemetery Association — O. C. Krebill; Rev. H. E. Nunemaker was re-elected as pastor for another year. Favorable financial reports were given by all organizations of the church.

The church is cooperating with the churches of the town in Week of Prayer services. The sermons are given by the local pastors.

A Leadership Training Class has been organized with plans for the first meeting on January 18. The book, "Beginnings of the Christian Church" by Schermerhorn will be studied.

Two of our aged members, John H. and Katie E. Krehbiel, who have lived together for sixty years, have found it necessary because of age and illness, to discontinue housekeeping and have sold their property and household goods. John is at present a patient in Graham Hospital, Keokuk, Iowa. Katie is making her home with their nephew, Elmer Handrich and family, near Fairview, Michigan.— Corr.

SECOND MENNONITE CHURCH

Beatrice, Nebraska

The Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, held its annual business meeting, reviewing its past and planning its future work. Rev. Elbert Koontz, our pastor, is a busy man, although he has an able assistant in his good wife. In addition to the regular church services, he is teaching a Sunday School class, conducting Bible study and prayer meetings, and taking a leading part in the local Fellowship group activities; he has conducted the High School Bible class during the first semester. Rev. Koontz is vice chairman of the Beatrice Ministerial Association. During the summer months he led the singing at the Sunday evening union services in our Chautauqua Park. At the present time he is also leading a weekly choir practice, as well as the singing in connection with the early Sunday morning services at the local Feeble Minded Institute. The Ministerial Association directed Rev. Koontz to promote the Messiah, Oratoria, which was rendered in one of our larger churches on December 10th; the tenor and bass solo parts were sung by two Mennonites, Robert Senner of Buhler, Kansas and Willard Waltner of Freeman, South Dakota. The singers in our community have been organized and are planning to present The Seven Last Words, by De Bois, during the Easter season. A committee has been appointed to investigate the possibilities of enlarging our church basement in order to provide more room for Sunday School classes and other church activities. On Christmas day the Sunday School presented a well rendered Christmas program, as arranged by Prof. W. H. Hohmann of Bethel College. The Universal Week of Prayer services, for this community, are being held in our church at the present time. — W. C. A. Corr.

MEADOW MENNONITE CHURCH

Colby, Kansas

Our church does not have a resident minister now. Students from Bethel College have served us with the Word of God from time to time. Brother Orlando Schmidt has come out a number of times. We had the blessing of having revival meetings conducted by Rev. H. J. Dyck of Elbing, Kansas. He came to us on November 19 for the morning service. The following week he conducted evening meetings. On the morning of Thanksgiving Day we observed Holy Communion. In the evening we were moved when Rev. Dyck asked for testimonies of thanksgiving. A goodly number of members and visitors testified of God's goodness by Bible verses and statements of personal experience. The text for one of his sermons was II Peter 3:11, "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness." The thought struck me if all who call themselves Christians in this whole world would live more according to this verse, then the world would take knowledge of them (all Christians) that they had been with Jesus, or as it might be said in other words "that Jesus Christ is in their hearts."

The sewing circle meets the first Wednesday of each month in the homes of the members. They have served for a mission station and for relief. Noodles were sent to a C.P.S. camp. Cookies were brought together and sent to the boys from our church who are in camp, so that they might have something different for Christmas. —Corr.

BETHANY MENNONITE CHURCH

Kingman, Kansas

Another year of goodness and mercy has closed, and we as a church are thankful that we haven't had to open our door once for death during the past year, but have had four marriages during the year.

In all we have five boys in C.P.S. and thirteen boys in military service. One has been announced as officially missing.

On the first Sunday of the year we had as a visiting pastor, Alvin Becker from the Northern Bible Society. His visit was much appreciated. On the same Sunday, Harvey Graber from the Arlington Church, joined our membership.

Rev. Neuenschwander has started a catechism class.

On the evening of January 7, Miss Helen Mae Voran was united in holy matrimony to Mr. Orville Voth from North Newton.

The Christian Workers' Program, which is given on the second Sunday of each month is well attended. —Joe P. Krehbiel, Corr.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By H. E. Nunemaker

JANUARY 28—Acts 2:41. "There were added to them about three thousand souls."

Marvelous things were transpiring. A small group of people without education, wealth, position, or prestige made their presence felt in the world of their time. They did things which "amazed" others. Their conduct revealed a new power in their lives. They spoke with authority and the result was conviction in the hearts of others. Three thousand were added to the church in one day. It was all so different than anything that had been associated with the church of their day. The church did the conventional thing—what everyone expected her to do—and no one gave it a second thought. She was respectable and powerless. Wherein lay the power of this new movement?

JANUARY 29—Acts 2:4. "They were all filled with the Holy Ghost."

Here was their motivating power, inspiration, and guide. The Holy Spirit had now become a reality and brought the believers in Christ completely under His control. This was the crucial experience in the believers which made them invincible. It is recorded that they were "all filled." There were no worldlings, none who were out of harmony, none creating dissension, for all were led by the Spirit. The result was power. Today when men are lamenting the powerlessness of the church, it is estimated that only about half of the professing Christians take their religion seriously. The fact is its own commentary.

JANUARY 30—Acts 2:42. "They continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine."

The believers "continued" in the apostles' teachings. They voluntarily sat at the feet of those who had known Christ best and from them learned the deep truths of Christ and the Kingdom. In present day language they were regular in attendance at Sunday School and church. Thus their spiritual life was nurtured and the great experience of Pentecost retained its vitality. Dr. Luccock says, "Regularity of attendance is never an anticlimax. The appalling anticlimax to this picture of a growing church is the importance of so many contemporary churches, with their flimsy undergirding of haphazard attendance, looseness of obligation, and specious disdain for 'regularity.'"

JANUARY 31—Acts 2:42 "They continued in . . . fellowship."

The value of Christian fellowship is often underestimated. A man who was negligent in church attendance was visited by his pastor. He was seated comfortably before the open fireplace. Without a word the minister took the tongs and pulled a live coal out of the fire and they watched the glowing coal slowly die. The man saw the point. "I will be there next Sunday," he said. The downward course of many lives has begun with habitually neglecting the fellowship of God's people. And on the other hand, multitudes have been sustained in Christian faith by the fellowship of fellow-Christians.

FEbruary 1—Acts 2:42 "They continued . . . in breaking of bread."

"This do in remembrance of me," Jesus had said. In loving devotion the believers assembled at the close of each day to partake of the bread and wine, symbols of the supreme sacrifice of Him Whom they loved most. It was a service of remembrance which linked them to His supreme act of love, keeping it alive and fresh in their memory. Through it they were refreshed and received courage and strength to live another day in a heathen environment. Proper observance of the Lord's Supper by spiritually prepared people will do that.

FEbruary 2—Acts 2:42 "They continued . . . in prayers."

These believers were a praying people. Through the teaching of Christ, the illumination of the Holy Spirit, and their own faith, God had become real to them. Through prayer they fellowshiped with Him. It was a natural experience. Even though a pagan world might reject them, they were sustained by that fellowship. It is repeatedly stated that all people pray. In times of danger, if at no other time, people instinctively turn to a higher power for help. However, the prayer that builds Christian character and the Christian church is that which is constant and which has advanced beyond fear to the prompting motive of love.

FEbruary 3—Acts 2:44,45. "And all that believed were together, and had all things common; and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men, as every man had need."

The Holy Spirit led the believers into a sense of stewardship, which was reflected in their attitude toward their possessions and toward others. Their love for others caused them to share with them. When one's religion does that it has one of the ear-marks of genuineness. Christianity shifts the center of life from self to Christ. Christ becomes the center and He in turn enlarges one's interests to include others. The most inspiring chapters of individuals and the church are those which record self-forgetful giving for others for whom there was no responsibility other than that they were human beings.

FEbruary 4—Acts 2:46,47. And they . . . did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God."

Another element of that power which "amazed" people was the simple quality of happiness. These believers ate "their meat with gladness—praising

What Is Your Sense Of Values?

By Christine O. Miller

Last summer we tested the sense of values of our young people. They weren't aware of this when, a week before, we asked them to prepare secret lists of the ten loveliest things in the world. Nor did they have to sign their names, so we feel that the lists were made sincerely.

When we read the items we were proud of our group. Surely they knew something of the really lovely things of life. What impressed us was that these things were so simple. Not one of them could be bought with money. They required only a sense of appreciation. Below is a partial list of things our young people considered lovely. These are in no special order.

GIRLS

A little child's prayer
The first snowfall
A Christian home
A tiny baby's smile
The song of the first meadowlark in the spring
An elderly saint
The smell of new-mown hay
To be a child of God
A tree
The feel of warm spring rain on the cheek
A happy Christian couple Smiles
Friendship
A glowing Christian face
The sliver of a new moon in a starry sky
A city by night from a high hill
A view from a mountain-top
The first spring violets
A church by candle-light
Mother's love
That Christ died for me as an individual

BOYS

My home
Soft, sweet music
A night of sleep
A clear conscience
Fields of golden grain
A spiritual church
A baby's smile
A cool breeze on a hot day
A sunset

Morning light breaking
Mutual understanding in the home
A clear, cool woodland stream
A home with love
The starry heavens
Companionship with each member of the family
That Christ died for me
Love of one's work
A cool, clear, calm night
Christian fellowship
A flower
The Lord Jesus Christ

I think there is a real lesson in this for all of us. Would we not rather lose from our lives some of the purchaseable things rather than those that can't be bought for any price—a tiny baby's smile—a lark singing—a child's prayer—spring rain on the cheek—salvation through the shed blood of Jesus Christ our Lord? When prosperous times are upon us we especially need to remember that money cannot buy true happiness.

You are familiar with that little song of Browning:

*"The year's at the spring,
The day's at the morn,
Morning's at seven,
The hillside's dew-pearled.
The larks on the wing,
The snail's on the thorn.
God's in His heaven, All's right with the world."*

This verse taken from a longer poem which tells of the young girl, Pippa, who worked in a silk mill in Italy. She had but one holiday all year, and on that one day she went from door to door singing her cheery little song. Of course she made happier the lives of those for whom she sang. Yet there were many reasons why Pippa might have been unhappy.

She worked long hours with no days off; she made very small wages; she had no fun except what she made for herself. But she could say truthfully that for her, God was in His heaven and the world was a pretty nice place, because she had learned, first of all, that it is a lot more fun to be happy than to be unhappy. Though she had not the many things that are supposed to bring happiness, she had a proper sense of values. Without 'things' she could still be happy because of spring, sunrise, morning dew, a lark's song, and because God, the loving Father, was in His heaven.

Another reason for Pippa's happiness was, that, with a proper sense of values, she had learned also to focus her eyes outward on others, instead of inward on herself.

God intends Christians to be happy. He gave His Son to bring us joy. He gave us hundreds of beautiful and lovely things that can be had free for just the recognizing of them. There are enough sour, grouchy, cynical, disallusioned people in the world. Let us bring Christ's joy into the sad, sick world around us. May we each experience the deep, abiding joy that comes to the followers of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, and may we dedicate our smiles, our laughter, our happiness to Him.

the long run. Jesus taught us to be non-resistant (Matt. 5:39ff). But right with this goes the doing of good. ". . .do good to them that hate you . . ." The great apostle of Christ says, "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." Undoubtedly Mennonites have emphasized non-resistance and have not put enough emphasis on the doing of good. Our key word has been "non-resistance" instead of "peacemakers." For a profound study of "peacemaking" see the forty-eight booklet, For All Mankind, by J. H. Langenwalter. It may be gotten from the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, for 25 cents.

God;" Peter and John rejoiced that they were "counted worthy to suffer shame for his name;" In Samaria "there was great joy" when the Gospel was accepted. This quality, which was distinctive of early Christianity, was contagious and was an important factor in the spread of the Gospel. It is still contagious but modern Christianity has largely lost it. It will be found, not in laughter-provoking gadgets, but in the deep spiritual sources of life and refreshment. It can become the possession of all.

IN MEMORIAM

HENRY D. UNRUH, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Unruh, was born March 22, 1871, in Poland and died December 18, 1944. With his parents he migrated to McPherson, Kansas, in 1875. In 1897 he and Elizabeth Jantz were united in marriage. They moved to Meno, Oklahoma, where he was baptized. Later while living at Lahoma he joined the Zoar Mennonite Church at Goltry. He is mourned by his wife, seven sons, Harry and Philip of Enid; Emery and Robert of Bartlesville, Aben of Wichita, Fred, FASTERFIELD, Texas; and Louis at home; one brother, Adam at Meno; and two sisters, Mrs. Fred Unruh at Meno and Mrs. Sam Kusch of Enid.

HEINRICH A. THIESSEN, son of Abr. and Maria Friesen Thiessen, was born May 28, 1878, in Landskrone, South Russia. With his parents he migrated to Henderson, Nebraska, in 1879. In 1895 they moved to Butterfield, Minnesota, and in 1902 to Cavalier Country, North Dakota. He was baptized by Elder H. H. Regier in 1900. He was received as a member of the Mennonite Church at Butterfield. In North Dakota he joined the Salem Church, near Munich. He was Sunday School teacher and superintendent for many years. In 1904 he and Margaretha Fast were united in marriage. She passed away after nine months. In 1907 he married Maria Rempel. From 1919 until 1925 the family lived at Ojibwa, Wisconsin. From there they returned to Munich. Here he passed away on December 7, 1944.

MARGARETHA THIERSTEIN nee BERGMAN, daughter of Jacob and Justine Bergman, was born April 20, 1870, in Leske near Marienburg, West Prussia, and died January 10, 1945. With her parents she migrated to Whitewater, Kansas, in 1879. In 1887 she was baptized by Elder Leonhard Suderman and received as member of the Emmaus Mennonite Church. She and her husband were permitted to live together for nearly forty-seven years. Two sons, Christian B. and Samuel T. were born to this union. Later a daughter Leona joined the family circle for a few years. She is survived by her husband, two sons, and one daughter.

MARIA SCHMIDT, daughter of Peter H. and Sarah Buller Schmidt, was born September 12, 1856, in Alex anderwohl, South Russia, and died December 27, 1944. At the age of eighteen she was baptized by her uncle Elder Jacob Buller and received into the Alexanderwohl Church. With her parents she migrated to Marion County, Kansas, in 1874. Here they homesteaded. In 1880 she was united in marriage to David Schmidt, with whom she shared joys and sorrows for thirty-four years. They made their home in Hochfeld. Two children found a welcome in their home. Another child (Mr. Henry Friesen) at the death of his mother was taken into her home and reared for some time by her. Two children, John H. D. Schmidt of Denver, and Mrs. Alvin Schroeder of Goessel, survive her.

PETER P. KLASSEN, son of Peter and Katherine Dueck Klassen, was born February 16, 1867, in Elizabeth, South Russia, and died December 28, 1944. With his parents he migrated to Marion County, Kansas, in 1879. In 1889 he was baptized by Elder Jacob Buller and received into the Alexanderwohl Church. He and Aganetha Richert were united in marriage in 1893. They shared joys and sorrows for nearly forty-seven years. He is mourned by Henry and Peter of the home, Christoph, Otto, John, and Rudolph and families, all of Newton, Kansas.

JOTTINGS

—Rev. Henry Fransen, Pastor of the Buhler Church, Buhler, Kansas, is visiting the C.P.S. camps at Fort Collins and Colorado Springs, Colorado, and the mental hospital unit in Denver.

—Dr. A. Warkentin, whose address is 228 Huron Street, Chicago, Ill., writes that his physical condition has improved to the extent that he can do light physical work.

—According to present plans Rev. J. M. Franz will begin a series of meetings in the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, on January 28.

—Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Krehbiel left Thursday evening, January 11, for Los Angeles, California, where the mother of Mrs. Krehbiel was very ill. Rev. Krehbiel thought he might return around January 19.

—An evening worship feature at the Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio, recently was a lantern slide lecture on "The Life of Christ." A selected list of pictures from the masterpieces of art was shown.

—Rev. H. P. Fast and Rev. J. R. Dick are the speakers at the short term Bible course now in progress at the Oklahoma Bible Academy. The school added $344.36 to its building fund by selling Christmas cards.

—Miss Talitha Neufeld, who served as missionary in China for two terms and also taught in the government schools of China for a number of years, has sold her house in Reedley, California. She has gone to Lame Deer, Montana, where she plans to spend a year with Missionary Rodolphe Petters.

—Missionary W. C. Voth, who is teaching industrial arts and mathematics in the rural high school at Montezuma, Kansas, was guest speaker at the First Mennonite Church, Ransom, Kansas, on January 21. In the morning he spoke on missions, in the afternoon to the young people, and in the evening he showed pictures of South America. Mrs. W. C. Voth and children live in Newton, where the children attend school. Rev. Voth is able to visit his family every other week-end. Mrs. W. C. Voth is visiting at Montezuma this week.

—Bethel College—Several Ministerial students are again serving internships in Mennonite churches around Newton. Verney Unruh, Bloomfield, Montana, assists at the West Zion Church, Moundridge; Harold Buller, Mt. Lake, Minn. at the Grace Hill Church, Whitewater; and Ernst Harder, Paraguay, S. A., at the First Mennonite Church, Halstead. Willard Wiebe, Aberdeen, Idaho, is serving the church at Fredonia, Kansas, regularly under appointment of the Home Mission Committee. The Churches at Colby, Kansas, and Turpin, Oklahoma, are served by various other ministerial students. Ministerial students at Bethel not mentioned above are Rev. Garman Wedel, N. Newton, Kansas; Rev. F. E. Nunley of the Colored Methodist Church, Newton, Kans.; David Habeggar, Busby, Mont.; G. H. Neufeld, N. Newton, Arnold Nickel, Mt. Lake, Minn.; Orlando Schmidt, Buhler, Kans.; Waldo Kaufman, Pretty Prairie, Kans.; Doland Unruh, Newton, Kans.

Administering the C.P.S. Program

By Albert M. Gaeddert

We are grateful to our Heavenly Father for another year of His guidance in this program. Under His care we have been upheld, and His hand has led us in the work. Likewise, we express gratitude to those who have so graciously given of their means to make this program possible. With the help of God and with our united efforts we launch out into the coming year.

Our camps are now considerably above winter strength and several of them above summer strength. This presents the problem of finding special projects in which our men can be placed and where they can work happily. This is one of our major tasks now.

To administer the total program of our camps and units, which now number over fifty, we have the following arrangement:

The country is divided into four regions, with a regional director in charge of each region. They are responsible directly to the Akron office. There are three men in the Hospital Section, responsible directly to the Akron office for the administration of the 21 hospital units and training school units. Five area supervisors are in charge of all men on dairy farms and men working as dairy herd testers. At the local level each camp and unit has its own organization, responsible to the Akron office and the regional director or man in the Hospital Section. The four regional directors are Rufus Franz, serving the Pacific Coast region; Erwin Goering, serving the Rocky Mountain region; Ralph Beechy, serving the Central States region; and Harry Martens, serving the Eastern States region. Their work divides itself somewhat as follows:

1. Periodic visitations to each camp and unit, approximately once every six weeks or two months.
2. Keeping close personal contact with campers and thus making possible a close tie-up of campers with the administrative agency.
3. They are responsible directly to the Akron office

Albert M. Gaeddert is General Director of all Mennonite C.P.S. camps and units. We are happy to present the first of a series of articles taken from Brother Gaeddert's report to the annual M.C.C. meeting, held in Chicago, December 29, 1944.

to which they report on each of their visits on the following: a. The religious life program of the camp. b. General administration. c. Morale of men in camp. d. Special problems. e. Educational program. f. Relations with technical agency. g. The work program.

The Hospital Section is administered by Robert Kreider and Roy Wenger, with Titus Books serving as area pastor for the eastern hospitals. Together their responsibilities are as follows:

1. The administration of the hospital program.
2. Regular visitation to the units and reporting on the same. (These reports cover items similar to those of the Regional Directors.)
3. Pastoral oversight and ministry to the eastern hospital units under Titus Books.
4. Carrying out an effective educational program conjointly with Elmer Ediger and Roy Umble of the educational staff at the Akron office.

Each hospital unit has its leader, and a number of the units have an assistant whose responsibilities are usually the educational and recreational program.

In charge of the 282 men on dairy farms and the 114 dairy testers and five area supervisors—Paul T. Guengerich, in charge of the five counties in Wisconsin, with headquarters at Beaver Dam, Wisconsin; John P. Duerksen, in charge of three counties in Ohio and two in Michigan as well as dairy testers scattered over the state of Michigan, with headquarters at Adrian, Michigan; Roy R. Miller, in charge of three counties in Pennsylvania and dairy testers scattered over the state, with headquarters at Akron; Waldo O. Voth in charge of El Paso County, Colorado, with headquarters at the Colorado Springs camp; Irvin F. Wall, in charge of San Joaquin County, California, with headquarters at the Camino camp; Lester C. Gerig camp director at Denison, in charge of the dairy testers in the state of Iowa; Francis W. Smucker, in charge of the dairy testers in the state of Maine, with headquarters at Orono, Maine.

Other special units and projects are under the supervision of the regional directors or directly under the Akron office.

Additional Conscription Measures Planned

With hopes for an early conclusion of the war shattered, the election over, and a new Congress in session, stringent measures for controlling the manpower of the nation are being planned. Since the beginning of the new year, seven conscription bills have been introduced to Congress.

Enactment of national service legislation seems to be the most immediate concern in Washington. It has been called for by the President and has the backing of the Army, Navy, and wartime government agencies such as the War Manpower Commission. It has been introduced into Congress in the May-Bailey bill. The passage of this bill would apply the "work or fight" principle to all males from 18 to 45 years of age. This bill would provide for the conscription of all 4-F's; the drafting of younger men into the armed forces who at present are deferred for essential work, and the conscription of labor in general for vital war production. The bill has been severely opposed by labor organizations, and at the time of this writing, the President has renewed his appeals for the passage of a national service act.

There has been some inquiry as to how this bill would affect farmers who have been deferred in class 2-C. Deferred farmers are protected by the Tydings Amendment. General Hershey, however, has asked Congress to amend the Tydings Amendment to make possible the drafting by June of half the 364,000 farmers now deferred. Most of these would be in the 18 to 26 (possibly 29) age group.

The drafting of nurses into the armed forces has been proposed. The President has asked for this legislation. Representative May has introduced a bill requiring all nurses between the ages of 18 to 45 to register "in accordance with the same procedure and subject to the same exemption, rights, and obligations provided for male registrants." This bill also provides for a continuance of the present voluntary recruitment program. There seems to be no haste to enact this bill and its final passage will probably depend upon the outcome of the present drive for voluntary enlistment.

Peacetime conscription has also been introduced. This bill is known as the May bill, or "National Military Training Act of 1945." It proposes the drafting of all males between the ages of 18 and 23 for one year of military training. Hearings are scheduled to begin January 29.

All of these measures if enacted will in many far reaching and serious ways affect the lives of our people. None of the conscription bills to date contain provisions for conscientious objectors. It is believed, however, that such clauses will be included if the bills are finally passed. It behooves us now, if ever, to pray for our rulers, and to God that somehow He may spare our nation the further curse of militarism.—January 17, 1945—M.C.C. Headquarters, Akron, Pennsylvania

Child Gives Not Her Tithe, But 100 Per Cent

The following letter was recently received from Mountain Lake, Minnesota. It speaks of unusual giving. This is the letter:

Dear Editor:

A child of grade school age came to the parsonage door last night and shyly held out a roll of bills. "Here is something I want to give to missions," she said. "I have been washing dishes and doing jobs around home to earn the money to feed a little pig, and today I sold it, and it brought twenty-five dollars. Here it is."

I was overcome. It sounded like a story that you read. But it was really true. She wouldn't take back even the five dollar bill on the top of the pile. It was all for missions—and not because a healthy, lively girl cannot think up places to put money either. "The love of Christ constraineth." That $25.00 was not her tithe. It as one hundred per cent.

Yours truly,
Mrs. Erland Waltner

Case Studies in Evangelism

The experience of leading a soul to Christ is one of the most sacred which can come to an individual. Such experiences prove to be of untold blessing and inspiration. With this thought in mind the Evangelism Committee, working under the Home Mission Board of the General Conference, sent out a letter to the ministers of the Conference requesting that they briefly relate some experiences which they have had in personal evangelism. The purpose for such a request was twofold: first, that a study might be made of the various methods which have been successfully used by workers of our own Conference; then also that such cases might be a challenge and inspiration to others. Already a number have responded to the request, and others are urged to do so in the near future. There is much which we can learn from each other, and by sharing such experiences the work of evangelism in our churches can be strengthened. It is the plan of the committee to present brief studies in the next issues of The Mennonite. All names and personal details shall be withheld and only such examples will be cited which have been authorized by the contributor. Your comments will be appreciated.—The Evangelism Committee

EDITORIALS

CHURCH SERIES TO BEGIN NEXT ISSUE

"What Is the Church?" will be the subject of four articles to appear in the February issues. The articles will be written by four brethren of our conference. There is not too much clarity over what the Church really is. We hope that the statements of these four writers will make a more adequate answer possible for all of us. What is the Church? Is it a fellowship of whosoever professes belief in Jesus Christ? Or is the Church made up of believers who come up to a minimum standard of Christian faith and living? Is there room for a "Mennonite Church," which through loyalty to certain standards, will give forth a significant corporate testimony, while at the same time it makes room for the existence of other churches? Is any attempt to distinguish among believers somewhat like trying to separate the sheep from the goats? What kind of Church discipline does Christ teach? Should there be formal methods of discipline or should there be a leavening of the whole loaf? If formal discipline is practiced, what sins should come under it? Should the Lord's Supper be open to all who profess a sincere belief in the Lord Jesus Christ? What is the purpose of the church? What was Christ's conception of the Church? These and many more questions can be asked relative to the Church. We will welcome reader comment upon these articles.

A VIEW OF CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTION TO WAR

Two years ago the Federal Council of Churches established a Commission on the Relation of the Church to the War in the Light of the Christian Faith. The commission is now commonly called the Calhoun Commission after its chairman, Robert Lowry Calhoun, who is a professor of historical theology. After two years of study this commission made a twenty-five thousand word report to the Federal Council at its biennial session in Pittsburg last fall. A prominent religious journal appraises the study thus: "We regard the document as a whole as the noblest and most illuminating statement of the Christian faith, of the nature of the church, of the relation of the church to the war, of the numerous problems which the war presents to the Christian faith. . . and of the crisis through which contemporary civilization is passing, which has ever been produced by American Christian scholarship." Of the twenty-five men who formulated this report, a minority were C. O.'s. The report says the following about the way of conscientious objection in wartime:

"A minority of our members believe that those Christians are judging more accurately the meaning of Christian duty who in time of peace preach the renunciation of war, and in wartime follow the way of conscientious objection. The dangers of this course also are present to our minds. There is always obvious danger of inward dishonesty of spiritual laziness, wearing the mask of self-sacrifice, of preference for personal safety above needed service to fellow men. There is the danger of self-righteousness and the unwarranted assumption of superior virtue. There is the danger that in seeking to serve the advance of community among men the conscientious objector may actually serve the cause of isolationism instead of more vital world fellowship. Besides all these risks to the integrity and actual influence of Christian pacifists, there is the risk that such decision as theirs, if practiced by large enough numbers of Christians, would prevent effective military action by the United Nations, and open the way to control of the world by the totalitarian powers. Yet in spite of these dangers, a minority of the Commission, and a proportionately lesser minority in the churches, are committed to the way of Christian pacifism.

"Upon Christians who choose this course in war time, there rest special responsibilities of at least two sorts. They must assume voluntarily and wholeheartedly a real share of the burden that the war entails. Most Christian conscientious objectors today, we believe, desire to carry a heavier load rather than a lighter one. A second responsibility, which they share with all Christians, is the maintenance of understanding, mutual appreciation, and profound fellowship among fellow Christians. Among all Christians there is one devotion to the quest for justice and peace. They set out from common premises, seek common goals, and even in their differences can experience together the fellowship of the Holy Spirit."

This report affords C. O.'s an opportunity to see themselves as others see them. It seems to indicate that the witness of the C. O.'s has not been positive and thorough enough. Of course, we believe that this can be said of the witnessing of practically all Christians.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

AMERICA'S FASTEST GROWING RELIGION

All new religions have a small and inconspicuous beginning. They are hardly recognized as separate movements until they have attracted a significant number of followers, effected a relatively strong organization, and formulated clearly defined goals.

Statism

The fastest growing religion in America to which I refer is called Statism. The essence of this religion teaches that man is a servant of the political State and that man must give his highest obedience to it. This is really a very old religion but in America it has been getting a strong foothold only within the past few decades. It was a rival religion to the ancient Israelites whose weaker members were constantly tempted to worship its god, Baal. It was a rival religion of the early Christians who under the Roman yoke were greatly persecuted for not worshiping the Roman emperor. In our own time we have seen this religion become strongly established in several European countries and, despite the fact that we strongly criticized those countries for setting up this pagan religion with its false gods, we are now seeing the very same religion growing rapidly in our own country.

Theology And Organization

The god of Statism has very human characteristics, the chief of which are power, might, and materialism. The essence of this religion's gospel is blind obedience to the State, conformity in life and thought to the majority, salvation by faith in the social security program of the State. Christianity, once the chief religion in America, is being pushed into the background. It is not abolished by Statism, it is only made ineffective by subordinating it to the State, by modifying its ethical demands, and cooling its evangelical fervor. Statism demands good citizens first, good Christians second. There is a hierarchy of organization in this religion that closely parallels that of the hierarchal organization of a large existing church, ranging from the highest pontiff to the lowliest of priests. Membership in the organization is easy to gain. There is no preliminary indoctrination, only subtle instruction and gradual training under the guise of education in citizenship. All that is asked from the beginning is to have faith that the blind can lead the blind. The officers in the religion of Statism are known as politicians, and the loyal members are called patriots.

A Bright Future Ahead

The religion of Statism in America has a seemingly bright future because it already has the loyalty of a large share of the sixty-five million non-Christians who have never made any commitments to anything higher than the State. In addition it is constantly winning thousands of professing Christians. These Christians turn pagan and begin worshiping other gods. They either lose faith in the power of the God of love and begin worshiping the god of power or they worship both, thinking it will do no harm. The evangelists of Statism have won many converts by persuading them that they could serve two masters. The evangelists taught their converts that the demands of God and man were not in conflict; that the God of love was to be worshiped and obeyed only in times of peace and in the next world, while the god of power and might must have full sway in this world. The religion of Statism is attracting many today. Some of our best friends have joined; others are debating, while still others are stoutly resisting.

Our Ministry of Education

EDUCATION FOR THE USE OF POWER

By J. H. Langenwaller

Power is the ability to do or to achieve something. That may be something harmful. It may also be something of little consequence. On the other hand it may be something of great importance and truly worth while. Of itself, power is neither moral nor immoral. What happens through it is due to the direction given to it.

Why Do Men Seek Power? Because they want to achieve. What kind of achievement they desire depends on their education, i.e., whether they have been trained to seek a higher level of living or whether they are satisfied with information on how to use certain kinds of power.

Small children challenge their elders to use power. Their "Do it again," "Do it some more," "Please do it some more," "Tell it again," "More" and many other appeals challenge their elders to do their best to display their power to do things.

What is true of children is true of people in general. They have many ways of making one want to be able to use power so that he may have standing with them.

What Is The Value Of Power? That depends on why it is used. The same power can raise a heavy load for the good of many or it can destroy necessities of life and crush out lives. The electric button or lever asks no questions. It responds to the touch of the worst kind of character as well as to the best. That places a considerable responsibility upon the user of power.

At a time when his nation was "drunk with power" Rudyard Kipling called the attention of his people to their responsibility to use power aright through his poems, "Father in heav'n Who lovest all" and "God of our fathers, known of old." It is well for the world that these poems have been set to music so that they can be used as hymns. He was not speaking to one nation alone; he was speaking to the whole world, especially to the "Christian World." He stated his convictions more bluntly in answer to the proudly flaunted phrase "The Mistress of the Seas" by saying, "If blood be the price of admiralty, Lord God, we ha' paid in full." The world has not paid much attention to the words of Rudyard Kipling, but his message challenges us as never before in the foregoing words. He was right, and the world has paid dearly for not allowing his message to lead it to higher living.

There are two opposing views on the value of power. The one seeks power for self and pelf. The other seeks power for the honor of God and for the good of men. No one can successfully hold to both views.

Can Power Save The World? Yes, if rightly used. No, if used for selfish ends. The final message of Jesus on the subject of power is: "But ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you: and ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." Acts 1:8. That kind of power can and will save the world when men give it an opportunity. That is only another way of saying that if and when people are willing to be educated in the use of power under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, the world can be saved from the devastating powers which now tend to destroy the opportunities for a wholesome civilization. Added to that is the responsibility of providing for the proper education of those who are beginning to ask very meaningful questions about the state of the world now.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

A POSTWAR MISSION FUND

Dear Mission Friends:

From the mission reports in our church papers, you have seen that the war has temporarily limited our mission activity, but that the interest in missions has not decreased. It has rather increased. You have been so liberal in giving during the past year, that our Foreign Mission Board feels the time has come to set aside a Post-War Mission Fund.

Soon after our Executive Committee had agreed on this plan, an unsolicited gift was received by our chairman for just such a fund. It was a check for $1,000.00 from a brother and his wife who knew nothing of our plans. This has strengthened our Board in the belief that we are in the will of the Lord in starting such a fund. We thank them heartily, and herewith encourage further contributions for this purpose. When you send such gifts, please write the treasurer that it is for the Post-War Mission Fund. The $1,000.00 are the beginning of it.

Some of the larger denominations have also started such funds. The Christian Alliance Church tries to raise a fund of $1,000,000.00; the Lutheran Church, $2,500,000.00; and the Methodist Church, $25,000,000.00. We can, of course, not set our goal so high, being a small denomination, but we also hope for a large fund.

We thank all mission friends for their faithful support of missions and ask their continued prayerful support for the future, whether it be for this fund or for the general fund. Let us also continue to pray that the door to Columbia may soon be opened, as well as to China.

In the name of the Board,
P. H. Richert, Secretary

P.S.

According to the last reports in the papers, there now is fierce fighting on the Philippines near Baguio, where our six missionaries are interned. May we pray all the more for their safety and liberation.

QUARTERLY REPORT BY THE MALCOLM WENGER

Busby, Montana January 3, 1945

Dear Brethren of the Mission Board,

This past Christmas season, our first among the Cheyennes, has impressed us more deeply than ever before with the debt of gratitude we owe to our Saviour for newness of Life in Him. We wish that many more of the Cheyennes might be freed from the bondage of sin.

The study of Cheyenne continues with daily classes with Rev. and Mrs. Habegger. We have just finished studying through the Gospel of John and are starting on Luke. We read the easier passages with some degree of understanding. Conversation in Cheyenne is not progressing as rapidly as we would like, but we hope it will improve in the next quarter.

Habegggers continue to share with us the responsibility of the other mission work. We teach Sunday School to those who speak English and take two of the four religious instruction classes at the government school each Friday. In the church services Mr. Habegger and I alternate, he acting as interpreter when I speak. We also assist where we can in the other activities of the station such as sewing classes and special children's meetings, as well as in the visitation work.

During the past three months we had opportunities to speak away from the reservation. On October 8, we participated in the annual harvest festival at the Bethlehem Mennonite Church in Bloomfield, Montana. We took a Christian Indian couple along on this trip. October 15, we spoke at the evening service at the Baptist Crow Indian Mission at Lodge Grass, Montana. November 5, we spoke in the evening service at the Baptist Crow Indian Mission at Crow Agency, Montana.

We value a great deal the privilege of working with the Habegggers and benefiting by their many years of experience in the work here.

Sincerely Yours, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Wenger

"I Was . . . Naked And Ye Clothed Me."

RELIEF CLOTHING REPORT

(December 1, 1943, to November 30, 1944)

By Mrs. M. C. Lehman

(Report given at Annual Meeting of the Mennonite Central Committee, Chicago, Illinois, December 29, 1944)

A review of the year impresses us anew with the facts that (1) the Mennonite people give whenever there is need and when that need is properly presented to them; (2) the Mennonite people give generously and cheerfully in a modest way; (3) the Mennonite people do their work well.

Naturally, the women have carried a major part of the load connected with the Foreign Relief Clothing Program and the C.P.S. Canning and Drying Project, but the men have stood shoulder to shoulder with them and helped to encourage and make the work easier and possible. For this fine cooperation we thank the brethren as well as the sisters. At the close of 1943 we had one clothing center at Ephrata, Pa. A new center was opened at 223 King Street East, Kitchener, Ontario, February 1, 1944, and another at 220 North Main Street, Newton, Kansas, September 25, 1944. The opening of these centers has greatly increased the interest in the churches and resulted in greater amounts of contributions for relief, in the form of clothing, soap, and shoes, as well as in cash.

During the year the challenging need, together with the program to help meet that need, was presented personally to churches in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Minnesota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, and Manitoba. In all these places the people were sympathetically interested, and eager to help in trebling our amount of relief clothing.

The response from our relief workers who have distributed clothing in England, North Africa, Puerto Rico, and Paraguay, together with requests from government officials who have asked how Mennonite clothing was processed for foreign shipment (because it was among the best they had received), have given us much encouragement to keep on sorting closely, mending, cleaning, labeling, etc.

We thank our Heavenly Father for the way our needs have been fully supplied and for His protection over the shipments of clothing as they were shipped over dangerous waters. The burlap, the pins, etc., etc. (to many the impossible), have all been provided; for nothing is too great or too small for our Lord to do.

The Mellinger, Pennsylvania, brethren have again faithfully "burlapped" the bales at Ephrata. As the volume of clothing increased, they kept up their cheerful and willing service at their own expense. They deserve much credit and gratitude for the excellent work they have done.

Mennonite women, representing many Mennonite groups, at Ephrata, Kitchener, and Newton helped to keep under control the huge piles of mending that were sorted out of the great amount of clothing sent to us. This service has saved the M.C.C. much money and has lifted a tremendous load for those in charge at the clothing centers. These sisters, together with sewing circles, ladies' aids, and missionary societies throughout the church, deserve much credit for their faithful services. Also we are happy for those who have helped shoulder heavy responsibilities and have labored so faithfully in the clothing centers.

The following statistics show in which direction we are moving:

Relief Clothing Received
Year	Place	Amount
1942	Ephrata	42,066 pounds
1943	Ephrata	65,787 pounds
1944	Ephrata	96,449 pounds
1944	Newton	21,468 pounds
1944	Kitchener	10,097 pounds
Total		225,770 pounds

(The Lancaster baling for 1944 amounted to 1,858 pounds of shoes, 1,827 pounds of soap and 17,247 pounds of clothing, and $2,761.77 in cash. There were 135 bales. These figures are not included in the above.)

You will be interested in the statement of all shipments that were made since the opening of the first MCC clothing Center at Ephrata, Pa., in September, 1940:

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Karl Friesen, North Newton, Kansas

FEBRUARY 4—“Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God.” I John 3:1a.

“What’s in a name?” it is sometimes asked, as though a name meant nothing. And often it may mean little. It largely depends on who gives a certain name. Here it is the Eternal God who in His great love calls us “Children of God,” that is, those of us who believe on His only begotten Son. “Behold, what manner of love.” “Called children of God.” Are we not overwhelmed with joy at the thought of it?

FEBRUARY 5—“Beloved, now are we the sons of God.” I John 3:2a.

There is a great difference in merely being called something and in actually being that. Moses was called the son of Pharaoh’s daughter for a while although he was not. But, by faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh’s daughter. (Hebrews 11:24). God permits true believers to be called His sons, but assures them also that they actually are His sons. “Beloved, now are we the sons of God.” Oh, what an incentive to godly living!

FEBRUARY 6—“But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name.” John 1:12.

It is the consistent testimony of the Scriptures that not all people are the children of God, but also that everyone may become a child of God. It is a personal matter and depends upon the attitude of the individual toward the Lord Jesus Christ. He approaches us and seeks entrance into our heart. The one who receives Him receives authority to become what heretofore he was not, namely, a child of God. To receive Him is the same as to believe on Him. How glorious the result of believing on the Lord Jesus Christ!

FEBRUARY 7—“Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.” John 1:13.

This verse is the continuation of the one before. God tells us here that the event of becoming a child of God happens through a birth—by being born of God. We are here also informed that flesh and blood, i.e., the natural man has nothing to do with this. This birth does not result from human effort or will power, but as a creative act of Almighty God.

This birth, and this alone, makes us children of God. Can we say, “Praise the Lord, I am born of God”?

FEBRUARY 8—“Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again.” John 3:7.

The believer’s relations to God as a child is unspeakably precious. The clear testimony of God’s word is that the believer is a child of God because he is born of God. Indeed, the only way life comes into existence at all is by birth. All physical life has its origin from some parent life. So all spiritual life begins when Christ is received by faith. “Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.” (John 6:53). But, “He that hath the Son hath life.” (I John 5:12).

FEBRUARY 9—“As newborn babes, desire the sincere milk of the word, that ye may grow thereby.” I Peter 2:2.

With birth there begins a period of infancy. In the spiritual as in the physical, rapid growth may be expected if there is good health and proper nourishment. The Christian’s food is the Word of God. Of how many Christians is the complaint in Hebrews 5:12 ff. true today that, when judged by their spiritual age they should be teachers, but they are still babes “and are become such as have need of milk and not of strong meat”? A hunger for “the sincere milk” and later for the “strong meat” of God’s Word is one condition for growth in the Christian life.

FEBRUARY 10—“If ye endure chastening, God deal-eth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the father chasteneth not.” Hebrews 12:7.

The believer’s relation to God as His child subjects him to certain dealings at the hands of his heavenly Father which should be self-evident. Every true father has a vital interest in the right bringing-up of the son, how much more the Father of lights. Therefore He uses proper discipline—“chastening.” To many a Christian it has seemed God was dealing more severely with him than with the ungodly. Probably this observation was correct. For many a thing a father can not pass up in his own son that he will pass up in other people’s children. Our heavenly Father follows the same principle. Therefore, “if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partakers, then are ye bastards and not sons.” (v. 8).

Today's Teen-agers

By Ellen Waltner

A few weeks ago the Life magazine devoted several of its pages to the average American teen-age girl. Generously publicized, the girls were shown busily preoccupied with their daily activities—telephoning, dating, lounging over cokes, organizing and executing "secret societies," reverently adhering to current fashions in clothes, and all of the other customs and fads that teen-agers adopt and drop with the wind.

Along with the feature was printed an article containing the statement that some 6,000,000 U. S. teen-age girls live in a world all their own—a gay, enthusiastic society almost untouched by the war.

Probably many a Mennonite girl wonderingly gazed at the pictures of the girls her own age—and yet so very different from her. In a Mennonite society—a church college for instance—one is relatively shielded from the temptations of the outside world. One is usually nurtured under a protective Mennonitism, and finally, with unwavering faith and good will, sent out into the world to combat its evils.

Let us not too hastily denounce the average American youth and complacently condone our own Mennonite generation. In the "Letters to the Editor" section of the issue following the afore mentioned article were printed pros and cons from every section of the U. S. The southern girl clamored for her share of attention, the irascible father gloated about having spanked his daughter; but in the midst of all this was one teen-age voice clearly standing out in defiance of paternal indulgence, national approval, or personal satisfaction. The letter read: "Too many people believe that we are just empty-headed and thoughtless. Have they ever stopped to realize that this could be just a pose used by some 6,000,000 girls to hide the fact that they are terribly bewildered and not at all self-assured about the whole thing? Really, most of us are doing a lot of serious thinking, both about the future of this world and our personal future, especially since we will have to decide the course of the latter very shortly."

What an opportunity for Mennonites! Mennonite men and women teaching in schools and universities, Mennonite relief workers, Mennonite doctors and nurses, and above all—Mennonite youth on its knees in prayer.

While we are preparing ourselves for our future work, may we not forget that prayers are the prerequisite to action, that without prayers as the armor, the battle is already lost.

The Mennonite youth of today—if it only would—could do so much for its brothers and sisters all over the world.

Chinese Christian Writes Letter To Miss Aganetha Fast

Baptist Church, Nan Tan Chin Kai
Chengtu, Szechuan, China
November 21, 1944

Dear Miss Fast,

In August I asked Miss Argetsinger to bring you a letter. When she got to Kiating, she found it impossible for anybody to bring letters to America, so she mailed the letter to you. I think you have received that letter. When I wrote that letter, I planned to write you another letter in September. Because I was quite busy, I have not written you till now.

I am now a woman evangelist in the Baptist Church in Chengtu. Because the salary they give me cannot support my board, they allowed me to teach in the Kindergarten of the church every morning from 9:00 to 12:00 a. m. In the afternoons or evenings, I have women's meetings, prayer meetings, evangelical work, calling work and children's work. Besides, I have to cook my three meals myself, so I have work to do every day. Praise our Lord, I am quite strong, though I have not gained any weight.

Recently the war situation is not quite optimistic. We hope the war can be ended very soon, and I can go back to our churches. Dear Miss Fast, I hope I can work with you in our churches. My great ambition is to do orphan work after the war. You know I was an orphan when I was a child. Because of this I dedicate all my life to orphan work. If possible I hope I may have a chance to study one or two years in a university to take some courses on education and child psychology, which will help my work in the future. I have such a hope to study one or two years. I don't know if that will become a fact or not. Dear Miss Fast, pray for me.

I got a postcard from my elder brother last month.

He and his family are quite well. I have not heard from my sister for a long time. I think they are very well. My sister has three children.

Dear Miss Fast, there is misunderstanding between our country and yours. I am sure you will help your country people to understand more about China. I think the relationship between our two countries will be strengthened after the war. Though we are in difficulty, we have not lost the vision that the church will be established in China after the war. Let us pray for the church in China frequently. I expect I will hear from you very soon.

Lovingly,
Esther Pauline S. Y. Wang
(Miss Wang Shu Ying)

This letter was forwarded to me from two different places, but even then it made pretty good time. It reached me about January 7th. This letter had a $22.00 stamp on it. So we can imagine it means something for them to write. They want to keep up the contact with the home base. May we not fail our people in our mission area in China. They need our prayers so much.

er so far has been shipping all contributions as they came in. Above these figures there is approximately 15 tons of clothing at Ephrata being processed, including the recent Lancaster baling, which has not yet been evaluated or entered into our records.

Your labors, and the labors of your servants in these three clothing centers performed "In the Name of Christ," together with our combined prayers, will not only bring physical relief to many a suffering one but spiritual blessings as well.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

REPORT FROM E. AND J. B. WIENS

Translated from the German by

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

6460 St. George Street,
Vancouver, British Columbia

December 29, 1944

Dear Christian friends:

With the beginning of October the regular winter activities start. In the congregation the harvest home mission festivals were observed, in the neighboring churches as well as in Vancouver. This meant traveling back and forth. Holy Communion is being observed during the Advent Sundays. Elder J. P. Klassen assisted us in taking care of all these special services.

Other appointments that came in were weddings, the opening of Bible School at Abbotsford, the opening sermon at the Sunday School Teachers' Conference in Sardis. The program of the Young People's Convention in October had as the theme: "Incidents out of the Period of the Emigration from Russia and the Immigration into Canada." Older persons had to bring the different addresses. The young people furnished the special music and learned of many things experienced by their parents. Such factors serve to bring church and youth into a close fellowship.

A silver wedding anniversary was also commemorated. The church at Black Creek, on the island, was also visited, and the message was brought and holy communion was observed.

In Vancouver, worship services are being held morning and evening, and many believe firmly that the preaching of the Word is not without fruit. The congregation grows quietly and endeavors to do its part in the onward march of the gospel. The amounts given for foreign and home missions are evidence of the interest in missions.

In the fall there was an increase in the number of girls who come to the city for work. They have no difficulty in getting work. On Thursday evenings, they are invited into the Home and find a warm welcome to spend their free evenings in fellowship and Bible study. Other girls that find employment independently, are also invited to our fellowship. All the girls that make the Home their headquarters are given high praise for their good work.

During the summer months our contact and work with the conscientious objectors diminished, but in the last three months there has again been more work in this field. Almost every case could be adjusted. My experience has been that it is easier to deal with the military authorities than with the civilian boards. Work with our young men will need to be continued since the war does not seem to be ending as soon as some tried to have us believe. I always feel a special gratitude toward our Heavenly Father when a case has been adjusted.

Taking everything together, we endeavor to do each day what is required, not that all is accomplished that ought to be, but a sincere effort is made to do that which is expected of us.

With the coming Sunday and the Silvester message in the evening, the work of the year comes to a close. We do not wish to bring this to a close without expressing our gratitude to God for His mercy and goodness in leading and blessing us and the work. We also desire to express our thanks and appreciation for regular support and to the Board for making it possible for us to do the work assigned.

In our prayers we do not forget to remember the members of the Board and all other workers in the Master's Vineyard.

With fraternal greetings and best wishes for the New Year,

From your co-workers, E. and J. B. Wiens

RELIEF

Canadian Worker Arrives to Direct Bengal Relief

J. Harold Sherk of Kitchener, Ontario, has arrived at the Mennonite Relief Committee headquarters in Calcutta, India. George Beare, who arrived in India in late summer, relieved F. J. Isaac of directorship responsibility until Brother Sherk's arrival. There are now four relief workers present to give assistance to the Bengal relief program, so that missionary personnel may gradually retire from relief operations.

Termination of Travel Delay in Lisbon

Bertha Fast, Marie Brunk, and Esther Detweiler, three relief workers enroute to the Middle East, but stranded in Lisbon, Portugal, since December 9, informed Akron Headquarters that they were booked for passage to Cairo on January 13.

Barbara Zuercher, because of physical disability, was unable to continue her journey to the Middle East beyond Lisbon. She returned on the Serpa Pinto, Portuguese neutral steamer, which docked at Philadelphia, January 12.

Nurse Enrolled at UNRRA Training School

Martha Eiman, R. N., who will serve under UNRRA for one year in the Middle East, stopped off at Akron Headquarters on her way to College Park, Maryland, where she will take the required preparatory training before leaving the country.

Helen Moser, R. N., engaged as a nurses' instructor at the La Junta Mennonite hospital until January, is now at Akron Headquarters awaiting passage for the Middle East.

Vera Yoder, R. N., of Windom, Kansas, has been appointed as an additional member to join the Middle East unit.

Mennonite Workers Under UNRRA

The MCC now has six workers on loan to United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA). Four are already working in the Middle East, one is now enrolled at College Park, and another is to enter the training program shortly.

UNRRA has been making room for Mennonite workers to work in areas in which UNRRA has permission to enter. UNRRA, in addition, has solicited workers from the MCC with the agreement that such workers serve with UNRRA for one year, or for the duration plus six months, whichever is longer. Thereafter, the workers may become absorbed by Mennonite units on the field, or returned by UNRRA to the home office.

UNRRA has agreed to provide such workers certain minimum equipment, to arrange for their travel to the field and back, and provide a certain standard maintenance while in service. The MCC is responsible for the workers' salary, for medical, accidental, death expenses, and for whatever extra is needed in the way of equipment. UNRRA sponsors the required training program at College Park, Maryland, but the MCC is to meet board, room, and travel to College Park.

Evaluation of Relief Need in Palestine and Syria Areas

J. N. Byler, after visiting the Palestine and Syria areas, drew up these summarizing conclusions with regard to his investigation of the refugee situation and relief needs:

"The refugees, as far as any large numbers are concerned from Aleppo, Syria, to Alexandria are in camps and cared for by UNRRA. The Polish and Greek refugees are all receiving monthly allocations of money from their respective governments. This is not true of the Yugoslav refugees. However, these are nearly all in refugee camps under UNRRA. Practically all of the Yugoslav refugees in Palestine are Jews and therefore are being cared for by the various Jewish committees. There are a few non-Jewish Yugoslav refugees who are needy and could be helped but we do not feel that the number is sufficiently large to warrant setting up a center. At least this is both Delvin's and my opinion after contacting most of the welfare agencies in this area."

Camper Fatally Injured at Hill City

While operating a bulldozer on the project at the Hill City, S. D. camp, Arthur Lyndaker, Croghan, N. Y., was severely injured when a tree, which he was pushing, broke and fell on him. The accident occurred on January 8, and Arthur died enroute to the hospital at Rapid City.

Two New Hospital Units to Open

The rapid increase of inductions into base camps has necessitated the further development of special projects. To absorb this increase, two new units were recently authorized by Selective Service. A 30-man unit will be placed at the Spring Grove State Hospital, near Baltimore, Maryland. A 20-man unit has also been approved for the Woodbine Colony, a training school in New Jersey. The initial assignees for these units are being chosen from the camps in Virginia at Luray and Grottoes.

Dairy Farm Unit in Maryland to Open

A unit of 20 CPS men has been approved to work on dairy farms in Queen Ann's County, Maryland. Queen Ann's County is in eastern Maryland. Men for this unit are being selected immediately.

C. P. S. Briefs

A Red Cross First Aid Instructors' Course has been completed at the Ft. Collins, Colorado Camp. Twelve men have been trained to teach first aid.

An interesting book, titled "Files," has been prepared by CPS men at the Norristown State Hospital. Besides pictures of members of the unit, the book depicts the work and activities of the CPS men at the hospital.

IN MEMORIAM

Mrs. Elizabeth Wirkler, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Jacob Rediger, was born at Freiburg, Germany, on April 8, 1858. When nine years old she came with her parents to Eureka, Illinois. Here she grew up, was baptized on confession of faith, and joined the Mennonite church of which she remained a faithful member. When united in marriage to Christian Wirkler, they lived on a farm near Wichita, Kansas, until 1888. They then lived in Halstead for five years, and in Newton for twenty-four years, when they moved to their present home at Los Angeles. Here her faithful life companion in 1932 was called to his reward. After an illness of over three years, Mother, on January 11, 1945, quietly passed away to be with her Lord whom, in Christian faith, she accepted as her Savior. Her passing is mourned by her three children: Mary (Mrs. C. E. Krehbiel and family of Newton, Kansas), Miss Elisabeth of the home, and John E. and family of Oberlin, Ohio, and many friends. Funeral services were conducted by Dr. D. D. Eitzen, assisted by Rev. H. B. Dirks, and interment was made in the Forest Lawn cemetery by the side of her husband.

Elisabeth Sarah Kuehny, daughter of John and Magdelina Kuehny, was born July 23, 1872, at Summerfield, Illinois, and died January 21, 1945. When she was a small child, the family moved to Halstead, Kansas. Here she was baptized and received into the Mennonite Church. In 1891 she was married to Justus H. Hohmann. After living on a farm near Halstead for eight years, they moved to a farm near Deer Creek, Oklahoma. Here they became charter members of the Deer Creek Mennonite Church. The following children mourn her passing: Lloyd of the home; Walter North Newton, Kansas; Karl, Deer Creek; Ruth, Tulsa; and Lois, Cheney, Kansas.

Solomon Leo Hiebert, son of Edmund and Agatha Schmidt Hiebert, was born December 14, 1924, at Hillsboro, Kansas, and died January 7, 1945. He was baptized in 1942 by Rev. P. H. Unruh and received as a member of the Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church. He is mourned by his parents; four sisters; Mrs. Sylvia Schmidt, Mrs. Velma Flaming, Anna Mae, Lela Rose, and two brothers, Ervin and Johnny.

Susie Ratzlaff, nee Unruh, was born in Ostrach, Poland, July 4, 1864, and died January 12, 1945. She was baptized by Elder Jacob Buller of the Alexanderwohl Church and received as a member of the Canton Church. In 1883 she married Andrew Ratzlaff with whom she shared life until 1923, when he passed away. Since then she lived in her own little house close to the home of her daughter, Mrs. Willie Jantz. When she could no longer stay alone in her house she went and lived with each of her children for a while.

John H. Krehbiel, son of Jacob III and Lena Schneble Krehbiel, was born near Donnellson, Iowa, April 17, 1860, and died January 14, 1945. From birth until 1911 he lived on the home farm northwest of Donnellson. In 1910 he and his sister Katie, built a home in Donnellson, and the following year they moved into it. For a total of sixty years they lived together. John H. Krehbiel was baptized by Rev. Christian Schowalter and received into the Zion Mennonite Church in the year 1873. Four sisters survive him: Katie E., Fairview, Michigan; Mrs. Anna Galle, Moundridge, Kansas; Mrs. Eliza Handrich, Fairview, Michigan; and Mrs. Emma Bachman, Woodlake California.

Anna Pauline Braun Gerig, was born February 13, 1885, in Manitoba, Canada, and died December 23, 1944, in Los Angeles, California. At the early age of eight she dedicated her life to the service of the Lord Jesus Christ. In answer to the Saviour's call she sailed for India at the age of twenty-one. After nine years of faithful and strenuous service, she returned home to her parents in Oregon, broken in health. Soon after she began to long to return to India, but her health not permitting, she united in marriage with Rev. Daniel Gerig who was then proclaiming good tidings of peace among the white mountain people of Pennsylvania. Here she again entered wholeheartedly into service, and here it was that their only child, Paul Daniel, was born. After some years her health required a milder climate, and they came to California. Still always tenderly concerned about the poor and needy, the sick and aged, she gave and gave of her self and of her substance, until there was nothing left of her but a shadow. Then the Lord took her to himself. Loved ones who remain are: Her husband, Rev. Daniel Gerig of Los Angeles; her son, Paul Daniel of Ocean Side; five sisters, Mrs. Earl W. Smith, Dallas, Oregon; Mrs. P. A. Kliever, Albany, Oregon; Helena, Elizabeth, and Margaret of Los Angeles; and two brothers, Rev. Gerhard H. Braun, Tracy, California, and Rev. David A. Braun, Placentia, California. Anna Braun was a co-worker of Anna Funk. She became the successor of Anna Funk, when Miss Funk lost her life in the Titanic disaster. She (Anna Funk) gave up her seat to a mother who was left standing on the sinking ship while her children were already safe in a life boat with Miss Funk. On her trip to India, Anna Braun was accompanied by Rev. and Mrs. P. W. Penner. She also had the privilege of working together with Rev. P. A. Penner, the founder of the mission work.

FIRST GARDEN MENNONITE CHURCH Halstead, Kansas

We can say with the psalmist, "Praise ye the Lord. O give thanks unto the Lord: for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever."

On November 26th Rev. Gerald Stucky gave an inspiring message on Puerto Rico, and in the evening Rev. and Mrs. Hanes talked about learning the language of the South American people; they gave us a little demonstration of the difficulties of learning a strange language.

Our series of meetings started on December 3rd with Rev. Clyde Dirks of Hutchinson serving us. On account of much rain the roads were in such a bad condition that it was almost impossible to drive; so the meetings were postponed to a later date.

The Church observed communion service on December 17th in remembrance of what the good Lord suffered for all humanity.

The Church had its annual business meeting on December 28.

In the latter part of the year the Church elected a deacon to serve a term of six years. Joseph Schrag was elected and was ordained into his office the last Sunday in the old year.

M. J. Auernheimer, the deacon who stepped out, had served faithfully for the last eighteen years.

On January 14, 1945 Rev. A. J. Becker from the Northern Bible Society gave us a report of the work the Bible Society carries on, the many homes and schools that are presented with Bibles and Testaments free of charge.—P.S.V., Corr.

ALEXANDERWOHL MENNONITE CHURCH Goessel, Kansas

How thankful we are to have an Elder again. We are assured that he has come to us in answer to our prayers.

From seventy to eighty-five young people have joined the catechism class. Doubtless, many are planning to take this class in Bible instruction for two years, but it does look as if there will be many candidates for baptism next Pentecost. May the Lord, through His Holy Spirit, truly convict them and lead them to this decision.

We had our week of prayer meetings on Monday, Tuesday, and Thursday. The Senior C. E. met for a two-hour New Year's program on New Year's Eve and the Young People's League met for a program on January 14. All these meetings were well attended and inspirational.

Rev. P. A. Wedel, our new Elder, and Rev. C. C. Wedel have divided the work, so that Rev. C. C. Wedel brings the Sunday morning message once a month. We are glad that Rev. C. C. Wedel, who has served faithfully for so many years, can still help.

We had our first Wednesday night prayer meeting on January 10. The first several verses from the book of Jude were discussed. It is planned to continue this study. Since this has been choir night, the choir plans to keep it so by practicing after the prayer meeting. This makes it a very full evening, but we are living in a time when this is almost necessary.

The Lord has called us to bury two of our members since the New Year started. P. P. Klassen, a tired pilgrim, was glad to answer the call when it came. Solomon Hiebert, a very young man, by the grace of God through suffering also found he wanted to go Home. May the Lord comfort the bereaved and give us all the joy to answer the call when it comes to us as it must one day come unless it is our happy privilege to meet Him in the air with all those who have gone on before in the Lord.—Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH McPherson, Kansas

The children and some adults from the church group at McPherson presented an impressive Christmas program. Rev. Walter Gering gave an interesting talk on missions. The mission offering amounted to $100.56. Many from the surrounding churches attended.

The location for the church has been chosen. A corner lot in the 700 block on East Kansas will be the site for the building. No further information has been secured concerning the purchase of a chapel from Camp Phillips.

The committee elected to draw up the constitution has completed the initial form. A copy has been sent to the Home Mission Committee for approval, after which it will be presented to the group for adoption.

We will greatly miss the services of Miss Vera Voth, a member of our group, who passed away on November 26.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Schmidt received word from their son, Lloyd Schmidt, who is located in France, that he has recovered from his wounds and will probably be back on duty soon.

Brother Edwin Stucky, assisting minister at the Goessel Mennonite Church, was the visiting minister here on January 14.—Mrs. John W. Goering, Corr.

JOHANNESTHAL MENNONITE CHURCH Hillsboro, Kansas

The Christmas program given by the Sunday school was well attended and a good program was rendered.

At the annual business meeting Rev. J. M. Regier was re-elected as Pastor of a term of three years and brother Edwin Unruh was re-elected as Deacon.

The 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan was again adopted. The average contribution per member for all purposes was $38.00. Besides contributing their full quota for C. P. S. work, the church took up quarterly offerings for her own men in C.P.S. and collected nearly $500 for dependents in C.P.S.

A Watch Night service from 9 o'clock till 12 o'clock was held on December 31. It included a social hour and refreshments in the basement. At 10:45 we gathered in the church for a program. The topic for the first half was, "Hitherto the Lord Helped Us." Short themes were brought on the topics, "How Has God Helped Us Materially? Socially? In the Home? In the Church?" The topic for the second half was "I am Resolved What To Do." Themes were given on, "Be Helpful in Material Ways," "Be a Friend," "Do My Part To Make Home Pleasant," and "Be Faithful in My Church Work," closing with a candle-lighting and consecration service.

The meetings during the Week of Prayer were well attended, and the interest shown in the discussion was good.

Due to the good results of the mission sale, the ladies were encouraged to start work for another sale. The children's project always brings a nice sum at the sale. Sewing for Relief is now part of the work of the Mission Society.

May each member of our church ask God to help him do his part faithfully in this New Year.—Corr.

IMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH Delft, Minnesota

On Christmas Eve about thirty-five young people went caroling to forty-four places. The tour was made in five cars. Even though the mercury registered below zero, everybody enjoyed themselves.

On New Year's Eve thirty young people gathered in the church basement for a young people's social and watch night services. Herman Friesen led the devotion period at midnight.

For the months of December and January we had Rev. Elmer Dick to fill the pulpit on Sunday morning.

One of our young men is leaving January 29th for the armed forces.

Our new minister and wife, Rev. and Mrs. Victor Graber, and son will arrive the last week in January to begin their work the first Sunday in February.

JOTTINGS

—Dr. Theodore O. Wedel, son of C. H. Wedel who was the first president of Bethel College, is one of the twenty-five men who prepared the report of the Commission on the Relation of the Church to the War in the Light of the Christian Faith. This commission is now commonly known as the "Calhoun" Commission. Dr. Wedel, who is Warden of the College of Preachers, Washington Cathedral, has an article on "Church Order and the Historic Episcopate" in the current volume of Christendom.

—Rev. W. F. Unruh of Moundridge, was recently invited by the Ebenezer Church of Gotebo, Oklahoma, to hold a series of meetings. However, the meetings had to be discontinued after the second day because of the heavy rains. The church has no permanent pastor at the present time.

—Mrs. Willis E. Rich left on January 28 for a speaking tour through nine Western C.P.S. camps and units. Her tour will take her through the camps at Terry, Missoula, and Belton, Montana; Downey, Idaho; American Fork and Provo, Utah, and the three California camps. The theme of her talks will be "How To Make a Happy Home." She plans to return to her home in North Newton early in March. Her husband, Willis E. Rich, returned this past week from a visit to C.P.S. units in Eastern mental hospitals.

—In the Sunday School Times, Mr. Wm. H. Ridgeway discussing the Sunday School lesson for January 21, refers to the Mennonites of Eastern Pennsylvania.

—The Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa., and the Bergthal Mennonite Church, Corn, Oklahoma, are two more churches to adopt the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan.

—Rev. Willard Claassen conducted a series of evangelistic meetings at the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, from January 14 to 21. The afternoon messages were based on the Book of James. Some of the subjects of the evening series were: "The Power of the Cross," "How God Guides," "A Living Hope," "Christian Forbearance," "Christ and the Lost," "Church Membership," and "Going Back Home." Rev. Claassen is pastor of the Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota.

—First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: The Men's Brotherhood had a fellowship dinner on January 26. The church will be host to a county C. E. convention April 20 to 22. A total of 550 pounds of raisins were recently given to the C.P.S. camp at Camino.

—Mrs. P. J. Wedel, wife of Dr. P. J. Wedel of Bethel College, passed away on January 21. The funeral was held on January 23 in the Bethel College Chapel.

—Rev. Victor Graber has accepted a call from the Immanuel Mennonite Church, Delft, Minnesota. Brother Graber, who has been pastor of the Pleasant Valley Mennonite Church, Plains, Kansas, says that they expect to begin work in the new pastorate on February 4.

—Correction: In the issue of January 18 it was stated that the Foreign Relief Committee of the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, had purchased "three dozen out-of-style overcoats for two dollars each." These overcoats were not out-of-style. They were up-to-date and in style. The merchant who sold them for this price did so because he felt that they were to be given for a worthy cause, namely, foreign relief. On the same basis he recently sold fifty-five dresses, at $1.00 each, to the Foreign Relief Committee of the First Mennonite Church, Newton.

—The First Mennonite Church, Burns, Kansas, is another church that has recently begun to issue a church bulletin. Brother Henry Goossen is the pastor.

—Dr. J. D. Unruh and Rev. Jacob A. Tieszen recently brought messages to the Salem Church, Freeman, while Rev. Claassen was in Berne, Indiana.

—Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita: The choir gave two renditions of its Christmas cantata in Oklahoma churches on January 7. The choir sang in the Medford Church in the morning and in the Deer Creek Church in the afternoon.—Marie M. Dyck, Corr.

—Word has come that Mrs. Justus Hohmann of Deer Creek, Oklahoma, the mother of Professor Walter H. Hohmann, passed away on January 21.

—Bluffton College: The following resolution was passed in the January 9th faculty meeting: "The course in Mennonite History is to be a graduation requirement for all Mennonite students This requirement is to start with the class of 1946."

—The January issue of Harper's Magazine contains an article on C.O.'s.

—A total of $453.00 has already been given for the Sister Frieda Memorial Chapel.—From In the Service of the King.

—"The forty-first annual meeting of the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital Society of Newton, Kansas, will be held Tuesday, February 13, 1945 beginning at 10:00 o'clock in the morning, at the First Mennonite Church. The annual reports of the institutions as well as those of the Women's Auxiliary and Junior Auxiliary will be presented at this meeting. All members and friends are most cordially invited to attend. The ladies will serve a noon luncheon in the basement of the church. . . Reverend Allen H. Erb, Superintendent of the Mennonite Hospital and Sanitarium at La Junta, Colorado . . . will deliver the sermon during the morning session using as his theme, "Bringing Men to Christ Through Christian Hospitals." During the afternoon session Reverend Erb will speak on, "Practical Program of Spiritual Ministry in the Hospitals."

—Leaders from the Central Conference of Mennonites met with officers and board members of the General Conference on Wednesday and Thursday of last week. The meeting was held in Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas.

—Five leaders from the Canadian Conference of Mennonites met with members of the Board of Foreign Missions of the General Conference in Newton on January 19. The subject under consideration was the enlargement of the educational mission work being carried on in Mexico by Randall Groening, Rev. D. J. Unruh of Newton, Rev. J. W. Schmidt Gretna, Manitoba, and Rev. D. H. Loewen and Mr. William M. Enns both of Altona, left on January 22 by train for Mexico, where they expected to survey the mission work carried on by the Bergthaler Church of Canada. Two other brethren, Rev. George Froese, Horndean, Manitoba, and Rev. Isaac Friesen, Reinland, Manitoba, preceded the afore-mentioned party to Mexico. The latter two brethren are members of the Ruderweide Church. Mr. Enns, who is a farmer and business man and also chairman of the Winkler school board, stated that 3,000 inhabitants of Winkler are practically all Mennonites.

Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington: This church had its best year financially in five years, in spite of the fact that the crops this year were not as good as last year. The expenditures of this congregation for 1944 totalled $18,995.63. The average per church member was $190.08. A member of this church states, "There must be a lot in establishing the habit of giving. I know that tithing is the answer to church financial problems." Rev. and Mrs. Miller, who have served the church for five years, have been asked to continue their services. They have been given a substantial raise in salary, and the church furnishes the parsonage. Furthermore, the members supply them with eggs, cream, etc. The church is considering a building program, which will very likely include a church building and a parsonage. A parish house has also come under consideration. The church now has a system of cottage prayer meetings. This plan was adopted because the members are scattered far and wide apart. So the meetings are rotated from section to section. Friday night is used for this service.

—Rev. Sam J. Goering has arrived safely in England. According to a telegram received by Mrs. Sam Goering from M. C. C. headquarters on January 21, Rev. Sam Goering has arrived safely in England. The telegram also stated that he had already met with some of the M. C. C. relief workers in England.

—Kismet, Kansas: Please, address all business matters pertaining to the Pleasant Valley Mennonite Church at Kismet, Kansas, to Henry Stoll, Kismet, Kansas.—Mrs. Mary Langacher, Corr.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

Deep Run—The Annual Fellowship Supper will again be held at the Plumsteadville Grange Hall on February 12.

Fairfield—The Community Christmas Eve Communion Service was held in Zion Lutheran Church. The Church held its fellowship dinner and annual business meeting after the morning service, January 7. On Sunday morning, December 31, a very good radio had been placed in the church to listen to the memorial service conducted by the Rev. J. B. Baker, in his church in York, in honor of the late Mr. C. H. Musselman. The poinsetta plants in the church were presented in memory of Mr. Musselman, by Mrs. Luella Musselman Arnold.

Lansdale—The Bluffton College girls' gospel team brought a fine program at the watch night service on New Year's Eve. The quartet sang several numbers and Maynard Shelly spoke. Rev. Paul R. Shelly of the Bible department, accompanied the group. There were four weddings within one month and five births during the same period. Patricia Gail, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert VanSciver, surely was a New Year's baby, having been born at 3:00 a.m., January 1. Mr. and Mrs. Ulysses Myers have legally adopted the children, Jean and Ronny, they have been caring for for several years. The Myer's never had children of their own, but, besides these two, have reared two other children. The Church, at its annual meeting, decided to adopt the 100 Per Cent Plan for our conference paper, The Mennonite. We believe this is the first church of the Eastern Conference to adopt the plan. (If there is another, the Conference Correspondent will gladly make the correction if you notify him.)

Second, Phila.—The pastor plans to bring a brief message to the children every third Sunday of the month. A cantata by the choir and a candle-lighting service brought the Christmas services to a close on Christmas Eve.

A special candle lighting service remembering all the boys in the service, was held at 6:30 o'clock, Christmas morning. Fifty-four young people of the Church have their names on the Service Flag Honor Roll. Of this number, six have been honorably discharged.

Germantown—Mr. DeWitt Temple, who is in the service for almost three years, was home on his first furlough recently. Sunday, December 24, the entire family worshipped together in the church. DeWitt has been very active in the young people's work of the Eastern Conference. Saturday, January 6, he was united in marriage to Helen M. Foy. May God grant that the war may soon be over so that these young people may enjoy the comforts of house-keeping in their own home.

Perkasie—Fifty-eight bars of soap were collected and three bundles of clothing were packed for the MCC recently. During the year, the Ladies' Aid and Mission Society sent two hundred pounds of excellently prepared garments to the MCC at Akron. This is a fine record for one of the smallest congregations in our Conference.

Souderton—A total of $1,888.50 was presented for the various projects at the White Gift service this year. The gifts were as follows: Library Fund, $800; Nurse Fund (Old Folks' Home), $650; Bluffton College, $350; War Relief, $25; Orphanage Fund, $25; Boy in India, $25; Christmas Gift for men at Frederick, $10. At the Workers' Meeting of the Sunday School held January 10, it was decided that the balance of the $180 that remained in the Mission Fund be used in the new Mission Field of Puerto Rico.

Springfield—The annual congregation and Sunday School meeting was held in the Richland Grange Hall December 28. A covered dish lunch was held before the meeting. Rev. George F. Held, missionary to the Jews of Allentown, preached in the Saucon Church December 24.

Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, pastor of the Swamp Charge, comprising Flatland, Quakertown, and West Swamp churches, had several very pleasant surprises during the celebration of his tenth anniversary as pastor. Wednesday evening, November 1, the C. E. Societies of the charge gathered in the West Swamp Church Sunday School Room, while the regular Midweek Bible study was in session in the Church auditorium. After the meeting, the pastor received a nice amount of money to purchase a pen and pencil set. Sunday evening, November 12, the second surprise took place. This time in the Quakertown church. The pastor announced the selection by the choir, but the choir remained silent and seated. Then Deacon John K. Boorse came forward and asked the pastor to come down from the pulpit. He then read a letter of appreciation for services rendered and was given an envelope containing a hundred dollar check.

Allentown—At the annual congregational meeting held January 8, it was decided that beginning the second week of September, we have services every Sunday morning. A proposed plan was suggested to the Churches of Zionville and Allentown by the

Rev. Franz Albrecht
Rural Route 1
Beatrice
Nebraska

Joint Council and was adopted by both churches. The service in Allentown will begin at 10:45 every Sunday morning. The Sunday School will start at 9:30. At the Workers' Meeting of the Sunday School it was decided to give $25 to Christ Rescue Mission, Bethlehem, Pa., $25 to the Community Children's Home, Quakertown; $25 to the American Sunday School Union, and $50 to the Foreign Mission Board for the Post War Rehabilitation Fund.

Zionville—The Bluffton College girls' quartet rendered a fine program in the church on New Year's Day evening. Miss Griselda Gehman, member of the church and member of the club, presented the message. The Church services beginning next September will be held before the Sunday School, every two weeks in the morning, at 9:15 o'clock.

VOLUME LX

NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS, FEBRUARY 6, 1945

NUMBER 6

White Inside

By J. H. Langenwalter

Two generations ago men spoke of the "Negro Problem" with a great deal of concern. Later it was the "Race Problem" and now we speak of "Race Relations" as though that term were of primary importance. Terms and slogans often are suggestive but of themselves they help us little. All of the foregoing phrases suggest something very important in human relationships past, present and future. The solution lies beyond mere words.

Some forty years ago a young man was required to write a paper which was to pass muster before a rather critical committee of a college with a strong faculty. This college emphasized a classical education strongly and did not hand out the A.B. degree unless the faculty was satisfied that excellent work had been done. This particular young man chose "The Negro Problem" as his subject. The first question which was asked of him by one of his advisors was, "How many Negroes of achievement have you met personally?" He had met none thus far. He had read some of their books and articles in magazines and newspapers, but he had never met the writers. He was then asked how many members of the black race he had learned to know at all. He had not learned to know any individual colored person in a really first hand way. Then he was asked why he had undertaken to write on "The Negro Problem." His answer was that he was interested in the outcome of what seemed to him one of the most important human problems facing him as a young man about to enter upon his life's career. He was allowed to go on. He had learned a very important lesson. In order to solve a problem you must get at the heart of that problem.

The heart of a human problem consists of human beings. Meeting Booker T. Washington, when he was forty-five years of age, revealed a number of important facts. He was human. He was very earnestly committed to the problem of teaching his race to learn to help itself against heavy odds. Not all leaders of his race agreed with him. That did not make him bitter. He had just recently been maligned slanderously. He met so trying a situation as that by being a real man. He knew that there is no defense against persons who stoop to slander and gossip, and he wasted no time worrying about it, though he must have felt the wrong keenly.

He was gracious to meet. He had little time to spare, but he gave of that liberally to a youth of whom he had never heard. He answered questions in a straight forward way. He wanted to be considered as a man more than as a person belonging to any particular race. He was hopeful but not visionary. He left one feeling that all that one knew of a problem at the beginning was only enough to get one started in the right direction.

Booker T. Washington has been gone for thirty years. Yet he lives on in those who knew him and in such books as, Sowing and Reaping, Up from Slavery, Future of the American Negro, Character Building, Story of My Life, Working with Hands, The Negro in Business, and The Man Farthest Down.

Dr. W. E. B. DuBois was found to be a well-schooled man. He was more than that. He was a widely-read man and one who was a careful, as well as close, student of human nature. He had a quiet reserve which made one feel that there were great depths behind the exterior which one met at first. He had worked hard for scholastic recognition, given reluctantly to him, not because of his ability, but because of his race. He showed the spirit of a real helper by forgetting his own troubles and by trying to guide one who was trying to find a solution of a problem far beyond him.

His The Souls of Black Folk characterizes the man and is worthy of being read by every one who is willing to make an honest approach to an understanding, not only of the real possibilities of the members of one race, but of the human race as a whole. If you have not read it, get it and read it wondering what you would write if you were in the author's place.

Dr. DuBois is still living and active at an advanced age. His life has not been spectacular but it has been and is thought provoking and helpful.

The life of George Washington Carver, who died only about a year ago, is fresh in the memory of people because of his contributions to the well being of all. There is no excuse for being ignorant about the life of this great man with two such books as George Washington Carver by Rackham Holt, and George Washington Carver by Basil Miller. It is interesting that both books should have the same title—simply the name of the man whose life they depict. You cannot describe a life like that, you must meet it. To have known him does something to one. His greatness of character, his humility, his hunger for understanding, his love for the Truth, and his untiring desire to serve for the good of all mankind left no room for prejudice and smallness of soul in his presence.

More intimately known was W. L. Hutcherson, a Young Men's Christian Association Secretary, of Wichita, Kansas, for a number of years. He died as the result of an accident in the midst of a busy and fruitful life. The auditorium at Camp Wood is a fitting monument to him.

He felt the limitations set for his race keenly. He appreciated the sense of justice on the part of the few greatly. He also wanted to be treated as a human being without reference to the incident or accident of his birth. He thought straight, worked hard, and played fair. He asked as much of others, whether black or white. He was often disappointed in members of both races, but he kept on.

These four men lived "within the veil" by accident of birth. They were black on the outside. They were white on the inside. Therein lies true greatness!

Meditations on the Mennonites

MENNONITES AND SOCIAL CONSCIENCE

In the Mennonite Church we have all heard a great deal about conscience. What is conscience? The word comes from the Latin verb CONSCIRE—to know. It means to know the moral goodness or badness of one's own conduct or motives, together with a feeling of obligation to do right or be good. It has often been said that conscience is the voice of God speaking through us. Washington is said to have admonished men to "labor to keep alive within you that little spark of celestial fire called conscience." There is such a thing as a group conscience as well as an individual conscience. A group of persons may know moral goodness and badness of its conduct or motives just as an individual person does. In the collective or group sense it is generally referred to as social conscience.

A Time of Sensitivity

Among Mennonites the concern for high personal, moral, and ethical standards has always been great and is something to be modestly grateful for today. But there was a time when the Mennonite Church, as a church also had a very sensitive social conscience. It was alive to the social evils of its day; it spoke out like the prophets of old against the injustices and the immoralities of its time. In Europe Mennonites were among the first advocates of separation of Church and State. This meant opposition, on grounds of principle, to a political State controlling religious life. The Mennonites were early pleaders for religious toleration, that is the right for an individual to worship God when and how he pleased. The Mennonites have been among the earliest and most persistent pleaders of the doctrine of Christian non-resistance which is a plea for Christians to see the inconsistency between following Christ and taking part in war. In America, Mennonites were among the first to lift their voice against the injustice and inhumanity of slavery. In times past the Mennonite Church had a social conscience and it expressed it at the cost of life, liberty, and property.

Where Is It Today?

But what has happened to the social conscience of the Mennonite Church? If she has a conscience against social injustices and moral and religious corruptions it is exceedingly difficult to detect. If she has spoken out against the great unethical and unjust social practices of our day, I have failed to discover it. Japanese-American citizens by the hundred thousands were ruthlessly torn from their homes and families and hoarded into desert concentration camps by the United States Army. Many of these people were active Christians in Pacific coast churches. Jews by the hundred thousands have been uprooted, dispossessed, hunted down, shot and abused like criminals. Negroes have been openly discriminated against ever since any of us can remember. In the titanic struggles between the forces of labor and management in which our people are participating there has not been a single pronouncement. As a Church we have been annoyingly silent. Has the Mennonite Church lost her ethical sensitivity? Has she no aroused conscience when her fellowmen suffer from injustice and selfishness? Can she in the name of Jesus Christ go on saying, "Lord, Lord," and not do anything about these things?

RIGHT RACE RELATIONS

We believe that a very effective way of bettering race relations is to provide an inspiring example by utilizing the opportunities which may lie right at hand.

One Such Example

The evening of June 9th was a beautiful Kansas evening. People were hurrying into the stately Memorial Hall at North Newton. Negro girls ushered the people to the seats of their choice. Soon over 1,500 people had gathered.

They had come together for a concert of sacred and classical music featuring Ruthabel Rickman, coloratura soprano—violinist—pianist, with Elvira B. McWilliams—reader. Program posters had stated among other facts: Ruthabel Rickman . . . a member of the Newton Colored Methodist Episcopal Church . . . graduated from Bethel College in 1941 . . . member of the National Honor Society . . . one of Bethel's seniors elected to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities . . . has won many honors for her achievements in music, including recognition in the National Hall of Fame of a Music Teachers National Association in New York City . . . was a member and soloist of the Bethel College a cappella choir and has participated in concert tours in many states . . . Her gracious manner and her genuine friendliness, together with her fine talents, have endeared her to all who know her."

The enthusiastic reception given to Ruthabel Rickman and Elvira B. McWilliams showed that the evening's program had not been overdescribed on the posters, in the newspapers, over the radio, on the post cards sent to surrounding ministers. It was a beautiful program. The rare Christian personality of Miss Rickman, together with her talent in voice, violin, and piano, and the very fitting readings of Mrs. McWilliams, deeply satisfied those who had come.

How had this wholesome, inspiring program come to Memorial Hall? Perhaps, it started with the way in which a Mennonite firm in Newton had sold and serviced stoves, washing machines, etc., to white and colored alike without the least discrimination. It seemed quite natural that when members of the Colored Methodist Church faced the problem of raising money for church improvements that they should call upon a member of this firm who seemed to understand them. In this meeting it was decided to abandon the idea of getting a popular negro artist to Newton for a money-raising project. Why couldn't Miss Ruthabel Rickman, one of their own members be featured? Rent a modest hall in Newton? No, why not make it a larger, community-wide event and come to Memorial Hall?

And so it came about that Bethel College planned the advertising, while members of the C.M.E. Church sold tickets, ushered, and gave the program, the net proceeds of which went to the C.M.E. Church for the purchase of pews.

How did the colored people feel about this get-together for wholesome entertainment? Let some of them tell you: Mrs. E. W. Roberts says, "It seems to me that any occasion which brings the better element of both or perhaps all races together must create a force of goodwill. Certainly the concert sponsored by our Board presenting Miss Rickman was such an occasion." Mrs. O. Ethridge suggests, "I'm sure the recital given by Miss Ruthabel Rickman was a step in the direction of goodwill between the races. I will also add that meeting together to arrange such programs is a great help." Mrs. Theodore Rickman thinks, "Such appearances as this by Miss Ruthabel Rickman and Mrs. McWilliams do much to promote mutual appreciation and mutual understanding between the races." Rev. F. E. Nunley, Pastor of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in Newton and now taking a ministerial course at Bethel (see youth page for picture), states, "The recital of Miss Ruthabel Rickman and Mrs. Elvira McWilliams, that was given last spring . . . served in bringing together both races. Such occasions help greatly toward the solution of the race problem. We say problem, but it is more a misunderstanding than a problem. We can not love when we don't understand. There is no room for hate where there is a mutual understanding. There is no understanding where there is no getting together. I will say further on the understanding of races, which stands in our heavenly path, that a mutual understanding has been given a fair trial in large groups. To really understand there must be some primary grouping to feel that we are friends and more than friends, we—are brothers.”

Miss Rickman is now studying voice under Solon Alberti, noted music teacher of James Melton and other artists. Miss Rickman, who herself gives private lessons in piano and voice, is also choir soloist of the Park Avenue Christian Church. Furthermore, every Sunday morning after she is through singing there, she dashes by subway to a large colored Methodist church to direct its choir. Solon Alberti is very enthusiastic over the talents and character of his pupil.

It is our belief that those people who helped to make the Ruthabel Rickman program a possibility and a success did more for right race relations in the long-run than if they had high-pressured some prejudiced person to accord grudgingly some measure of formal fairness to colored people. Each one of us can be a light unto others.

Some More on the Subject

Members of the Wings Over Jordan Choir were much impressed when after their program on a Mennonite college campus, they were entertained for two nights in private homes on the campus. This was different from handouts in an alley or using a freight elevator to get to their Sunday morning broadcast. No wonder that Glenn T. Settle, the director, remarked that he would surely like to retire on this college campus, where you have the essentials, Christian homes, a Christian school, and a Christian Church, and where you put faith into action. When a college representative protested that not all was so rosy here; Rev. Settle, with a knowing smile, replied, “Yes, I know all that, but compared to the rest of the world—” Is not such a feeling of at-homeness a good example of right human relations?

HOME MISSIONS

A NEW TYPE OF WORK

Rev. and Mrs. Henry A. Toews and children had been in Africa for some time. They had been doing missionary work. War conditions made it necessary for them to return. They are at home with Mrs. A. T. Wiens, 4221 South Rockwell Street, Chicago, 32 Illinois, Mrs. Toews being a daughter of Mrs. Wiens. For some time they have been wanting to return to Africa. Application for passports had been made. While waiting Brother Toews worked at different places. For about five weeks he substituted for Rev. John T. Neufeld, his brother-in-law, at the Mennonite Bible Mission, while Rev. Neufeld was helping in the “Bible Institute Visitation Program.” During the Christmas mail rush he helped in the Chicago Postal service.

While he is waiting for the passports, the plan was formulated that Rev. Toews devote his time to personal work, or as it is often called “Seel-sorge,” in Cook County Hospital, Chicago. There is great need for this type of work, but hospitals do not have funds to engage a person for this spiritual work. The Home Mission Board felt that in this way we could do something for the spiritual welfare and salvation of such who need this ministry. We will let Rev. Toews tell his own story how he got started in this work.

“Color Makes No Difference”

After going in circles for the first part of the week, trying to get through with the red tape to get permission to work in Cook County Hospital, on Thursday afternoon (January 11) I finally met the Warden (General, as he is called). He gave his O.K. for me to begin my work. So on Friday morning I began my work. I was assigned to the men’s building which has about three hundred beds. The hours that were assigned to me were 9:30 to 11:00 and 1:00 to 4:00.

The first day I visited only ten patients. Maybe you wonder why so few? I had decided, and had also been instructed to that effect, namely that whatever work I undertook to do, to do it thoroughly. On the first day I had the blessed privilege to lead a soul to Christ. The party happened to be a colored man. After conversing with him a while I found out that he was not a Christian. I asked him if he didn’t want to make a definite decision for Christ and settle the matter while he could. He said, “Better now, than never.” So I pointed him to the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world, and tried to make the way of salvation as clear as I could. Of course we prayed together and after instructing him in the Scripture I left him, and have not been able to see him again, as he was discharged soon after that experience.

Among other people that I visited was one man who had accepted Christ at the Pacific Garden Mission, here in the city. He was very new in his Christian experience and had but few friends. He was very glad to have fellowship with someone, so I spent quite a bit of time with him explaining certain Scripture portions and answering questions that puzzled him. When I left him, he said, “I’m so happy that you came I feel much better and much stronger in my faith because of this talk with you.”

Any Special Support?

Are there any churches, Sunday School classes or Christian Endeavor Societies that desire to support this work with a special gift? If so, mark it “Personal Work” or “Seel-Sorge,” when sending it to General Conference Headquarters, P. A. Penner, Treasurer, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas.

What Is the Church?

By Lester Hostetler

We must be clear, in the discussion of this subject, how we use the word "church." It may mean the building in which we worship as in the song "The church in the wildwood." Or it may mean the people who gather in that church from time to time for worship. Or it may refer to our denomination—the Mennonite church—with its history of four hundred years, its institutions, and local churches. Or the "church" may mean the universal church referred to when we repeat the creed, "I believe in the holy, catholic church," and when we sing the hymn "The Church's One Foundation." All of these are good and legitimate uses of the word. In this article I refer to the latter—the church of the living God represented by the body of Christians in all places—past and present—not confined to any denomination but including all God's people.

I

At least it is my view that the church extends beyond any denominational line. It is not restricted by geographical or racial lines. I believe also in the communion of saints, so that the church of which I am writing is composed of all living saints as well as those who have gone before. I am a member of the Mennonite church but I am also a member of the universal church and therefore the inheritor of all the Christian ages. I respect and honor the forefathers of our faith—the Mennonite faith. But being a member of the universal church, I also belong to the church of St. Paul, of Augustine, and St. Francis of Assisi, of Luther, John Calvin, and John Knox, of John Wesley, George Fox, and Jonathan Edwards. They belong to me. They have influenced, consciously or unconsciously, the stream of our denominational history, and I humbly and gladly claim them as my spiritual teachers. The truths they have emphasized are important and necessary to the enrichment of my faith as a Mennonite. I will not try to be as different from them or their followers as possible but rather to find as many things as I can that we have in common, knowing that the closer we are to Christ the closer we will be to each other.

Strangely enough, on some questions of theology and on the important doctrine of peace, I have more things in common with Stanley Jones, Kirby Page, George Buttrick, and other men in other denominations, than I have with those members of our Mennonite Church who have given up the doctrines of our Mennonite fathers in exchange for the teachings of John Calvin, Martin Luther, and others who believed in war. What is the church? My first answer is that it is the communion of saints and goes beyond all denominational lines.

We are happy to present the first of four articles on "What Is the Church?" We welcome reader comment. However, we reserve the right to decline publication without stating reason.

II

My second answer is closely related to the first. The church is the body of Christ and the temple of His spirit. The church is an extension of the Incarnation. It is the body of people whose work it is to carry on the work of Christ. It is a divine and holy institution. Not that it is perfect or ever can be, for it is made up of human beings. Their sins have been forgiven, but the effect of sin may still manifest itself and often does. A perfect church would be free from race prejudice; it would deal more fundamentally with our social and economic problems; it would make war forever impossible, and it would do far more than it now does to evangelize the world. But lack of perfection does not keep one from thinking of it as holy and divine. For it is built upon the perfect, divine foundation which is Jesus Christ, and it is committed to a divine and holy purpose which is to live as closely as possible to Christ and to perpetuate His teaching and spirit in the world.

The church is the body of Christ and must therefore be different from the world. But different in a significant way. A church in which there is no tension between it and the world is not a church and cannot well claim to be the body of Christ. The church must wage a battle against the world. But not a sham battle, the outcome of which can have no moral results. The military term is inescapable even with us pacifists, unless we content ourselves with seeing the devil have his way while we sit at ease in Zion. The church must hear the voice of Christ and proclaim it as her marching orders. It must speak its message in clear trumpet tones which are unmistakable from the voices of modern secularism. It must have a prophetic utterance that is relevant to our modern paganism.

What is the church? It is the communion of saints; it is the body of Christ and the temple of His spirit. And this leads to my third definition, closely related to the first two. The church is a fellowship of believers in Christ whose work it is to be salt to the earth and light to the world. Its members have warm sympathy and good feeling for each other and are held together by common interests. "The multitude of them that believed were of one heart and soul," we read in Acts, "and all that believed were together . . . and day by day continued steadfastly with one accord in the temple and the breaking of bread at home . . . they took their food with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God and having favor with all the people?" Fellowship is not always as vital in the modern church as it was in the days of the early Christians. A critic of the church has remarked that "a city church is made up of people who do not know each other and do not want to know each other; whereas, a country church is made up of people who know each other and are sorry they do." But again, human weaknesses in no way change the fact that the church is, ideally, a fellowship.

It is a fellowship, however, that is unique. Service clubs, secret societies, farm organizations also have fellowship. So do the members of the C.I.O. and of the American Legion, and a thousand other organizations which seek to promote the common interests of the members. But the fellowship of the church is different. Its purpose is far greater than mutual aid or cooperative insurance, or cooperative production and distribution of goods. Its fellowship is more than that of social groups which meet for recreation—to eat and drink and talk their time away. The fellowship of the church is based on the common conviction that Jesus Christ is Lord, and the common purpose to worship Him in the beauty of holiness and to proclaim the evangel. No other organization shares completely its purpose. If it aspired to do so, it would promptly become a church.

I have suggested in broad outlines what the church is and what it is for. Let me close with a brief statement of what the church needs. We need a much more effective education in the Christian teachings and way of life. We need to apply more widely the spirit of Christ to the social and economic order of which we are a part. We need to proclaim, in season and out of season, the message of peace and good will among nations. And we need to strike a lost chord—lamentably lost in our Mennonite church—the chord of Christian unity.

I believe in the church, whether the word refers to the place of worship, or the brotherhood of believers who constitute the local congregation, or a denomination, or the universal church. A house of God is necessary. It is the most important building in a community. Its architecture, its arrangements and furnishings, and its appearance should set it apart as a place of prayer and praise, beloved by the people. I believe in the local congregation, whether it represents a large city church or a handful of believers that meet in the most humble building by the country cross roads. These local groups are the salt in any community and loyalty to them is of first importance. I believe in the denominations, the facets of Christian truths which they have emphasized and kept alive, and the variety in types of organization and worship which they have fostered. I believe most of all in the "holy catholic (universal) church" and that the hope of the world lies in the message she is authorized to proclaim.

*For not like kingdoms of the world,
Thy holy Church, O God!
Tho' earthquake shocks are threat'ning her,
And tempests are abroad,
Unshaken as eternal hills
Immovable she stands,
A mountain that shall fill the earth,
A house not made with hands.*

The Religious Life Program In C. P. S.

By Albert M. Gaeddert

This area of CPS remains our basic concern. Our position is based upon our faith in God.

Considerable thinking is being done (and much needs to be done) on the problem of reabsorbing the men into the home congregations. Much counseling is needed for this vital area of our concern.

Our needs are becoming increasingly demanding for a ministry that serves over a longer period of time in a camp or unit. A Sunday preaching service, especially when directed by a different minister every Sunday, is not the most effective unless the minister can stay on for several days and counsel with the men. After a longer period of acquaintanceship the camper is ready to talk about his deepest and most vital problems to the minister. Capable ministers could, therefore, perform a most worthwhile service if they could give four to six months to serve two or three camps and nearby units. If the minister and his wife could live in the camp it would put them in a good position to do pastoral work with the men in camp and with the wives of campers who live nearby.

More recently we are approaching this problem from another angle, namely, that of using a camper to assume responsibility for the religious life program in a camp or unit.

Various conference groups have been sending their representatives to the camps to make their services available to the entire camp and to minister personally to members of their own conference group. One such group undertook a combined visitation program of the camps and churches in an effort to bring closer together the campers and the home churches.

Regular services are scheduled in all camps and units, both for Sunday and during the week. The regional director, together with the camp directors and unit leaders, schedule ministers in advance. Plans are underway to schedule ministers for religious emphasis series in camps and units in an attempt to lift the spiritual tone of the campers.

The Reader Says:

Love, The Greatest Force

Editor, The Mennonite:

For me the article "Not So Non-resistant" by Carl Landis had a great thought and contribution on the subject of "Biblical Nonresistance." This viewpoint of "Nonresistance" at certain times is entirely too passive and inactive. In my three and one-half years of camp and hospital experience I have solved very few problems by with-drawing and doing nothing about them. James writes, "Resist the devil and he will flee from you." We cannot be passive to the evil in the world and do good. We must resist and try to destroy the evil influences in the world. In trying to destroy these evils we must save human life, for no evil is so great that life has to be destroyed. Luke 9:56, "For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them." What good is Christianity if it doesn't withstand the evils in social, political and economic fields of life? Is it only something to take to church and worship on Sunday?

Nonresistance has a great deal to offer us in pacifism but it does not have a solution for all the problems. Only Christ is the Truth, and we as Mennonites share with other denominations small truths of that great Truth. To me the best form of pacifism is found in "Redemptive Love." It is far superior to Nonresistance and non-violence. In it there is a positive action rather than a negative one. Christ had this love when He was being reviled and persecuted. His prayer, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do" is what we need today.

We must be "resisters" not "non" but "positive." We must be "moral resisters." If we do not stand for the moral principles and issues in life, what right have we to acclaim ourselves Christians? A few of the moral principles and issues are found in purity, honesty, and decency. This is character building, and this character must be exemplified in action in all phases of life. The emphasis of "doing good" must be emphasized. We must be peace-makers, but we will never be peace-makers if we withdraw and become passive to the evil. I must resist the evil by the greatest force I know, and that is "love." Paul writes, "Let love be without dissimulation, abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good."

Our contribution to mankind will be measured by what we do, whether we take the method of nonresistance, nonviolence or redemptive love. They all have something to offer us in our Christian life. May we strive to win souls for Christ, that good-will and peace might reign in the hearts of mankind.

Sincerely yours,

Dave Anderson

Case Studies In Evangelism

The following is an abbreviated account of the conversation between a young lady and one of our conference Christian workers. In writing about this incident this worker states: "I never had a greater joy in my life than to lead this bewildered, young lady to the Lord. The simplicity of becoming a Christian had never before been presented to her. The last news I heard about her was that she is rejoicing in the salvation provided by Christ Jesus. She is now married and living a happy Christian life."

"Can you tell me how I can be saved?" thus asked a young girl hardly out of her teens. Then she continued "The one says: 'Do this,' the other 'You must join my church.' A third tells me that I must be baptized by immersion and then peace of heart will come. Still another says, 'You must observe the Sabbath instead of the Sunday.' The Russelites say, 'Come join us and you will be saved.' Uncle Joe, I am bewildered and am restless; I have no peace. Can you tell me how I can be saved? I do want forgiveness and I do not know how. Can you help me?" Thus spoke Miss R. in the agony of her soul to Uncle Joe.

"Yes" responded Uncle Joe, "I think I can help you if you sincerely seek forgiveness of all your sins."

"How?" reponded Miss R.

Uncle Joe answered very simply "No particular church, no form of baptism, no Sabbath observance can save you. Jesus Christ alone can do this, if you obey Him."

"How?" again came the eager question.

Uncle Joe went on: "Listen, 'Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out' You are not coming to Uncle Joe but to Jesus with this question. Be sure of this, you are coming to Jesus with a heart hunger; He hears you and He is right in this room and will not send you away."

"I see," said Miss R. "Lord Jesus, here I am and You will not send me, a poor sinner, away. What next?"

Uncle Joe again turned to the Scriptures: "Listen, 'If thou shalt confess with thy mouth Jesus as Lord,—that means Jesus as Savior and Lord—and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved! Now believe and confess Jesus as your Saviour and Lord. Tell Him right here before me that you believe that God raised Him from the dead and you ARE saved."

Miss R. responded as directed by Uncle Joe and was saved right then and there. "Yes, Uncle Joe. I see it—it is all so simple—I am saved—I know I am saved. Thank you." Thus it was that Miss R. found the answer to her question.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Karl Friesen

February 11—“And the Lord said, I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry . . . for I know their sorrows; and I am come down to deliver them.” Exodus 3: 78.

When God said this to Moses, Israel was in great tribulation. They did not know that God observed everything and that He cared. They did not know that God was even then taking steps for helping them and had a man in readiness. Yet so it was. And the same God is ours in this day of fear, of trouble, of sorrow, of calamity. He knows all about your burden and grief and hears your cry. His promise is, “Call upon me in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee and thou shalt glorify me.” (Psalm 50: 15)

February 12—“Have faith in God” Mark 11: 22.

All good things come to us as gifts from God’s loving and bountiful hand. Many of them He bestows upon everybody alike. But many of His gifts are made dependent upon faith. This is so with God’s choicest gift, the gift of eternal life in His Son Jesus Christ. God is offering this gift; faith is the act of appropriating it. Faith is taking God at His word. It pleases God when man believes what He has said. Abraham believed God and it was counted unto him for righteousness.” (Rom. 4:3). “By faith Enoch was translated . . . for he had this testimony, that he pleased God. But without faith it is impossible to please Him.” (Heb. 11:58) Therefore “Have faith in God.”

February 13—“Ye ask and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts.” James 4:3.

Prayer for selfish reasons and for satisfying sensual desires does not have God’s approval and, as a rule, remains unanswered. If it is answered, the results will be as with Israel: “He gave them their request, but sent leanness into their soul.” (Ps. 106:15) These warnings are given to emphasize the importance of learning how and for what to pray. “This is the confidence that we have in him, that if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us” (I John 5:14).

February 14—“We know not what we should pray for as we ought.” Romans 8:26.

This clause alone would be a discouragement to prayer. But who has not already sometimes felt his weakness and utter helplessness in prayer? Yet God wants us to pray. And every true Christian wants to pray. But our only help lies with God. So when we cry out, “Lord, teach us to pray,” and practice what the Scriptures teach us about prayer, we shall experience the truth that, “Likewise the Spirit helpeth our infirmities, for we know not what we should pray for as we ought: but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered.”

February 15—“The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.” James 5:16

Can prayer help? This passage in James’ epistle says it can help both the sick and the sinning. The power of prayer is illustrated with the availing prayer of Elijah, first for a drought and then for rain. Both of his prayers were heard. For our encouragement we are reminded that “Elias was a man subject to like passions as we are,” but that his prayer of faith was answered. O Lord, give us faith.

February 16—“And he spake a parable unto them to this end, that men ought always to pray and not to faint.” Luke 18:1

Our Lord wants His own to “pray without ceasing” (I Thess. 5:17). What does it mean to pray always, or without ceasing? Surely, for one thing, to observe regular seasons of prayer. For the Israelites there were appointed definite hours of prayer. Do we have them? It means also to be always in a prayerful attitude. Nehemiah illustrates this perfectly, when he prayed (in his heart, surely) before answering the king’s question (Neh. 2:4). It means, thirdly, that we should not get tired of praying when the answer is long delayed. That is the point in this parable. Therefore, “Pray without ceasing.”

February 17—“Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need.” Hebrews 4:16.

When Isaiah saw the Lord on His throne in all His holiness, he was completely overwhelmed and cried out, “Woe is me: for I am undone.” But through Christ’s finished redemption, God’s throne, which otherwise must have been to all a judgment seat, has become, to all who believe, the throne of grace. So we are now invited to come boldly. Everybody may come and obtain mercy. Oh that in these days of stress and anxiety everyone would come boldly and find grace to help in each particular need.

They Are an Asset to the School

By Helen Hiebert Mueller

One of the best ways to learn about people of other nationalities and races is to live and work together with them. An opportunity to become acquainted with young people of other groups has come this year to the students of Bethel College and, in a more general way, to the young people of the Western District.

In the fall six students from other groups enrolled at Bethel. Three were Japanese-Americans: Sam Komerita, Shuzo Kato, and John Kanno. Their home had been in Seattle, Washington, until 1942 when they, together with other Japanese-Americans, were relocated at Hunt, Idaho. Through the help of the National Japanese-American Student Relocation Council these boys were able to come to Bethel. Rev. Floyd Nunley, pastor of the Colored M. E. Church in Newton, enrolled as a special student. Teddy Risingsun, an American Indian from our Mennonite mission station at Busby, Montana, enrolled in the Mennonite Bible Academy. George Flasschoen, a Belgian, came to this country through the work of the United States Committee for the Care of European Children and came to Newton, where he last year attended the Mennonite Bible Academy. This year he is enrolled as a college freshman. Two of these boys, Sam and Teddy, have been drafted and have left school. Two other Indian boys from Montana have enrolled in the academy for the second semester. They are Junior Bites and Sylvester Knowshisgun. All of these young people are happy to be here, and they are an asset to the school.

We are thankful for this opportunity of learning at first-hand something of the backgrounds and interests of these friends of ours. We like to remember, as we associate with them, that we are learning some of the things which will help us to improve the relationship between various racial and cultural groups. We like to remember, also, that God made of one blood all nations and that He had in mind that they should live together in peace and harmony. We are happy that these friends have come to help us realize the very truth of this fact. As we live together and play together, as we work together in the classroom or at other tasks, may we feel the bond of brotherhood uniting us each to the other and God's Fatherhood over us all, so that we can truly pray "Our Father," knowing that it means that we are

“Saying It with Flowers” in a War Relocation Center

Long wooden buildings, covered with tar paper, barrenness, dust, and isolation all constituted a prominent part of the Tule Lake War Relocation Center in the late winter and spring of 1944. Eighteen thousand uprooted people had been herded into the restricting confines of this camp. It did not seem very homelike to people who had been used to beauty and growing things.

In this camp was a young Mennonite woman, who had come there to teach and share life with some troubled people. The barrenness of the environment and the tragedy of it all seemed to sweep the color out of life. But there was the appeal of childhood in those two classes of first-grade youngsters, that were “hers.” What could she do to brighten their school and home life? And in the mind and heart of this Christian teacher there evolved a plan for saying something with flowers. She relates:

“It all started in January when school actually opened on the 23rd and I could really make plans for my two first grade classes. For Mother’s Day I thought there couldn’t be anything lovelier to give than a blooming geranium. So we decided we’d have to have a green house, built out of orange crates and scrap lumber. The soil I had to get from the farm since the lake bed will not grow things. The children brought cans from the mess halls, punched holes, painted, and filled them just so—then watered and cared for them. However, our biggest problem was to get the geranium slips. I thought of the armloads of slips we could get at Reedley for the asking—but how to get them was the next question. I thought of Aunt Martha and knew she would be glad to do it; then I thought how it would be an opportunity for some group of girls, so I wrote to Helen Penner, religious leader at our church at that time. She immediately wrote back saying that the Sunshine Girls would be glad to do it. They gathered over a hundred geranium slips, besides Wandering Jew, etc. It took the box over a week to get here, so you can imagine the condition they were in. The lady who is an expert on plants didn’t think we’d get them to grow at all, but with patient care we did get forty to grow. We grew at least twenty-four different kinds of flowers and plants. The nicest thing we had was the bright blue morning glory which not only brightened the room but the outside too, for the high school children, parents, workers, etc., would make a special trip to our windows, stop, look, and then go on.

The geraniums did not bloom by Mother’s Day, but by the end of the semester many were ready to burst into blossoms! I let each child choose one plant to take home; the rest we kept for summer school. I can’t begin to tell you the many things the children learned through the project (and I too).”

When this teacher was asked as to what attitude the Japanese-American children took towards those who had sent the geranium slips, she replied: “The children, of course, were very happy to get the slips. Outside contacts mean a lot to them since they cannot go outside the fence. Every kindly act from the outside gives them a greater sense of security.”

The teacher went on to say, “You should have seen the expressions on my little pupils’ faces when I told them that the May baskets with candy I was handing to them were made and given by little black girls and boys from Indiana. One little boy said, ‘Oh, boys and girls like Little Black Sambo?’ Outside interest is always very much appreciated.”

And so she said it with flowers, but she found other opportunities to be a friend. Men and women, torn from their accustomed tasks, looked for something through which they could express their artistic ability and creative energy. Out of thousands of small shells, gotten from the dry bed of Tule Lake, and out of wood, they fashioned lapel ornaments, corsages, brooches, etc. Shells were polished and painted and used in the most intricate designs. The products were very attractive, but where was there a market? The Mennonite school teacher thought and planned. The end result, a Mennonite mission society, composed of girls of high school and college age, became interested in the products and sold about $180.00 worth of them. The teacher now reports that she is so swamped with orders from various places that she cannot accept any more for a while. Also in this way she has said something to a people lonesome and frustrated in this "land of liberty."

Farewell from Dr. A. M. Lohrentz

Brownsville, Texas,
January 22, 1945

Dear Relatives and Friends in U. S. A.,

It is with mixed feelings that I sit down to write this note as the time for departure draws near. The Lord has graciously led thus far, and am confident that He will do so on the journey as well as at work.

I have appreciated all your kindness shown me, and the many well wishes expressed have been accepted with a deep feeling. If we have sought His Kingdom and His Righteousness, then I'm sure these blessings and well wishes exchanged will not be in vain. May the Lord watch over us while we are absent in body from each other, but united in Spirit.

My plane will leave 9:30 A. M. Tuesday, Jan. 23, 1945, 9:45 A. M. provided the schedule can be carried out due to weather and other conditions.

With kindest greetings to all,
from A. M. Lohrentz, M. D.

RELIEF

Sam Goering in England

The arrival of Sam Goering in England was certified by a cable announcing that he has been conferring with Glen Miller and J. N. Byler. Brother Goering will assume the directorship of the London Center and the Mennonite work in England. Brothers Miller and Byler are expected to return to Akron Headquarters sometime in early February.

Relief Workers for Paraguay

Waldo Hiebert with Mrs. Hiebert left for Paraguay by plane from Brownsville, Texas, January 16, to begin two years of relief service as teachers in the Bible School at the Fernheim Colony. Their departure is in response to a request for teaching assistance.

A. M. Lohrentz followed the Hieberts from Brownsville on January 23. Dr. Lohrentz is giving a year of specialization in eye, ear, and nose service among the Mennonite colonists.

Mrs. Elvin Souder, R. N., her daughter Jane, and Elizabeth Keeney are leaving from New Orleans the last week of January. Sister Souder will join her husband at the Mennonite Center in Asuncion.

The nutritive feeding program, to be set up by Miss Kenney for Paraguayan school children, will begin at Itacurubi, a town near the Friesland Colony. Her work will be a "thank-you" service to the Paraguay government for allowing Mennonites to establish homes in Paraguay.

Menno Klassen, Altona, Manitoba, has been appointed for two years as an agricultural expert to the Mennonite colonists.

Visits La Plata Project

O. O. Miller spent January 9 to 18 at the La Plata project in Puerto Rico. This is Brother Miller's third visit to Puerto Rico. His first visit was in fall of 1943. His second visit was on his return trip from Paraguay in the summer of 1944. He was accompanied on this trip by Sister Miller.

Nurse Again on Duty in El Shatt Hospital

Grace Augsburg, R. N., was hospitalized from New Year's Day until January 8, ill with jaundice. She became ill the day preceding the second Mennonite conference of our Middle East relief workers in Cairo. Correspondence indicates that she is again at work in an El Shatt camp hospital. Marie Fast and she recently were working together on a pediatric ward.

C. P. S.

Mississippi Project to Open in February

The C.P.S. Public Health project, near Gulfport, Mississippi, will open February 1. Several assignees from the camp at Mulberry, Florida, will assist in getting the camp started. From among eighty-five volunteers, the first nineteen men for the new camp have been chosen. Five additional men will be selected soon, and later the unit will probably be expanded to include forty men. CPS men at this camp will work with problems of hookworm eradication by the building of sanitary privies and the improvement of water supplies. Some swamp drainage and screening of buildings may be carried out for control of malaria.

E. J. Swalm to Visit Mennonite Camps

E. J. Swalm, Duntroon, Ontario, elder in the Brethren in Christ church and author of Nonresistance under Test, has been scheduled to visit Mennonite camps during the months of February and March. He will spend most of his time with the camps and units in the Mid-West and Rocky Mountain areas, but will also visit a few of the base camps in the East. He will carry out a spiritual ministry to the camps in a series of visits and messages with the Christian life emphasis. May we remember Brother Swalm and his mission to the camps in our prayers.

CPS BRIEFS

Authorization has been received to increase by twenty-five men the C.P.S. unit at Marlboro, New Jersey State Hospital. This increase will bring the unit strength at this mental hospital up to 100.

The C.P.S. unit at the Alexian Brothers Hospital, Chicago, Illinois, is composed mostly of men who are interested in relief work in China. The unit was recently expanded by the addition of fourteen men from M.C.C. camps and equal numbers from other agencies. Classes in both beginning and advanced Chinese language study are conducted.

MENNONITE AID NOTES

Mennonite Aid Given Work of Colonization Board

The M.C.C. at the 1944 Annual Meeting acted upon a proposal from the Mennonite Board of Colonization (Newton, Kansas) that the Mennonite Aid Section assume the duties and functions formerly assigned to and performed by the Colonization Board. The proposal was accepted and the work involved assigned to the Mennonite Aid Section.

Organization of Mennonite Aid Section

The Mennonite Aid Section has been further organized. The consultative group for this Section, composed of representatives from the various cooperating groups, is now designated as the Mennonite Aid Section. An executive committee of three members for the Section has been elected as follows: H. A. Fast, chairman; C. L. Graber, vice-chairman; A. E. Janzen, secretary.

Further Work of the Mennonite Aid Section

The work of this Section was further outlined at the M.C.C. Annual Meeting in light of the assignment of the work of the Mennonite Colonization Board. Besides a continuation of the work for the rehabilitation of C.P.S. men, the Section is planning to study the needs and probable solution for resettlement of Mennonite war refugees and displaced peoples. In this work the Mennonite Aid Section will cooperate with the Canadian Mennonite Board of Colonization. Further interest in and study of Mennonites in Mexico is to be continued.

IN MEMORIAM

Bertha S. Haury, daughter of Daniel and Anna Strohm Haury, was born May 11, 1879, and died January 9, 1945. Baptized by Rev. Christian Krehbiel, she was received into the membership of the First Mennonite Church, Halstead, Kansas. While a student at Bethel College, she became seriously ill. She suffered much during the next forty-four years, but she acquired a wide knowledge of the finer and greater things of life and inspired many toward more wholesome living. Four brothers, Dr. Richard S. Haury, Newton; Albert P., Hutchinson; Carl F., Halstead; and Dr. Paul G. of Lewiston, Idaho, (now in New Guinea); and four sisters, Mrs. Stella Rupp, Moundridge; Mrs. Ella Langenwaller, Gulfport, Mississippi; and Misses Laura and Irma of the home, remain of the father's family.

CORRESPONDENCE

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Reedley, California

A fine group of high school boys and girls are availing themselves of the opportunity for Bible study following the Wednesday evening choir practice.

Our new Sunday School rooms in the new addition to the basement are finished and are being used. They are very pleasant light rooms, a great improvement over the old crowded ones.

We are looking forward to some additional new classes, now that room has been made available.

We had an interesting and blessed week of prayer. Different organizations of the church were responsible for an evening. It was very gratifying to see how the young people of high school age took part.

Beginning January 28, we expect Brother J. M. Franz to be with us for a series of meetings.

Women of the Mennonite Churches in and around Dinuba and Reedley canned over 3,000 quarts of fruit. This church canned 1068 of these and also sponsored the collecting and shipping of dried fruit to the camps.

A special day of remembrance for men and women in the C. P. S. and other government camps was observed. A special news sheet was prepared to which the families and the boys themselves were invited to contribute news items. This was in conjunction with a special day set aside throughout California.

The Men's Brotherhood is planning on having a supper served to them once a month by the ladies of the Worth While Circle. This will give the ladies a chance to make some money to be used for missionary purposes.—Vida Weinbrenner, Corr.

BUHLER MENNONITE CHURCH

Buhler, Kansas

On the evening of January 1st we had our annual business meeting. During the past year, according to our pastor's report, ten members were received by baptism, and eight by letter. Seven members died and sixteen, having moved away had their membership transferred to other churches. That leaves our present membership at 324.

Numerically we have not increased in church membership, but our Sunday School attendance has steadily increased. A decided growth of interest is being manifested in all church activities. That is an answer to prayer, and we praise the Lord for that.

The evangelistic meetings conducted by Rev. P.P. Tschetter during the first week in January were well attended. The messages were brought in the power of the Spirit, and we know that they will bear fruit. We combined our prayer meetings with these services. Our hearts were moved for renewed consecration and for more witnessing power for Him who gave His life for us.

What a privilege to have God's precious Word preached to us so abundantly, not only on Sundays and at special meetings, but also daily over the radio. If only more would avail themselves of these blessings. Will anybody have an excuse that he did not know the way of salvation? God grant that by our daily living we may witness for him that others might be led to accept the Lord Jesus as their Savior.

BERGFELDER CHURCH Mountain Lake, Minnesota

On December 6, 1944, the semi-annual church business meeting was held. A goodly number of the members were present.

At the December meeting of the King's Co-workers Society, twenty Christmas Baskets were packed and distributed. The mild weather of the evening added to the enjoyment.

A Christmas program was given on the evening of December 25, 1944, by the younger classes of the Sunday School. The real meaning of Christmas was vividly portrayed to the large audience in song, dialogues, Bible verses, etc.

New Year's Eve was opened with two services—Sylvester Abend service, led by our pastor, Rev. August Ewert, from 8 to 9:30 o'clock and Watch-night service, sponsored by the C. E.

Prayer week was observed the first week in January. Topics were discussed both in the German and English languages.

Rev. H. N. Harder, from Geary, Oklahoma, the main speaker for the Bible Conference sponsored by the local Bible School, was our guest speaker at the morning service on January 21. His sermon "The Christian Life, a Holy Warfare" was based on II Cor. 10: 3-6.

The ordination of Mr. Herbert Peters as an evangelist shall take place at the morning service of February 4, 1945.—Corr.

BETHEL MENNONITE CHURCH Fortuna, Missouri

On January 4 the annual congregational meeting was held at which time the following resolutions were adopted: 1. That an offering be taken once a quarter and given to the C.P.S. men now. 2. That a committee consisting of the trustees of the church make arrangements to purchase the land west of the church. This is to be farmed by the members of the church, and the proceeds to be given for the work of the M.C.C.

Brother Warren Lehman has been elected and ordained as the deacon to succeed Rev. P. P. Hilty, who has served the congregation in this capacity for many years.

A mid-week study class has been organized under the direction of the pastor, Rev. Howard D. Raid. The class meets at the parsonage, and they are studying book six of the Mennonite Heritage series.

The Ladies' Missionary Society has added twelve new books to the church library.

The Community World Day of Prayer will be observed in our church February 16. —Mrs. H. D. R. Corr.

HOFFNUNGS AU MENNONITE CHURCH Inman, Kansas

"Some recent highlights of the Hoffnungsau Church near Inman, Kansas, are the following:

The church had some mountain top experiences during the prayer week. Monday, Wednesday, and Friday brought interesting and inspiring discussions on the topics set forth in The Mennonite. The communion service on the Sunday morning following, January 14, brought to a high level these experiences. This was the first of the three communions to be held during the year 1945. A very fitting way to close the old and usher in the new year was by the impressive children's consecration service on December 31. The sermon, addressed mainly to the parents of the children but applicable to all, was that of a sincere desire for the parents to dedicate themselves wholly to the Lord, if they expect their child to be a blessing in later life. Thirty-three children were "blessed." The church choir has been functioning regularly under the direction of Alvin J. Reimer, who recently received a Master's degree in music. We regret much Mr. Reimer's leaving us in the near future, but we covet the best for him in his coming service under the MCC. At the church's annual meeting, a decision was made to have a commemoration service for the church in the spring. It is now seventy years that the Hoffnungsau Church has been organized. There are some twenty church members above seventy years of age. The 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan was adopted at the annual meeting.

APOSTOLIC MENNONITE CHURCH Trenton, Ohio

The Apostolic Mennonite Church of Trenton, Ohio, held its annual congregational meeting January 21, 1945. As has been our custom regular morning services were held, at which time Rev. Amstutz delivered a very helpful message on "Prayer". A covered dish dinner was served at noon, and a social time followed until the meeting at 1:30. Various organizations gave their reports, which showed the financial status of all departments improved during the past year. Our church again adopted the plan to send the Mennonite to all its members. Rev. Amstutz gave a resume of his work during the year, followed by memorial services in memory of departed members and friends of the congregation. Rev. Amstutz read an interesting letter from Mrs. Rodolphe Petter, Lame Deer, Montana, sending greetings and telling of their work among the Indians. After the election of officers, the meeting adjourned by singing "Blest Be The Tie," Rev. Amstutz closing with prayer.

—Lydia A. Augspurger, Corr.

BETHANY MENNONITE CHURCH Freeman, South Dakota

On December 26, the congregation met for its annual business meeting. Rev. Louis Linscheid, who has served us for six years, was again re-elected pastor. Other officers were re-elected as follows: Deacon—J. M. Hofer; Trustee—Ernst Tschetter; Secretary—Andrew J. Hofer; Organist—Mrs. Oscar Gering; Choir Director—Prof. Gerhart Toews; Correspondent to The Mennonite and Bundesbote—J. M. Hofer.

In addition to the regular work connected with the church services, Rev. Linscheid also teaches the Catechism class, conducts the weekly prayer meeting, and is part-time instructor in Freeman Junior College. Mrs. Linscheid teaches the elderly ladies Bible Class.

On Christmas eve, the young people and children rendered the operetta "The Child Jesus" in the church, and it was well attended. Our young people have likewise organized a good choir with twenty-five voices.

The congregation has arranged for Passion Week services each evening during the last week in March, to be conducted by local visiting pastors.

The Happy Workers meet every third Friday in the homes of the members. — Corr.

Our Ministry of Education

By J. H. Langenwalter

THANK YOU FOR THOSE LISTS

To you, who have sent in lists of names of those who are in service and of their parents or others near in relationship of blood or friendship, we say thank you. You, who will do so in the near future, also have our gratitude. We are sending letters to those who have been called away, and we are not forgetting those who are carrying on so courageously at home.

We need both lists. The addresses of those in service change often. For that reason the "home list" is so important.

Your Board of Education is trying to bring helpful information and give encouragement in this way. We trust that this may also help to bring about a spirit of unity in the Spirit of Jesus who prayed and lived that all men might be one.

"A youth thoughtless! When the career of all his days depends on the opportunity of a moment! A youth thoughtless! When all the happiness of his home forever depends on the chances or the passion of an hour! A youth thoughtless! When his every act is a foundation-stone of future conduct, and every imagination a fountain of life or death! Be thoughtless in any after years, rather than now—though indeed there is only one place where a man may be nobly thoughtless—his death-bed. No thinking should be ever left to be done there."

JOTTINGS

CONFERENCES CONSIDER UNION

On January 24th and 25th six leading men of the Central Conference Mennonites met at the Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas, with General Conference officers and board members to consider plans for a closer affiliation of the two conferences. It was an exploratory effort. The constitutions of both conferences were studied with a view to discover what adjustments would be necessary for a closer cooperation in the various areas of service. The frank and open discussion of problems added greatly to the spirit of fellowship. Throughout there prevailed a spirit of Christian fellowship that was out of the ordinary. Several times it was mentioned that as soon as the churches can be made to feel this fellowship, our task will be finished. This spirit of fellowship was present even though many of our problems of organization are not solved yet. All who were present felt that considerable progress had been made toward a closer affiliation in the near future. In foreign missions and in education, we are already working hand in hand to a remarkable degree.

To acquaint our congregations with the leaders of the Central Conference and to let these leaders acquaint themselves with our churches, the men were taken out to mid-week services in various churches near Newton on Wednesday evening. Rev. Harry Yoder of Carlock, Illinois, who is the President of the Central Conference, spoke in the Inman Mennonite church. Rev. Allen Yoder, Goshen, Indiana (father of Harry), Conference Field Secretary and Vice-President of the Belgian Congo Mission Board, spoke in the First Mennonite Church of Christian in Moundridge, Kansas. Rev. Alvin J. Beachy, Secretary of the Mission Board and Vice-President of the Ministerial Association, served in the Eden Mennonite Church near Moundridge, Kansas. Rev. Raymond L. Hartzler, Bloomington, Illinois, editor of the conference paper The Christian Evangel and representative on the M. C. C., spoke in the West Zion Mennonite church in Moundridge, Kansas. The Hillsboro, Bruderthal, and Johannesthal churches had arranged for a union meeting. The two men who spoke there were Rev. Ben Esch, Washington, Illinois, president of their mission board and Mr. O. J. Sommer of Pekin, Illinois, who serves as Conference Treasurer.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE TO HOLD MEETING

Place: Y.M.C.A. Hotel, South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois.

Time: February 28, March 1-2, 1945.

The executive committees of the following boards: Home Mission, Education, Peace, and Relief, are planning for a meeting with a two-fold purpose.

1. To study the reports from the "Bible Institute and Visitation Program" held last fall, and to plan for future activities.

2. To consider the Fact Finding Committee report on their work looking toward a General Conference Mutual Aid program.

On the first day, each executive committee can meet separately and consider matters in its own board.

On March, at 9:00 a. m. the joint meeting is to be called together in the Director's Room of the Y.M.C.A. Hotel.

Almost a year ago the board named above were all agreed that the two projects be worked out.

We ask for your prayerful interest in this meeting that the Lord's will might be found in the further working out of the problems involved.

Very sincerely in Christ,

A. J. Neuenschwander, Sec.,
Home Mission Board

—Vote on Sale of Beer and Sunday Movies in Mountain Lake, Minnesota: "According to official announcements the questions to be voted on in the village election tomorrow are as follows: (1) Shall the showing of any movies on Sunday be legal in the village of Mountain Lake?, and (2) Shall it be legal to sell 3.2 beer in the village of Mountain Lake? Whatever our conviction may be on these issues, we believe that the Christian citizens of the community should express their convictions at the polls tomorrow. If we believe that the Lord would be pleased and that the welfare of the community would be promoted if Sunday movies and the sale of beer were discontinued, then we should vote "No." If on the other hand we believe that the Lord is pleased and the welfare of our youth is promoted by the continuation of these practices, then we should vote "Yes." Let us remember that while our ballot is secret before men it is not secret before God. LET US FIRST PRAY, THEN VOTE." —Bulletin, Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake —Bethel Church, Mountain Lake: The pastor is teaching a Sunday School Teacher Training Class. A nursery for the care of children during the morning worship service has been begun. Children up to four years may be left in the nursery. The church parlor serves as the nursery room.

—"The Mennonite Fellowship gathering at the Hamline Hotel in St. Paul last Sunday evening proved to be a real inspiration. One hundred fourteen persons registered as present at the meeting, and others came in later without registering. The majority of those present came from Mountain Lake, but some were also present from South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana, and Nebraska communities. A large percentage of these are of General Conference background. At present our conference is doing nothing to help our Mennonites in the Twin Cities spiritually. Have we neglected something there?" —Bulletin, Bethel Mennonite Church.

—Th Alberta Community Church, Portland, has contributed 330 pounds of clothing for relief.

—H. E. Dana, President of Central Baptist Seminary will speak in Buhler, Kansas, February 11-16. The ministers of Buhler arranged the services.

—Dr. P. A. Penner served the Buhler Mennonite Church and the First Mennonite Church, Newton, on January 28. January 30 he showed his moving pictures of India to the Student Volunteer group at Bethel College. On January 31 he spoke to the Mennonite Bible Academy, and in the evening he taught the Bible Class at the First Mennonite Church. On February 1 he spoke in the Baptist Church in Newton, and on February 4 he talked to the Sunbeams and Juniors in the First Mennonite Church, Newton.

—Rev. Donovan E. Smucker is to serve the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, from March 4 to 11 inclusive. He will give evangelistic messages in the evenings and will conduct Bible studies in the afternoon.

—Peacetime Universal Military Training: "A most important question that is receiving consideration in the halls of Congress is the matter of peacetime conscription. Being one of the historic peace Churches we would register our protest against such a militarization of our country. We believe it is contrary to the very principles upon which our Republic was founded. For many years the world has looked with alarm upon the militarization of the states of Europe, and we have seen with our own eyes that it has not brought peace and security to those nations, but rather a series of the most destructive wars.

For America to adopt the same tactics would mean the send-off for a world race of armaments in peacetime, the like of which the world has never known, and the outcome of which no one can forecast. Space here does not permit an array of arguments against the universal conscription of our young men, neither should such arguments be necessary.

It is needful, however, that we register our protest and bring it to the attention of our Senators and Representatives in Congress. Unless we do this we share in the responsibility of saddling upon our country a military scourge that may completely change the American way of life. More effective than petitions with a long list of signers are letters and post cards with a simple, straightforward statement of conviction in this matter." —Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California.

—The pastor and library committee of the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, recently visited the Western District Loan Library at North Newton and checked out some more books. The committee stated that high school youth show a great reading interest. The committee also purchases books for its own library.

—A total of 6,250 copies of The Mennonite were printed for this issue.

—Burrton Mennonite Church, Burrton, Kansas: The new Mennonite Hymnaries, which were presented to the church by the Richert family in memory of their parents, were dedicated in a special service on January 28. Rev. Lester Hostetler and Prof. Walter H. Hohmann, editors of the Hymnary, were the guest speaker and song director respectively. After the service refreshments were served as a token of appreciation to the Richert family. The church recently took 191 pounds of clothes, shoes, and soap to the clothing depot in Newton.

—The yearbook of the Johannesthal Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, shows a membership of 204. These members gave a total of $7,814.09 through their church in 1944. This makes an average of $38.30 per member.

—We welcome yearbooks from the various churches. We invite you to send a copy of yours to The Mennonite, North Newton, Kansas.

—First Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio: The M.C.C. Rooms of Bluffton, Ohio, have sent out, in the past year, 2,180 pounds of clothing, bedding, and soap valued at $1,253.00. A series of meetings have been planned at the First Mennonite Church in Bluffton dealing with the background, belief and work of various denominations of the Church. Rev. Kuhlman of Lima gave the first lecture of the series Sunday evening, January 21 on the Lutheran church. Next month a representative of the Reformed church will speak.—Mrs. C. Henry Smith, Corr.

—Correction: Receipt number 1581 for $1,973.38 in the recent report of the Board of Publication was not a contribution. It represented proceeds from the sale of the Canadian Gesangbuch.

—Rev. Earl Salzman of Upland, California, is preaching a series of evening sermons especially fitted for young people. A recent sermon topic was "The Formation of Good Habits."

—Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington: Rufus Franz, Regional Director for C.P.S., was guest speaker on January 21. After his morning message the church enjoyed a fellowship meal. After this Brother Franz answered questions pertaining to C.P.S. The morning love offering for Brother Franz amounted to $320.00. The pastor discussed the adult Sunday School lessons for the month of February on the afternoon of January 28. Members again brought lunches and stayed for the meeting.

—The Inman Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, is one of the churches which are already using the new, especially designed church bulletins produced by the Secretarial Bureau, North Newton, in conjunction with the Boards of Publication and Education. The bulletin of this church states that an offering was held for the hospital bill of one of the families. This amounted to $32.98. The Friendship Circle added another $25.00.

—The Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, is one more church that has adopted the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan. Rev. A. J. Dyck, Vice-President of the General Conference, is the pastor.

—The missionaries, Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger, Augusta Schmidt and Elinor Schmidt, left Lisbon, Portugal, on December 13. Rev. and Mrs. George Neufeld wrote from Lisbon on December 14.

—The Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington, gave a total of $2890.00 in 1944 for the work of the Boards of Publication and Education. As far as we know the Menno Church was the first to adopt the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan.

—The First Mennonite Church of Beatrice, Nebraska, has sent a copy of the following letter to the Nebraska congressmen in Washington:

Honorable Sir:

Assembled in session of its Annual Business Meeting, Thursday, January 18, we, the members of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, herewith humbly petition our representatives in Congress to carefully consider the dangerous implications of a permanent peace-time conscription before voting in favor of any such proposal.

We are fearful lest the scourge of wartime regimentation also fasten itself permanently upon our beloved country. We are convinced that the basis for an enduring peace lies in an application of and preparation for acts of love and goodwill toward all mankind everywhere, as it was taught and practiced by our Lord Jesus Christ.

Thanking you for your interest in preserving our country as a land of freedom, we are Respectfully yours,

Let Us Remember the Living

By J. H. Langerwalter

On February 19, 1865, Rudolphe Charles Petter was born in Switzerland. Eighty very eventful years have passed into eternity since then. Our friend, Dr. Petter, has not merely existed for a long time, he has lived greatly during these eventful years. We are glad that he is still alive, and we trust that he may be permitted to continue here as long as he can work with his usual pleasure and joy of achievement.

It means something to have been born in one of the oldest republics in the world and to have spent one's youth under one of the most democratic governments on earth. The grandeur and the beauty of the Alps and the wonderful scenery of Lake Geneva have been reflected into the lives of many through the beauty, strength and finesse of the character of our great Missionary.

Rev. Petter came from a small country with great ideals. He has profited by that background. He came from a country with three languages. He learned to use them all fluently, and four more. His life is a convincing evidence that people need not be afraid of each other because their backgrounds are varied.

As a young man, our aged friend had a dream. He wanted to help a people. His preparation for this service was long and thorough in the schools of Switzerland and of America. He felt called and chose to go to the Cheyenne Indians. Many thought of these native Americans as a dying tribe. Rudolphe Petter did not permit statistics to thwart him in the fulfillment of his dream. He devoted his life to the welfare of a people who had been grievously wronged by his own race. He has given his best to their welfare for more than half a hundred years. He has gathered their dialects into a language and has given them both a grammar and a dictionary for the same. He has translated portions of the Bible into Cheyenne. He has done the same with other valuable books. He has given his people a hymn book.

He has also taught them how to use and to value the great opportunities which have been brought to them.

Dr. Petter still dreams of how things can be done in a better way. Within a year he was working on a new revision of the grammar in order to help young workers in the field to have the best possible chance to do things in the right way. In spite of all the difficulties and deprivations he has met, he is still hopeful of seeing his dream come true in the lives of the Cheyennes, and of us! When one reads the statistics of giving in these days of easy money for some, one wonders what sums would have to be placed opposite our friend's name if that which was denied him were credited to him. He has not stood up for his rights. He has not lifted up his voice in public places when he was taken for granted. He has worked on and on. We have taken the credit for what he has achieved. Let us not wait until he is gone before we give him the kind word and the helpful deed which would have cheered even one so great as he, as he toiled along like a forgotten man.

Dr. Petter probably knows more about the Cheyenne Indians, and several other tribes, than anyone else ever has, and has done more for their real welfare. It cheers one to get the responses which come from government officials and from Indian boys in their teens when one asks them about our friend. The fine painting of Dr. Petter by a former agent at the station and the hearty and sincere, "Oh, he's all right," by a seventeen year old boy make one feel both grateful and humble. One is glad for the appreciation of these and for that of great scholars in the fields of languages and of a study of peoples. His books are found in many of the great libraries of several governments, as well as in the libraries of many noted institutions the world over.

This fine interpreter of the spirit of the Kingdom of God has grown old very graciously. It is a rare and valuable privilege to sit with him in his study and to catch something of that fine, untarnished enthusiasm which radiates from his personality. He needs few words to testify to the noble and fearless relationship which exists between him and his Lord. One feels more than one hears the greatness of the message which he has caught from the Great Teacher.

Dr. Petter is a real teacher in the finest sense of the word. He is unafraid of the truth. He does not allow the incidents of life to confuse him. He seeks the facts behind them. Then he studies these until he discovers their timeless values. He "digs" as hard as any gold digger ever did, but he seeks more than gold. He leads others to find the better way with an admirable patience. When they discover the truth, he shares their joy of achievement with them. That kind of attitude helps those who wish to learn more than they will ever know. Many of those who have benefitted by his helpful ways have taken him for granted, many more may do so because of human thoughtlessness. The Recording Angel is not forgetting him. Maybe some day we will wish we had not.

On February 19, 1945, Dr. Rudolphe Charles Petter will be eighty years of age by the calendar. How old he is in the sight of God only He knows. We thank God for our friend's helpful life!

CHURCH BULLETIN

Another development in church bulletins seems to be emerging. The Secretarial Bureau at North Newton, Kansas, in conjunction with the Boards of Publication and Education of the General Conference is planning a series of church bulletin sheets which will surely be of interest to many pastors, especially those who are either now using church bulletins on Sunday morning or those who are considering the use of such bulletins.

The first copy in the series has been issued and has several interesting features. An artistic border on the front page of a four-page leaflet, which is blank on the inside to provide for local requirements, gives an immediate appeal as it is placed in the hands of the reader.

The back page of the bulletin sheet has two outstanding features. Each week a brief write-up—different each week—concerning the work of the different boards of the General Conference is presented under the general title, "Know Your Conference." At the bottom of the page with an attractive illustration appears each week a little paragraph edited by Dr. Cornelius Krahn, under the title, "Beacon Lights from Mennonite History."

The Secretarial Bureau, upon the encouragement of the Boards of Publication and Education, is hoping that the major conference boards like the Board of Home Missions, the Board of Foreign Mission, etc., will undertake to furnish these weekly write-ups so that in the course of one year of fifty-two Sundays, Mennonite church goers will get a very fine overview of the work of the General Conference Boards and Committees.

A tentative estimate of the cost of this service seems to indicate that if fourteen or fifteen churches join in this service, the cost can be reduced to fifty cents per hundred sheets. The secretary of the Board of Publication has suggested that if these various conference boards would contribute toward the expense of publishing this series of church bulletins, the cost could be reduced to approximately twenty-five or thirty cents per hundred sheets. Even very small churches would probably find that this would not be too high to avail themselves of this service.

In this manner some phase of the Conference work comes to the attention of church members each Sunday. It comes to them at a time when they are in a mood and have the time to receive it. Particularly, it brings to the attention of each church goer, who does not subscribe to our church publications, an insight into the large and precious heritage which we have received from our forefathers.

Already, five or six churches have placed their orders, and it is expected that other churches will cooperate.

Inquiries may be directed to the Secretarial Bureau, North Newton, Kansas.

A WORLD DAY OF SURRENDER

Many Christians throughout the United States will observe February 16 as World Day of Prayer. The significance of this day will largely be determined by the quality of the prayers that will ascend to God. We believe that the importance of this day will be in direct ratio to the extent that the prayers offered will be a surrender to God. The more unconditional the surrender, the greater the importance of this day.

Christians can make this a great day by following out the implications of a certain Christian's statement that prayer is essentially surrender. Let Christians stop ordering God around like an errand boy, and let them yield to God so that His will may be done on earth as in heaven. God doesn't have to be coaxed to change conditions in this world. He is willing; let the Christians become more willing to do the right. Make February 16 a day of unconditional surrender to God.

What might happen as the result of such a surrender? Love would have its way and not hate and murder and destruction. For surrender to God means surrender to Love, for as John says, "God is love." But may not love compel us to do something to others that is for their good and yet is resented by them? We doubt it.

Someone has defined love as "a vital concern for the welfare of another personality." But how can we determine what is the "welfare" of another? We believe that to press an apple into a neighbor's mouth for health reasons while he vigorously objects to such a procedure is not promoting his "welfare." An infant's protest against medicine does not invalidate this point, for the infant cannot reason. Welfare includes mutual consent. There can be no high-pressure methods in it. If we know that someone does not care for a good gift that we might give him, we can hold that good gift in abeyance and give him something good that he is ready to welcome. This circle of real fellowship can then be enlarged until it may take in that good gift which was not desired in the beginning.

Let welfare be so defined, and then let it be promoted with a vital concern, and conditions will become more heavenly in this world of ours. For we believe that vital concern suggests something like giving as much thought and spending as much energy planning for the welfare of others as for our own. Jesus taught "Love thy neighbor as thyself."

Christians can make the World Day of Prayer a transforming factor by making it a day of unconditional surrender to God, who is Love.

POSTWAR CONSCRIPTION

Large church groups throughout the United States have voiced their opposition to the adoption of postwar conscription now. The following is the first part of a resolution approved at the Biennial Meeting of the Federal Council of Churches last fall:

The Congress and the people of the United States are now considering the possible adoption of legislation providing for postwar military conscription. The Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America recommends that the Congressional action on this matter be deferred until after the war. The churches believe that the peace should establish procedures for controlling military establishments everywhere. To this end the Christians of many nations are now directing their energies. They are doing this not only in obedience to conscience but also because the war aims of the United Nations as defined in the Atlantic Charter anticipate the establishment of a permanent system of general security and encourage "all other practicable measures which will lighten for peace-loving peoples the crushing burden of armaments."

"I WANT TO PAY FOR MY SUBSCRIPTION"

Recently while in the Mennonite Publication Office for a bit, I noticed that a number of people came in and said, "I want to pay my subscription for The Mennonite." The words had a wholesome tone of promptness and thoughtfulness. They further suggested that the individual believed in carrying on business in a Christian way of owing no man anything. At the end of the old year and at the beginning of the new year, a great many readers of our church papers take care of their subscriptions for the coming year. Their action is inspiring.

MONTHLY FELLOWSHIP MEETING

A small church group in Kansas has a "Fellowship" meeting every month. The meetings are rotated from section to section so that most of the members of that group can attend one of these "Fellowship" meetings at least once a year. A goodly number of the pastors attend most of the meetings. A number of them speak at the meetings which begin on one evening and continue through the next day and evening. Thus the lay members have an opportunity to become acquainted with many of the leaders and the leaders with one another and with the people of the various communities. These meetings do seem to foster a definite sense of fellowship in this church group.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

LETTER FROM PAUL AND ADAH WENGER

(The following letter was written from Lisbon, Portugal, on November 15, 1944. It arrived here January 6, 1945. Parts of the letter are here omitted.)

The Lord has been very gracious in bringing us thus far on our journey. We have been in Lisbon two days less than two weeks, and our prospects of sailing are still good though the date has changed several times. The latest date is November 30. Over one hundred missionaries are now waiting here. Some have been here for about two months before we came, and we were seventy-one on the Colonial, and three boats have come in since from the U. S. A. We are almost equally divided between Africa and India with a few going to Iran and Iraq.

Hotel Qivoli has heat in it; some do not. We are near the main section of the city. There are many wonderful things of historic value and many beautiful parks to see. Enough English is spoken so that we can get most of the things we want and can get around to places of interest. The Portuguese people are very polite and kind to us.

The shops are full of the things which are scarce at home—aluminum ware, tin goods, watches in super abundance, silk goods, etc. Many cars are run by charcoal gas, and many cars can be had. Shop windows are full of radios and cameras. In fact, you can get most anything if you have plenty of money. About the only thing that is cheaper than in America are the many Swiss watches.

It was a great privilege to be on a boat with so many missionaries. We had a Bible study service every weekday morning and an evening hymn sing together.

We attend the Scottish Church here in Lisbon for the morning service and the Plymouth Brethren at 4:00 P.M. Both services are in English, and we have enjoyed them very much.

We hope to be in India by mid-January. Tom Hill was teaching a class in Hindi on the boat. Elinore was doing very well in this class. At first Adah and I were in converted third class, but we were soon moved into second class. Food on our boat could have been better; no choice of menu with fish twice a day. Other passengers from other Portuguese boats reported better food. We wish we had brought our own postum, tea, or instant coffee. Adah was the only one of us who was not sea sick. The smells of the ship were very bad. Augusta fared the worst.

Transportation is getting scarce because the government is taking over many of the ships. The missionaries going to Africa, as yet, do not have too good prospects. The hotel accommodations are quite good, but the food has plenty of fish. We are paying about $2.80 each for board and room. The climate must compare favorably to our section of India. They raise oranges and bananas, and it never freezes although the wind can get very raw.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE FOREIGN MISSION BOARD

The Lord willing, our Board will begin its meeting on February 21, in the Memorial Hall, North Newton.

We again ask for the prayers of our mission friends, because big problems are before us. Our many prayers for an open door in Columbia have in so far been answered, that the door is open for other mission work than that among the children of lepers, because the Catholics claim this as their field, and the government sustains this claim. This open door encourages us to continue in our prayers that the Lord may show us the exact place where he wants us to work, which may even be another state in South America.

Then may we not forget our missionaries who are interned. Many American missionaries are already liberated, and we hope for ours the same.

We thank the Lord for our many faithful mission friends, who uphold the work with prayer and gifts, which the past year have been more liberal than ever, as the Treasurer's report shows.

TO SERVE IN AFRICA

Rev. and Mrs. Elmer J. Dick are to go to Africa as workers of our Conference under the agreement that the Board of Foreign Missions has with the Congo Inland Mission. They served the Bethel Mennonite Church at Lustre, Montana, for about two years. Now they are awaiting passage to Africa. Cut courtesy, "The Congo Missionary Messenger"

What Is the Church?

By J. Winfield Fretz

This question calls first of all for a definition and a description of the fundamental character of the Christian Church. It is well to remind ourselves that Christianity emerged out of Judaism. In the synagogue the young were taught the traditions, customs, beliefs and religious practices of the Hebrew religion. The vocabulary, the ideals, morals, as well as the general pattern of church organization of the first Christian churches, were all strongly Jewish in nature.

The First Churches

The Christian Church is not a product of the New Testament but rather the New Testament is a product of the early Church. The term "church" is used only twice by Jesus. It appears in Matt. 16:18 and is used in the sense of the Church universal, and again in Matt. 18:17 where it is used in the sense of a local congregation. The first churches were organized around a central idea and were held together by a spirit. The central idea was that the Church was composed of men and women who together believed that Jesus was the Saviour of the world, the Redeemer of men, the long awaited Messiah. That which bound them together was the divine spirit that resulted from experiencing the new birth in Christ.

The early Church did not have a theological system. It testified only to the fact that it had "a Way." Paul in Acts 24:14 said: "I follow a way of life they call a sect." This "Way" had been taught by Jesus and His life was the literal demonstration of it. The first Christian churches were primarily composed of people of the lower economic and social classes. "The common people heard Him gladly," (Mark 12:37). Paul says "Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called," (I Cor. 1:26). This is another indication that the early Church was not so much interested in a theology as in "a Way" of life and "a Way" to attain salvation. A theology is a science or a systematic explanation of God and the early Christians were not primarily interested in that. They, like Jesus, accepted God as a loving Father as a matter of faith. They were primarily concerned with being good disciples, in following Christ's way and doing God's will.

Vigorous Fellowships

"By their fruits ye shall know them," said Jesus in Matt. 6:16, and the most characteristic fruit of the early Church was the development of many small, vigorous Christian fellowships. These fellowships were composed of people who were spontaneously enthusiastic about their newly discovered faith. The love which they showed toward each other was so impressive that it attracted many unbelievers to the Church. The character of the early Church was determined not by its size nor its place of meeting, but by its being in Christ. "Where two or three are gathered together in my name there am I in the midst of them," (Matt. 18:20). The first Church was concerned with a qualitative rather than a quantitative membership.

The early Church was as much concerned with demonstrating the gospel as it was in teaching and preaching it. This meant an emphasis on doing good and being good as well as believing rightly. This test of a good church member is reflected in one of the later New Testament writers who says: "Hereby we know that we know Him, if we keep His commandments," (I John 2:3).

Early in the Church a simple organization was effected. Deacons and elders were chosen to look after the poor, the widows and the needy in the local congregations. Mutual sharing and bearing one another's burdens was the accepted practice. The standards whereby material assistance was given seem to have been each according to his ability and each according to his need (Acts 2:45; 4:32-37). The early Christians met frequently in each other's homes and broke bread and worshipped together.

In subsequent centuries the Church grew mightily in numerical strength, in material riches and in political power. It developed a gigantic ecclesiastical organization which at times dominated the political State. It increased formality in worship service, it developed elaborate theological doctrines and lengthy creeds, its religious leadership became professionalized to the point where clergy and laity became two distinct classes. The Church became a worldly Church, interested more in worldly power than in spiritual purity. It was against this situation which Protestants protested and among the most vigorous of the protesters were the Mennonites.

What Is The Church?

The essential nature of the true Church is still that which it was in the first century. It is a body of adult believers in Christ who as individuals consider themselves His disciples and as a group form a Christian brotherhood, a community of saints. In all things they are guided by the ethics of love as revealed by Christ. The members of the true Church not only believe in sharing the good news of the Gospel but also their material blessings and their personal experiences whether of sorrow or joy. The basic nature of the Church must still be qualitative rather than quantitative. Its members must love each other so sincerely that they can forebear one another's weaknesses, aid each other in overcoming error, and inspire one another through deeds of sacrificial service and a ministry of love wherever it is needed.

In every generation the Church has had to struggle in order not to lose sight of its essential nature and to retain its Christ-like qualities. Men have always been tempted to try to improve the Church by introducing worldly means. Secularization, sophistication, professionalization, and materialism have threatened to divert the Church from its true function and its divine calling in every age.

These influences are surely threatening the church today. They have already made deep inroads into large segments of the body of Christ. The true Church must have the love of Christ at its center, not a theological creed or a particular set of doctrines about Christ or the nature of God. The individual member in the Church must be no less a devoted disciple than the minister. The Church must teach that men are justified not alone by faith but by the fruits of their faith. It must teach that all men are given by God an inner light and a free will by which means they can respond to the will of God and His plan of salvation; that Christ calls men to strive after perfection, not moderation; that Jesus is the living Christ who still speaks to men today through the instrument of the Holy Spirit.

The Church of Christ has no place for compromise either with the State or within its own membership. It must think of itself as a minority and for that reason constantly in conflict with the majority. This results in a permanent tension. The individual and the group within the Church must recognize that discipleship is not necessarily popular, convenient, or comfortable. Discipleship means a constant struggle for righteousness. The modern Church has frequently failed to recognize this fact. That is why it can be so comfortable in a corrupt society, so indifferent to injustices, so compromising with the world, and so hesitant to administer any form of discipline to its own members who openly defy the teachings and principles to which the Church professedly subscribes. The modern Church fails to exercise discipline because it prefers a large church to a pure church, because it decides many basic issues on grounds of convenience rather than conviction.

In summary it would seem that the modern generation of Christians should seek to build the kind of a Church that its Founder and Head intended and for which His disciples and earliest followers established patterns and principles. The Church still is the body of Christ whose characteristics are more spiritual than legal. The organization of the Church should be as simple as possible to permit efficiency in promoting its function. Perhaps more small churches should be organized rather than large memberships sought and spiritual rather than numerical strength coveted. Theology should be minimized and discipleship encouraged. The ministry should resist becoming professionalized and in that way set apart from the laity. Adult baptism should be administered on the basis of religious conviction in order to develop a spiritually mature Church whose members can be held accountable for their conduct and action. Discipline should be exercised for the sake of strengthening both the wayward and the upright. Christian behavior and dress should be modest and the standards of living in keeping with appropriate Christian humility and simplicity. The Church still must be "the Way." The true Church is the richest kind of a human fellowship and it must manifest itself as a holy community and as a leaven in an unholy society.

"PUERTO RICO-LAND OF SUNSHINE AND NEED

Rev. William H. Stauffer, Sugarcreek, Ohio, has written a sixteen-page pamphlet about this island, where many of our C.P.S. young men are serving in health and education work.

The writer is a keen observer and good at description of this island, which has more people living per square mile than any other island of the Caribbean Sea. In 1941 Kansas had approximately twenty-six persons living per square mile. Multiply this by twenty and you can imagine how many live per square mile in Puerto Rico. Consider that the surface is mountainous, and the food and health problem can well be imagined. The greatest need, however, is not food, health instruction, but Jesus Christ.

This very interesting booklet of sixteen pages is illustrated with carefully selected pictures.

The Board of Home Missions has published this booklet, and the Women's Literature Committee will handle the distribution. Orders can be sent to the Secretary, Mrs. A. J. Neuenschwander, Quakertown, Pa. Cost three cents per copy.

Yours for a wider mission interest,

A. J. Neuenschwander, Sec.

The Educational Program in C.P.S.

By Albert M. Gaeddert

A new development in the educational program this year is the arrangement for ten-day institutes during the summer month. Professor Klassen from Bluffton College was used in a number of camps and hospital units to conduct ten-day institutes in art, ceramics, and crafts of various kinds. Likewise, John Thut, now on the relief field in England, toured the camps, staying ten days at a camp to give instruction in music appreciation and assisting in conducting and organizing choruses and quartets. At a number of camps he also rendered vocal solo programs which were greatly appreciated.

Early last winter the Farm and Community School was held in the Hagerstown, Unit IV, camp. Four similar programs have since been started; one each at the newly acquired Lincoln farm units, one at the Lincoln agricultural station unit, and one at the Terry, Montana, camp. Campers interested in returning to their communities to farm and to assume responsible roles in the home, the church, the school, and in community activities were selected for these units. The aims for these programs are the following:

1. To live the life of Christian discipleship, stewardship, brotherhood, and non-resistance in all of our farm and community life.
2. To appreciate the values and opportunities of present-day Christian community living.
3. To render effective Christian service in our present C. P. S. project and community.
4. To make the project work and the unit life an educational experience of the school.
5. To learn better methods of caring for the soil.
6. To learn more efficient methods of farm operation and management.
7. To discover ways of making the farm and community life more enjoyable.

Two units are giving special emphasis toward preparation for Christian service. At the Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, hospital a group of seventeen men is gathered for this purpose. At Hagerstown Farm Unit IV another group of thirty, likewise, is gathered in a similar interest. In C. P. S. there are many men who feel an increasing sense of responsibility to serve in the local church as consecrated lay members. This study program will seek to prepare men with such interest for more effective service. Although designed to meet the needs of the larger group who will be workers in the church, it will also serve as good background for those men committed to full-time Christian service. Resource leadership is available from nearby schools and churches: Grantham College, Eastern Mennonite School, the Akron headquarters, and Mennonite ministers serving churches nearby.

At Marlboro, New Jersey, hospital unit a study group on Psychiatry and Christian Service is gathered. Here is a place particularly adapted to learn psychiatry and its applications to members of professions as well as to the laity. Again resource leadership is available from churches and schools nearby. The objectives are:

1. To prepare as active laymen to be of greater Christian usefulness to the community.
2. To assist those who are not fully decided to enter the field of medicine, psychiatry, teaching, or other professional service, to make a definite vocational decision.

Considerable interest is expressed in work that can be taken for credit. Provisions to meet the needed arrangements with colleges and academies for accrediting of courses have been established. Roy Umble has recently been added to the staff at the Akron office. His main task will be that of a liaison officer between the colleges and the C. P. S. educational program in matters relating to the accrediting of courses completed in C. P. S.

The regular educational program in the camp is giving special emphasis to Biblical instruction this winter. Ministers who can give a week of directed Bible study are being scheduled.

Another emphasis is project education. Under approval of Selective Service a man is carried full time on the technical agency overhead to give project instruction both on the job and off the job. Usually this man is also in charge of a strong safety program. The hospitals have similar courses which deal with the treatment of the mentally ill or with psychiatric nursing, or with the study of case histories with patients as subjects. Another emphasis which we are working on just now is that of giving to each camper newly assigned a thorough orientation to the camp situation. A twelve-day period is allotted for this during which time emphasis can be given to project training, First Aid, Mennonite Heritage, and to the study of the implications of our non-resistant position.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Elbert Koontz, Beatrice, Nebraska

FEBRUARY 18—“Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in His sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin.” Rom. 3:20. In these words Paul is telling us something that we are all aware of when we stop to think. This is the fact that a law system of whatever kind can only be a failure. The breakdown of the Jewish law was the most complete just because it was the best. It stood as a monument in history, revealing the right and condemning the wrong, heaping up the pile of human guilt, and nothing more. Paul tells us that all the law could do was to bring only a knowledge of sin. Paul would not have us destroy the law completely, for it has its purpose. But there is something more that is needed to be justified in His sight. That something more is the New Law that Christ brought into the world, and the acceptance of it and of Christ Himself.

FEBRUARY 19—“I am crucified with Christ: Nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.” Gal. 2:20. Yesterday we spoke of living by the law and how Paul tells us that law could bring only a knowledge of sin. He said that the law needed to be supplemented. Here in these words he gives us the secret of living. Paul would have us note that life is given by God, and the true life is given only to those who are in Christ. The critical moment in any man's life is not bodily death but the moment at which a man comes to be in Christ. When this happens we need have no fear of bodily death. Paul tells us we must die daily and let Christ in our lives anew each day. That is the secret of living and of living above the law. This new life in Christ gives not only a knowledge of sin, but it supplies the power to overcome the sin of which the law only makes us conscious.

FEBRUARY 20—“So built we the wall; and all the wall was joined together unto the half thereof: for the people had a mind to work.” Neh. 4:6. As we think of the activities of the past days and the accomplishments that have been made, these words come to us, “for the people had a mind to work.” Some are forced to work, and it is not much to their liking. Others work willingly. In these days of tumult and hate it is the business of Christians to work willingly to build a wall of Christian love and brotherhood around the world. As those men of old kept watch on the wall day and night while it was being built, may we, too, watch and pray for the completion of the wall that will alone bind all men together.

FEBRUARY 21—“What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?” Mic. 6:8. Here in this one verse are set forth the requirements of God that all the prophets were speaking about in their cry against the sins of the people and the things that they felt would save the people from total destruction. From his home Micah could see the armies of the various countries marching along the sea on their way to destroy another nation. Then he would see them come back with their crippled and maimed. He, along with the other prophets, felt that this was not the way. He cried out that the Lord requires people to be just, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with God. These requirements of God sound easy, but let one try to practice them and it is quite evident that the requirements of God are not child's play. It takes a real man to live up to His requirements. If anyone thinks the requirements of God for man are easy to follow, let that man try sincerely to follow Him in all aspects of life.

FEBRUARY 22—“From the end of the earth will I cry unto thee, when my heart is overwhelmed: lead me to the rock that is higher than I.” Ps. 61:2. In these words we see that the Psalmist had fears that are similar to ours today. He was afraid of his enemies. He was afraid that he might be destroyed by them. Everywhere he looked he saw danger and insecurity. In this condition we hear him cry out in prayer, “Lead me to the rock that is Higher than I.”

One day Bramwell Booth went to his aged father, then groping for sight, and told the old General that the doctors said they could do no more for his eyes. “Do you mean that I am blind and must remain blind?”

“I fear it is so,” said Bramwell.

“Shall I never see your face again?” asked the old man.

“No, probably not in this world.”

The General moved out his hand until he felt and clasped the hand of his son. He said, “God must know best. Bramwell, I have done what I could for God and the people with my eyes. Now I shall do what I can for God and the people without my eyes.” There is no fear in love, but perfect love casteth out fear. This fear that the Psalmist had in his enemies and the things about him were cast out when he relied upon that rock which was higher than himself. That rock is Jesus the Christ our Savior, who proved to us that perfect love does cast out fear—even the fear of death.

What Should the Young People's Union Do?

By William Juhnke

The term, "young people" is used here to mean our youth of about college age or in the younger draft ages—approximately from eighteen to twenty-six. In trying to define an action program for the young People's Union it seems basic (1) that unity is primary and (2) that our young people take part in the Y.P.U. and should run it as an "auxiliary" of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America.

As a college sophomore attending his first full-time session of the Conference, I was amazed at the extent of the effort of our branch of the Mennonite Church. That was in Upland, California, in 1935. It was then that I sort of stumbled into an initial interest. A depressing observation, which has since grown into somewhat of a conviction, was that young people take little interest in the conference as an organization, in its efforts and enterprises. For where were the young people? Does their absence suggest the need of a special organization for them?

The conference of 1935 was deliberating on problems of missions, education, publication, relief, pacifism, doctrine and conduct, and one problem that I recall vividly: "What should young people read?". I remember that a college professor waxed bravely eloquent speaking against including in the recommended list Kapoot, by Carveth Wells. The result: the professor won and Wells lost. Well, well, this was anything but dull.

Problems of mission extension to Indians took a realistic and challenging turn when the Sudermans appeared with a truck load of young people from the field. One of these young people said earnestly, "Pray that my father may accept Christ." Another plead, "Pray for my brother and sister . . ."

I learned that a special meeting for young people was to be held in the San Bernardino Mountains after the conference. Good!

William Juhnke served as Secretary-Treasurer of the Y.P.U. from 1939 to 1941. He has also been very active in the young people's work of the Western District, having been president of the Western District C. E. Convention from 1939-1940 and from 1942-1944. Furthermore, he founded the Western District Tidings and served as editor for a number of years.

It was at this, August, 1935, young people's meeting that a very significant decision was made:

"Contributions to young people's work be encouraged so that all districts may unite in sponsoring some definite project."

Unity of young people thus became something to be worked for. There was some hope of attaining it. Unity was to be a necessary means to an end—helping

NO UNITY THEN

The first secretarial report of the Y. P. Committee (August 26, 1933) stated:

"As Secretary of the committee I haven't any minutes to report since no meetings were held in the four-year period. An effort was made to secure something definite in the way of statistics . . . but . . . results were very incomplete. . ."

others through cooperative project activity.

Three years later, in 1938 at Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, I was much absorbed in the Y. P. treasurer's report. Was progress made during the three-year period? Where would my district, the largest, stand? Would we head the list in total contributions for missions and for the project, the Dester bungalow? Would our per capita rate be high or low? To my utter amazement I found that the Western District Contribution toward the Y. P. Unity, toward the mission project fund was reported by the treasurer as exactly $4.97. Not even five dollars toward unity in a common project! That was our share of the nearly $230.

In another three-year period, by 1941, the mission-project contributions (not counting general fund receipts as in the above par. also) were over $1,300. Here is the story of the growth of the young people's work as shown by cash receipts of the treasurer up to 1941:

1933-1935	250.00
1936-1938	647.00
1939-1941	1,610.00

What should the Y.P. Union do? In my opinion, by 1950 the Union should have a $10,000. budget for needs handled through its treasurer. The Union Committee should certainly avoid curtailing of gains already made, regardless of how minor these gains seem to be in the face of the tremendous needs of our day. The greater this need, the greater is the challenge to forward action. I believe that Y. P. district treasurers should be by-passed in the handling of funds, and all young people's contributions except those of a strictly local nature, should be sent to the treasurer of the Young People's Union of our Conference. In order to prepare our young people to meet the needs, the Y. P. Committee of the Union should prepare literature explaining the projects undertaken.

Unless I am greatly in error, there is a great Spirit of Unity desiring to be expressed in common action. Let us give it a chance to grow. Dare we aim lower under the banner, "A united Mennonite youth for Christ and the Church"?

R. C. Kauffman Writes Second Letter from Calcutta

(Herewith we print the first part of a second letter that has come to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kauffman, North Newton, Kansas, from their son, Ralph, who is doing relief for the M. C. C. in India)

I had an interesting day the day before yesterday. I went to Canning, a village at the end of a local railway line, to investigate possibilities of setting up a relief station there. A dike broke in that vicinity, flooding a large area with salt water. This killed the rice crop and even got into their wells, spoiling the drinking water. Mr. Joseph (Indian Christian from Champa who serves on relief staff) went along and we walked out to other surrounding villages. There we saw Indian life in the raw. With Joseph's ability to speak the language, he even got me into several of the homes. The ones I saw were nice and clean, but very humble. They were made of mud, thatched roofs, and floors and walls plastered with cow dung, as I described in my last letter. One or two rooms, with a solid platform for a bed. The people were real friendly and seemed highly honored by the presence of a white man. So few get out there and I was told that they will likely now figure time for a while according to the date when that "sahib" was here. The cow stables are about as clean as the house. All the manure is taken out, put into little patties with hand marks neatly impressed on them, and put against the side of the house, where it dries to be later used as fuel. Customs are strongly observed in these villages, and when we would pass women folk they would step off the pathway and turn their faces the other way until we were by. It is wrong for a married woman's face to be seen by any man other than her husband . . . the poorer classes dress very meagerly; they haven't anything more to put on and children often run about entirely naked. But, to get back to the subject, conditions were not as bad at Canning as we thought they might be. They had lost their crops all right enough, but the government and the F.A.U. (Friend's Ambulance Unit) had already stepped in to administer relief. In one village the children of the neighborhood had just gathered for their daily meal. There were about 100 of them, sitting about eating their rice and puls. And how they went at it! They all eat with their right hand—no tableware of any kind other than dishes. I couldn't but think as I watched them that they had something there . . . The children are nice looking—dark chocolate brown. They seem to mature faster in these tropical regions and so appear very intelligent for their age. Youngsters of six, seven, or eight, come to the relief station to get rice for the family and deal as sharply as any adult. I short-changed one little fellow the other day and he caught me up on it right away. There were quite a few sick with malaria in the villages and some we saw lying about outside. I shall perhaps go back to Canning again this week as we were told that we didn't get to see the really needy places. The trouble here is that one can't tell how well an area is taken care of by simply talking to government officials. They give you the impression that everything is fine and that they are distributing so and so many maunds of rice, so much clothing, quinine, etc., when actually they are not or are giving it out for graft—that is, they will accept tips from those who can pay and so give them more than they need and leave the really destitute without anything. There is very much of this political grafting here in India. Hundreds of government officials seem to live by it. If the peon goes to pay his taxes, for instances the doorkeeper may want a tip before he lets him in, then the secretary expects a tip for making the appointment, with possibly a few others thrown in between. If the peon refuses to pay this tip, the tax official is too busy to see him that day and he has to go home for the night or, if from the country, perhaps stay overnight. They may stall him that way two or three days. And so it goes. Begging is not a disgrace in India, and the begging principle, in one form or another, seems to permeate the entire economic structure. American business methods may not be everything they should be, and we of course have plenty of grafting too, but it doesn't seem to be as pervasive as it is here. When we tip, it is for services rendered; here a tip need not imply that at all. It seems that these grafting politicians are not so much the English, as we often assume, but the Indians themselves. The Hindus or Moslems are in charge of most government offices and they take advantage of their position to exploit those of their own kind less fortunate than they themselves. Nor are the poor entirely exempt from blame. They are lazy and in many respects, wasteful. As I was sitting in the train at Canning waiting for it to start for Calcutta, I watched them come up to a tank car for drinking water, send out from Calcutta. One would think that with their dearth of good water they would be careful of it. Instead, one after another came up, turned on the big faucet full force and then would wash his face in the running water, let the containers overflow, etc. I watched a dozen of them come and go and not one showed any concern for conserving the water. If they got all they needed, that was all they seemed to care about. There is no consideration for the next fellows. In the post office, unless one watches the clerks, they may take off the stamp, especially if it is of some value, as an airmail stamp to the U. S. So we are advised to request that the letter be post-marked in our presence. Observing such details of life here makes me think that there are many aspects of Christianity or of Christian influence in our society which we never notice because we take them for granted. One gets a new appreciation of Christianity—one that isn't gotten by simply staying in the midst of it and listening to all the petty theological and doctrinal squabbles, but one that comes from seeing peoples' ideas work themselves out in society and human relationships. Much that we take for granted at home as simple courtesy, good manners, or even good business, is an unrecognized effect of Christianity—unrecognized because it isn't necessarily called that. And many people who do not consider themselves Christian, who do not attend church, etc., are nevertheless acting on Christian principles more than they know. At least so it seems to me from my very limited observation of life around here up to this point.

On the other hand, there are some things that are very admirable about the Hindu people. They seem friendly and humble. They are never too proud or too busy to talk to one. They are in many ways helpful and hospitable. We are told that one could cross India without a cent in his pocket. If they knew you had nothing to eat they would always provide. On the train as we commute each day, we strike up many friendly and interesting conversations—mostly with students who speak English and are on their way to or back from their respective schools. The next day they will hunt up our compartment in the train to visit some more. One day last week one of the fellows pulled out what I feel sure was his noon luncheon, consisting of some figs and a pomegranate and urged it on us. He tried to tell us that he could get his luncheon at school. Since all was carried in his pocket it wasn't very clean and we had a problem in health versus politeness. We settled it by eating the pomegranate, which could be peeled, and "saving" the figs until later. But the most admirable trait about the Hindus is their poise and composure, despite material circumstances. Not that they don't try to get every cent they can, but if they don't get it, they don't go to pieces over it. Personal reputation and prestige are not nearly as dependent upon wealth as they are in the States. In fact there are some things, such as a man's religious status, his cast, or his craftsmanship, which are far more important. The night before last a well-educated Indian came over to visit us. At seventeen he was manager of one of the General Motors branch offices in India at a large salary, had a nice car, home etc. But he wanted to be a minister and so gave it all up without hesitation. He says his Hindu background has taught him not to pay any attention to these things and that in this respect he is only like his Indian people in general. They appreciate nice things if they can have them, but they don't need them to live happily. (To be continued)

CASE STUDIES IN EVANGELISM

The following true incident comes to us out of the life of one of our General Conference ministers who has had a wide range of experiences and long years of service:

One evening there was a knock at our door. As we opened there was a lady timidly requesting an interview. Invited to be seated she began by referring to an experience of the day. "I was at the funeral service for your little boy the other day and observed your ability to bear up under the strain of sorrow. I believe there must be some spiritual kinship that I could find here. I find myself at a loss to grasp the doctrine of the atonement in our faith. Could you help me?"

When questioned as to whether she had a Bible she replied, "Yes, it is at home in my trunk, but I have been studying in a little book entitled Science and Health by Mrs. Eddie. Could you show me this teaching therein?" When questioned about her church membership, she replied that she was not a member of the Christian Science Church but a student of Christian Science literature. When asked whether she would be willing to study the doctrine of atonement as it is presented in the scriptures, she hesitated, visibly troubled. However, she accepted a copy of the Scriptures, and we began to look up passages from the Old and New Testaments. She read passage after passage, speaking of the suffering Servant who was bruised, afflicted, laden with our iniquities, suffering God's judgment upon our sins. We proceeded to behold the suffering of Jesus on the cross, His death and resurrection. We read the interpretation thereof in many passages of Acts and the epistles. We noted the emphasis of the blood atonement herein and the declaration that if we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Jesus Christ, His Son, cleanseth us from all sin.

The hour had grown late. She must return to her home. We closed the interview with prayer. As we rose from our knees, she said, "You cannot expect me to accept the thought that some one else—and especially the Son of God—should suffer for my sin and bear my guilt. Never could I accept that." We invited her to come again, and we would study further into this doctrine of the Scriptures. She did not promise but took along several pamphlets on the subject.

After a few days she returned stating that she could not agree with the thoughts presented by the pamphlets. However, she was again prevailed upon to search the Scriptures, and prayerfully we proceeded to examine the Word of God.

Many an evening was thus spent together. She was perplexed and confessed, "You have taken from me the ground I thought I had for my faith in Christian Science. But I am absolutely without the faith you have and the peace you enjoy." Her inner conflict became apparent to her relatives and friends. They warned us that she might lose her mind over religion. We were much in prayer for her. The Lord answered prayer. In regular weekly Bible classes, which she could attend, she found lift and assurance that God's great atonement was for her. She confessed Christ no longer as a way-shower but as her Saviour, whose blood on the cross atoned for her sins and became a very fruitful branch in Him. Thus she remains to this day. She left her copy of Science and Health with us, saying that as long as she did not ask for it we might know that she was still trusting in the atonement of Jesus Christ, her Saviour and Lord.

SALEM ZION CHURCH

--"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with all thy might." Eccl. 9:10. Very profitably might we make that a motto for this year in a world of turmoil, change, and sorrow. None need seek long to find something to do. So let's accept the challenge and become workers instead of shirkers.

Thus far we have had a very nice winter which certainly aided the various church activities. The Women's Missionary Society holds its monthly meetings in the homes during the winter months. Sewing clothes, piecing quilts, patching and repairing clothing for relief are the outstanding activities at present. Short programs are given while the ladies work.

Prayer meetings are still held every Thursday evening at the church. The book of I Corinthians is being studied.

Wednesday evening is designated for The Young People's Bible and Fellowship Hour. The mixed choir usually practices after the meeting. Once a month the young people meet for a special program on Sunday evening. At present plans are being made for a Bible and Missionary Conference sponsored by the young people's organization, to be held the latter part of May.

At the annual church meeting held the last week of December, the 100 per cent subscription plan was adopted. Thus each home will receive either The Mennonite or the Bundesbote. Various other questions were discussed.

Like in most communities and churches, many of our young men have been called to service. Several have very recently been reclassified. One member of this church, Jesse Tieszen was fatally wounded in France. Memorial services were held shortly after the sad news was received. Two others, Peter Schmidt and Harry Kunkel have been wounded in this terrible conflict. Certainly all are waiting for the end.

"All things come to him who waits--"

That is the promise of the fates;

But "waiting" is not sitting still

That fortune may your coffers fill.

Tis waiting in the sense that we Wait on our opportunity,

And cast about with eager eyes

To find just where our service lies.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Colfax, Washington

Mrs. P. R. Aeschliman, wife of the late Rev. Paul Aeschliman, passed her eightieth milestone on January 14. She was honored at a dinner at her son, Rupert's, with a few close friends sharing the occasion. A shower of over a hundred cards came to her from friends far and near. In the evening the C.E.'ers held a song-fest in her home. We cherish such faithful members, such as "Aunt Phebe," and praise God for her services in our behalf.

Two deacons were added to our church council this year. We felt the need for a larger representation, and this indicates a growth for our congregation. We definitely feel a need for closer communion with our Saviour and these two men, being devout Christians, will be a blessing to us.

A Christian Endeavor birthday dinner is being planned. We're planning for about sixty in attendance. —Mrs. Alvin Rubin, Corr.

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH

Enid, Oklahoma

"Commit thy way unto the Lord; trust also in Him; and He shall bring it to pass." Ps. 37:5. God certainly has proved this to our church and to us in the many blessings that we have received from Him during these last months.

The church has undertaken a great project in buying a parsonage for their pastor and his family.

They were forced to do so, because no living quarters could be obtained for their new pastor upon his arrival. God marvelously led them to the purchase of a house within a half a block from the church. Furthermore they decided to remodel this house, and at present the work is well on the way. All the labor is being donated by the members.

Our attendance has increased, and a greater interest is being shown by the people. On November 12, 1944, it was our privilege to receive 10 new members into the church. On November 29 we had our annual business meeting. We elected a superintendent for the junior department, which was started last fall.

The Women's Missionary Society is meeting monthly. One of the projects taken up is sewing for relief. On Wednesday evenings we have our regular prayer meetings and Bible studies and also choir practice.

The Sunday School gave the pageant, "The Coming of the King," for Christmas. At the close of the program white gifts were received. These were distributed among the poor people of the city. The C. E. also observed the watch night service on New Year's Eve.

Since the first of the year the pastor has started a catechism class with fourteen young people enrolled. The church bulletin has also been issued since that time. The pastor has been called away for evangelistic meetings several times during the last months. Early in November he spent ten days at Plains, Kansas, and in December he was called to Orienta, Oklahoma.

It was our privilege to have with us the Rev. J. R. Dick from the Grace Bible Institute at Omaha on January 21. —Corr.

SWISS MENNONITE CHURCH

Whitewater, Kansas

Not knowing just what might be of interest I scarcely know how to begin, so I will confine myself to a brief survey of the church activities of the last twenty years. About that time my father, John Roth, now deceased, felt the need for a change from the German to the English language, and he not being able to serve in the English, suggested that the church elect, from her own membership, two young men who could serve in the English language. He had served the church for some thirty years and God had used him in a wonderful way to the spiritual growth of the membership, and we trust the salvation of many souls. He had won and held the love and esteem of the people to such an extent that they were unwilling to release him as long as he was resident among them. When his health began to fail, he decided to change climate, and he and his faithful wife, my dear mother, moved to Salem, Oregon, where he passed away in June, 1940. A few years before he left the church, A. J. Dirks and myself were elected to help serve the church. On March 1, 1925, after a 2 years, lay ministry, we were ordained to serve the church as assistant ministers, the office of Elder being conferred upon us at the same time. A few years later father left the state and the church, so the work fell upon A. J. Dirks and myself. A few years later, A. J. Dirks changed his residence and transferred his membership to the Gnadenberg Church.

We are truly very grateful that God has so richly blessed our humble ministry. Our people have a mind for missions, hospitals, conference, and evangelism. It has given us a cause for humble gratitude to see so many of our young men and women give their lives to full time service, either as ministers or missionaries. During the last fifteen years, Lester Wuthrich has gone out as a missionary to China. He is now interned by the Japanese in the Philippine Islands with his wife. Curt Claassen, ordained minister from our church, is now teaching music and other subjects in the O.B.A. He and his good wife are waiting for the doors to India's mission field to reopen. LaVerne Rutschman, also an ordained minister from our church, has been accepted by our foreign mission board to go to South America as a missionary.

Clarence Rutschman, son of Mr John Rutschman and Mary Roth Rutschman, his mother now deceased, is on his way to Nigeria under the Sudan Interior Mission Inc. His work and schooling have kept him away from the immediate fellowship of the church in the last years.

John Wuthrich is still in school with a feeling that God wants him in some definite work but not yet absolutely sure of time and place.

Leslie and Raymond Zuercher with their sister Marjorie are all in the Los Angeles Bible Institute, preparing themselves, and I am sure are open to the call of the Lord for whatever He lays upon their heart. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Zuercher, Benton, Kansas.

Mabel Wuthrich, sister of Lester who is in the Philippines and John in Los Angeles, daughter of Fred and Malinda Wuthrich, has a few years of Bible school training but felt an urge to help out in the Bethel Hospital this winter.

Lois Roth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Roth is in the Los Angeles Bible Institute preparing herself to answer the call to mission work.

Although we have only some 120 members we can thank God that He has not "passed us by" but has found willing hands and hearts among us. Last year our Sunday School offering totaled over $1000.00 One Sunday each month our Sunday School offering goes to "America back to God Crusade" under the direction of John Jollers, a program especially for our men in the "Armed Forces." Another Sunday each month the Sunday School offering goes to Thom. Carter, prison evangelist, for his prison work. We also remember Miss Voth, of Brooklyn, The Wedels of the Southland, and Jewish relief and missions with our Sunday School money.

Besides the Sunday School offerings our church collected over $1100.00 for foreign and home missions and other benevolent causes last year. Besides this we have started a "Church Building Fund," and although it is only about a year old, it amounts to over $1100.00 (One thousand one hundred twenty-eight and 12 cents to be exact). All this is over and above the pastor and janitor salaries and other church expenses. We do not wish to boast or exalt ourselves for we are not unmindful of scriptural warning that such shall be abased, but we do want to praise and thank God our heavenly Father, who has "supplied all our needs according to His riches in glory."

We have a fine choir of young voices under the direction of Mrs. Ed. Voth. This adds greatly to our services and provides a splendid source of interest. These young folks practice once a week in the various homes, after which they spend a fine social evening. This is "redeeming the time".

Our Christian Endeavor, or young people's meeting, is quite flexible or varied. We try to fill the pulpit with visiting ministers, candidates for missions or student preachers at least once a month for these evening meetings. Other groups from schools or groups from other churches are also used to provide variation for the spiritual development of our youth. We would be glad to contact student preachers and youth organizations that would like to visit us in this capacity.

Our prayer meetings are not too well attended, partly at least because our people are scattered over quite a scope of territory, some living as far as eighteen or twenty miles from the church. We believe in prayer and God has been very gracious to us, whereof we are glad.

READ CAREFULLY—ACT IMMEDIATELY

Have you sent in your protest against Peace-time Compulsory Military Training? Do so at once. Send your postcard or letter to each of the following:

1. The President of the United States.
2. To your senators and representatives.
3. Chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C.
4. Chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, House Office Building, Washington, D. C.
5. Chairman, the House Select Committee on Post-war Military Policy, House Office Building, Washington, D. C.

Denominations not holding our peace principles are vigorously protesting against any such law—what are you as a Mennonite doing? Your boy's and many boy's future is at stake; you can not fail in this. Send in your protest now.

Workshop Supervisor at El Shatt

Ervin Hooley, who has training as a mechanic and carpenter, has been placed in charge of workshops in divisions two and four of the El Shatt refugee camp. Part of his program of work is purchasing workshop equipment, setting up new shops as more tools are purchased, caring for tools, and assisting with necessary construction work.

Two Workers Embark for South America

Elizabeth Keeney, Mrs. Elvin Souder, and her daughter Jane, sailed on the Rio Juramento, from New Orleans, January 29. They are expected to arrive in Buenos Aires in approximately three weeks.

C. P. S.

Cooking School at North Fork

A C. P. S. cooking school for the purpose of training cooks for the camps is scheduled to begin at the North Fork, California, camp, February 18. This school will be similar to the one held at the Grottoes, Virginia, camp in the spring of 1943. Mrs. Jacob Goering will be in charge of the school. Not only will the men be trained to serve as cooks but also as dietitians and head cooks with the supervision of a woman. It has been difficult to obtain women who are trained as dietitians and it is felt that with men trained for this purpose, and a woman present to add the touch of a woman's hand, the needs of the kitchens in the camps can be filled.

Smoke jumper Unit to be expanded

Word has been received from the Forest Service at Missoula, Montana, that they desire to increase the C. P. S. smoke jumper unit from its past strength of 120 men to 138 for the coming season. The number, 125 will be jumpers, 8 kitchen helpers, and 5 camp staff assignees. A number of the men serving the past season have left the unit so that 41 new campers will need to be chosen.

C. P. S. Briefs

A side camp to Unit I of the Lincoln C.P.S. camps has been opened at Waterloo. The new unit will have the strength of 15 men.

C. R. Heisey, pastor of the Upland, California, Brethren in Christ Church, conducted Bible study groups on the second ten chapters of the Book of Acts during the month of January. Brother Heisey visited base camps at Downey, Belton, Terry, Hill City, and the special project at Provo, Utah.

J. Winfield Fretz, in charge of the Mennonite Aid Section, will continue his work at Akron. Originally he planned to return to his teaching work at Bethel College in the early part of 1945.

JOTTINGS

—Dr. J. H. Langenwaller is scheduled to conduct special services during March as follows: at the Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, over the weekend of March 4; at the First Mennonite Church, Halstead, Kansas, March 18 to 23; at the Johannesthal Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, March 25 to 30. The Bruderthal Church will join with the Johannesthal Church for the services.

—The First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio, is another church to hold a missionary offering for the Board of Education and its enlarged work.

—Bethany Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota: "Our pastor, Rev. L. H. Linscheid, has resigned to accept a fulltime position as instructor at Freeman Junior College. Rev. Linscheid has very devotedly and faithfully served the church for over six years, and he will be greatly missed. The church choir now numbers twenty-six; it serves regularly in the worship service. Bethany sent 667 quarts of canned foods to C. P. S. last fall. Last week it sent 117 pounds of new and used clothing for relief. A report from the M.C.C. shows that this community sent 8,143 quarts of canned goods to C.P.S. camps last fall."—Gerhard Toews —The Freeman Junior College Department gave a program in the Bethesda Church on January 28. The Christian Youth Volunteers Group gave a program in the Hutterdorf Church.—Freeman Courier.

—The Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas, is striving to keep up its C.P.S. quota. This amounts to $316.00 every two months. The C.P.S. offerings are held bi-monthly. Improvements are to be made in the church nursery.

—Thanks to Miss Mary Krehbiel of Donnelson, Iowa, who sent in to the Mennonite Historical Library, North Newton, a copy of The Mennonite, No. 19, 1930. The library is now able to have its copies bound into a volume.

—Rev. Paul Shelly spoke at morning and evening services of the Mennonite Bible Mission, Chicago, Illinois, on February 4.

—"By a vote of 210 to 35 the Association of American Colleges at its annual meeting in Atlantic City, January 11, asked for postponement of peace time military training."

—First Mennonite Church, Nappanee, Indiana: The Woman's Missionary Society has as its aim: To study "The Work of Our Church" and "World Wide Missions," and to serve its own members, the needy in the community, and the missionary and educational endeavors of their own church with contributions of money and labor. Program topics used by this society include: "How Did Mennonites Originate?," "Foundation stones of the Mennonite Church," "The Pennsylvania Dutch," "Our Mennonite Heritage," "Our program as a Church," "Relief for Suffering," "Under the Skin," "South America," and "Our Loyalties." The programs for 1944-45 are given in a neat, little booklet. The pastor, Rev. Jacob Enz, conducted a course in "Christian Worship" during the recent Leadership Training School. Rev. and Mrs. J. P. Suderman from Berne, Indiana, spoke here on the evening of February 4. The theme for the evening service of January 21 was "Keeping Informed." The program dealt with The Mennonite. The following topics were discussed: "Is a Denominational Paper Necessary?," "What Interests Me Most in The Mennonite?," "The Work of the Publication Board and Its 100 Per Cent Subscription Plan," "If I Were Editor, I Would . . ." The program was based on an outline given on page seven of the January 2 issue of this paper.

—Although the Calvary Mennonite Church, Barlow, Oregon, is not yet affiliated with either the General Conference or a district conference, it is contributing financially to the work of the General Conference. It was organized August 6, 1944, and it has sixty-two members. Rev. Paul N. Roth is pastor.

—The West Swamp Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa., and the Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, are two more churches which have put the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan into effect. Over forty churches have adopted the plan.

—Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio: Rev. Russell Mast, Bedminster, Pa., has been secured as the Pre-Easter speaker for a week of services, March 18-25. Mr. Mast is the President of the Eastern District and is the Pastor of the Deep Run Mennonite Church. On the evening of January 21, Rev. Frank Batterson, Spanish Professor at Bluffton College, spoke on conditions in South America. Rev. J. N. Smucker brought the message on the evening of January 28.

—Rev. Don Smucker spoke at the Mulberry, Florida, C.P.S. Camp from January 23-30, on the subject "The Bible and Modern Thought."

—"An outstanding event on one of our stations in India is the baptism of a Mohammedan. If my memory serves me right, this is the first Mohammedan that we have been privileged to baptize since the opening of the Mission in India. If this new convert is of an important family, his life will be in danger. Pray for this new convert."—P. A. Penner

—"If half the outpouring of life and treasure of organization and efficiency that the state has put into this war could be thrown into the cause of the kingdom—the world would soon be won for Christ."

—Admiral Beatty

—"The family altar would alter many a family."

—From Sam Goering's first letter home: The following short excerpt is from the first letter written by Sam J. Goering to his wife and son after his arrival in England. He wrote from Swansea on January 19 as follows: "I get to London tomorrow. I am well and very thankful that things went as well as they did . . . There were nights when we slept fully dressed ready to abandon the ship in a moment, but we moved slowly and safely thru the waters. The trip was much longer than I thought it would be when we started out . . . The weather is quite cold here, with snow on the hills. Strong wind delayed us a full day after we got in."

—Fredonia, Kansas: As a Mennonite group we meet at the Bell school house for Sunday School and church worship. We have Sunday School classes for young people, juniors, and the primary children, as well as the adults. We have joined with the Mennonite Brethren for our C. E. meetings. Since October 15 we have been served by Willard Wiebe, a ministerial student at Bethel College. One of our young men is in the Army Medical Corps, and one of them is in C.P.S. Arnold Fast is the chairman of our congregation. Our average church attendance during 1944 was 27, the average Sunday School offering $2.20, our church maintenance assessments $48.00, our foreign mission offerings $68.01, our home mission offerings $49.19, and C.P.S. contributions $68.00.

—Rev. J. M. Franz held a series of meetings recently at the First Mennonite Church, Paso Robles, California, of which Brother Orlo Kaufman is pastor.

Significant Developments in C.P.S.

By Albert M. Gaeddert

With new hope campers began to look to the day of their discharge when a few months ago there was much talk and considerable planning for demobilization. More recently the earlier enthusiasm has been dampened and there is little indication for demobilization of men in the near future (Report given December 29, 1944). However, it is quite clear that the C.P.S. men will be demobilized in direct proportion to men in the armed forces. Selective Service was open to recommendations from the administrative agencies as to a system whereby C.P.S. men should be demobilized. The three major bases upon which a point system will be worked out according to which men will be demobilized are: a. Number of dependents, b. Length of service, c. Age.

Much thought and consideration is being given by campers to what appears to be an imminent move; namely, peacetime conscription. Leaders of our churches are no doubt aware and giving thought to this impending peril. In the past our groups have migrated in the face of such nationalistic movements. It causes us to search our hearts carefully and to come in humble repentance as we seek the definite leading and guidance of God. Institutes are being planned for C.P.S. men where church leaders will rethink with them our traditional position and clarify our thinking together on this issue.

The opening of the Lincoln farm units marks a development which may have significance not only for the present program but may offer a pattern for future possibilities should peacetime conscription become a reality and an alternative service program be developed. These farm units are smaller in size than the base camps. There are certain advantages to smaller units which are more conducive to a more nearly family-sized type of living. Careful consideration is now given to the question: Do we want to move in the direction of smaller units rather than the large-sized base camp, which has been the pattern since the beginning of C.P.S.?

A movement patterned in part after the relief unit in Puerto Rico is in the making near Gulfport, Mississippi. The plan is to consider this a rehabilitation service within our own country. We aim to select people interested in doing relief work and rendering Christian service but who are unable to go abroad to do relief work because of family circumstances or other reasons. Twenty-five men are approved for this unit, and it is likely that more will be approved if our plans call for a larger unit.

A report of this nature would not be complete without bringing to attention our appreciation for the noble efforts of our constituents in making possible this great work. It affords opportunity to reach a large group of young men whom we can serve spiritually and to whom an educational program can be offered. Many of these we have never reached before through our educational institutions. Out of this rather adverse situation we have realized an open door that can and should lead to genuine opportunities. The following points come to mind when one considers the possibilities that have been or ought to be realized.

a. A closer Christian relationship within M.C.C. constituent groups. This is the first time that all of our organized branches of Mennonites have worked together in a common cause. We have learned to know each other and to respect each other. We know our differences; we know how much we can contribute one to another, and how much we need each other.

b. The occasion is ripe to come to a new appreciation for the uniqueness of the early Anabaptist vision and the need to recapture and bring it again to its full fruition. The early Anabaptists emphasized strongly the Church as a brotherhood of believers. Likewise, they emphasized discipleship. To believe on the Lord Jesus Christ was to follow him. This meant that certain things could be done and others could not; and the circumstances did not make a wrong act right. The true follower of Jesus could not say that he loved God and at the same time hate his fellowman. We are coming much nearer to an appreciation of this

c. In each other's presence the campers stand as open books. There is nothing hidden that is not revealed, and we stand naked in each other's presence. The crowded quarters, the lack of privacy, the fact that we are always together and cannot escape each other's presence, brings to light what is in us. In numerous cases this has led to a spirit of humility and to a more genuine Christian life.

d. We have come to appreciate the need for a type of leadership which has a genuine sensitivity for the needs of each member of this unit as well as for the need of the whole group. It is not authoritarian on the one hand, nor is it so "democratic" that it lacks focus and permits "license." It delegates responsibility carefully to permit the individual to unfold and blossom forth into full Christian character. It is sensitive to individuals; it blends administrative decision with sensitiveness to group will; it makes decisions by resorting to the best sources of information; it awaits itself of resource leadership; it gives heed to the voice of experience; it makes decisions by deliberative pulse-taking and keeps "on-the-spot" decisions to a minimum.

This experience of nearly four years now has various effects upon different individuals. A small percentage of our men have grown somewhat resentful and bitter, having found nothing but weariness and gloom in their experience. They are dissatisfied, they gripe, and too often they seek avenues of escape rather than to face the problem squarely.

Another group of men is affected differently. They are resigned to the situation; they have adopted the attitude of "sitting out the war." This group, though not large, likewise presents a concern to us. It is almost impossible to challenge them with anything and lift them to a new level where they think in terms of the contribution they can make.

Again, there are those who seriously question the wisdom of the church administering a conscription program. They say that the Church is compromising its position and is no longer clear on its lines of separation between Church and State. By and large this is true more of political objectors than of religious objectors. The group is not very large in our camps and units.

Then there is the group that finds in this program a very distinct challenge. There is little question but that this group is in the majority. This is the group that takes the situation, though often adverse, and turns it into a distinct opportunity. This is the group that triumphs and, no doubt, it is this group toward which the churches will look for its future leadership.

"Workshop" for Vacation Bible School Teachers

With the passing of the years most of the private schools in which our children were privileged to get Bible training have been discontinued. However, the need for Bible teaching is with us much as ever. Perhaps the present social conditions make that teaching a greater challenge than ever. Some churches and communities have been fortunate to have teachers trained for that purpose. Others have been asking for help, both in teachers and curriculum material. There has been a real shortage in teachers who were especially trained for that purpose.

Your Education Committee of the Western District Conference has been wrestling with this problem for some time. We are now ready with a suggested solution. After studying various course plans, we have, for the present, adopted the Vacation Bible School Books published by the Mennonite Publishing House at Scottsdale, Pennsylvania. In order that the course may be more fully understood and the contents altered or adapted to fit our own conference work, we propose to hold a "workshop" for these teachers whom the communities will select as their Vacation Bible School Leaders. This proposed workshop will be held at Bethel College on Saturday, March 17 and will last all day, Mrs. H. J. Andres will be in charge. Mrs. Andres is vitally interested in this, has had a good Biblical training, and has done a great deal of work in this field. She will be assisted by two other experienced and tried workers in our Conference. We believe with a day of study and preparation many Christian Day School Teachers will be stronger and better Vacation Bible School Teachers. It should make the work more efficient and effective.

The reason we present this now can readily be seen. Will the ministers with their advisory committees select persons now and arrange to send them to this workshop. Preparations for that should now be made. It is not too early. Furthermore, it will give us some idea what we can expect in the way of a response, and it will help us to have the needed material on hand so that it can be secured more readily by the various schools and churches. Will you kindly address your correspondence to the Education Committee at North Newton, Kansas.

"LET'S TAKE HIM TO THE HOSPITAL"

The child breathes heavily and roughly; he has a burning fever. One anguished parent turns to the other and suggests, "Let's take him to the hospital." A mass of twisted steel and broken glass lies on the road. The doctor has just finished examining one of those in the wreck and calmly suggests, "Let's take him to the hospital."

"The hospital." But what if every bed in the hospital should be taken? What if there were no more room in "the hospital"? The ministers of healing which serve in our hospitals are anxious to avoid just such a condition. There must always be room in a hospital, or it ceases to be an agency of mercy to someone.

It was this thought of having adequate room that led the Bethel Deaconess Hospital, Newton, Kansas, to complete the third floor of its new addition. Seventeen beds have been added to the existing facilities of the hospital. Fourteen new rooms are now ready for occupancy. They were dedicated on February 5. All those who helped to make these rooms possible will have a part in the ministry of healing which will take place in them. "In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

LEST WE FORGET

This war has its corpse stories. The first World War also had one, and it was very impressive. It aroused men's hatred to the boiling point. The "Kadaver" story claimed that the Germans had a corpse factory in which the bodies of dead German soldiers and others were utilized for lubricating oils, pig's food, etc. This story was so effective that not until 1925 did the untruthfulness of it become generally known in the United States.

Arthur Ponsonby, who is a member of the English Parliament at this time, and has been for many years, has written a book entitled Falsehood in War-time. It contains "an assortment of lies circulated throughout the nations during the Great War." Some of the chapter headings in this book are: "The Mutilated Nurse," "The Belgian Baby Without Hands," "Deutschland Uber Alles," "The Crucified Canadian,"

"The Corpse Factory," "The Lusitania," "Atrocity Stories," "Faked Photographs," "The Doctoring of Official Papers," "The Manufacture of News." The book was published in 1928 by E. P. Dutton and Co., Inc. You may be able to find in your local library this "amazing collection of carefully documented lies circulated in Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, and America during the Great War."

Undoubtedly, there have been atrocities in this war. War itself is the paramount atrocity. However, it is well to remember some of the facts of the First World War and also the point that a few men (not representative of the majority at all) on either side under the stimulation of war may do things which are abhorrent to the great mass of citizens.

EXCHANGE OF SPEAKERS

It has been suggested that after the war there be an exchange of speakers between the Mennonites of America and Europe, for the purpose of bringing about a more definite fellowship by means of acquaintance-ship and understanding.

A capable American Mennonite, with a speaking knowledge of the Dutch language and a thorough knowledge of Mennonite Church life in America, could be sent to Holland to speak and show slides and motion pictures of American Mennonitism, while a Dutch Mennonite could be invited to America to speak and show slides and moving pictures of Dutch Mennonitism. Similar arrangements could be made with the Mennonites in other countries. The arrangements for this exchange could be made through one or several of the General Conference boards and committees. Such a project would seem to fall into the sphere of activity of a number of them.

The world is rapidly becoming smaller. After the war one may be able to reach a destination in Holland more quickly than the time it once took for Mennonites in Pennsylvania to get to a Mennonite settlement in California. Advances in transportation and communication may pave the way for a renewal of fellowship.

We believe that a closer fellowship among the Mennonites of the whole world would result in a distinct enrichment of the faith of all.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

THE PARALYSIS OF COMPROMISE

Paralysis is a condition in which the power of voluntary action has been lost. There are various types of paralyzes, spiritual and social paralysis affect human beings as well as physical paralysis. Furthermore, paralysis affects organizations and institutions as well as individuals, and not the least of the organizations to be affected by it is the Christian Church. The greatest single cause of spiritual paralysis in the church is compromise. Compromise is a process whereby differences of opinion are settled by mutual concessions, the inference generally being that a settlement arrived at through compromise results in both parties settling for less than each party had originally hoped for.

Compromise within the Church

What makes compromise so deplorable in the Christian Church is that the concessions are made to the world. The Church through compromising with the world agrees to minimize or ignore or explain away those admonitions of Christ which are annoying and objectionable to the world, in exchange for peace, comfort, protection, and popularity. The Church has always had its share of compromising servants: priests and preachers who sought the easy way out by coming to agreement with their adversaries on the best possible terms. There have always been those timid souls in places of leadership within the Church who, when a religious principle was at stake, favored surrendering the principle rather than suffering for it. There are too many compromisers of spiritual truth in places of leadership today. They are individuals who submerge their deep, inner convictions and preach pious platitudes rather than offend anyone. Such men are spiritual paralytics. The result of their timidity and compromise is that the portion of the Church over which they exercise influence becomes spiritually paralyzed also.

A Parable about the Church

The Mennonite Church was founded and led by men who were filled with a holy boldness. They were courageous, daring, fearless, evangelical preachers of the gospel, bent on building a pure church. They sought in every way to be exacting disciples of Christ. They scorned the idea of compromise with the world in order to be men-pleasers. They preached powerfully because they preached from the Scriptures as servants filled with the Holy Spirit. Pain and suffering were not to be avoided if to bear them meant opportunity to bear witness to the truth and to glorify God. They were called heretics, radicals, and fanatics. But four centuries have brought a change in the Mennonite Church. It is best described in the following ancient story about the wild duck that became tame.

This wild duck on one of his migrations north chanced to alight in a farmyard where the tame ducks were being fed. He ate some of their corn and liked it so much that he lingered until the next meal, and then the next week, and month, until autumn came and his old companions flew over the farmyard and gave their cry to him that it was time to be away. The old ecstasy roused within him again and he flapped his wings in order to join them, but he could not leave the ground. He had grown fat on the farmer's corn and the indolent life of the barnyard. He resigned himself to remain there, and each season until his death the calls of his fellows roused him—but each year the calls seemed fainter and further away. The wild duck had become a tame duck.

Case Studies in Evangelism

The following story comes out of the experience of one of our Mennonite ministers. He prefaces this account with these words:

"I almost hesitate to send in this illustration, for I feel it is not always those experiences which are outstanding in a pastor's work that count, but also his regular work that counts, although we may not always be able to measure his quiet work with a yardstick."

"A lady whose health was failing her suddenly became desperately ill. The doctor held out no hope for recovery. On my first visit (she was a professing Christian) I asked her whether she still felt that her sins were forgiven her. She said, "No, I don't feel that they are."

Seeing that she was in distress, I quoted one Scripture passage after another and tried to show her that salvation comes to those who are penitent and believe in Christ as their Saviour. My words gave her no consolation whatsoever as I could plainly see by how vigorously she shook her head. Knowing that she had a good knowledge of Bible history, I asked her, "How were the Israelites who were bitten by the fiery serpents in the wilderness healed?"

Immediately she said, "They were healed by looking at the brazen serpent which Moses had raised up."

Then I said, "So must all those who are going through the wilderness of this world, and are bitten by sin, look to Jesus who is the only hope of our salvation." Immediately the look in her face changed and her eyes beamed with joy. Then we thanked God who gave her the blessed assurance of her salvation.—The Evangelism Committee

What Is the Church?

By J. H. Langenwalter

The writer of the following is one of four men who have been asked to write on the same subject. That means that each one of us is really writing on "What the Church Means to Me." None of us, at least not the present writer, will say the last word on the subject. Each hopes to make some contribution to the thinking of those who read what is being presented. That will probably prove to be the most helpful thing that we can offer at a time like this.

The "Church," as Jesus thought of it, is composed of people with certain kinds of attitude. Literally, the word means, "called out." In the days of the early Christian Church that meant being called from the path of least resistance to the road of consecrated hard work, and its rewards. That was a revolutionary idea. It led to serve clashes between self-centered and God-centered philosophies of life. Thing-mindedness and person-mindedness came to grips with each other in ways which the world has not yet learned to appreciate.

The strength of the followers of Jesus during the early centuries lay in their spirit, not in their organization. They received their spirit from Jesus who challenged men to follow him without bravado but with great seriousness. They found a new direction for their hopes, for their insight and for their desire to achieve. They were a movement much more than an organization. This movement had many eddies in it whose importance was too often exalted by the over-emphasis on organization when the movement became popular.

There was organization when something needed to be done. Acts 6: 1-7 shows us how this kind of organization was achieved and what results were obtained. The entire group was asked by the Apostles, whom Jesus had taught for three years, to select seven men with good reputations—trustworthy men—men who had the Spirit and men of good sense. These were asked to solve so delicate a problem as hungry widows and a populace filled with race prejudice can create. The apostles went on with their work of teaching as their Master had done in His day. That gave a wholesome tone to what might have become a very bad situation. The outcome was good, not only for the hungry widows, but also for all kinds of people in Jerusalem, including some priests. We hear nothing more about this matter in the Jerusalem Church. That is the best kind of evidence that the problem was solved for that situation.

After the seven men had done their work, there was neither an ovation for them nor a continuation of their office. They had done their part and then went about doing the kind of things which true followers of Jesus would see as needing to be done. It is a profitable undertaking to read the open letter of Luke, the Physician, to the early followers of Jesus as he instructs one Theophilus in what it means to be a Christian. We call that open letter, "The Book of Acts." The characterization of individuals in the early Church, found in this open letter by Luke, is one of the most valuable rewards which it has to offer to him who reads with a desire to live as Jesus would have men live.

Jesus had been a leader in a day of drivers. He had done his best to lead people to higher planes of thinking, understanding and living. He had taught them to see clearly that what He called the Kingdom of God (Heaven) was a way of life. He wanted men to live to the full of their capacities for the good of all mankind. That meant that they must learn to know the truth in order that they could be made free from the entanglements of selfishness and free to meet the opportunities for real living which God had in mind for them. He provoked thoughtfulness. He was essentially a Sower of good seed into the thinking, the feelings, and the self-direction of men. He waited patiently for His seed to grow. The so-called "Sermon on the Mount" opened up new vistas of thinking and living which His way of life offered to those who were willing to try a better way than that which had led into defeat and disaster for ages. Those who followed His way constituted His Church.

The church has always been a fellowship of those who have the same end in mind which God has. This fellowship is the reward for faithfully following the direction which Jesus pointed out to men. When one does that, he shows through what he is doing that he belongs to "The Church." Numbers are of little consequences in this test of true membership—as many are finding out now. On my desk there lies a letter written almost seven years ago. The writer used to belong to the State Church of Germany. Later she joined a group which sought to understand religious values which might lie behind the perfunctory rites and creeds of the State Church. As the pre-war pressure increased, the group dwindled down to a few and then ceased to meet. That does not mean the desire for the truth had died out. The following quotation reveals what has happened: "I know many, many places in Germany where two or three are gathered together in His Name. That is better, and leads farther than the most splendid meetings and the most interesting addresses." Coming from a highly cultured teacher of many years of experience, this is thought provoking and reminds one of the attitude of Jesus. What is happening in Germany is not unknown in other parts of the world. It is the Church beneath the churches which has always been found present in times of persecution or indifference. That is the essence of the fellowship which is not dependent on creeds and rules and is not annihilated when buildings are blown to pieces and membership lists are lost.

Jesus made it clear to those who were willing to learn from Him that the Kingdom of God involves eternal values. The attitudes that men take will affect the lives of others not only for the present, but also far beyond mere temporal calculations. Organized Christianity has too often over-looked this fact in the interpretation of Matthew 16:13-20. Jesus was not appointing a man to the head of an institution that day. He was impressing upon those who heard Him that a good confession, even so good a one as Peter had made, must needs be lived out under a keen sense of responsibility toward those whom one meets. This was simply another example of the far-seeing and practical way which Jesus had of teaching those who were willing to learn from Him.

The great function of the Church has always been teaching. Jesus came to teach men the great and important things of life. They were to learn how to find each other more than to dominate one another. It is remarkable how His influence led men to find possibilities in themselves and in others which they had never suspected as being present. Men like Andrew, Philip and Barnabas became great finders. As such they became the sources of a wholesome enthusiasm. In their quiet way they steadied the lives of men like Peter, Nathanael, and Saul of Tarsus. The business of the Church has always been met most successfully when it busied itself with finding out the possibilities before mankind. Whenever organized religion has set itself to spying out the weaknesses or mistakes of mankind it has become a stumbling block to progress and has advertised itself as a church without "The Church."

Jesus taught men to be friendly. In His last and longest heart to heart talk with His disciples, He said, "I call you friends." True friendship has opened more doors than have all of the engines of power coercion. The friendship of David Livingstone did more for a great continent and for the world, than a thing-minded civilization has even begun to appreciate. Most people may not know of which church he was a member. Nobody doubts that he was a member of "The Church."

Jesus taught men to be faithful. Mere professions counted for little with Him. A man's statements may be true, and yet the possibilities of their values may be lost because he is not faithful. The winning power of faithfulness has all too often been treated as a form of weakness. This is true from the days of Jesus even until our day. Nevertheless, that very faithfulness is the real power of "The Church."

Jesus taught men to do the will of the Father. They were to choose to do that will even as children love to do things for one whom they admire. That was a new approach to the idea of loyalty in a world cracking up under the weight of a political power. It led men to search to know the will of the Father. As men learned to know the facts which make for the great fellowships of thought, work, and sharing, they became free from the hampering fears which had brow-beaten them for ages.

The freedom of men has always been hampered by those who have neglected or opposed the teaching of the truth. Organized Christianity has too often sinned in this regard. Jesus did not call His followers to go to the ends of the earth in order to dominate men. He sent them forth to teach.

As the world begins to awaken from the period of moral insanity, through which man is going at the present time, it will become apparent again that men will need to be taught. They have been driven too long and too hard. They know that what they have been facing is not the spirit of "The Church." There is a better way, and they hope to find that better way through churches. However, we cannot blame them if they turn elsewhere, when they find a spirit in too many churches which is not the Spirit of Him who taught men to love God with all their hearts, with all their soul, with all their mind, with all their strength, and their neighbors as themselves.

QUESTIONING

*I asked the New Year, "What am I to do
The whole year through?"
The answer came: "Be true."*

*"I asked again, "And what am I to say
To those who pass my way?"
"The kindest words," he said,
"That you can say."*

*"What thoughts am I to think, day long, year long?"
And clearly as a quick-struck gong
The answer: "Think no wrong."*

*"And what roads take across the earth's worn sod Where many feet have trod?"
Swiftly came the answer: "Those that lead to God."*

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

A CALL FOR PRAYER

(The following letter came from the Chairman of the China Planning Committee, New York, to the Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, Newton, Kansas.)

Dear Friend:

A "China Prayer Covenant" is the subject of this letter. We believe it is one of the most important letters that have come to you from this committee.

You may remember that some missionaries in the study-conferences last fall urged that the initials of this committee be given a new meaning. "China Prayer Covenant," and that as many American Christians as possible be drawn into a pledged fellowship of regular prayer for China. To the officers was entrusted by committee action the duty of implementing this desire.

You doubtless know that the World Day of Prayer is in February. Conferences with officials of the International Missionary Council, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and the Foreign Missions Conference of North America lead to the realization that the first Sunday in March would be too close to the other day of worldwide prayer. We have, therefore, adopted April 15th as our day for launching the China Prayer Covenant, and we have so notified the friends in China.

The China Planning Committee asks you to give this movement your personal and earnest attention. In most denominations it will require formal and official action which would mean delay. The Secretary of the Board of Missions can request the cooperation of editors, missionaries, pastors and laymen in making this truly a movement without awaiting meetings and resolutions. Will you do this to the best of your ability?

Specifically we ask: (1) That through the normal channels of publicity in your denomination you spread word of this day when in many churches in North America special prayers will be offered for China, her leaders, and her people but, in particular, for the Christians of China.

(2) That in all this publicity you stress the fact that this day is only the start of what we trust will be a continuing prayer circle. April 15th is a day when Christian friends of China are asked to enter into a pact with God to pray at least once daily for the Christian movement in China, preferably for individual Chinese Christians or missionaries each day. Chinese church leaders, through their cablegram, call us to intercession. Surely we will answer their call.

Note: The above call for prayer is in line with the resolution of our China Missionary Conference in North Newton last year, and our missionaries will endorse it with both hands. May we all do so, and remember especially our interned missionaries in the Philippines and China, eight of them. Manila has just been captured (north half), and 3000 missionaries and others have been set free. Ours are farther north at Baguio. May they also soon be liberated.

WHAT SHALL WE DO WITH FREEDOM IN CHRIST?

"Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." So we have told India, and many a soul has accepted the truth and has become free from the bondage of superstition and sin. But how does this freedom work out in daily life, in contact with other human beings? In how far does this freedom apply to personal liberty? Can a person do just as he wishes? These and many more such real problems face our new Christians in India in connection with freedom. Many of our Christians do not know what the limits of personal liberty or freedom are. So grievous quarrels break out occasionally. Under the old religion our people were depressed. They did not dare lift their heads. There was no thought of freedom. They were born depressed. All of a sudden they are free, and often they know no better than to use their freedom as ancient Israel was able to use its freedom when the Egyptian bondage was broken. So our Christians sometimes answer officials in a rude manner. Then they get whacked over their heads. Then they come running to us for protection. And, of course, we cannot protect an indiscreet Christian brother. We must then teach such a brother that Christian freedom is not license, but it is freedom to do good. Freedom to commune with and worship the heavenly Father. No wall of separation and darkness stands between us and God. We are free, because Jesus really has made us free. —John Thiessen

MISSIONARIES ARRIVE IN BOMBAY, INDIA

Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger, Miss Augusta Schmidt, and Miss Elinore Schmidt have arrived safely in Bombay, according to a cable received from them on February 15. It read: "BOMBAY WELL." It had been sent off on February 14. From Bombay the missionaries will go by railroad to Champa, which lies on the main line of the Bengal Nagpur Railroad running between Bombay on the west coast and Calcutta on the east coast. The trip from Bombay to Champa takes about one and one-half days.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Elbert Koontz, Beatrice, Nebraska

FEBRUARY 23—"Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law." Ps. 119:18.

In these words we have the desire expressed that our eyes may be opened so that we can see the wonderful things God has done for us and for all men. Thomas Traherne has said, "Men's lips are closed because their eyes are blinded: their tongues are dumb because their ears are deaf: and there is no life in their mouths, because death is in their hearts. But did they all see their Creator's glory, which appeareth chiefly in the greatness of His bounty; did they all know the blessedness of their estate? O what a place full of joys, what an amiable region and territory of praises would the world become; yea, what a sphere of light and glory!" How true this is! When our eyes are opened we do see wondrous things out of the Law of God.

FEBRUARY 24—"The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." James 5:16b. All Christians believe in the power of prayer. We feel that it is one of the very necessary aspects of the Christian. With this in mind George Buttrick in his book, Prayer, has defined prayer as the heart of religion. In prayer we have communion with God. We meditate upon his greatness and his goodness. We come to Him for help when we are in trouble. We can turn to Him when we can turn to no other. Those who make prayer part of the regular schedule of the day testify to the value of prayer in their lives. Without prayer we would have little religion that would sustain us in our hours of need. Our religion would die because the heart was gone. Therefore, let us continue to pray and remember the promise that has been given to us that "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

FEBRUARY 25—"That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." John 17:21. This is a portion of the prayer that Jesus prayed for His disciples and for those who were to follow Him before he left this earth. This is a great prayer that we have recorded here in the seventeenth chapter of John. It is a prayer for Jesus himself, for his immediate disciples, and for all future followers. We see that in this passage he is asking for a unity among all believers. We may be sure that He was not asking that all people be alike in every respect, for he saw the difference in his own disciples. He is asking, however, that all those who believe in Him will be one in spirit. We are to be one as the Father and the Son are one. There is much strength in a united effort in anything. This is also true in the work of Christ. May our prayer also be that we may be one as the Father and the Son are one.

FEBRUARY 26—"I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear: but now mine eye seeth thee." Job 42:5. Two years ago today a young man, who was living in one of the cities of our country, stood by the bedside of a very sick young woman to whom he had been married a few months before. It was a cold and dismal day and the going to the hospital only added to the dreariness. As he stood by the bedside that night he learned the secret of praying "thy will be done." It was only a few minutes from the time that they entered the hospital until the book of her life had been written. In the cold and chilling voice of the doctor she was pronounced dead. As that young man went back home that night he went with hopes crushed. With vision blurred, but with the feeling that he was not alone, for God was with him. In the days that followed the story of Job came to him and the verse, "I have heard of thee by the hearing of the ear: but now my eye seeth thee." There is a vast difference between hearing and seeing. May all of us see God at work here now and not only hear of Him. Through the sorrow of this age may we be able to say with Job, "Now my eye seeth thee," because we are walking with Him.

FEBRUARY 27—"What wilt thou that I should do unto thee? The blind man said unto him, Lord, that I might receive my sight." Mark 10:51. As Jesus was going up out of Jericho he came in contact with this blind man named Bartimaeus. It is not unusual to run across blind people in the time of Jesus, and many were crippled and were begging along the roadside to make a living. This must have been the case with Bartimaeus. There was nothing else that he could do. On festival occasions the road was crowded with these poor people seeking to get enough to feed themselves for a time. We see this man crying out to Jesus as he passed by. This poor blind man could not see Jesus, but he must have known that he was there. He had probably heard of Jesus many times before and of the wonderful things that he was doing for the people. The more the disciples tried to silence him, the more he cried out until Jesus heard him and gave this blind man his full attention. We hear Jesus asking him, "What wilt thou that I should do unto thee?" and then the reply of the blind man, "Lord, that I might receive my sight." This should be the desire of all of us. It is true that we have eyes and see not. We, too, should cry out to Jesus that our eyes might be opened. He can still open our eyes to sin and the terrible things about us if we will but cry out in faith to Him.

Whom Say Ye That I Am?

(Miss Alice Lehman wrote from Aberdeen, Idaho, on January 25: "I am enclosing a few short themes which were written by a Sunday School class of high school girls. I had asked them to write just a short theme on the question which Christ asked His disciples, "Whom say ye that I am?" These are just a few of the answers received. I had no intention at the time to have these published in any paper, but after reading them over, the thought occurred to me that perhaps you could use them . . . in our Mennonite Youth page in The Mennonite. Each of these girls has consented to have these themes put in the paper . . .)

"To me, Jesus is my Saviour to whom I can go to at any time with all my troubles, great and small. Jesus is the One who died on the cross for my sins—who loves me and in whom I can put all my trust. He has given me the Christian friends and Christian fellowship—and a Christian home to be raised in—for all of this I am so very thankful. To me Jesus is a wonderful Saviour, uncomparable with any human, and I do love Him so very much for all He has done for me."—Jeanne Wedel

"Like Peter said, I also say that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of the Living God. I also say that He is the only perfect and all-righteous person and because of His love for a sinful world, including you and me, He was willing to die on the cross to save us. We may have this salvation by only believing on Him. After we become Christians we may come to Him in prayer and learn to depend on His forgiveness, love and leading. We may take all of our troubles, joys, wishes and heartaches to Him. The richest life possible is had by trusting Him, each day of our lives and by doing His will."—La Verne Linscheid

"Thou art the One, the only Living One whereby I shall find eternal life." Christ, to me, is the One to whom I can go in times of sorrow or happiness, weakness or strength. He is the one to whom I can bring my problems and He will give me strength and guidance to make my decisions in the way that He has for me and that will benefit me. To Him I can bring my sorrows and He will comfort and sustain me. Christ is my own personal Saviour, and by Him and Him alone will I find happiness in my eternal home with Him."—Dorothy Klempel

"If Christ would come to me in bodily form and present this question to me as an individual, I would not be able to find words to tell Him. Even so, Christ, and He alone, is the one who saved me. He helped me in everything from the day I accepted Him. If I go to Him when trouble arises, without a doubt He will help me, and I can give Him the glory for victory. When I stand alone, He is the one I find beside me. If something goes wrong in my work He helps me if I but ask Him. When I'm overcome with joy, I know He has provided the happiness for me also. To sum up everything in four words, 'Christ is my all!'—Eleanor Isaak

"If Christ should ask us this question today, there would be many different answers. Many would say that He had meant much to them personally, but too many would have to say that Christ meant nothing to them. And that is why we Christians are here—to lower that latter number. In the Bible we have many different names for Christ. Many of them we hear frequently, for example, the good Shepherd. Christ is my Shepherd. A shepherd is one who keeps his sheep near to himself. Christ's teachings remind us daily in our devotions and Bible reading to walk the straight and narrow path. He intercedes for us and brings us nearer to Himself in many ways. We have recently experienced some deaths in our church, which I believe brought many of us closer to Him. He wants to be our friend, and when we neglect Him, He tries in every way to win back His wandering child. I love the name of Jesus. To me it means gentleness and kindness and grace! Jesus is the greatest Friend I have and without Him my life would be without hope, happiness or love."—Elsie Wiebe

One day last week we got on the trolley and went out to see the Burning Ghats. That is the place where the Hindus dispose of their dead. It's a rather gruesome sight for the uninitiated. They pile up some logs, put the dead body on them; then put some more logs over the body and set the whole thing on fire. We were permitted to come in and watch the whole procedure. They had several bodies to take care of at the time. They told us they dispose of some sixty or seventy bodies a week at that ghat and there are several others in Calcutta. Before the burning begins, priests in another section of the ghat hold their ceremonies, which consist of weird cries, loud gongs, and bells—an awful noise, evidently intended to frighten the evil spirits away. Also water from the sacred Ganges is poured over the body. From there we went to see a Jainist temple. We had to take off our shoes to enter. It was a rather magnificent affair with much fine glass and precious stone art-work. In the center was stationed an idol with a large diamond on its forehead. It was interesting to note that here was some commercialization of both of these places. At the gates there were guides who would gladly have taken one about for a trip. And at the temple there were children who immediately took to guarding our shoes, which wouldn't have disappeared anyhow had they not been around, for a tip.

The last several mornings at 6:00 we have been awakened by a most awful cry right across the street from our window. We thought it must be some demented soul getting up from his sleep in the street. Then we focused our flashlights in that direction the other morning to find out just what it was. It turned out to be a Mohammedan priest giving out the call to prayer. . . . There is no want of religion in India.

The weather continues to be very nice and comfortable—comfortable, that is, if one wears summer clothes. When dressing up for dinner or church we always wear our summer suits. With a “winter” like this I hate to think what summer will be like. However, we enjoy it while it lasts. I feel very well.

December 19. Over a week has passed now and I haven't finished this letter. This last week was the first under our own direction. Beare and Isaac, the two men who had begun this work and who were here when we came, have withdrawn and given it over to Clayton, Lawrence and me. I have been appointed director of our relief unit in India—that is, until Rev. Sherk from Canada comes. . . . (M.C.C. reports are that Brother Sherk has arrived in India). He is, I understand a former missionary to India, and so should be more familiar with the situation than I am. This coming Friday I still expect . . . to go to Champa for the holidays. From there then, I may make a trip to Southern India to investigate possibilities for carrying on our work there. We understand there are more needy areas there. The Bengal famine incidently, was quite a thing. Some 6,000,000 died. One can still see skeletons along the railway track where victims tried to make their way to Calcutta, as did so many at that time. But this is all pretty well over now. However, there are still some after-effects which might occupy us here. One is the malaria epidemic existing now. If we can get enough quinine and atabrine, there is much we could do in the line of distributing these in the various villages. There are other diseases very prevalent too, especially cholera and tuberculosis. Calcutta has the highest tuberculosis incidence of any city in the world. This is due to the carelessness or ignorance regarding contagion, the diet of the poorer people which lacks in certain vital elements, and also due to a peculiar custom among women called “purdah,” which means wearing a hood-like covering over the whole face and body, with only two slits in it for the eyes to see through, and thus excluding sunshine and fresh air. They wear this whenever they go out of the house so that nobody other than their husbands may see them. There is also rehabilitation work that we could do. Many have not enough money with which to buy straw to mend their leaky, thatched roofs, others not enough to buy materials with which to carry on their work. By financing them they might be put back on their own feet. So there may be enough for us to do right around here. But as far as emergency relief work goes, there are, I believe, more needy areas in other parts of India. One could, of course, carry on relief work in most any part of the country. Everywhere there are poor and needy.

I had a few more interesting experiences this past week. For one thing I got my India driver's license and drove a car for the first time. This may not sound very exciting, but with women, children, goats, ox-carts, rickshaws, and what not added to left hand traffic it becomes something of an achievement. In this whole city of Calcutta, second largest in the British Empire, I have seen only one stop light. At some of the down town corners policemen are stationed, but at most intersections one goes through as, if, and when one can. It would be very detrimental to have an accident here as cars are very expensive. The 1938 Plymouth we have cost 5,000 rupees (about

Another interesting experience was attending several of the classes at Calcutta University. I attended three classes in Philosophy and one in General Psychology—all taught by Indian professors and attended by Indian and a few Chinese students. I don't think any experience impressed me as much with the basic likeness and kinship of people of different races as did this. I felt very much at home. It was like sitting in on classes at Yale once again. The problems discussed and the procedure were very much the same. And there certainly was no inferior intelligence behind those dark faces. The students were exceedingly kind and hospitable. After each session (we were there at two different times) they arranged for us to have tea with them. Some things were served along with the tea—one time fish cakes—but we ate with our hands like good Indians. Both professors and students wore the prevailing garb, a loosely draped cloth wrapped about them. It looks comfortable, but our man, Rev. Beare, who tried it, gave up. He said it felt always as though he were losing something! The professor in philosophy, incidentally, was Dr. Dasgupte—one of the most renowned of contemporary philosophers of India.

How to Have a Miserable Time

The following suggestions, which we found in a church bulletin, are guaranteed to bring results. They are:

"Think about yourself.

Talk about yourself.

Mirror yourself continually in the opinion of others.

Expect to be appreciated.

Be sensitive to slights.

Never forgive a criticism.

Demand agreement with your own views on everything.

Shirk your duties if you can.

Do as little as possible for others.

Love yourself supremely.

Be selfish.

This recipe is guaranteed to be infallible."

Jesus told us the truth when he said, "He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." Happy are those who accept this as the truth.

Mennonite Projects Continued by French Workers

Out of France has come the heartening news that French workers have been continuing and expanding the Mennonite relief work that was entrusted to them, upon the internment of Lois and Henry Buller in January, 1943. Roger Georges, a French Christian, delegated to carry on Mennonite projects with reserve funds, reports that the boys' home at Tourvielle, and the girls' home at Les Houches were closed in April, 1943, according to scheduled plans. The canteen for Spanish children at Cerbere closed March 31, 1943. The school canteen of Banyul fed fifty children daily from January 1 to June 30, 1943. The distribution of vegetables to Spanish families at Banyuls and Collioure stopped in March, and the last milk distribution was made in April, 1943.

The convalescent home, formerly at Canet Plage, but moved to Lavercantiere early in 1943, has since been enlarged. Now they have ninety children from Normandy, Marseille, and Perpignan, including the Spanish and Jewish children that were present when Sister Gunden was supervisor. The French workers have opened three new colonies with the evacuation of children from cities. One colony cared for 100 children, evacuees from Lyon and Paris areas, from October 1943 to October 1944. A second colony was opened for fifty-five little children of Paris—three to six years of age and very deficient—and this became the first nursery operated in France by Mennonites. The third new colony was opened in a castle in June, 1944, taking 110 children from Lyon's suburbs. Fifty of these children are two year olds, and seventy are from six to fourteen year olds.

The former French and Spanish workers have stayed with the work. French local organizations have added funds to M.C.C. funds to help finance the projects but the name for each project has remained "Secours Mennonite," and Christian principles have been upheld, as expressed by Roger:

"Our greatest difficulty has been to find the personnel to direct the colonies because we think that our colonies must be directed by people who, beside the necessary capacity of administration, must be able to apply in the colonies the Christian principles that our delegates had always recommended to us. It is by these same principles we have always been inspired to do the work we have accomplished, and with the help of God, we shall continue till the moment that we shall be able to put again in the hands of the Mennonite delegates, the mission they left to us at their parting."—Released January 31, 1945, M. RELIEF

Nurse Sails for Middle East

Farewell services were held for Helen Moser, R.N., at Akron, Headquarters, Sunday afternoon, February 4. Sister Moser is sailing by a direct route, and upon her arrival in the Middle East will become the thirteenth relief worker in the Menno-nite unit.

Three Woman Relief Workers Arrive in Egypt

"Arrived Alexandria, all well" was the message sent by Bertha Fast, Marie Brunk, and Esther Detweiler to the Akron Headquarters, February 5. These three workers left the States November 26, were detained in Lisbon until January 13, with a large contingent of missionaries bound for Africa, and finally received passage to Egypt.

School Health Service in Puerto Rico

Salome Fast Holsinger, R.N., is now devoting her full time to the school health service inaugurated in the schools of the larger La Plata community. Health examinations were given to approximately 300 children in November. Tuberculin tests were administered to 200 students in the Aibonito High School, and 130 of these were given check-up fluoroscopic or x-ray examinations. Smallpox vaccines were given to 200 students, mostly in the Asomante schools.

These examinations revealed that one pupil in ten needs to have his eyes checked for glasses, nearly all need dental attention and fourteen out of fifteen have intestinal parasites. Approximately one out of four had a positive tuberculin test.

Relief Briefs

The passport of Sam Goering has now been validated for France by the State Department. He will not be able to enter France until he has been granted an entrance visa by the French government.

Word was received from Sam Goering that Glen Miller and J. N. Byler left England near the end of January.

Waldo and Mrs. Hiebert and Dr. A. M. Lohrentz arrived in Asuncion, Paraguay. Akron Headquarters received word of their respective arrivals January 31 and February 7.

New England Dairy Counties Approved

Special projects under Mennonite administration continue to open in order to provide an outlet for the increasing number of men in the base camps. Two units in the New England States, in which the men will serve on dairy farms have recently been approved. Addison County, Vermont, will receive twenty-five men and Worcester County, Massachusetts, fifteen men. Assignees for these units are being selected from the Mid-West camps.

C. O.'s Assist in Jaundice Discovery

According to a report in the New York Times, January 15, one of the most important medical discoveries of the war has been a knowledge of the transmission of jaundice. It has been found that jaundice is a filth disease transferred from one person to another through the agency of flies, polluted water, and other means. The medical commission which made this discovery reports that many of the volunteers for experimentation were "conscientious objectors whose contributions proved most valuable in the study." A jaundice "guinea-pig" unit of thirty-five C.P.S. men has been in operation at Philadelphia under the administration of the Friends.

C.P.S. Briefs

The series of books, "Our Mennonite Heritage," commonly known as the Core Course books, are now being printed in their third edition. Number IV, Our Mission as a Church of Christ, is also now being printed.

Six men publicly reconsecrated their lives to Christ and others were spiritually strengthened during a series of evangelistic messages given at the Downey, Idaho, camp by Brother Henry Wolfer.

Representatives of the service committees met at Akron, January 19 to 20, for the purpose of discussing educational assistance to C.P.S. men from the non-historic peace churches.

PEACE SECTION NOTES

Conference Acts on Peacetime Conscription

The Quarterly Meeting of the Eastern District Conference ministers and deacons, General Conference Mennonite Church of North America, held at Quakertown, Pennsylvania, January 22, took action to register their position on peacetime conscription. The substance of a letter sent to Congressmen was as follows:

"Our forefathers left Europe in protest to universal military training in time of peace because they knew what would result from such a course. Having the welfare of our country at heart, we believe it would be making a grave mistake to adopt a militaristic program which has been in use in Germany for years and led to the ruin of that nation. It is our conviction that real peace can only be realized through an acknowledgement of Christ and the principles which He demonstrated for us."

CORRESPONDENCE

IMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH Pratum, Oregon

Mennonite young people from the Oregon churches held their quarterly meeting in the Pratum Church on January 28. Rev. Wilbur Regier gave the morning messages. The host church served the meal at noon. The afternoon program began with a business meeting. Rev. Homer Leisy served as moderator. The orchestra was directed by Hilding Anderson from Portland. The main theme for the afternoon was "Characteristics of Spiritual Progress." Sub-topics in connection with this were: "In Our Devotion," by Rev. Paul Roth, Barlow; "In Our Church and Sunday School," by Mrs. Wm. Zehr; and "In Our Associations," by Gladys Jensen. Rev. Kliever gave the closing message.

Dr. and Mrs. Tiezen of Marion, South Dakota, visited our church last Sunday. The parents of Rev. Regier left for home on January 25 after a short visit. We are looking forward to the week of February 19. Dr. C. H. Suckau, President of the Grace Bible Institute, will speak to us on February 19 and 20. Then on February 23, Rev. and Mrs. Leonard Hanes will be with us to show the methods used to reduce unwritten languages, which they hope to use when the way is clear for them to go to South America. Mrs. Hanes is a sister to Rev. Regier.—Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Mountain Lake, Minnesota

The blanket of snow which fell on February 6 makes me think of Ps. 51:7, "Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean, wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.

At our annual meeting H. J. Peters was elected into the Temperance Committee. We plan to have a child consecration service this year. Thanksgiving week: Rev. W. J. Flickinger held meetings. On Thanksgiving Day, which we observed as harvest festival, he pointed out many things for which we can be thankful. Helen Nickel talked to us about Thanksgiving in India. December 10: Our pastor visited Camp Denison and Rev. D. J. Regehr from the E.M.B. took his place at the pulpit. December 19: The Oakleaf Mission Society gave a program. Mrs. August Ewert told about her worst Christmas in China and about other experiences in mission work. Our girls have organized into a society called The King's Daughters. Miss Elizabeth Derksen and Mr. Emery Knudson were married on December 23. Christmas morning: Arnold Nickel, who is a student at Bethel College, gave a very good sermon on Christ's coming to this world, and our pastor talked about missions. On the last Sunday of the year we had a short memorial service. New Years Day: We had an English sermon and a German one. Rev. D. D. Harder gave the German one. In the evening the thirty-fourth annual Sunday School Convention convened in the high school auditorium. Ten Sunday Schools participated. January 7: The Bible School gave a program for our Christian Endeavor. This school brings many blessings into our community. Milton J. Harder, who recently completed the two-year course at this school, has enrolled in Bethel College. January 8-10: We had prayer meetings. January 21 to 27: The Bible School Conference was held in our church, with Rev. Henry N. Harder, Geary, Oklahoma, as speaker. The last evening, January 28, it was held in the Bethel Church. January 28: Six young men and Director Lester Gering from the C.P.S. camp at Denison gave a program.—Elizabeth M. Harder, Corr.

IMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH Los Angeles, California

The first Sunday of January, it was the privilege of each member present, to take part in the Holy Communion service. That afternoon, the annual church business meeting took place.

Dr. Bauman, our temporary pastor, is taking us through a study of First John at our weekly prayer meetings.

Two of our young people, Virginia and Tom Walker and their daughter Vivian, have left for Omaha, Nebraska, to attend the Grace Bible Institute.

It was our privilege to have Rev. and Mrs. Leonard Hanes in our midst. They are to go to South America as missionaries.

Mrs. Lizzie Wirkler, who has been an inspiration to many of us, went to be with the Lord.

Even though it was a very rainy day, the ladies of the Women's Missionary Society again met February 1.

On February 4th Dr. Bauman began a series of messages on archaeology, using slide pictures to illustrate them.—Mrs. Elizabeth Rempel, Corr.

REMINDING THE OKLAHOMA CHURCHES

It seems to me to be in place to remind the churches of the Oklahoma Convention of the resolutions that were passed at the last convention. They read as follows:

Resolved: That we accept for our convention in the future this plan: Time of meeting—September or early October. Place—in order to give all churches an occasion to entertain the convention, our churches be grouped into the following districts:—South (Bergtal, Sychar and Herold), Middle (Orienta, Meno, Goltry and Enid), North (Medford and Deer Creek), and the churches isolated be also encouraged to entertain the convention if they so desire.

Resolved: That if no invitation for the 1945 convention is extended by any one church or group of churches by April 1, 1945, the executive officers of the convention ask the North district (Medford and Deer Creek) to entertain the convention.

So may we have an invitation, if any church or group of churches wishes to entertain the convention, before April 1st.

Sincerely yours in Christ,

H. P. Fast
Convention Chairman

JOTTINGS

—Newport Mennonite Church, Newport, Washington: The J. P. Dalke home was saddened by a message that their son Emil had been killed in action in Europe. A fitting memorial service was held in the church on January 21. Our pastor, Rev. P. D. Unruh, has been giving a series of messages on the first chapter of Genesis. On February 4, eight boys from the C.P.S. Smokejumpers Camp, Missoula, Montana, attended our services and visited. These men are on detached service at the Falls River station, Priest River, Idaho, a short distance from here. We say to these boys, "Come again." We also invite any men in the armed forces who are in Spokane or Farragut to come and worship with us. —Mrs. H. D. Hiebert, Asst. Corr.

—Freeman Junior College: The Christian Youth Volunteers gave a program in the Neu Hutterthal Church on February 11. Joe F. Waldner, the Manager of the Jamesville Hutter Colony, spoke to the Church History class last week. —Freeman Courier

—Bethel College: "Present Trends in Theology" was the subject discussed by Pres. Ed. G. Kaufman at the January faculty social. Students in the Public Worship class recently visited the Catholic, Presbyterian, Lutheran, and Reformed Evangelical churches in Wichita. In the evening they attended a service in the Jewish Orthodox Synagogue. The churches provided friendly guides who explained the symbols and practices of their respective churches.

—This year the Conference on Mennonite Cultural Problems is to be held on the Bluffton College campus, August 24-25. The first two sessions will be used for the discussion of educational problems. The proceedings will very likely again be printed. Those of the conference held last year are now being printed.

—Bluffton College: At its November session the Board of Trustees approved a plan for a special two year Bible course. At the successful completion of the course a new degree, Associate in Arts in Bible will be granted.

The course is planned especially for those who would go back to strengthen the work of their home churches as laymen. It is so designed that if at the end of the first year or even later the student decided to take the longer course leading to the Bachelor of Arts degree, the change could be made with a minimum of credit loss. Courses would be taught by the regular faculty members and Mennonite ministers in the community.

It has been suggested by ministers in discussing the proposed course that churches might well consider giving scholarships to one or more of their young people to enable them to take this course. One of the great needs of all churches is more educated leadership. Sending young people to school for a two year period who would later come back to strengthen the work of the home church would be an excellent investment in future leadership.

—The First Mennonite Church, Burns, Kansas, is enlarging its Building Fund.

—The Tabor Church, Newton, Kansas, at present has 388 members. "Of these 248 live less than 10 miles from the church, 63 live 10 to 20 miles away, 30 live 20 or more miles away, and 47 live either out of the state or on some other continent."

—The Second Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, is another church which strives to meet its C.P.S. quota. In 1944 it gave a total of $861.30 for C.P.S. In addition it gave a total of $262.96 to the nine members of the church who are in C.P.S. The total per capita giving for the entire membership, including the non-resident members was $60.11 in 1944. A total of $4,922.97 was contributed for the parsonage. A committee has been appointed to consider the possibility of enlarging the church basement. The average attendance of all Sunday School classes during 1944 was about 75.2 per cent, in comparison to 64.6 per cent the previous year. The average offering was about 21.5 cents per member present, compared to 17.25 cents for the previous year. The foregoing facts are taken from the yearly report of this church, of which Rev. Elbert Koontz is pastor. The report is in a unique, inexpensive, practical form. Mimeographed pages were bound together into book form, in addition to organizational and financial reports, there is a list of special offerings for the coming year, a list of special days for the church, and a list of the special seasons of the church year. The membership list gives all members of the families represented and the complete addresses. It also shows by means of asterisks which children are not church members.

—From the Chronicles of the Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: "For some time the pastor has been working in preparation for a series of messages to the children at the midweek services and now is ready to begin. The children have been faithful in attending the services these past months and every effort should be made to provide them with that which will be worthwhile and instructive for them. With that thought in mind the pastor has worked out a series of illustrated messages on the life of Christ. A large number of colored pictures depicting the various experiences and periods in the life of Christ have been collected and with the able help of the local photographer, Pete Block, have been made into slides which can be projected upon the screen. Also numerous pictures have been obtained illustrating the geography and customs of the land in which our Lord lived and died. These different types of slides have been arranged into a series of studies which will be presented to the children at the midweek services during the next months. The use of visual aids in teaching the scriptures is becoming increasingly effective in the work of the Church and it is the hope that these studies of the next few months will prove both helpful and inspirational to all. We urge you to bring the children to these services and join others in worship. The last part of the hour will continue to be devoted to a study of the first letter to the Corinthians." ". . . the church has placed an order for a Hammond Organ . . . If all goes well we may have it in April. Attempts have been made to get it in time for the "Messiah" rendition . . . the S. S. teachers' meetings held on Saturday evening have been especially good this past month. This hour serves a double purpose. It provides an opportunity for the teachers to study together in preparation . . . then also it does much to bind the teachers together in a bond of fellowship."

—Woyland Church, Wayland, Iowa: By a unanimous vote, Rev. E. S. Mullet was re-elected pastor for a term of three years, beginning June 1, 1945. Rev. Mullet is closing his second year as pastor.

—Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita: "The Ladies' Friendship Circle is happy to announce the payment of its $1000.00 pledge toward the new church nine months ahead of schedule. At the last meeting the ladies adopted as their next project the raising of funds for the equipment of the new kitchen."

—Bulletin, Menno Church, Lind, Washington: "Have you signed up for the Sunday you wish to bring flowers, potted plants, or ferns and foliage plants to church? You will find a paper for this purpose on the bulletin board... Our love-offering for Rufus Franz, regional director for C.P.S., amounted to $320.00 This was very much appreciated, for those who work under the M.C.C. as does Rufus do not receive a salary, only maintenance."

—Books sent to Paraguay: "Through the cooperation of many friends some 6,000 books (about 2,000 pounds) have been shipped to the Mennonite Central Committee to be forwarded to our brethren in Paraguay. Thank you for your response and may God bless this work. We still receive requests for German and English books (Bibles, Gesangbuch mit Noten, religious, classic and other literature) from our brethren in Canada and chaplains of prisoners of war. And we have not even started to send books to the many Mennonites in Mexico. We are willing to help you serve through your discarded books. Send them to either of the undersigned at North Newton, Kansas. Signed, H. A. Fast, Cornelius Krahn."

—Walton Church, Walton, Kansas: According to Rev. Ronald von Riesen, the pastor, the dedication of the new church will be held on Palm Sunday, March 25. The dedication will be held in the afternoon and a missionary rally in the evening. The program will appear later.

—The village of Mountain Lake, Minnesota, recently voted on the sale of beer and Sunday movies, as stated in the February 6 issue. The result of the vote is that the sale of beer and Sunday movies will continue.

—It is expected that Gerald Stucky will come to Newton to attend the meeting of the Foreign Mission Board in Memorial Hall, North Newton, on February 21.

—Rev. Abraham Albrecht told us on February 14 that so far they had not received any news that the China missionaries interned in the Philippines had been released. Rev. Albrecht said that the missionaries had been interned at Camp Holmes near Baguio, which is about one hundred miles north of Manila. He also stated that there had been a rumor that the missionaries had been transferred to another camp, but this has not been verified and may be false. May the many prayers for the safety of these missionaries be answered soon.

—Rev. W. C. Voth, who is teaching in Montezuma, Kansas, is also ministering to the Mennonite congregation at that place. The group assembles every second Sunday. Rev. Voth visits his family in Newton on the intervening Sundays. The Montezuma group for a while met every Sunday when Rev. Victor Graber still served the Kismet Church and them. At that time Rev. Voth also served the Montezuma group, enabling them to have services every Sunday. This group is small, but it has a church building of its own.

—Bethel College Mennonite Church, North Newton, Kansas: February 11, Race Relations Sunday, was observed in a unique way by having the Rev. Floyd Nunley, Pastor of the local Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, bring the messages. He preached a good and interesting sermon, based on Christ's healing of the ten lepers, emphasizing especially the "us" in their cry, "Jesus, Master, have mercy on us."—Karl Friesen, Corr.

—The Mennonite Clothing Center at Newton, Kansas, is handling tons of clothing. The two hundredth bale was completed on February 9. The center opened the last week in September. The bales' average weight is around 117 pounds. Some of the overflow clothing has been taken to General Conference Headquarters for storage. A large shipment of clothing may be sent off now at any time, for the M.C.C. is waiting for the green light from the government officials. Europe is in great need of clothing, and it is expected that the shipment will go to Holland. The center is grateful for this clothing and hopes that much more will continue to come in, for the need is great. Four permanent workers receive, sort, and pack the clothing. Miss Elma Esau, who has been in charge, plans to leave soon to do relief work in England. Mrs. Selma Linscheid will succeed her. So far the bedding and overcoats received by the center outweigh any other one item. About thirty to thirty-five overcoats make one bale. Considerable soap has been received. The center is waiting for boxes in which to send shoes. When Miss Esau was asked as to what was her fondest dream for the center, she replied that it was the dream of every worker in a clothing center, namely, "that people send their clothes in in perfect shape." This means that they should be clean, patched, and with at least six months wear left in them.

—A Girls' Gospel Team Quartet from Bluffton, College will give a program in the First Mennonite Church, Nappanee, Indiana, on the morning of February 25.

—A mission rally, with Rev. A. E. Kreider, member of the Board of Foreign Missions as speaker, was sponsored by the Student Volunteers of Bethel College on the evening of February 18. The rally was held in Memorial Hall.

—Dr. A. M. Lohrentz arrived in Ascension, Paraguay on February 5, about one week later than he had expected to arrive. Weather caused the delay in plane travel. Consequently, Dr. Lohrentz on the way took the opportunity of stopping over in Lima, Peru, for some time. Here he was shown the city by Ann Beth Enns Youngquist, who is a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Enns, Newton, Kansas. From Lima Dr. Lohrentz flew to a point in Brazil and from there to Ascension. From there he was to take a riverboat up the Paraguay River to Puerto Casado. From here he was to go northwest about forty miles on a small railroad. At the end of the railroad he was to be met by someone from the Mennonite settlement. The last leg of the trip is by horse drawn vehicle. Dr. Lohrentz was expected in Philadelphia, Paraquay, on February 19, but we have no word that he made it by that time.

—From a letter by J. N. Byler, written on February 12, we glean the following about Sam J. Goering who is now in England: "We have just received word that the State Department has authorized the validation of his passport to France. We hope that he will be able to make this trip very soon since there is great need there. We also have considerable work that has continued in France during the period of occupation."

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

The second executive business meeting of the Eastern District C.E. Union was held January 18, at the home of our Mission Secretary, Ruth Miller. The treasurer reported $354.00 has been received thus far toward our goal of $500. The matter of merging the C. E. Witness with the Sunday School Union Notes and Brotherhood Briefs, making one Eastern District Conference paper, was discussed. This will be discussed at the annual convention. Please give this problem careful consideration till that time. Our Young People's Fellowship meeting will be held at the Allentown Church, March 3. Drs. Harvey and Ella Bauman will be the speakers.—C. E. Corr.

Second Church, Phila.—A Women's Missionary Society was organized January 23. The Society will meet every third Tuesday evening of the month. There are fifteen young people in the catechism class.

Grace, Lansdale—According to a note received from the pastor, the Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel, the names of eighty families were sent in to the Mennonite Publication Office. At the annual congregational meeting, the church decided to adopt the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan. The Church also has a committee to plan for a new church building. During the past year, $65.00 was contributed toward an organ for the church.

—The Evangelical, Mennonite, and Schwenkfelder churches will again conduct union Lenten services. The largest catechism class the Church has ever had is meeting regularly under the direction of the pastor.

Fairfield—Starting with February 4, a series of moving pictures, mostly sound, on the Life of Christ, which are in keeping with the Sunday School lessons of this quarter, will be given. Worship services are conducted every second Sunday evening, featuring a visualization of some aspect of the life and teachings of Jesus.

Perkasie—At the annual congregational meeting it was decided to prepare for a number of improvements and repairs to be made to the church during the coming spring and summer.

Springfield—Across the program printed for Sunday, January 21, was printed one word in large heavy letters, SNOWBOUND. This was the Sunday that the pastor, the Rev. Ward Shelly was to be ordained as Elder. It was decided to hold this service sometime in March.

First, Philadelphia—Mr. and Mrs. Allen Kremer celebrated their fifty-sixth wedding anniversary several weeks ago. Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf delivered the message on Sunday evening, February 4. On February 11, Prof. A. E. Janzen, of Tabor College, Hillsboro, Kansas, delivered the morning message, and in the evening he gave an illustrated lecture on "The Mennonite in South America."

Mrs. Franz Albrecht

Souderton—Toru Matsu Moto, a Japanese-Christian, delivered the message Sunday evening, February 18. This meeting was known as the Race Relations service. Plans are being made for a rendition of "The Seven Last Words of Christ" by Dubois, for Palm Sunday.

Deep Run—The Pastor, the Rev. Russell L. Mast, President of the Conference, preached at both morning and evening services at the Mechanics Grove Church January 28. Dr. Harvey R. Bauman occupied the pulpit during the pastor's absence. The Rev. Ellis Graber, pastor of the Souderton Church, was the speaker at the annual fellowship supper, held in the Plumsteadville Grange Hall, February 12. —Conf. Corr.

Let Us Not Fail Them

By Mrs. Sam J. Goering

Many of us have become much better acquainted with China since the war began. We are listening with interest to the daily reports that come to us over the radio and through the press, telling of conditions and developments over there. But I wonder how many of you are keeping up your interest in our China Mission Field, the work which you supported so faithfully in the past, through your gifts and prayers. I fear many of you feel that, since the missionaries are all off the field and the place is in the hands of the Japanese, our mission work in China, at least for the present, is at a standstill, and therefore all our responsibilities and obligations towards the work have ceased. I realize it is hard to keep up a vital interest when one is out of touch with the field, and no news and reports come to remind one of the importance of the work and its needs. We would like to know how the Christian leaders to whom the missionaries entrusted the work, are carrying on and how the work is going, but since we hear and know so little, we must still believe. The meager reports that have come through from our own field and other occupied territories assure us that the Christians are remaining true to Christ and loyal to the Church and are making great sacrifices to carry the work on the best they can. Let us remember, even though the missionaries had to leave, God remained in occupied territories and is continuing his work through the lives of the Chinese Christians. But let us also remember, that they never needed our interest and prayers more than they do today, and they are depending on us to stand by them. Let us not fail them.

Since there has been no recent news from our field, I would like to refer you to a letter written by David Wu, one of the young men from our mission, who together with a number of other students from our field went to free China where they are attending school. This letter was dated June, 1944 and published in the October, 1944, edition of the News and Notes. Here, briefly, are some of the things he mentions with regards to conditions in our mission field: At all of our large centers, Kai Chow, Nanlo, Ching-feng Ch'iang Yuan, and Tung Ming the churches, as well as our high school in Kai Chow, are occupied by the military. Some of the church furniture was destroyed, and some carried away. The doors and windows of the missionary homes are all broken. He writes, "if you could see what has happened to the places you would feel very sad. The people suffer greatly from the war and famine. Many people have left their homes and become beggars. Many have died of starvation. They eat corn cobs, peanut shells, grass and leaves. What a dreadful year it has been! The war has brought much trouble to our church, but the famine has brought much more trouble. Don't you think we need your help?"

He writes that the evangelistic work was greatly affected because many of the preachers had to go elsewhere to make their living. All the mission schools were closed. The hospital was robbed three times by the Red army. The instruments, microscope, medicine and clothing were all taken away. Dr. Hu, our mission doctor, has moved out of the hospital and has set up a small clinic in the east suburbs of K'ai Chow. This represents a sad and discouraging picture of our China field, but let us remember that the real value of the fruits of your faithful support can not be figured in the number of buildings the mission erected, important as these may be, but in the many fine Christian lives—the Christian character and faith in the hearts of the people. It reminds one of the words of Paul: "The things that are seen are temporal but the things that are unseen are eternal." We have a good example of that in the boy who wrote this letter I told you about. His implicit faith in God he expresses in his letter when he says: "Though we have many difficulties God always opens a way. Indeed, God never fails." And again, "There are many problems, we can only give them to God. We trust in Him." It is these fine true Christian lives that are trying to carry on the work under very trying circumstances and much suffering, that we must not fail, they are depending on our prayerful support; we must not let them down.

Missionaries Are Free

Our missionaries in the Philippines are free. The following notice was received from the War Department by Rev. and Mrs. Abraham Albrecht on February 22: "Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Dirks and three children are liberated by our forces. Physical condition fair." Similar messages have been received by the relatives of Missionary Albert Jantzens and Missionary Lester Wuthrichs, according to Rev. P. P. Wedel, Chairman of the Foreign Mission Board.

Our Ministry of Education

The Needs of Our Schools

By J. H. Langenwalter

This is the time of the year when far-reaching decisions are due for those who are responsible for the training of youth in the business of living as human beings ought to live. The more fully men and women enter into the opportunity-responsibilities before them the more they deserve to be understood as well as to be expected to understand their work.

In normal times it was simply taken for granted that the plans for the coming school year would be made about this time of the year. If there is such a thing as "normal" times, that is out of the question now. This fact increases the responsibilities of those who are to plan for the coming year, and for the coming years at this time. The uncertainties of the present time increase the difficulties with which educators have to reckon. Nevertheless, youth keeps on growing. More and wiser guidance is needed. More serious problems confront youth than most people even dream. This means that all of us interested in Christian Education need to do some consecrated thinking in regard to the possible solutions of problems which are of primary interest.

What Shall Be Done about Students in the Future?

One of the questions to be met is: "If the war does not end this year, what can be done for students who may enter our schools next fall?" Their number has been small during the last few years because so many of the young men have been taken away and because so many young women have been lured away by high wages, or have been under the pressure of the "duty to do necessary work." These are facts and should not be used as criticisms against youth in general. One wonders that so few of them have lost sight of the fact that the greater the responsibilities, the more need there is to be well trained to meet them.

Those who are most directly responsible for the continuation of our schools have need of faculties ready to meet a possible heavy increase in the number of students at any time. The reductions in the number of members of these faculties during the last few years has been unusually heavy. Many of them were drafted into government service. Others accepted positions with other schools or entered upon other work. Faculties are needed who are ready to meet the problems of youth today. Young people are going through experiences during the formative years of their lives which are clearly beyond the preparation which they have received in the past. These experiences are very real to youth and need to be met in the finest and most helpful way possible.

Young men in the service have indicated that they see the need for further education as they never have before. That is true of the men and the women in all kinds of service. The Government will make certain provisions for those in the armed forces. Those who chose to render service under civilian control have not been promised such provision. They have served without remuneration and are expected to make their re-adjustments without assistance.

Both groups are learning lessons which will make greater demands on our schools. The courses taught will have to be adapted to the new needs. Provision will need to be made so that the experiences of the last few years may not become disturbing factors for all concerned. The fact that young people were thrown into trying situations not of their own making or choosing will add to the difficulties of finding the correct solutions. It will take much patience to meet these conditions and one need not be surprised to find that some people will be in danger of losing heart.

What Can We Do To Appreciate the Values of Our Schools?

In order to meet this situation successfully, the leaders of our schools will need the support of thoughtful and consecrated people who see the problems before the whole world at this time. This support needs to be intelligent and sympathetic. The administrators and teachers of our schools do not want pity. They do need our ability and willingness to feel with them the seriousness of the problems which confront us all as we think of the training of our youth for the future. This is a good time to become acquainted in a constructive and wholesome way.

One of the great weaknesses in our educational work of the past has been the lack of interest on the part of too many people. They failed to find out how much our schools were doing for our children and for us. It would do parents and others much good to spend a day or two occasionally on the campus of one or the other of our schools. They would find that in addition to the prescribed courses, youth is provided with opportunities to become acquainted with leading personalities in many fields of human interest and achievement. Music, art, science, statesmanship, adventure in the best sense, inspiration, the work of Christian missions, and kindred activities are presented in interesting and challenging ways by men

THE SUFFERING SERVANT AND LENT

The days preceding the crucifixion of Jesus make especially clear the fact that "even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." Acceptance of this truth will make Lent more vital. Lent has been set aside by the Church as a period of self-denial and penitence. Undoubtedly, deep Christians throughout the ages have not regarded Lent as a period of formal, Pharisaical self-denial and a feeling of uneasiness about obvious self-indulgence. Yet far and wide the meaning of Lent seems to lack in depth. Perhaps, it does so because it goes to the very core of right relationships between men and man and God.

Wouldn't there be a radical transformation about us if all Christians would take very seriously Jesus' teaching of losing one's life and of serving others? Jesus lived in a day when it was regarded as great to conquer and lord it over others. Humanity still emphasizes conquering and lording it. The nations stress it, and sometimes it seems that a good many religious people are also touched by it. Lent challenges men everywhere to realize the truth that only by letting go of that which they hang onto with such self-concern will they find what they most deeply desire. Lent suggests that penitence be made primarily for egocentricity, for self-love. Let Christians spring for basin and towel as they see others with dusty feet which they would like to have washed. Let Christians have hearts that melt with sympathy for those who are groping in the darkness or gloom. Let Christians analyze the longings of those with whom they come into contact frequently and of those farther away of whom they may know, and then let them do something to fulfill those deep longings. To the extent that Christians let the four letters of Lent become the four letters of love, to that extent will Lent have a deep meaning. For Lent sings the approach of the greatest love-event that ever took place—"For God so loved." Jesus came to minister and to give His life. As this fact is appreciated, Lent changes into Love.

THANK YOU

A hearty thank you to all those who in the past few years have submitted material which had one or a number of desirable features. Some of these desirable points were: 1. Thought so refined that little or no chaff appeared with the kernels. 2. Truth clearly stated. 3. Clear, legible writing or typing—double-spaced if typed. 4. Proof read so thoroughly before it was submitted that few or no errors in spelling, punctuation, and capitalizaion appeared in the manuscript. 5. Written on one side only. 6. Written on sheets eight and one-half by eleven. 7. In before the deadline date. It is a distinct pleasure to note the consideration that some contributors show when they submit the material they have been asked for. We assure you that such thoughtfulness helps the editor, the typesetters, and the proofreaders to do more effective work. We thank you. Our appreciation also goes out to all those who have sent us their church bulletin regularly.

IMPLEMENTING OUR PURPOSES

We may have a purpose which includes a very definite and noble aim and a very strong desire to achieve that aim. However, if we have no plan for achieving our aim, we will be frustrated in our purpose. A true purpose includes a plan, that is, a method or technique for achieving the aim. A boy may smack his lips at the thought of munching the red apple that hangs at the tip of the uppermost branch. However, as long as he fails to think of some way to get that apple, he does not have much of a purpose. But let him think of knocking the apple off with a long stick and then let him proceed to act upon the thought, and his behaviour is very purposeful indeed. As our aims and desires are connected by plans, which are put into operation, we find achievement coming our way. But it is the plan that we so often lack. But we need not, for we can take the matter to God in prayer. By yielding ourselves to the way that he makes clear to us, we can come upon the plan that can be put into action. Naturally, we must first make sure that our aim has his sanction. Once sure of that, we can be certain that God has some way for achieving that aim. Perhaps, God will lead us through a succession of plans until we come to the best one, but all the while at least we will have something to act upon—we will have something at least which suggests to us the possibility of achieving our aim. Through prayer we can become open to the suggestions which God would make to us for the realization of our mutual aims.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

Meditations on the Mennonites

THE MINISTRY OF NURSING

Nursing is a profession. Along with teaching it offers a field of service for women unequal to that of any other profession. But nursing has not always been a profession. It was at first a ministry of service in which devoted women dedicated their lives to the relief of human suffering. Florence Nightingale was not conscious of being the organizer of a profession. She was conscious of human suffering and the need for service in that field, so she dedicated her life to the ministry of nursing. Incidentally, she was not the first to go about ministering to the sick, the halt, the lame, and the blind.

Not What It Used To Be

Nursing as a field of service has shifted from a ministry to a profession. It has become a formalized occupation, with standards, creeds, customs and traditions. Its membership is no longer open to any who are motivated by a passion for service to the sick. Only those who are academically trained, physically strong, and financially able may enter. To those who qualify it offers social standing and economic security. But the tragedy of nursing in becoming a profession is that in so doing it is being threatened with the loss of its soul. Today large numbers of women enter it not primarily from the angle of nursing as a ministry but from the angle of nursing as a "good job." Too many nurses, like too many doctors, are religiously indifferent. This results in spiritual callousness, moral laxness, and economic group selfishness. Nurses as an occupational group are today all too freely known as "a fast crowd." It is not news to report that among nurses in the large training schools today cigarette smoking, liquor drinking and loose sexual life is common practice.

Challenge to the Church

Our girls ought to be encouraged to enter the field of nursing. There is a crying need for them and there is unlimited opportunity for service, BUT—they must be encouraged to go into hospitals where they are taught nursing as a form of Christian ministry. This means hospitals that are controlled by the Church. Hospitals which are indeed a wing of the church. Hospitals whose passion for lost souls is as great as the church's passion is (or ought to be). This means that the hospitals we now have ought to be generously supported by church people as a phase of the work of the Church. Mennonites now maintain about twenty hospitals in the United States and Canada. In only three of these are nurses actually trained. These three cannot nearly supply the need for Christian nurses. Nurses must be trained, who besides taking temperatures of the body and relieving physical pain, can also read a patient's spiritual temperature and relieve worry and mental distress by ministering to them in the name of Christ. The Church must not surrender the field of nurses' training to the State. It must keep this work in its care and nurture it, prosper it, and preserve an occupation of service with a soul.

Bethel Deaconess Hospital Reviews Work and Plans for Future

The annual reports submitted to the annual meeting of the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital Society, held at the First Mennonite Church, February 13, indicate that the institutions of this society again rendered a successful year of service.

Bishop Allen H. Erb, Superintendent of the Mennonite Hospital and Sanitarium at La Junta, Colorado, was the guest speaker for the occasion and presented two vital messages on "Bringing Men to Christ through Christian Hospitals" and "Practical Program of Spiritual Ministry in Hospitals." Because of Bishop Erb's intimate knowledge on the subjects presented, his discussions and practical suggestions were very much appreciated.

The report of the Bethel Deaconess Hospital shows that a total of 2,221 patients received hospital care while 1,401 were attended as out-patients. The number of nursing days totaled 24,299.

The report further indicated that the third floor of the new hospital addition has been completed adding seventeen beds to the existing facilities. All of the rooms in this new addition were furnished by friends as memorials for loved ones. New X-ray equipment has been purchased and now awaits installation. A substantial reduction was also made in the indebtedness. This progress was possible because of the contributions of friends which totalled more than twenty-eight thousand dollars.

The report on the school of nursing showed that forty-five students are enrolled and that twelve were graduated during the past year and met the requirements for registered nurses. It is planned to enroll a new class June 1.

The report of the Bethel Home for Aged indicated that the home continues to have many urgent requests for admittance which it can not accept because of lack of room. In view of these many urgent needs, it was resolved that another unit be added to the home when circumstances permit.

The report of the Bethel Deaconess sisterhood as well as other reports gave recognition to the long and active service of Sister Frieda. It is planned to erect a building in memory of Sister Frieda which shall serve as a chapel for the institutions to promote the growth and development of spiritual life.

Rev. A. J. Dyck and J. E. Regier were re-elected as members of the board of directors, and C. B. Thierstein was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John Harder, Jr.

What Is the Church?

By Don. E. Smucker

Any series of articles quickly reveals the richness of the gospel. No matter how many individuals write on a given topic something still remains to be said. It is in this spirit with which I approach the question, "What is the church?" I would add several dimensions which have great meaning for me personally.

1. Christianity is an Easter religion. The Resurrection is the decisive fact in our faith, hence, the doctrine of the church, which is the society of Christians, is not to be found primarily in the teaching of Jesus. Post-Resurrection theology is found in the Book of Acts, supremely in Paul's epistles but also in the remaining books of the New Testament. The recognition of this fact will add significance to the role of the church in God's great plan for humanity.

2. The church has a great heritage. Ephesians takes back the origin of the church to God's eternal purpose of salvation. Paul traces it to the call of Israel and even the choice of faithful Abraham. There is thus a continuity between the truly believing people in Israel and those who are believers in Jesus Christ. There is a direct connection between the disciples who accompanied Jesus in the days of His flesh and the Ecclesia which was established after Easter and Pentecost. I like the summary from Johnston's The Doctrine of the Church in the New Testament (Cambridge, 1943), "The first church, then, conceived itself to be God's own people brought into existence by His saving activity in Jesus Christ, the risen Lord. It was a Messianic society, expectant and inspired, and, as such, missionary in the highest degree. Its bounds were limited only by human response to the Word of God for Gentiles as well as the Jewish dispersion were to hear the message of salvation. (Is. 57:19; Eph. 2:13). Universality, however, was not the discovery of the earliest believers; and it fell to St. Paul above all others to establish the idea of a new Israel in its uniqueness and distinctiveness as Christ's Body and the Fellowship of the Spirit." The church possesses a glorious heritage! It was conceived in the mind of God, came to light first in Israel, was given its Gospel of grace in Christ, was specifically launched at Easter and Pentecost. That Godly heritage should give us power to prevail against the world, the flesh and the Devil!

3. The church is most profoundly seen as a God-ordained remnant or minority in a hostile world. There are two keys to the Old Testament: A Messiah is awaited to deliver the Remnant and the Messiah in the magnificent portrait of Isaiah 53 is the suffering servant, "a man of sorrows acquainted with grief." These two keys of the Old Testament are "transposed" in the New Testament. The Messiah of the Remnant is the Christ of the church. (Christ is the Greek word for the Hebrew equivalent known as the Messiah.) The suffering servant of Isaiah 53 becomes the crucified Saviour of Calvary. Matthew 1:1 links the testaments very clearly: "The book of the generation of Jesus Christ (the Messiah), the son of David the son of Abraham."

What does this doctrine of the Remnant mean for a true New Testament church? It is overlooked by many Bible students, yet, it contains much to make us fearless, disciples which preach the Cross and carry our cross, the twins of Gospel responsibility. Hear its great lesson! Whenever nations and civilizations are overwhelmed with the rottenness of sin, God does His work through the uncorrupted minority or remnant who truly follow Him. Thus the church is the redeeming minority called out from the doomed majority.

The proper spiritual grasp of this truth would overcome the great scandal of the modern church which is its paralyzing worldliness. In the famous study of Fortune magazine the editors wrote with deep sadness in this fashion: "We are asked to turn to the Church for our enlightenment, but when we do so we find that the Church is not inspired. The voice of the church today, we find, is the echo of our own voice. The way out is the sound of a voice, not our voice, but a voice coming from something not ourselves, in the existence of which we cannot disbelieve. It is the earthly task of pastors to hear that voice, to cause us to hear it, and to tell us what it says." Well, that Voice is Almighty God. He spoke in I Kings 19:18, "Yet I have left me 7,000 in Israel, all the knees which have not bowed to Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him." There is the Remnant, if you please. Have we bowed the knee to Twentieth Century Baals? May God have mercy on us if we, too, have joined the doomed majority! And, on the other hand, how uplifting and inspiring that God is never without a witness, that the true church cannot be destroyed. As Luther sang so eloquently:

"And though this world, with devils filled, should threaten to undo us,
We will not fear, for God hath willed His truth to triumph through us."

By the way, Ein Feste Burg Ist Unser Gott is the perfect hymn for the Remnant.

4. Only the regenerate can join and participate in the church. This is the supreme Mennonite insight concerning the church. One must quickly add it is a dangerous insight. It is open to abuse. It has been abused in Mennonite circles many, many times when carried out by modern Pharisees drowning in self-righteousness. But church history is even more clear on what happens in the absence of this conviction, namely, the collapse of New Testament Christianity because of corruption. Yes, without church discipline the Christian community loses its standards. Here I would quote Menno himself, "As long as they baptize unconscious infants, esteem all whom they have baptized as Christians, dispense the Holy Bread to the impenitent, and admit all the avaricious, extortioners, pompous, intemperate and the like to the fellowship of the church, the world will continue to be the church and the church the world." Clearly, the church is not to be a pleasant social organization for anybody and everybody. It is to be an uncorrupted Remnant of God, which also stands under judgment but joyously seeks God's grace in a mood of repentance, not once, but over and over and over again. The price of purity is eternal vigilance!

5. Suffering love is the badge of the true Christian.

The Old Testament in its highest revelation shows the suffering servant who is the perfect non-resistant. The New Testament in its highest revelation shows us a crucified Saviour hanging on a Cross. Each in its dramatic way is telling us something like this: "This Kingdom is not entered by force or violence. The false Messiah always comes by noise and spears and bombs. Love is the only path to the greater love of God." Our Lord came into His ministry by the Ash Wednesday experience of fasting and mourning, of repentance baptism in the Jordan and temptation. He disarmed Peter who tried to head off Calvary by the sword. Luke 14: 27 clearly states: "And whosoever does not bear his cross and come after me, cannot be my disciple." Today men are nailing their enemies on crosses made more deadly by mass production. The true church is willing to be crucified. It will not crucify others!

6. The relation of the church to the kingdom is the supreme theological problem of the Biblical Christians.

Here is one of the honest forks in the road for difference of opinion. There is little doubt concerning the views of the early Mennonites who were radical Bibli-cists, determining all issues by a painstaking study of the Word of God. They held that "the Kingdom of Peace foretold by the Old Testament and the Kingdom announced at the birth of Christ and at the beginning of His ministry, was none other than the present spiritual Kingdom in which believers participate. This Kingdom was pre-eminently one of peace, and this understanding is a mainstay of the doctrine of nonresistance." The church, however, in the most profound sense of Biblical truth is not the total Kingdom. This awaits the Second Coming of Christ—Pilgrim Marpeck, for example refers to the Return of the Lord fifty different times. At that time one enters the whole, glorious kingdom of Christ without, be it noted, an interim or millennial kingdom, without any literal restoration of the Jewish center in Jerusalem, and its attendant ritual and animal sacrifices. At this point many doctrines of the church are in conflict. It needs further careful examination in the Mennonite Church in the light of the Bible and in the light of our own church heritage. All parties radically reject the Catholic heresy that the institutional church, as such, has ultimate authority.

7. It is not true to say that the early church did not have a theological system. Where this fallacy started I do not know. The Sermon on the Mount is a theological system: it contains the doctrines of Christ's person, of judgment and hell, the doctrine of nonresistance. Paul's epistles, coming directly from the early church are masterpieces of theology. Menno was a complex, productive theological writer. Marpeck wrote profoundly and extensively on doctrine and theology. The Martyr's Mirror contains dozens of theological formulations. To be sure, doctrine is not to replace real testimony. But theology is only faith being intelligent about itself. The church needs that kind of intelligence in reference to the Mind of Christ.

The Leisy Orphan Aid Society

The Leisy Orphan Aid Society held its fifty-seventh annual meeting February 6, 1945, in the Halstead Mennonite Church. It was founded 1884 by Jacob Leisy of Summerfield, Illinois, and is governed by the boards of deacons of the four Mennonite churches: Halstead, Garden Township, Christian, and West Zion in Moundridge. Rev. P. P. Wedel is president, and Rev. D. C. Wedel is secretary.

This society owns a well improved 160-acre farm near Halstead and has other assets. The Foundation provides that aid may be given orphan children under fourteen years of age within the sphere of what among our Mennonites is known as "Home Mission."

At the annual meeting it was visualized that at most any time now an unprecedented need might arise in this field, and it is hoped that aid be given through General Conference channels, possibly through the Emergency Relief Board or the Home Mission Board.

Meantime if any reader knows of Mennonite orphans in need, will you kindly give name and address of living parent or guardian to the superintendent, C. E. Krehbiel, Newton, Kansas.

C.P.S. Units in Hospitals

By Albert M. Gaeddert

During the past year there has been a marked expansion in the mental hospital and training school program of MCC-CPS. On November 30, 1943, there were nineteen units under the administration of the MCC. At present there are twenty-one units.

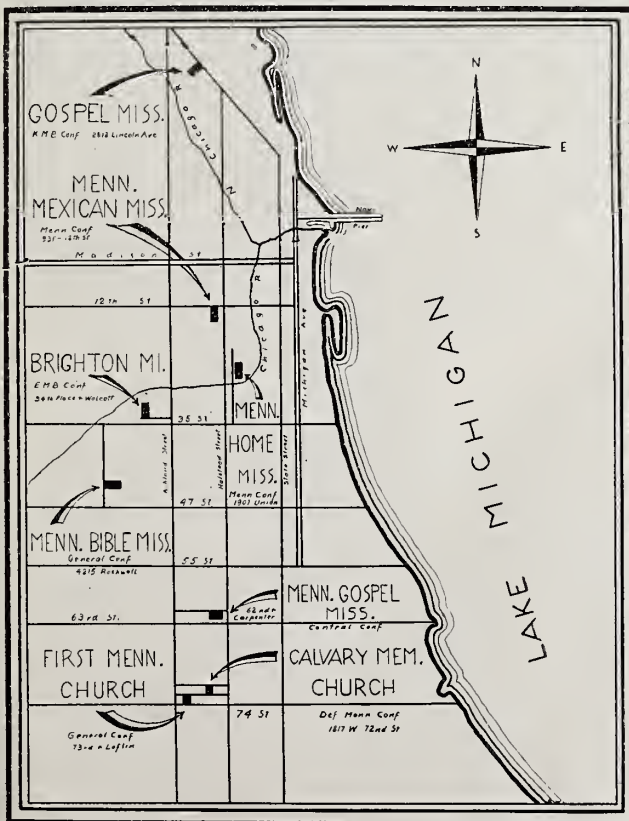

Within the past year two new units have been authorized: training schools at Union Grove, Wisconsin, and American Fork, Utah. The quotas of ten hospital units were enlarged this fall, opening 50 new positions. We are now desirous of securing Selective Service authorization for two new 25-men MCC units. With the assignment of approximately 250 new men to hospital service during the past year we now have a smaller reserve of men interested in this form of special project service.

We note among the men in the units an increasing interest in their unit educational-recreational and religious life programs. The units are more conscious of the need, more receptive to group activities than earlier. Educational directors have been appointed for eight units. Additional units are planning to add this staff member. Worship services and prayer meetings continue in the units. The educational programs have expanded to include various organized courses, crafts and shop programs, libraries, unit newspapers, discussion groups, recreational activity, etc.

Among the units we have been seeking to encourage a renewed interest and concern for the service opportunities in the institutions. The three agencies have been giving their financial support to the Mental Hygiene Program of CPS. This program is responsible for the publication of The Attendant, a project-centered paper on mental hospital and training school service. This monthly paper and the allied activities of the Mental Hygiene Program have served to stimulate new interest in the project. The Hospital Section of the MCC has supplemented this with its own educational releases.

In general the men in the units are appreciative of the opportunity of serving in mental hospitals and training schools. This program has opened to us a whole new area of human need of which we had not been altogether sensitive. Mental hospital work has not been without its problems. Men work under somewhat trying circumstances—long hours on the wards, weariness, tension, irritations. The men have become keenly conscious of institutional imperfections: professional jealousies, interdepartmental conflicts, political implications, callousness toward patient and employee. Yet amid these imperfections the men have found avenues for rendering a service of love and compassion to our unfortunate fellowmen who are mentally ill and retarded. Our task is to help the men in the hospital and training school units to keep alive the spiritual glow, the love of Christ for men in need.

MENNONITE CHURCHES AND MISSIONS IN CHICAGO

By A. Warkentin

There are six Mennonite missions and two Mennonite churches in Chicago where two or three services are held every Sunday and also some evening meetings during the week. Besides that students and friends gather once a month, at different places, in the Mennonite Fellowship, and at 2:30 o'clock, on the first Sunday of each month, a Mennonite worship is conducted in the chapel of the Chicago Temple, which stands in the Loop. This service is under the leadership of Rev. E. Albright and Rev. J. T. Neufeld. A short history of the Mennonite work in Chicago is in preparation. (Thank you, Dr. Warkentin, for contributing the cut and write-up. Undoubtedly, this presentation will be of considerable interest to Mennonites who may visit Chicago or live there.)

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By A. S. Rosenberger, Dalton, Ohio

MARCH 1—"Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." Ps. 119:105

For centuries men have turned to the Bible for light on life's pathway. As someone has said, "A beaten path leads somewhere." How true this is of the Bible! John Jay Chapman has paid this beautiful tribute to the Bible: "The Bible is a luminous congregation of vapors, a cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night; and the darker the skies grow, whether above an epoch, or an individual, the more light it emits." As we live by the Bible, we follow the pathway to the abundant and eternal life.

MARCH 2—"Come thou with us and we will do thee good." Num. 10:29

Thus Moses invited Hobab to accompany the children of Israel to the place God had promised to give them. It was an invitation that could bring great blessing to Hobab if he accepted. Many invitations, promising people good, are coming to them today. Come here, go there, drink this, eat that, read this; on every hand the invitations come. Are we discriminating and selective enough in the invitations we accept? The old standard still holds, "Go only to those places at which you would be willing to have Christ find you."

MARCH 3—"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee." Isa. 26:3

A minister traveling on the train got into conversation with a fellow traveler, who said that he was Frank C. Laubach, a missionary to the Philippines, now very well known. It was later of great interest to read the following among the writings of Dr. Laubach: "as I analyze it, I find several things happening to me as a result of two month's strenuous effort to keep God in mind. This concentration is strenuous but everything else has ceased to be. I can think more clearly, I forget less frequently. The things which I did with strain before, I now do easily and with no effort whatever. I worry about nothing and lose no sleep."

MARCH 4—"Remember the words of the Lord Jesus." Acts 20:35

Our minds are so constituted that we have memories. How fine it is to have pleasant memories. To have such memories we must put into the mind those things that will make for that kind of a memory. We need to make a special effort to fill the mind with choice passages from God's Word, lovely bits of literature, kindly deeds we have noted, great hymns, and many other beautiful things that are to be found in this world. Then we can truly have that which someone expressed, when he said that, "Memories are given us that we might have 'roses in December.'"

MARCH 5—"The Spirit also helpeth our infirmities." Rom. 8:26

Many who have done their best in a good cause, still have the feeling that the effort has not been good enough. As a young man still in school, I said one time to a highly respected, aged minister, "I suppose there is a great satisfaction in having lived a long life of Christian service as you have." The reply was, "My boy, I cannot help but think of those things that I should have done that I never got done." I suppose no one will ever do all that he would like to do in the Lord's work, but when we have done our best, we can have the assurance that in all things, as in prayer, the Spirit will help our infirmities and multiply our activities beyond what our efforts seemingly accomplish.

MARCH 6—"A man in whom is the Spirit." Num. 27:18

This was said of Joshua, whom God chose to be the successor of Moses. God needed a man who would be responsive to the leading of His spirit and who was minded for the things of God. No matter what other qualifications a man may have, this is essential one if God is to use him. It is said that when the challenge was thrown out, that it had yet to be shown to the world what God could do with a man that was fully consecrated to Him, Dwight L. Moody said, "I will be that man." Throughout the years this stands as an impressive statement of the greatest qualification of a man whom God was able to use so mightily.

MARCH 4—"Remember the words of the Lord for his soul?" Matt. 16:26

The greatest values of life are spiritual. There is nothing more important than a human soul. God is calling men to his service in saving souls. Are we supporting that work? When William Carey had his great vision for missionary service and presented the matter at a church conference, he was called "a miserable enthusiast" by the president and was told, "Sit down, young man, when it pleases God to convert the heathen, He will do it without your help." But William Carey went out to a great missionary career, and many have followed, and many are there today. God needs the help of each and every one in his great task of saving souls of men.

Let the Church Sponsor Recreation

By Ruth E. Ewert

Frequently we hear the accusation made by the young people in our Mennonite churches that our churches offer no opportunities for recreation. At a recent meeting of the Bethel College Student Volunteers this problem was discussed by a panel of five, each representing a different state and thus a different Mennonite community. A number of interesting comments were made both as to helpful standards in choosing recreation and suggested forms of Christian recreation. I want to share some of these thoughts with you in this short article.

Necessity of Recreation

All of us, young and old, need some form of recreation to refresh and build up a tired body, mind, and soul. Surely recreation itself is not wrong or sinful. Jesus Himself sought recreation with His disciples after a busy day with the multitudes. Jesus, too, had a good sense of humor as revealed in His teaching. There are too many people in the world today who do not express joy which comes from living a Christian life. Sometimes one gets the impression that it is sinful to smile or laugh or play. Of course, one should add at the right time and place. This is perhaps where we draw most of the criticism. Seemingly we as Christian young people do not reveal a proper sense of direction in our recreational activity. Too frequently we think that some form of commercial amusement is the only type of recreation at our disposal.

Standards for Christian Recreation

In order, then to be consistent in our Christian living we should set up some standards for Christian recreation. Rev. Willard K. Claassen of Freeman, South Dakota, in his little pamphlet entitled, Test Questions Concerning Amusements mentions the following questions which might serve as standards.

1. "What effect will it have upon the physical body? If it does not leave us physically refreshed or if it takes more out of us than it puts in, we better not call it recreation. Perhaps we have been weakened instead of strengthened.

2. "Is the pleasure mentally profitable?" Maybe some pleasures become habit-forming and are nothing but time wasters and escape mechanisms. Let us test our choice by whether or not we are doing doing something constructive while we rest. However, there is also the moral question which enters in.

3. "Does the moral question outweigh the educational value?" Here perhaps the question of the movies is one of the first to enter your mind. How frequently is the educational value emphasized, but how many people attend the movie for the educational value? Not very often do we hear young people, in conversing about a certain movie, "rave" about the educational value of the movie. It is usually about something a certain actor or actress said or did—either good or bad. How many young people, as well as children, try to imitate a certain actor or actress which they particularly like? Do they ever stop to think of the morals and type of living of these actors in their own family? That is frequently overlooked because the "picture was good" or because their emotions were touched. The same holds for other phases of recreation such as the radio and literature in many of our magazines and books. Too often Christian standards of living are mocked at by our young people as a result of some of the things they have seen and heard in the movies or read in books and magazines. Let us remember the words of Paul: "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." Let us also remember that Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden found out what life is all about by eating of the forbidden tree which promised them knowledge, but in the act of finding out they became moral failures. Experience is not the only teacher.

4. "Is it conducive to spiritual growth?" This question, no doubt, is frequently omitted from our list of standards, but it must be given serious consideration in the matter of Christian recreation.

5. "Is our conduct exemplary?" In Romans 14:16 we read, "Let not then your good be evil spoken of." In the twenty-first verse of the same chapter we read: "It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak." Thereby we do not mean that the opinion of others should determine our conduct, but how frequently do you hear the remark, "If so and so does that, surely it must not be wrong." We may not have scruples of conscience about some things we do, while our neighbor might misunderstand us entirely and we have become a stumbling block to him. None of us is perfect, but it behooves us to watch our conduct.

Suggested Program

After reading and considering the above standards some young people are likely to say there is nothing we can do. May I suggest just a few things we might do and a few ways of doing them.

How many of our churches have a recreation committee? We have social committees, but seemingly their main function is to "serve refreshments" here and there. We have committees to remember the sick. We have program committees, education committees, and many others, but no recreation committee. Might that not be a suggestion to be considered? Various groups or committees in the church might make themselves responsible for an evening of planned recreation sometime during the year. The choir, for example, or the C. E. or various Sunday School classes might be interested in planning such recreation. Perhaps, the board of trustees or the deacons would even enjoy planning an evening of recreation for the young people. We as young people in the church would enjoy playing together with the older ones. After all, they are our parents and older brothers and sisters. Perhaps, we all need to play together occasionally in order to work together more effectively.

Difficulties To Be Ironed Out

Of course there are various problems connected with such a program. One of the first questions is to find a suitable place. Many object to playing games in the church basement, yet they buy and sell at their mission sales because the proceeds go for missions. Many would also be opposed to a recreation center somewhere in the community because they are afraid it might be misused, yet they object to having their children go to commercialized entertainments. Which Mennonite community does not have several large homes with nice basements that could be converted to recreation rooms? Or, maybe the grade school building could be rented for certain occasions. During the summer months outdoor recreation could be planned. Young people like to hike, go horse-back riding, play horse-shoe, soft ball, group games and even some folk games. How about showing some good films occasionally?

Another difficulty which might arise is how to keep a program like this going. There we must remember that variety is important. Let various groups plan these programs. Hidden talents in that area might soon be discovered. Another suggestion is to have them at intervals and not too frequently. Too often we measure the success of a recreational program by the attendance. Surely that is one measuring stick, but we cannot expect to have all the young people out at each program.

A recreation program of course would need to be supervised. How the young people would enjoy "playing" together with their pastor. I'm certain too they would enjoy working out a program of Christian recreation with him. We feel confident too that there are a good many senior members in our churches who would be able and willing to help give direction to such a program.

Finances would have to come from somewhere. Here's a chance for the young people to contribute directly. Many would be willing to give to their church-directed recreation as much and more than they now give for commercialized entertainment.

Surely recreation is not the primary function and responsibility of the church, and we hope it never will be. But if we take it out of the church completely and leave it to the world some of our young people will become luke-warm in the church or leave it entirely. These are only a few ideas on this vast subject, but as young people let us put our shoulder to the wheel, not in a spirit of criticizing our churches for having neglected this area, but in a spirit of cooperation and interest in each other's total welfare of growing spiritually, mentally, physically and socially.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—Buhler, Kansas: Our Christian Endeavor gave a program in the Hoffnungsau Church on February 18.

"Should church agencies administer a C.P.S. program in the event of peace time conscription? If not what alternatives should we take?" These were the questions for a panel discussion held by the young people's Fellowship of Beatrice, Nebraska, on February 18. Besides local members, two young men from the C.P.S. farm unit at Lincoln took part in the discussion. A quartet from this unit sang in the Second Church in the morning.

—Wadsworth, Ohio: Louis Joachim, from a Brethren C.P.S. unit in Florida, recently gave an illustrated lecture. Louis is at home in Wadsworth.

—Gnadenberg Church, Whitewater, Kansas: Our C. E. consists of Juniors and Seniors. Seventy are active members. Programs are varied in themes, music, talks, and readings. It supports all the projects of the district C. E.

—Wichita, Kansas: "The young people of Wichita have organized a Youth Council to work out youth activities in cooperation with the Wichita Council of Churches and the two members elected to represent our church in this council are Artaruth Baergen and Benny May Buller. The C. E. is having a membership and attendance contest, which is to last three months. A negro social worker was our guest on Race Relations Day.

—Eden C. E., Moundridge, Kansas: Our cabinet meets monthly to discuss various projects and problems.

—Beatrice, Nebraska: The young people recently had the opportunity to see slides of the "Smoke Jumpers." Louis Goosen, one of them, showed the pictures. They were also privileged to hear a talk by Henry Reimer, who served as Director of the C.P.S. camp at Fort Collins, Colorado. Mr. Reimer now has gone to Norristown, Pa., to head the C.P.S. unit there.

—Mrs. A. A. Duerksen writes: "At present we are making our home at Lincoln, Nebraska. Formerly we were in Pennsylvania serving as attendants at a mental hospital. My husband is at the Farm and Community School here, while I am working in town. We are enjoying the school. As yet we have had only the orientation, but plan to start the classes this week (last week in January). Our first course is sociology. They have invited the ladies to attend, and I feel this is a rare privilege and intend to take advantage of this opportunity to get a few more hours of college credit.

—First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: The Senior C. E. decided to "meet twice monthly, thus giving members more opportunity to take part in the programs." The Intermediates also passed a similar motion. The two groups are to have one joint meeting each month, for which special speakers or programs are to be invited. The Intermediate C. E. recently had a panel discussion of twenty-eight questions prepared by the program committee.

—Nappenee, Indiana: The sound film, "From Eden to Calvary" was shown at a union C. E. in our church.

—Beatrice, Nebraska: The Fellowship is sponsoring a public speaking course in the local high school, with a Nebraska University professor as teacher. It is designated to help S. S. teachers, C. E. officers and others in preparing, organizing, and delivering their messages. Dr. Elmer Penner has begun service in C. P. S. Unit No. 93, Harrisburg, Pa.

—The young people of the Eastern District plan to have their fiftieth annual convention on May 31.

They have scheduled a young people's social at the Allentown Church, March 3. Dr. Harvey Bauman will speak. There will also be music, fellowship, and refreshments.

—The Senior Christian Endeavor of the Bethel College Mennonite Church, under the able direction of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Mueller, has undertaken several new discussion topics. Among the topics already discussed or to be discussed in the near future are: "The Work of the General Conference," "The History of the Gospel," and "The Study of the Principles of Various Christian Denominations."

—Maurine Siemens

—English students may be interested in knowing that Dr. Melvin Gingerich has written an article on "Vachel Lindsay and the Mennonites." In it he says that Vachel Lindsay in his book, Adventures While Preaching the Gospel of Beauty, gives several pages of favorable publicity to the Mennonites.

—From the Worker's Exchange of the Pacific District: A new Christian Endeavor group for Senior high boys and girls has been organized in the Los Angeles church. In its three months of existence the membership has more than doubled. The sponsor reports a lot of enthusiasm and splendid programs planned and put on by the members themselves.

—A fine group of some seventeen high school boys and girls are availing themselves of the opportunity for Bible study following the Wednesday evening choir practice at Reedley.

The young people of Upland have been showing considerable interest in the mid-week Bible study hour also.

—A Boys' Bible Study Club for ages 10-15 years has been started at the Albany church. The club meets the first Monday of each month for Bible study, and once a month the members and their leader make a trip to some point of special interest to boys.

and women who speak with understanding and authority. Youth is thus confronted with the obligation to develop one's self at one's best.

These opportunities are presented through lectures, pictures, music, and other programs, art exhibits special series of programs in the fields of Bible and missions, youth conferences, chapel programs by faculty members, student groups or visitors, and discussion groups.

Many organizations make worthwhile contributions to the preparation of youth. These and other opportunities are offered by our schools as a part of the training program for our youth.

Parents' Days have done much to make for a more complete understanding of the opportunities offered to those who come in the spirit of really wanting to learn. They afford insight to the folks at home and encouragement to those away from home. They also lead to a better understanding and promote a feeling of belonging together during a critical period in the life of youth.

A variety of organizations in the schools provide further training in preparation for public services to be rendered in the future. They also help to overcome the tendency, still too prevalent, of thinking of college as a kind of grade school for youth approaching manhood and womanhood. Our youth of college age are no longer children. They are young men and young women whose maturity has been forced by conditions in a world which has lost its way. Campus influences are of greater importance under these conditions than too many people suspect.

Encouragement to Whom Encouragement Is Due

For the encouragement of our faculties, who devote themselves to the cause of Christian education, be it said that their devotion is the finest kind of example which can be set before our youth at this time. Youth thinks long thoughts. And sometimes it takes a long time to express these thoughts. That does not mean that the influence of their teachers has been lost. A genuine appeal to higher living, physically, mentally and spiritually is not lost!

Our schools need physical equipment. They need dormitories for students, library buildings and facilities, music buildings, auditoriums, buildings and equipment for physical education and equipment for all manner of improvements and replacements. A rapid growth in the student bodies after the war makes this a real problem which is rapidly assuming the proportions of an emergency. As a great need for our work it has become a clarion call to all of us.

Our schools need funds to pay debts which were assumed in the past because of pressing needs. They need gifts for larger endowments and for the meeting of current expenses without embarrassment. Teachers have too long been compelled to undercut their efficiency by making sacrifices which others should have shared with them—more might have done so if they had known the facts. One hopes that the time may soon come when those who are to give themselves to the teaching and guidance of youth shall no longer be embarrassed by having to ask for justice, or be hampered by unnecessary economic difficulties. One also hopes that our people will become more generally awakened to the fact that leaders in Christian institutions of all kinds have too often been placed into positions where they came dangerously near being chargeable with failure to practice the great principles which they professed and taught, because of a lack of funds which would have enabled them to do what would obviously have been right.

Five of our schools have extended invitations to visit them since last September. It has been my privilege to visit three of these and spend an average of six days with each. They are doing good work over a range of nine years beginning with the first year in the academy and including a fifth year above the academy. That gives range to the work which deserves appreciation. The faculties face staggering problems courageously. Their going is far from easy. Nevertheless, they are willing to do more for the good of our children. They deserve whole-hearted support. They deserve this support through thoughtful understanding, through consecrated, expectant effort God-ward, and through liberal giving. What we invest in our youth now will bear fruit for a long time to come.

The Reader Says:

Editor, The Mennonite

I hereby express my appreciation for the emphasis of that very fine article, "What Is the Church?" by Rev. Lester Hostetler. May I call particular attention to the fact that the author of the article thinks of the church as extending beyond denominational lines? One must view with no little concern the growing sectarian emphasis that is being made in our General Conference. I am sure that I speak for a substantial number of Mennonites when I say that we have now gone far enough in emphasizing our "uniqueness" and that the time has come when we should understand and appreciate what is of value in other Christian communions. I am sure that a great number of Mennonites could express a spiritual kinship to men like Stanley Jones, Kirby Page and George Buttrick. We as a denominational group will be the worse for trying to insulate ourselves from their influence. The Christian pacifism of these men—and one might mention a number of others—carries with it a challenge and a positiveness which I find lacking in most interpretations of "Bible non-resistance" which have come to my attention.

It is unfortunate that at the recent study conference held at Cleveland, Ohio, where representatives of the churches of America met to consider the Christian basis for world order, the Mennonites sent representatives, but it was explained that they were to go only "as observers." In my opinion, if we really held to the conception of the church portrayed in the thoughtful article by Rev. Hostetler, our denomination would have been there not as an observer, but as a participant.—Russell L. Mast

A FURTHER WORD

Editor, The Mennonite

Just one further word concerning my recent correspondence relative to "Biblical Nonresistance." In the third paragraph from the last, where I think the crux of the matter rests, one sentence didn't say what I intended it to say. It should have read, "No matter what word play you frame upon Menno Simon's words and life, or those of his colleagues, men are not imprisoned, burned at the stake, executed, nailed to a cross because they live 'nonresistance'; men are imprisoned, burned at the stake, executed, nailed to a cross precisely because they do resist with something in some way."

Your editorial emphasis upon overcoming evil with good is excellent, but when we can do so little "good," or do "good" only when it is safe to do so, or do only the kind of "good" which will not excite those who "make long prayers" while they "devour widows' houses," then we have lost something our Fathers had in the Early Church and in the Anabaptist Movement.

What Mennonitism of tomorrow will be, depends to a great extent on the facing of this issue: "Can we regain the experience which Jesus (and our Anabaptist Fathers) called 'Nonresistance' and 'overcoming evil with good'?"

Carl J. Landes
Merom, Indiana

(Editor's Note: We are sorry for the errors, which, due to faulty proofreading appeared in Brother Landes' letter (See issue of Jan. 23). We invite Brother Landes to define clearly the "experience" which Jesus (and our Anabaptist Fathers) called 'Nonresistance' and over-coming evil with good.'" We would like to have the best concrete examples that Brother Landes can give of a similar "experience" today.)

IN MEMORIAM

John Krehbiel, son of Christian and Lena (Deser) Krehbiel, was born in Rehn, Bavaria, Germany, on August 31, 1865, and died December 4, 1944. He was baptized in the Mennonite Church in his youth, and was a member of the Menno Mennonite Church at the time of his departure. When sixteen he migrated with his parents to Summerfield, Illinois, two years later to Halstead, Kansas, and in 1890 to Lind, Washington. In 1899 he was married to Christina Jansen. He is mourned by his wife; two daughters, Mrs. Susan Baumgart and Mrs. Helen Peterson; and one sister, Mrs. Susie Neare.

Katharina Boese nee Huebert was born at Hampton, Nebraska, on October 8, 1877, and died January 29, 1945. She was baptized by Elder Peter J. Friesen and received into the Bethesda Church, Henderson, in 1886. She and Henry Boese were united in marriage in 1901. After the family moved to Madrid, she joined the first Mennonite Church of that place. She is survived by her husband, and four children: Mrs. Minnie Boese Reimer and Herman of Madrid; Henry, Canon City, Colorado; Benjamin, Washington, D. C.; one brother, George Huebert, Dallas, Oregon; and one sister, Mrs. Eva Huebert Janzen, Henderson.

Aganetha Unruh Harder, daughter of Johann J. and Elizabeth Wiebe Unruh, was born near Delft, Minnesota, on April 21, 1884, and died January 30, 1945. She was baptized and received into the Bergfelder Church in 1902. In 1905 she married Bernhard C. Harder. They lived on the farm until four years ago when they moved to Delft. She is mourned by her husband, three daughters, one son, three sisters, and two brothers.

Jeremiah Basinger, son of Peter and Lydia (Beechy) Basinger, was born in Putnam County, Ohio, on December 13, 1876, and died in Bluffton, January 24, 1945. For many years he was active in the Mennonite Mutual Aid Society and in Sunday School work, both in the St. John's Church and in the First Mennonite Church. Five years ago, his wife Anna (Diller) Basinger preceded him in death. He is survived by three sons and eight daughters.

Noah Zuercher, son of Samuel and Marian (Amstutz) Zuercher, was born in Berne, Indiana, April 14, 1891. He married Rena Sprunger on January 20, 1918. He was the father of Kenneth, Marie and Merlin. The family has lived in Bluffton for the past twenty years, during which time Mr. Zuercher was an engineer at the municipal light plant. He died at the Bluffton hospital on January 29. He was a member of the First Mennonite Church.

Anna Wiebe, daughter of J. G. and Lisette nee Penner Wiebe, was born August 19, 1873, in Danzig, West Prussia. She came to America in 1876. In 1890 she was baptized by Elder Gerhard Penner.

She died in the Mennonite Hospital, Beatrice, on January 27. She is survived by one sister, Mrs. J. H. Penner.

Eva Franz, nee Unruh, was born in Alexanderwohl, South Russia, on June 6, 1859, and died December 10, 1944. In 1874 she migrated to America with her parents. She was baptized by Elder Jacob Buller and received into the Alexanderwohl Church. In 1920 she transferred her membership to the Goessel Church. In 1881 she married Peter Franz, who preceded her in death in 1923. Since that time she stayed much at the home of her adopted son, Herman Rogalsky.

Elizabeth Peters Friesen, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth Janzen Peters, was born in Russia. With her parents she migrated to Henderson, Nebraska, in 1878. Here she was baptized and received into the Mennonite Church. In 1888 she was united in marriage to Isaac B. Friesen, who preceded her in death. She died January 15, 1945. She is mourned by three daughters, Mrs. H. P. Eitzen, Mrs. A. F. Krause, and Mrs. John Fidler.

Lena Krehbiel Wedel, daughter of Henry and Anna Suter Krehbiel, was born near Pandora, Ohio, on October 30, 1875. In 1888 the family moved to Kansas. Here she was baptized by Rev. Val. Krehbiel and accepted as a member of the Mennonite Church at Christian. In 1899 she was married to P. J. Wedel, who received a call from the Bethel College Board of Directors in 1902. With the exception of one year the family has lived on the Bethel campus since that time. In 1905 she and her husband joined the Bethel College Church. She passed away January 21, 1945. She is mourned by her husband; two daughters, Esther A. and Margaret E.; and one son, Waldo R., Washington, D. C.

Rev. Henry P. Unruh, son of Rev. Peter T. and Marie Siebert Unruh, was born in Karlsvalde, Russia, on February 25, 1865. In 1874 he migrated to Newton, Kansas, with his parents. Here they lived in the immigrant house. In 1875 they moved to Yankton, South Dakota, and from there to Marion. Here he spent his youth and here he was baptized by Elder F. Schartner and later accepted as a member of the Bethesda Mennonite Church. In 1888 he moved to Avon, where he joined the Friedensberg Church. He felt the call of the Lord, and in 1889 he was ordained. For forty-six years he served this church. In 1886 he married Helena Schulz, who now survives him. He died December 1, 1944, and is mourned by his wife and the following children: Dr. Benjamin Unruh, Emery, South Dakota; Peter Unruh, Avon; Anthony Unruh, Bloomfield, Montana; Elizabeth and Anna of the home; and William Unruh, Avon.

RELIEF

Home from England

Glen Miller and J. N. Byler arrived in the States, February 9, having left England, January 28. They traveled by fast convoy but arrived in a U. S. port several days late because the entire voyage was made in stormy weather.

Bro. Miller went directly to Goshen, Indiana, to join his family after a year of separation and to resume his duties on the faculty of Goshen College. Bro. Byler has returned to Akron Headquarters and has briefly and informally reported on his visit to Palestine and Syria, the trip from Cairo to England by seaplane, and the trip home.

Yugoslav Refugees Begin Homeward Migration

Comments made in recent letters received from our Middle East relief workers indicate that changes are being anticipated and are taking place in the refugee camps in Egypt. Mary Emma Showalter's statement, "The Dalmatian Coast where most of these people are from is no longer in the war area, so folks are returning," was verified by the New York Times, February 2, 1945:

"Twelve hundred of the 12000 Yugoslavs in the refugee camp at El Shatt, outside Cairo, have started back for Yugoslavia, the first movement of the kind to take place under UNRRA's auspices. Some 200 of them went by ship to Dalmatian ports and 600 others are awaiting embarkation. They are going back to a country that lacks food and supplies for its existing population."

Rice Harvest in India Good

The Mennonite relief workers in India are finding it possible to close the emergency phase of the Bengal relief work, as administered under the M. R. C. I. (Mennonite Relief Committee of India). However, further rehabilitation will have to be carried out. A report from India, dated December 8, 1944, presents this brighter outlook for the people of the Bengal area:

"This week we are issuing the last rice under our own tickets. A few of our ticket holders will most likely transfer to Government tickets administered by us. Prices of rice continue to come down. The new crop, which is just being harvested, is very good."

Canadian Sails for Middle East

Farewell services were held at Akron for Arthur Jahnke, Herbert, Saskatchewan, on the morning of February 14. He will join the other Mennonite workers in the refugee camps. Bro. Jahnke has mechanical and carpentry experience.

Selective Service Issues Directive

After investigating the application of directives regarding the administration of C.P.S. units in mental hospital and other public institutions, Selective Service issued a further directive to clarify the former instructions. The new ruling stipu-ates that "all assignees must live on the grounds of the hospital or other institution" unless approval has been secured from Selective Service to live away from the institution. Other points of the directive make hospitals responsible to provide medical and dental attention necessary to "maintain health and working capacity," and prohibit assignees from working outside the hospital during time off unless such work has been approved by Selective Service.

Conference on Conscription

Representative C.P.S. men from the Mennonite camps and units in the East will gather with church leaders at Powellsville, Maryland, February 24 to 25, to discuss peacetime conscription and what our attitude as Mennonites should be toward it. It is hoped that by the sharing of ideas on this issue the thinking of C.P.S. men as a group may be clarified.

Relief Unit at Howard Discontinued

The C.P.S. Section has announced that the relief training unit at the State Hospital, Howard, Rhode Island, terminated, February 1. This action was taken after a meeting with the relief trainees and other members of the C.P.S. unit on January 25. Considerable dissatisfaction had arisen concerning the study and work schedule provided for trainees. Members of the relief unit will have the opportunity to transfer to other units if they so choose.

C.P.S. Briefs

Twelve C.P.S. men will be added to the dairy-herd-testing unit in Pennsylvania. This increase will raise the strength of the unit in the state to seventy assignees.

Daniel P. King has been appointed to serve as director of the Boonsboro C.P.S. camp in Washington County, Maryland. Brother King will succeed John B. Stoltzfus, who has been acting as director temporarily.

JOTTINGS

—Dr. and Mrs. John R. Schmidt are giving medical service to 4,000 Mennonites in Paraguay and to many of the Indians. Eight nurses are helping them.

—The Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas; holds periodic offerings for Bethel College. A group of ladies recently visited the Relief Clothing Center in Newton and mended clothes. Cabinets have been built into the parsonage kitchen, and the kitchen is to be painted. The pastor announces "Open House" for later on.

—Rev. Erland Waltner is conducting pre-Easter services at the First Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio. The subjects for the week are, "Jesus—The Flint-Faced Saviour," "Judas—The Friendly Enemy," "Peter—The Over-confident Friend," "Pilate—The Guilty Judge," "Barabbas—The Released Murderer," "Simon—The Drafted Cross-Bearer," "Nicodemus—The Post-Mortem Loyalist."

—Dr. J. H. Langenwalter will be one of the teachers in the Union Leadership Training School to be held at Beatrice, Nebraska, March 4, 5, 6. Brother Langenwalter will offer a course on "The Life of Christ," or "How Jesus Met the Problems of His Day."

—Dr. S. F. Pannabecker, who has China as his final destination, recently spent two weeks in Jerusalem. From there he was to leave for India. In China he is to supervise M.C.C. relief activities. He has already spent some time in Egypt where the M.C.C. has a group of workers.

—Dina Meschberger's eighty-seventh birthday: Rev. Henry Harder writes, "Our family was invited to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Lord, El Reno, Ok'ahoma, on February 10 to celebrate Grandmother Dina Meschberger's eighty-seventh birthday. She is one of the very few missionaries left from the Darlington mission days."

—Geary, Oklahoma: Dr. Eugene Kellersberger of the American Mission to Lepers recently gave an inspiring message in our church.

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: "On Sunday night, February 18, Rev. Walter Gering showed colored pictures which he had taken a few months ago while in Puerto Rico. His cousin, Winton Stucky, came along to operate the machine. Mr. Stucky, who for some time served in the "Smoke Jumpers" unit brought along a number of pictures. These were also shown. The audience very much appreciated both sets of pictures which were very informative. The church was comfortably filled, for a goodly number of friends from our sister churches had also come out to attend the service. All were much impressed with the thoroughly constructive work that our C.P.S. men are doing."

—Fortuna, Missouri: "Our Senior Christian Endeavor is sponsoring a new missionary project. Each month a definite amount of money is sent to Missionary Rodolphe Petter to be used in helping support Emma King, a native worker. She works in the government hospital part time, and during her free time she goes out to the Cheyenne Indians to teach the Bible and help in other ways. She is very fluent in both the Cheyenne and English languages. This makes her well qualified for the work, and she is under the direct supervision of the Missionary Petters. Through the aid of our Society she is given some remuneration for this extra service." —Mrs. H.D.R., Corr.

—North Newton, Kansas: The church council of the Bethel College Church, upon instruction given at the annual business meeting, has appointed a church building council which consists of the following committees: The Executive Committee, Survey Committee, Committee on Worship and the Religious Arts, Committee on Christian Education, Committee on Fellowship and Recreation, Plans and Construction Committee, Committee on Finance and Promotion, Committee on Furnishings and Equipment, and the Committee on Women's Work. The Sermon on the Mount is the subject for the Lenten Bible readings. The pastor leads the Sunday evening discussions. It is suggested that the Sermon on the Mount be read often in the coming weeks and that as much as possible be memorized. The pastor is preaching a series of doctrinal sermons. During Lent the Apostles' Creed is being used instead of the usual responsive readings. A note in the bulletin says of it, "It is an ancient document that had a gradual growth and expresses in scriptural language what Christians believe. The phrase 'descended into hell' is found in a version about 390 A.D., but it is not found in the earliest versions that exist today and is omitted from our version in the Hymnary."

A recent bulletin carried the suggestion that families practice certain hymns in the home if possible and then come prepared to sing them heartily in the worship service.

—The Western District Peace Committee is to meet during the spring session of the Ministers' Conference.

—Fred A. Johnson, missionary at Tuba City (Moen Copi), Arizona, attended part time the recent session of the Foreign Mission Board.

—Wadsworth, Ohio: The First Church is to vote on an amendment which would enable the Sunday School superintendent and the Women's Christian Service organization to be members of the council.

—First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: The following motions adopted at the annual meeting may be of interest to others: "That we continue to observe a Deaconess Sunday as recommended by the conference." "That the inactive members of our church be included in the free mailing of our church papers." "That the Board of Trustees arrange for another Ministerial Internship for the coming summer." "That all members of our church serving as draftees in C.P.S. camps receive $25 per month during 1945, this money to be added to the reserve fund already established and given to members upon their release from Civilian Public Service." "That the gift from the late Henry Albrecht ($451.56) be put into a new fund for the purpose of building a new church." "That, in case the Education Committee should find itself unable to secure an instructor who is qualified to teach accredited high school subjects, the committee be authorized for the coming school year, to change our Mennonite Bible Academy to a one year Bible School, specializing mostly in Bible, Bible history, and music." "That we assess each male member $15, plus 15 cents per acre, and continue with the free-will offerings." The pastor has issued a "Church Directory." This consists of both sides of a mimeographed sheet. It gives all officers and their terms of office. A summary of offices shows that 103 persons hold 145 positions. The church contributions are 312 per cent over the 1940 level. The average per member was $52.66. A total of $2,179.85 was given for C.P.S. in 1944. In addition $3,380.50 was raised as a Post-War Fund for members in C.P.S.

—The Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, will observe its seventieth anniversary with an appropriate festival on March 11. Rev. A. J. Dyck, Vice-President of the General Conference, is the pastor of this church. According to its yearbook it has a membership of 395. It gave a total of $2,316.97 for C.P.S. in 1944. Albert M. Gaeddert, who is General Director of all Mennonite C.P.S. Camps and Units, is a member of this church.

—Rev. J. E. Amstutz, Pastor of the Apostolic Mennonite Church, Trenton, Ohio, reports that this church has again voted for the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan.

—First Church, Upland, California: Pictures fitting for the Easter season were shown on a recent "church night." Dr. Kirby Page will speak Sunday morning, March 4, and each Sunday evening throughout the month.

—Plans are being re not to for a community hospital at Freeman, S. Often tota. From the "Free hat t man Courier we glean the following: "The hospital is to cost approximately $50,000.00 and is to be a twenty-bed hospital, with operating room, drug and supply room, x-ray room, kitchen, laboratory, and office. The hospital is to be built on a cash basis and money is being collected in the local community which is to be refunded 100 per cent if no hospital is built. All expenses and time will be donated by workers until the hospital is built. Freeman is an ideal location for a community hospital, because it is centrally located, with almost an equal distance from neighboring towns and no hospital within fifty miles.... The maternity home, established two years ago, has been a great success, and there is no reason why a hospital wouldn't be a big success. —By Committee"

—Bergfelder Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Rev. August Ewert, who has so faithfully served as pastor for almost four years, was re-elected for a term of three years. At our weekly Bible and prayer hour we are studying about the "Love of God." Rev. Ewert leads us while Mrs. Ewert has charge of the children's class during the same time. Herbert H. Peters was ordained as an evangelist on the morning of February 11.

—Upland, California: Kirby Page is bringing a series of sermons on the following subjects: "What Is God Doing Now?" "Why Was Jesus Crucified?" "Total Allegiance to Jesus Christ," "The Meaning of the Cross for Us Today," "How To Be Transformed through Prayer," and "Why Be a Member and a Worker in the Church?"

—Conscientious Objectors Not Cowards, Says the "Christian Herald" in Dan Poling's Question and Answer Column. Question: A woman who is a member of the church I attend says that Conscientious Objectors are cowards. What do you think? Answer: I think that the woman you referred to is mis-informed and mistaken. Some Conscientious Objectors are among the bravest of the brave, and the majority of all Conscientious Objectors are making an intelligent and sacrificial investment of their lives for their God and country."

—Christian Herald, January, 1945.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

West Swamp—At the annual meeting on January 13, the church adopted the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan. The Christian Endeavor Society presented a program at the Old Folks Home at Frederrick on February 4. Dr. Harvey Bauman was the speaker. —Corr.

Fairfield—Every Sunday during Lent, there will be a worship service for all the young people of the county in the Y.M.C.A. The services are sponsored by the Girl Reserves. Various Christian Endeavor Societies of the county will provide the worship programs.

Deep Run—The pastor, the Rev. Russell L. Mast, announced that Lenten sermons for the season will include four from Galations 2:20, under the general theme of the roots of the Christian life. The subjects will be as follows: Repentance—"I am crucified with Christ," Faith—"I live by the faith of the Son of God," Atonement—"Who loved me and gave himself for me," and Regeneration—"I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me."

Schwenksville—The pastor, the Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, is editor of the Church Messenger, published monthly by the Church. In the January issue, he called attention to the fact that the twenty-eighth volume started with that issue. He also revealed that the meetinghouse was dedicated November 9, 1894 and that the late Rev. W. S. Gottshall was pastor at the time. Another interesting note was the fact that the original manuscript of "The Historical Address" delivered by Brother Gottshall was placed in the pastor's hands. It was written by pencil and is very legible.

On 'Giving Advice'

By David D. Eitzen

According to statistics concerning the recent past, for every twenty-five babies born, one will become institutionalized in later life for a psychosis, twelve will be relatively 'normal,' and twelve will suffer from varying degrees of psychoneurosis. No wonder that a student in this field recently wrote a book entitled, The Neurotic Personality of Our Time. Even concerning the more ordered life of the previous century Thoreau wrote, "Most men live lives of quiet desperation." Government authorities suggest that about one-half of battle front casualties are of emotional origin. There are actually more people in mental institutions today in this country than the total number of patients hospitalized for all other causes combined. Jesus who "knew what was in men," "When He saw the multitudes, was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad as sheep having no shepherd."

A parent of two children, thirty-eight years of age, has been the teacher of a class in the church-school of an evangelical, Christian church for many years. He has been unhappy for sometime and has confessed certain acts of un-Christian behavior and certain spiritual sins with scalding tears of remorse, and yet, in a letter today he wrote, "This morning I still feel like an up-rooted plant, lying with roots exposed to the mercy of the elements, waiting to be transplanted."

Concerning the counselor. Is it possible for fellowmen who have fears and misgivings of their own, to be of help to such unhappy and spiritually distorted folk? The statement is sometimes made that such problems of personal adjustment should be referred to psychiatrists or clinical psychologists. But this is not practical for several reasons. In the first place, there is a very small number of professionally qualified psychiatrists at the present time. As indicated above, the number of people who require help in this direction is legion. We produce neurotics by wholesale method, but we have only meager retail methods to deal with them. The psychiatrist, who is a medical physician, should be reserved for psychotic or 'insane' cases. The burden of affording people spiritual orientation falls upon the shoulders of intelligent and trained lay people who are dedicated to do the will of God.

The nature of maladjustment. Precisely what may be at the bottom of such inefficient behavior? Is it probably a lack of intelligence? Or is it a matter of inexperience? Maybe such a person should be informed about the techniques of working effectively. Fortunately these handicaps do not produce feelings of inadequacy and of unhappiness. The emotionally disturbed and the confused people of today are usually very intelligent. Indeed, ignorance is bliss.

Broadly speaking, the cause of maladjustment to reality might be termed, "pathological self-centeredness." There is, of course, a self-centeredness which is basic to life. To be and to grow is man's primary obligation to God. When we eat we do God's will, and that in terms of self-preservation. But there is such a thing as over-eating, not because one is physically hungry (although one thinks one is) but because of a general sense of insecurity. Unfortunately, having over-eaten, one is even more insecure. That is the logic of sin.

Counseling becomes then an attempt to help people face with courage those feelings of shame and guilt which, pushed out of awareness, give rise to compensatory behavior. The problem of counseling is therefore not to tell a person that he is doing the wrong thing. Often people suffer intensely because they keep doing what they know to be wrong and leave undone what they so strongly desire to do. And the stronger this desire to do good, the severer the unhappiness.

Dr. D. D. Eitzen, lecturer at annual Bible Week, Bethel College, March 12-16. Born at Mountain Lake, Minn.; graduate of Bethel College; pastor of Los Angeles Menn. Ch.; active in promoting Y. P. Union of our Conference; Ph. D. in field of personal counseling; teaching in his field in University of Calif. since 1938; frequent speaker on pastoral counseling at minister's conferences.

This is probably what Jesus had in mind when he said, "Come unto me all ye who are 'mühselig'"—ye who strive for your salvation. The people of a burning building in Massachusetts lost their lives because they frantically pushed against both sides of a revolving door.

This is the heart of the counseling problem—how can one 'save' people who are under obligation to God to be, and to grow, from striving for their salvation because their very striving precludes their salvation? That is, how can one dissolve people's self-saving emotions which block their creativeness.

Basic assumptions for counseling. Counseling from a Christian point of view is based on several assumptions:

1. That personality is the most sacred of God's creation.
2. That therefore man must not be coerced but rather allowed to make his own choices for weal or woe. He has the right to seek help, and to accept help, but he also has the right to refuse it.
3. That God has provided everything necessary for man's spiritual help—"My grace is sufficient."
4. That the counselor's part is to remove the 'bacteria' of egocentricity which disintegrate personality.

The chief objective of Christian counseling is to release personality from the compulsions of self-saving for doing the will of God, which is to relate fellowmen to the loving relationship of the family of God. The day by day by-products of this released and saved life is a personal sense of "the peace of God that passeth understanding;" a consequent courage to take his stand with the minority, even when that means only God and him; and supreme satisfaction in loving service to mankind.

The counseling procedure which implements this faith concerning God's purposes with man, involves certain attitudes on the part of the counselor. 1. A genuine desire to understand the counselee from his inadequate point of view. 2. An unqualified acceptance of the counselee as he is. 3. Allowing the counselee to express all his hostilities, fears and foibles, doubts and confusions, ambitions and 'dreams' and finally his feelings of guilt. 4. A faith that "God giveth the increase" when the counselee's attitudes no longer block growth.

Procedure in counseling. One should probably follow certain steps in such relationship therapy. 1. The center of interest is the counselee's feelings and attitudes. 2. This counselee-centered interest enables the counselee to articulate his negative feelings and attitudes which have formerly blocked him in objective and creative activity. 3. Accept, reflect, and in reflecting clarify, but do not interpret the expression of negative feelings. This will afford him insight. 4. When full 'catharsis' or release of negative feelings has taken place, the counselee will begin to articulate positive feelings of confidence, hope and charity. The counselor should accept, reflect and clarify these as he did the negative feelings. 5. Testify of the laws of living for Christ from personal experience and from the records of others, especially the men and women of the Bible. 6. Mutually plan a daily program of self-discipline. 7. Supervise the counselee's initial attempts to live by faith.

Christian counseling is not for those who must feel superior. "I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a servant and a witness. . ." The counselee who was quoted above wrote later concerning his experience as a counselee, "Is this what Jesus meant when He said, 'I was a stranger and ye took me in'?"

A Lenten Prayer

*"Lord, teach me how to consecrate
My soul, my life, my all;
That I may learn to follow Thee,
Whenever Thou would'st call.*

*"Lord, grant me true humility,
May selfishness abate;
The cross must come before the crown,
The servants—they are great.*

*"Lord, give me keener eyes to see
The darkness of my soul;
Enlighten Thou my consciousness,
For Thou can't make me whole.*

*"Lord, give me greater willingness My faith, though weak, to share;
May I not hinder any soul,
But help them trust Thy care.*

*"Lord, help me try my stewardship,
I owe my all to Thee;
To hoard means loss; to give brings gain
For all eternity.*

*"Lord, I would have devotion, too,
With costly gifts outpoured,
As Mary showed at Bethany,
A love for Christ, her Lord.*

*"Lord, help me prove my loyalty
With those triumphant throngs
I, too, would reach Jerusalem
With joy, and palms, and songs."*

PSYCHOLOGY AS AN AID

It seems that ministers in our conference and in other denominations are more and more esteeming psychology as an aid to the ministry. One of the older ministers of the Northern District enjoys books on counseling. An older minister of the Western District has books dealing with the psychological approach. He told me of another minister in this district who likes to visit a psychiatrist occasionally just to talk things over with him. Churches in this district have been inviting a Mennonite psychiatrist for messages, which have been much appreciated. The American Friend recently carried an article on "Why Ministers Should Study Psychology," written by a minister who is completing his doctoral work in psychology. There are a number of good books on pastoral psychology and pastoral counseling. Dr. David Eitzen at the end of his article in this issue suggests two which he considers very good for counseling. On the first day (March 13) of the Western District Ministers' Conference Rev. Eitzen will give a message on "Feeding the Flock of God through Pastoral Counseling" and will lead the discussion on it. His messages for the afternoon sessions of Bible Week will center on personal counseling. Some ministers, undoubtedly, are gaining a new appreciation for this whole approach from their contacts with C. P. S. men who work in mental hospitals. Others noting breakdowns or serious difficulty among religious workers may begin to study on that account. This general trend should be very wholesome, for rightly pursued it should help ministers to acquire a much better understanding of themselves and of others whom they may seek to help. Especially helpful are those psychologists who successfully relate the insights of psychology and the teachings of Jesus to each other. They truly give light. To our mind one of the greatest benefits to the ministry from this whole approach is the emphasis of understanding people rather than judging, condemning, or censoring them. Those who wander in darkness are less hesitant about coming to Christians for help when this is the emphasis. We need witnessing that invites and that inspires confidence. The best in the psychological approach to human behavior is an aid to the ministry.

WHY NOT DURING LENT

The beautiful carols which one hears in the busy stores before Christmas Day lift one in feeling. Perhaps, the managers know that it does this to tired shoppers. Perhaps, many of them add this touch of Christmas in order that people may become more conscious of shopping for gifts. At least a lot of commercialization goes along with the observance of Christmas in a great many places of business. Easter is also utilized for bringing in the money. However, the passion of Jesus is not easily laid hold of for the making of money, and for that we can be very glad, regretting the commercialization of Christmas and Easter as we do. It seems to us that a very precious opportunity for bringing great spiritual events to the attention of people has been misused and abused. Perhaps, the usual spirit of the market place in far too many cases makes this nearly inevitable. However, this opportunity need not be so abused, and it is not in all cases. Whether the practice is still continued we do not know, but seven years ago it was reported that each year during Lent the large Wanamaker store in Philadelphia showed two masterpieces of religious art in the court of the store. The pictures referred to are Munkacsy's "Christ before Pilate" and Munkacsy's "Christ on Calvary." The latter is about twenty-three feet by fourteen; it is the original masterpiece. It was reported that these two pictures were shown during Lent for the purpose of deepening the spiritual life of those who might see them.

This we think a most worthy purpose, which might, perhaps, be emulated in a similar way by other stores. For should not the Suffering Servant be permitted to cleanse the daily market place? If religious art has worth, might it not be used in those places where the hearts of men are tempted towards crass materialism? If our life is not to be segmented and departmentalized, then something like this might be in order.

Imagine walking into a store and seeing a reproduction of some Lenten scene and of hearing "At the Cross" or some other beautiful song about the cross. Might this not aid men and women to keep their minds on Him who gave His life in order that they might have life abundant and eternal? We expect something like this in church, but we do not expect it in the realm of business; the unusualness of it might catch our attention anew. Or has the Christian tone no place in the business that we see fit to transact?

GOOD NEWS

The news that our missionaries in the Philippines are free is indeed cause for praise. They were kept safe by the Japanese. We are glad that they can again have more and better food than they had been getting. A member of the American Legion, who recently spoke in a C. P. S. Camp, "described the conditions in Japan and revealed how every three acres of tillable land has to support eight persons. Very little meat is to be had because it takes too much feed for cattle. Fish, on the other hand, is easily and abundantly raised, so Japan depends upon fish for much of her food. Japan created an industrial competition with other nations in order to meet and solve the problem of feeding her people, but the United States built trade barriers around Japan to keep down the competition." If this is correct, then it would seem that Japan does not have very much food for use. Perhaps, this has something to do with the undernourishment of our missionaries. We have cause to rejoice in the reports that have come from them.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

A POST-INTERMENT LETTER FROM THE JANZENS

Through the courtesy of Rev. and Mrs. John Lichti, Deer Creek, Oklahoma, we here reprint the greater part of a letter received from their children, the Albert Jantzens who were recently released from Japanese internment in the Philippines. The letter was written from Manila on February 7. The letter follows:

Our Loved Ones at Home:

Greetings with II Cor. 1:3,10,11.

Yes, the much longed-for day has arrived, and we are released, praise the Lord! We are actually in Bilibid prison in Manila where we have been interned since December 30, 1944, but how different since our American soldiers have charge of us!

And to add to all this joy and excitement, we were most happily surprised today to receive eleven letters from you, dated November and December. How we thank you for all the news . . . and everything else that has happened is almost too much for one to digest in one day—especially with all this good food to digest besides. We are on army rations since yesterday, and we feast from the minute we get up until we go to bed. Of course, it is all in tin cans, but such good food. We feel so much stronger already.

From the radio you will know what is happening, but we are in a fairly safe zone. We are all well, and oh, so happy to think that we will very probably see you soon.

The Lord is constantly keeping and blessing us.

May He bless you richly and keep you too is our prayer.

Please notify Albert's folks, as only one letter is allowed this time.

*With much love to each one,
the Jantzens*

POST-INTERMENT LETTER FROM FRIEDA AND MARVIN DIRKS

The following letter from Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Dirks came via Red Cross to Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Dirks, Halstead, Kansas. The letter was written from Manila on February 7, 1945 and received here February 26. The letter follows:

Dear Folks:

We are still in Bilibid Prison, but under the protection of our own forces. May I add, that we have experienced the care of One mightier than ourselves, thru a very trying time. The battle for Manila is still raging, big shells are bursting, but this section of the city is quite under American control. In a day or two it will all be over, the roads free, and we will probably soon be transferred to some place of disembarkation for to be with you in the greatest and most blessed country on earth.

Our health is fair; at least we will soon be able to build up with a little rest and good food. Army grub is wonderful to us.

Will a Man Rob God?

By Edmund J. Miller

In an effort to make them face facts about themselves, the prophet Malachi figuratively gripped his listless people by the shoulders and shook them into wakefulness by asking a most searching question, "Will a man rob God?"

Man will rob the coffers of the city that elected him to a position of trust. He will rob banks, stores, cars, and people, but will he rob God?

"Certainly not," one is ready to answer with horror. "Man would not be so mad as to rob the all-seeing God himself!" But facing the facts we find we are wrong. Man WILL rob God.

He did so in the days of Malachi. This man of God declared, "Ye have robbed God in tithes and offerings. You have cheated God of His dues." It was the conviction of the prophet that to refuse to tithe was to be guilty of robbing God.

How Did These People Become Guilty of Robbing God?

They could not excuse themselves by pleading ignorance for they had known from infancy that the tenth of all their increase belonged to God. They could not plead poverty, though many of them were poor, for poverty does not prevent people from tithing. In fact, it seems that tithing is more difficult when one's income increases, probably because one is impressed by the amount to be given and forgets the far greater amount that will be left.

They did not withhold their tithe because they had thrown their religion overboard. They still attended church and gave "after a fashion," but their gifts were small and cheap. This was the case because they had lost all sense of God's love, and having ceased to love, they had lost all zest for giving. Love delights to give and is heartbroken when it cannot.

These people no longer asked, "How much can we give?" but, "How little can we give and get by?" They no longer brought the best of their flocks but those of least value . . . the torn, the sick, the worthless. Of this the prophet said scornfully, "Offer such gifts to thy governor. Take your sick sheep to the minister of Artaxerxes and see how he will receive them!" Having lost their love, they were offering to God what they would not have dared to offer man. They had adopted a financial system by which they were robbing God and themselves.

Is this not true of many Christians today? Are not many well-meaning people robbing God in tithes and offerings?

Some of you may reply, "The law of the tithe is an old Jewish law. It is not binding upon us who are Christians under grace." No, it isn't binding on us, but we, who are privileged to know the wonderful grace of Jesus, should give at least the tithe required under the law. The tenth is the minimum. It belongs to God. Our real gift of love is that which is above the tenth.

Why Should We Tithe?

Tithing is scriptural. It is taught emphatically in the Old Testament, and here are solid facts on which it rests:

1. God is the absolute owner of everything. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof, the world, and they that dwell therein." Every foot of land, every bushel of wheat, "the cattle on a thousand hills" are His, and so are we by creation and by the right of redemption. One of the first convictions that came to the Spirit-baptized saints after Pentecost was that God is the absolute owner of all—"Neither said any of them that ought of the things that he possessed was his own."

2. Since God owns all we should set aside a certain part of our income in acknowledgement of His ownership. This is reasonable and right. We need to make this acknowledgement as an act of obedience and gratitude, need to make it for our own good and the good of others. If we fail to do so we come to believe that we are the owners of our wealth rather than the stewards, a conviction that always leads to spiritual impoverishment.

3. Since God owns all and since we should acknowledge His ownership, we should follow His Word as to what proportion is to be set aside for Him. The law of the tithe was not made by Moses but by God who knew it fitted into human need. Those who refused to tithe were accused of dealing dishonestly with God.

In the New Testament we find a fuller and clearer teaching about our relationship to property, wealth and income. A Bible teacher once made a study of the sayings of Jesus and found that Jesus had more to say about the right use of money than He did about repentance, regeneration, heaven or hell. Almost half of Christ's sayings relate directly or indirectly to money and its right use. In His teachings He reaffirmed God's ownership of everything, and there is no indication that He repealed the law of the tithe but rather that He sanctioned it.

Jesus further taught by implication that we ought to give a tenth as a minimum. He declared that to whom much is given, of him much is required; the greater the opportunity, the greater the responsibility. The Jews of Malachi's time did not have as great an opportunity as we have, yet the tithe was required of them and they were accounted guilty of robbery when they withheld the tenth. Do you suppose less is expected of us with our much greater light and opportunity?

To say that, because we no longer live under the law but under grace, we hence are not obligated to give the tenth is to make the grace of God minister to our stinginess. We are assuming that the greater the opportunity, the less the obligation. This is flatly contradictory to the spirit and teachings of Jesus and the New Testament.

Tithing Is a Sane and Sensible Way of Financing the Work of the Kingdom

Naturally this is the case because it is scriptural.

1. Tithing is business-like. It does not leave our support of the interests of the church to feelings or moods. There are some who pay if approached by the right individual; others pay if their emotions are stirred; still others pay if they like the pastor. Such giving is too largely a matter of chance—too little conscience in it, no system at all. The man who tithes is able to give intelligently to and through the church, being free from high power pressure from individuals, free from undue emotional appeal. Tithing is a business-like way for the giver and it enables the church to be business-like.

2. Tithing makes for cheerful giving. There are those to whom any sort of an appeal is an offense, to whom giving is almost as painful as a surgical operation. This is not true of those who tithe. When money comes into their hands the tenth is immediately put aside for the Lord and is not regarded as their own. When needs are mentioned they do not have a battle with themselves. The money is waiting and ready to be used. Such giving is a pleasure.

3. Tithing is a means of grace to him who practices it. This is the plain promise of the prophet Malachi: "‘Prove me now herewith,’ saith the Lord, ‘and see if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it.’" It is natural that tithing, when rightly done, should result in spiritual enrichment, for it is an act of faith and obedience. It brings a sense of God into our daily tasks. God and the tither are partners.

It also brings grace because the hand that is open to give will also be open to receive. The hand that is closed cannot receive the infinite treasure that God longs to give.

A boy once was playing with a costly vase. He put his hand into it and could not get it out. The repeated efforts of both he and his father failed to set him free. At last the father reluctantly took a hammer to break the prized vase, but before hitting the fatal blow said, "Now son, try once more. Open your hand wide and pull straight out." The little chap looked at him in amazement and said, "I can't do that. If I open my hand wide as you say I will drop my penny."

God is saying to us, "Open wide your hand. Get free from the clutches of selfishness, self-centeredness and indifference." But so often we refuse lest we drop our penny. And so, by our close-shut hands we do not rob God only, but we cheat ourselves of His blessing.

Edmund J. Miller is pastor of the Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington. As far as we know, this church for the past few years has had the highest per member giving record in our General Conference.

Protestantism Faces the Peace

By Don. E. Smucker

One of the most representative assemblies of Protestant leaders in recent years convened at Cleveland, January 16-19 to discuss a "Just and Durable Peace." Four hundred and eighty-one members of the conference came from almost every conceivable background, religiously and vocationally.

While the conference was organized by the Federal Council of Churches it was, by no means, limited to that constituency. One of the prominent leaders of the Southern Baptist Convention was in my section. More than once he made it clear that he was there not as a Federal Council supporter but from the largest communion in America which refuses cooperation to the Federal Council. There were some leaders present from churches I had never known, such as the Polish National Catholic group, a Protestant and definitely evangelical denomination. The Salvation Army and the Episcopalians, the colored and the white, the conscientious objector and the man in uniform, yes, the Mennonite and the Quaker—all were there. The Mennonites, by the way, attended as "observers" rather than active participants in the sessions.

Among the delegates were a number of well known individuals, including Charles P. Taft, son of the late President Taft and brother of Senator Taft; Chief Justice Bakke of the Colorado Supreme Court; Congressman Walter Judd, former missionary to China, E. Stanley Jones, Stanley High and many others, both clergy and laity.

Truly it was an impressive assembly! Yet, it did not claim to speak officially either for the several denominations or for the Federal Council. It was unofficial because many communions would have refused cooperation if the convention had attempted to commit them to this or that program for the post-war world.

I have two very definite reactions to this amazing experience: (1) The Protestant churches have come a long way toward Christian principles since the wild-eyed militarism of World War I; (2) The Protestant churches are still committed to a policy of willful compromise. Consider these two reactions.

First, the gains of Protestantism. Meeting in the midst of war, and with the vast majority giving real support to the war, there were no speeches of hate and revenge. In regard to Germany and Japan, they pled for the collaboration of all nations, including these two enemy countries, the proper economic development of them, and opposed the partitioning of Germany. Speaking of hate, may I say there were no attacks on conscientious objectors; indeed, the rights of C. O.'s were defended.

Moreover, the Protestant churches are gloriously becoming aware of the fact that God's Great Commission impels them to view the whole world as our "parish". A. L. Warnshuis of the Dutch Reformed church had just returned from a trip to Continental Europe. He reminded us of the great suffering of European Christianity, its return to the Word of God, its great desire for a faith (the root) and works (the fruit) testimony. In personal conversation he gave me the thrilling story of how the Dutch Mennonites have refused to join in persecuting the Jews of Holland. From Asia, too, came men like Bishop Lee of Singapore, William Axling of Japan, Stanley Jones of India, warning the delegates that no narrow Americanism is adequate for missionary-minded Christians.

These and many other facts could be given to show that Protestantism has come a long way since 1914-18 when preachers presented arms, when Christ donned the khaki, when hymns of hate were sung to words of carnal strife.

Note, however, my second reaction: Protestantism is still committed to a policy of willful compromise in relation to the political order. The words of Hebrews 10:26 came to me during these sessions: "For if we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins." Which is to say, that compromise takes away the significance of Calvary!

One leader in my section said, "Our job is to state the Christian ideal and then step it down to reality." Broadly speaking, Protestantism took a position like this: get the best you can but do not withdraw support if you cannot get the perfectly Christian answer; all compromises short of the ideal are to be accepted provisionally and temporarily in the hope of gradual triumph. When your nation is the helpless victim of this sub-Christian policy then compromise looks bad.

As a case in point, the Polish leaders at the conference were very bitter about United Nations' policy in connection with Poland. That land has been partitioned by the Soviets and a phoney pro-Communist government has been placed in the saddle at Lublin. I also heard the leaders from the Baltic nations of Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania protesting Russian ruthlessness. Yet, most Christians would probably be forced to say: this is unfortunate but it must be supported if we are to have the help of Russia.

The pivot of this whole issue was the now-famous Dumbarton Oaks proposal of the United Nations. It is a world organization to be dominated by America, Russia, England—the Big Three—and possibly China and France. They are to keep the "peace" of the world by force, a proposal which non-resistance cannot accept. The Dumbarton Oaks plan, to be sure, was splendidly amended to insure greater justice. That the nations will adopt these amendments is highly questionable. As I write the newspapers report that Stalin, Churchill and Roosevelt have just concluded their meeting at Yalta. It would appear from this meeting that these nations are to dominate the world in the name of peace, a combination more likely to lead to further strife and ill will.

The whole Cleveland experience, in my opinion, confirms the traditional Mennonite analysis of the political order: it is a fallen order ordained of God to keep order among sinners through sub-Christian standards. Every issue in politics is a choice among relativities which fall short of the Gospel. Some political choices, quite obviously, are better than others. But, to achieve a complete, totally satisfying expression of Christ in the political order is virtually an impossibility. The articulate pacifists of the conference were willing to support Dumbarton Oaks with the nine amendments—I heard no dissenting voice. Yet, even with the amendments Dumbarton Oaks is based on force, colored by the trimmings of organization. I cannot square this with New Testament ethics.

I have the deepest respect for those noble Christians who seek to apply Christian ethics to politics. I tried it for ten years in various parts of the peace movement. I wish it could be done. But, until governments openly embrace Jesus Christ at the very heart of their life, this effort will remain noble but illusory. Menno saw this four hundred years ago. Maybe we haven't outgrown him after all!

—Don E. Smucker visited the Cleveland Conference 1939 to 1942 he was connected with the Fellowship as a member of the M. C. C. Peace Section from of Reconciliation. Persecuted But Not Defeated

By J. H. Langenwalter

Jesus had done His best to train those who had manifested a willingness to learn from Him. As the test of His life came to a climax, they were amazed and afraid. That cut them off from Jesus at a point of deep interest to Him and of vital importance to them. Then Jesus told them the plain facts which confronted Him, and did so very frankly.

He was going back to Jerusalem for the last time. This city had stood as an emblem of hope for an entire people for many centuries. Jesus had done His best to show the leaders of this city what confronted its people both as to opportunities and dangers. Men in positions of large opportunity were doing things in small ways. The people were down-trodden in body, mind and spirit. Their laws were openly violated by men in high places. The traditions of these leaders were exalted above the rights of men, women and children. Fear had become the great motivating power. Love was looked upon as a sign of weakness. There was brazen violation of the will of God in the light of better knowledge. There was rising ill will against the Son of man who had come that men might have life and have it abundantly for all time.

These things, and more, were the result of misrule by the religious rulers of Jerusalem, the city which still bore the name of promise and which broke all promises given to the people. What had once been known as the habitation of peace had now become the stronghold of violence. The name Jerusalem, once a name revered and honored, had become a byword.

No wonder that Jesus saw the inevitable outcome. These nominal leaders would condemn Him to death. They would deliver Him unto Gentiles—outsiders. These would mock Him—always a trying ordeal for a great Spirit. They would treat Him shamefully. They would spit upon Him as an object of derision. They would scourge Him—a terrible form of vengeance which had been invented by minds who had sold themselves to evil. They would finally kill Him—cut Him off from the right to live in this world.

This recital of things to befall his Master was so unbelievably terrible that Peter, the spokesman for the twelve disciples, had tried to dissuade Jesus the first time He had announced what He saw coming. The third announcement brought no remonstrance. Some of the disciples had ceased learning from Jesus and were seeking selfish preferment. That left them unprepared to understand the forces of evil arrayed against Jesus, as well as the people to which they belonged.

Into this atmosphere Jesus sent a note of hope. This was not understood any more than was the statement of moral corruption in high places with its dire consequences of evil. "And the third day rise again!" Strange words in such a setting. There was neither fear nor apology. If ever Jesus stood alone it was when He announced the forces of good that were still present in a world full of corruption. There was no bravado about this announcement. It was the calm assurance of one who saw far beyond the threats of men in power. He knew that they feared Him. He also knew that the Father, whom He had served so well, would not leave Him to ultimate defeat.

In such an attitude lies the reasonableness and assurance of true faith. Given a group of evil-minded men who formally taught the truth, and then lived in ways that denied the truth, and the result would necessarily be what Jesus had portrayed. On the other hand, given Him whom Jesus had called, My Father, and Himself as a fully devoted Son, and one can scarcely expect anything other than that which Jesus foretold—that He would rise again. Men might dispatch Him with the greatest cunning of which they were capable, but they would have to reckon with Him again. Men simply cannot dispose of such relationship as existed between Jesus and His Father as though it were of little consequence. When men had done their worst and were looking upon the results with mingled fear and sordid satisfaction, they discovered that their ways were merely the ways of death and that the ways of God are the ways of life! Jesus had tried to show men this distinction throughout the days of His teaching. Now He calmly faced the supreme demonstration of what He had taught as one who had lived as He had spoken.

The life of Jesus had been no parade. The following statement shows that He had no illusions about any change for the better in the future. "And they were on the way, going up to Jerusalem; and Jesus was going before them: and they were amazed; but some as they followed were afraid. And He took again the twelve, and began to tell them the things that were to happen unto Him, saying, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem, and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests and the scribes; and they shall condemn Him to death, and shall deliver Him unto the Gentiles: and they shall mock Him, and shall spit upon Him, and shall scourge Him, and shall kill Him; and after three days He shall rise again."

"We" - The Church

By Laurine Quiring

"For no man ever yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church: For we are members of his body, of His flesh and of His bones. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh. This is a great mystery: but I speak concerning Christ and the church."

This passage has been taken from Paul's letter written from Rome to the Ephesians by Tychicus. The passage represents us as the church and bride-elect or wife. Christ is portrayed as bridegroom or husband.

Someone said to me the other day, "If that First Mennonite Church is the bride-elect of Him, she certainly is the most sedate bride-elect I ever saw! She isn't making any plans. Half the time she appears quite lethargic. Often she seems sullen and distressing. Such an accented indifference has caused me to wonder whether she actually loves Him. Perhaps the trouble lies with the prospective groom."

It might be well to look into the status of this groom! Whose son is He? Yea, He is the son of the virgin, Mary and of God, the Father.

Is He educated, does He have a profession? Listen, friends. He is a builder, the chief shepherd, a teacher, an author and interpreter. He is a judge, a governor; lo, He is King of kings! Yes, but even such high titles may be filled with vice and corruption. But He is minister, a great prophet, The Great High Priest, lo, He is the Saviour of the world. Yes, but He holds no militaristic titles. Today bride-elects point with pride to the militaristic rankings of their respective grooms. We, too, can point with pride to Jesus Christ. He holds the appellation of Ensign, Captain; lo, He is Commander of the entire host. My! what omnipotence.

What kind of personality does the groom display? The Precious Word tells us that He is merciful, faithful, holy and harmless, undefiled, perfect, glorious and exalted, mighty and justified. He is the same today, yesterday and forever. My! what a radiant personality!

Does the prospective groom possess any wealth? Paul wrote, "Unto me, who am less than the least of all saints, is this grace given, that I should preach among the Gentiles the unsearchable riches of Christ." Psalm 104:24 says, "O Lord, how manifold are Thy works! in wisdom hast Thou made them all: the earth is full of Thy riches." Proverbs 8:18 states, "Riches and honour are with Me; yea, durable riches and righteousness."

What does the bridegroom look like? Did you ever delight in a lovely rose? Did you ever admire the lilies of the valley? Did you ever marvel at the stars in their courses? Remember, Jesus Christ has been referred to as the Rose of Sharon, the Lily of the Valley, the Bright and Morning Star. Jesus Christ is a Diadem of Beauty; yea, He is altogether lovely!

Here, then, we have a very sketchy picture of the groom of noble parentage, of profound brilliancy, of sparkling personality. His riches are beyond the comprehension of our frail minds. The luster of His beauty strikes one blind. Why are "we," the First Laurine Quiring—Bethel graduate of '44; now clubworker at Wesley Community Center, Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Mennonite Church, the chosen bride, so glum, so somnolent?

Friends, let's wake up and live and get ready! The bridegroom cometh. Make haste for the ceremony!

Whom shall we invite? The bridegroom says that we shall tell it to all peoples of all nations. Let him that is athirst, come. Let him that is enhungered, come. Let him that lacks clothing and shelter come. Let him that is laden with burdens and the cares of the world, come. Let him that rejoices in the Lord, come. We make out our invitations. "Whosoever will may come."

It seems that when you invite people, it doesn't take long and they get hungry. What shall we serve at our reception? In this world there is food enough for the bodies of all men. There is food enough to enable every individual to partake of well-balanced meals everyday, if we would only do things in the right way. If we follow out this analogy, we shall also see that there is enough spiritual food, and the injunction from God is that we feed this food to the souls of men.

John 4: 31-34 inclusive says, "In the mean while His disciples prayed Him, saying, "Master eat." But He said unto them, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of." Therefore said the disciples one to another, "Hath any man brought Him ought to eat?" Jesus saith unto them, "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me and to finish His work."

"Whither Thou goest, I shall go." We, too, shall have meat.

Usually when you have meat, you enjoy bread, do you not? If we continue to study the Gospel of John, our eyes fall upon these precious words in the sixth chapter: "And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: He that cometh to Me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on Me shall never thirst. I am that bread of life. I am the living bread which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever: and the bread that I will give is My flesh, which I will give for the life of the world." So we're going to have bread to go with our meat.

By this time our guests will want something to drink. We read in John 4:14: But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." We won't need any flavorings or spices or ice to prepare it for use. It is a nectar fit for the greatest ruler who ever lived, lives and shall live on the face of the earth. It surpasses all the punches and pops and cokes and rootbeers and limeades and lemonades and wines and coffees and teas and what have you, and we're going to be sure to serve it at this grand and glorious reception.

Since we have our meat and bread and our drink to go with it, why not top it all off with a dessert? It's a simple recipe and we find it in Galatians 5:22 and 23. "But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance: against such there is no law." Isn't that the best fruit salad you ever heard of?

My! what a sumptuous-loaded table we can offer our friends. This is not a mere fanciful dream. This is a fact; it is something fundamental, real and essential!

Now, we have our invitations planned and also our reception. What are we going to wear? The typical American bride chooses the long, white gown and the veil of bridal illusion. There is no reason why we can not have such an attire. If we are living a consistent Christian life, already we are weaving the fabric of that gown, so pure, so white. If we are living a life in favor with God and men, already we are purchasing for ourselves the veil flowing in voluminous folds from our heads, the veil of righteousness.

The bride will approach the altar to the music of a great harp. I like to think of the strings of that harp as made up of Christian souls. Let us have those strings tuned by the Hand Divine. Then, as the angels pluck those strings, every note and every chord shall fall in perfect, heavenly, holy harmony.

As the bride approaches the altar, the bridegroom meets her with smiling face. In His hands He carries, no, not the typical wedding ring; this is far lovelier and invaluable. It glitters in gold and is inlaid with stars. As He claims His bride, He places on her head the Crown of Life.

You are a part of this church! You are the bride-elect! Are you inviting as many as within your power lies? Are you planning the right kind of reception? Are you weaving for yourself that robe of salvation and purchasing for yourself the veil of righteousness? Are you saying, "Come"?

"The Spirit and the bride say, "Come." And let him that heareth say, "Come." And let him that is athirst come: and whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

South America—Open or Closed?

By Gerald Stucky

It is now almost a year since Rev. W. C. Voth and I have returned from our survey trip through Latin America. Since that time the Board of Foreign Missions has accepted the report, and has made definite attempts to open the work in Colombia, South America. You may be wondering why the progress has been so slow; in fact, you may have heard that Colombia is closed and that it will be impossible for our missionaries to enter that country. So that our church may be informed about the facts and so that you may pray more effectively we wish to present the following information:

Missionaries are today getting into Colombia. The State Department in Washington issued to the missionary candidates for Colombia their passports in August and September, 1944—after a delay of about three months. Visa applications were sent to Colombia immediately thereafter—but after much delay the Colombian government refused to grant the visas. The basis for the refusal was this: The Vatican and the Colombian government have entered into agreement that all the leper work in Colombia is to be in the hands of the Roman Catholic Church, and that the Roman Catholic church is to have sole jurisdiction over all the lepers and their children. It takes a long time in the United States to get permits from our government—it seems to take even longer to get permits in the South American countries. Recently we have been informed through a friend in Bogota, Colombia, that the Colombian Government does not now oppose our coming to Colombia for missionary work—only to our work among the leper children. As a result of this information, visas are being reapplied for, and missionaries will be sent to Colombia just as rapidly as the doors open. It seemed formerly that the work outlined for us was clear—now it seems more obscure. We are planning on going by faith, trusting the Lord to lead us step by step, believing that He will open the doors to the work which He has chosen for us. The work is His, not ours—we know not the way, but we are going with One who does. Please pray for us.

"Seel-Sorge" in a Chicago Hospital

About three weeks ago I made it a point to visit some of the patients in the side-rooms of the hospital, where the more seriously ill patients are kept. There I contacted a patient who had heart trouble. He appeared to be too sick to converse with me so I just gave him a Testament. The following Sunday he was in the ward, feeling much better. His wife, who was standing near by, was a Christian, but he had never made a decision for Christ. When asked whether he didn't want to accept Christ as his Savior he replied in the affirmative, "Yes, I'd like to." Here again it was my privilege to point him to the "Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the World."

It was possible for me to make several additional visits to this patient. The last time as I left, after having prayed with him, I realized that he was not doing so well. Between gasps he whispered, "Come again soon, don't stay away too long." Two days later his bed was unoccupied. The nurse said that Rufus had passed away at seven that morning. It was quite a thrill to think that I had had the privilege of bringing Rufus to Christ.

Another one of my contacts was with a farmer from Wisconsin. In his peculiar affliction his knees were drawn up to his chest. He was not crippled before entering the Hospital, and his case puzzles the physicians. This patient, though a Christian, has many problems. His wife is an unbeliever and seems to have created many difficulties in the home. He is earnestly praying that she may accept Christ soon. Will you not join in praying for this couple. He asks the question, "Why do I have to suffer when many godless people are unafflicted?" So it has been my privilege to discuss with him many of his personal problems.

Altogether there have been about sixteen decisions for Christ in the hospitals, thus far. There have also been quite a few consecrations to Christ.

Yours in Christ,

Henry A. Toews

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By A. S. Rosenberger, Dalton, Ohio

MARCH 9—"We love him, because he first loved us." I John 4:19. At the heart of the Christian religion is God's love for man expressed through Jesus Christ. Many religions have man seeking for God. The truth is that God is seeking man more than man is seeking God. We must never lose our sense of that love of God which is ever expressing itself for the good of man, and of what that love has done for us in the great gift of Jesus Christ. Our appreciation of our parents, grandparents, teachers and others who have influenced us, grows throughout life. So our appreciation of Christ, the gift of God's love, should ever increase.

MARCH 10—"When I meditate on thee in the night watches." Ps. 63:6. Evidently the Psalmist had the experience of lying awake at night. He used the time for meditation. An elderly Christian man once told me that he was glad to lie awake at night for awhile. He said that he used the time to pray for others. He prayed for every person and every cause that he could call to mind. During the day he was too busy to do this; at least, it seemed that he could not get around to all the praying he wanted to do. Thus he rejoiced in the opportunity that came to him at night. There is always a right way to use up the moments of our waking time, day or night.

MARCH 11—"Rest in the Lord." Ps. 37:7. This counsel is given as an antidote to fretting. Rest is necessary for every human being. There are times when we must relax and get away from our problems in order that we may renew the resources of life. Psychologists are giving us some wise counsel today as to how to relax. One suggestion that has impressed and helped me is that of a journey via imagination to some stimulating experience. This journey of the mind may be to a favorite beauty spot in nature, to visit some friend, to participate in a worship service, or anyone of countless pleasant experiences.

MARCH 12—"O Lord, revive thy work." Hab. 3:2. There are times when we need to think of relaxing. But there are also times when we need to think of strenuously putting forth our every effort to serve the Lord, and to do our work. We need revivals, not only of others but of our own activities and efforts. The story is told that at one time a bishop wrote to a minister in his territory suggesting the need of a day of retreat. But the minister, thinking of the indifference in his parish, wrote back that what was needed was not a retreat but an earthquake. May God ever give us the revival of effort we need in Kingdom building activities.

MARCH 13—"I am the Good Shepherd." John 10:11. The Good Shepherd knows his sheep. We are the sheep of his pasture and are known of him. Daily we are in the care and keeping of the Good Shepherd. A good friend of mine is a shepherd who loves his sheep. He told me at one time that if I were to go into the sheep barn and one of the sheep were to bleat, that he, even though he were standing outside, could tell me which one it was. We did not try this out, but knowing his intense interest in his sheep, I believed him without further question. So our Good Shepherd knows his own.

MARCH 14—"Go ye into all the world." Mark 16:15. What an inspiration comes through those brave souls who go into all the world to preach the gospel, to do relief work, or to be of service to their fellow men in any way. Their courage is like that of the captain of a Coast Guard vessel which came to the rescue of a ship in distress near the shore. The wind was offshore and the tide was running out. Said one younger member of the Coast Guard crew, "We can go out but what good will it do? Against the wind and tide we cannot come back." The captain replied, "Launch the boats. We have to go out. We don't have to come back." That is the challenge of duty for courageous souls.

MARCH 15—"The Lord, the righteous Judge." II Tim. 4:8. A day spent in a courtroom recently was of much interest and value. A young man stood before the bar of justice. He was not a criminal type, but in weakness had committed a deed which caused him to be brought before the court. His case seemed to deserve special consideration, and he got it. The judge proved himself to be a very wise and understanding individual. He took an hour and a half to consider every aspect of the case and really tried to help the young man. So the Lord is the righteous judge. There are no mistakes made in the divine courtroom.

MARCH 16—"Let your light so shine before men." Matt. 5:16. There are always ways of letting people know where we stand with respect to the great principles and questions of life. There are limitations to the teaching of religion in the schools, and yet many a teacher has found ways of Christian influence. A certain school superintendent comes to mind. By his support of the church, his Christian references in the talks he makes, the scriptural level of his Christmas greetings which are extensively circulated, the general Christian kindness and sympathetic co-operation that characterizes him, no one need question by what ideals his life is shaped.

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

PUBLIC SCHOOLS EMPHASIZE MILITARISM

Mennonite parents whose children attend public schools will not find it news to be told that their children are being militarized and nationalized in numerous and subtle ways. Public schools do not confine themselves to teaching reading, writing, history, spelling, geography, and strictly academic subjects. They are the instruments of propaganda for purposes of promoting the aims of the State. Not only do they promote militarism, but in many other ways public schools are either creating or encouraging situations counter to the ideals of the Christian Church.

A Concrete Illustration

Not long ago I saw a headline in a paper that circulates rather widely in a Mennonite community. It read: "Schools Stress Sale of War Bonds." The article went on to say that for two days special war bond selling contests would be conducted in the school in connection with the local theatre. Solicitations were to be made in the neighborhoods and from the families of the students. Bonds were not to be sold in the homes, but only orders for bonds were to be taken. The bonds themselves were to be purchased at the local theatre. The campaign for the sale of bonds was conducted from the fifth grade on up through senior high school. The students in each grade selling most bonds were to be given prizes in the form of passes to the movies, the top prize being a three-month pass to all moving picture performances in the local theatre. Thus from the Mennonite parents' standpoint as well as from the Mennonite churches' standpoint, children subjected to this kind of influence would be encouraged to violate two practices in sharp contradiction to the teachings and interests of parents and church.

Cancellation and Conflict

This illustration brings into focus in a very clear way how much of our public school education is in direct contradiction to the highest Christian ideals. The things which children and young people are taught in the home, the Sunday School and the church are thus cancelled out by many of the things which are taught and practiced in the schools. It would be wrong to give the impression that the above illustration applies to every public school, but the above or similar situations apply in a great number of schools at which Mennonite children attend. There are drives for paper, for metal, for fats, and numerous other instances in which our children and young people are subject to pressure to do things against their consciences and against the teachings of home and church. Those who are too conscientious to participate in such school functions become the objects of ridicule. Only the most courageous are willing to stand up against ridicule for any length of time. It is obvious then that such conflicting education results in very significant conflicts in the minds and lives of our young people. They somehow seek to solve their conflict, and usually it is in favor of a compromise with their ideals. It is easier to go against the will of a forgiving church and loving parents than to go against the unforgiving ridicule and mockery of a crowd of fellow-students. What can the Church expect in the years ahead if it continues to allow a secular state to educate its young?

Missionaries Eat, Write, and Dream of Home

We just received your November letters and this permission to write via U. S. Air mail—What a treat!! Please take this letter to Albrechts, possibly the secretary of the board . . . with our greetings to each and every one. May I add, there is now no cause for you to be anxious for our welfare. We have no definite news as to date of leaving, but believe it to be only a matter of several weeks.

We were moved here from Baguio by the Nips on Dec. 29th suddenly, and, of course, without explanation.

The coming of the American soldiers was quite some experience, especially for Marv. Jr. Gen. McArthur was here this morning. During and because of our various moves we have managed to lose everything except for a few changes of clothing. We have learned many a new lesson. We're looking forward to seeing you all soon.

*Trusting in God's loving care,

THE HEALING TOUCH

Lord, for all hearts by conflicts torn
Let pity in my own be born:
I fain would have the healing touch
Which those should have who love Thee much.
That some may learn, through care of mine,
That greater thing, Thy love divine.

Vacation Bible School Work-Shop

We wish to remind our churches of the proposed work-shop for prospective teachers of vacation Bible Schools. One day has been set aside in which an intensive overview will be attempted of the curriculum, methods, handwork, and aids to be used in the schools. In order to make our Work-shop most effective we shall appreciate the names of those who will be present. Letters and forms have gone to ministers of the Western District Conference. This will make a report of your plans rather simple. The Work-shop will be held at Bethel College on Saturday, March 17, beginning with 9 A. M.—Western District Conference Education Committee: P. S. Goertz, Chairman; H. N. Harder, Secretary; E. E. Kaufman, Treasurer.

RELIEF

Two Far East Appointees Awaiting Passage

Wilhelmina Kuyf, former missionary to China, and Titus Lehman, a registered nurse, have received their India residence permits. Both these workers have been appointed for China but will serve India until entrance into that country is obtained. Bro. Lehman has been appointed by the Mennonite Relief Committee (Elkhart) but has been granted temporary service in India under the M.C.C. Sister Kuyf for the past year has been assisting in the Relief Research Section at Akron.

Relief Director Appointed

J. N. Byler, who has recently returned from the Middle East as relief commissioner, was appointed Director of Relief and Relief Candidate Secretary at the M.C.C. Executive Committee meeting in Chicago, February 17. This office during the past sixteen months was filled by C. L. Graber. Bro. Graber had been serving past his term for the past several months to assist with the work until Bro. Byler returned to Akron. Bro. Graber has returned to Goshen College, where he is Business Manager. Bro. Byler has been connected with the M.C.C. program since his appointment to relief service in France in 1941.

Order Curbs Clothing Collection

All relief agencies in Canada, including our own, were notified by the Prices Board on February 7 to discontinue the collection of clothing for foreign relief and were asked to submit applications to continue their campaigns. While this order has resulted in a temporary cessation of relief clothing collecting in the Dominion, it is believed that permits will be granted to continue the former work. The Government of Canada has announced that the purpose of the order is to co-ordinate and control the collection of supplies for war sufferers. In this respect the control is similar to the authority exercised in the States by the President's War Relief Control Board, by which the M.C.C. has been given permission to collect clothing and funds for foreign relief in the States.

Passport Validation for France

Henry Buller, along with Sam Goering, has now had his passport validated for France. Both of these workers are engaged in relief work in England but will enter France as soon as French visas can be procured. Bro. Buller was a relief worker in France from 1941 until he was interned early in 1943. He is quite eager to return to the work and people he had served earlier.

"Kits for Children" Clothing Program

"Kits for Children" are the keywords for a newly inaugurated phase of the M.C.C. clothing drive. Organizations, especially junior organizations, and individuals have requested a method for packing and sending in a complete outfit for a child needing relief. A folder has been printed to present itemized lists of essential articles and clothing needed by a war-victim child to replace the meager, ragged belongings to which he tenaciously clings today. An organized method of assembling each child's bundle is also presented. Copies of the printed folder, "Kits for Children," will be sent, without cost, to anyone making their request to the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

C. P. S.

Regional Directors Meet

The regional directors of M.C.C.—C.P.S. camps are in conference at Akron, February 20 to 22. First on the agenda for their consideration is what the Mennonite Policy should be regarding the operation of side camps, particularly in the West.

Institutes on Peacetime Conscription

Following the institute at Powellsville, over the weekend of February 24-25, similar meetings will be held in other areas for the benefit of C.P.S. men in Mennonite camps. March 10-11 such as institute will be held at Newton, Kansas, and March 17-18, a third conference will be in progress at Medaryville, Indiana. The purposes of these conferences, as announced before, will be to share thinking and concerns with church leaders and to clarify what the Mennonite attitude toward conscription should be.

Recent Staff Appointments Made

The following appointments were made at the February 17 Meeting of the M.C.C. Executive Committee:

Tena Heinrichs—Nurse-Matron, Grottoes, Virginia
Orin Beechy—Dir., Hagerstown, Maryland
Donald J. Liechty—Dir., Buckingham Side Camp, New Raymer, Colorado
New Raymer, Colorado
Paul T. Guengerich—Dir., Luray, Virginia
Katherine Duerksen—Nurse-Matron, Luray, Virginia
John W. Schmidt—Director, Downey, Idaho
Lola Schertz—Nurse-Matron, Powellsville, Maryland
Harold K. Mishler—Unit Leader, State Hospital, Mt. Pleasant, Iowa
Mildred Basinger—Nurse-Matron, Terry, Montana
Hubert Moore—Ed. Director., State Hospital, Ypsilanti, Michigan
Dwight V. Yoder—Area Supervisor, Wisconsin Dairy Farm Unit

CONCERNING THE UNITED NATIONAL CLOTHING COLLECTION

Newspapers across the country have been announcing the United National Clothing Collection. This campaign for the collection of clothing for relief is to be conducted throughout the nation during the month of April. United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration (UNRRA), in cooperation with various voluntary relief organizations, is sponsoring the drive. National civic, educational, industrial, and religious organizations have been asked to promote the drive and assist in the collection of clothing. The appeal for donations is to reach every home throughout the nation. The goal is set at 150,000,000 pounds.

The Mennonite Central Committee is not a participant in the national drive, but is registered by the Government as an organization having its own continuous relief clothing collection, processing, and distributing program. Facilities have been set up by the three collection centers at Akron, Newton, and Kitchener to receive and process all the clothing donations Mennonite and Brethren in Christ groups may wish to contribute. Our churches have been contributing liberally in the past and we believe they will want to continue to do their part in giving clothing for war sufferers. Some of our people may wish to contribute clothing through the United National Clothing Collection, but the Mennonite collection centers stand ready to handle all clothing our churches will be able to give.

The Mennonite collection centers also welcome clothing contributions from sources outside those of our own group.

—The Kauffman Museum is an attraction that should not be missed by visitors to Bethel College Bible Week. Again and again visitors who have gone through it express their appreciation for the opportunity. This museum is unique. Charles Kauffman, the curator, certainly ranks in the forefront of Mennonite artistic ability. His versatility is reflected in paintings, carvings, in the mounted animals and birds, and in many other ways. He has spent a life-time in building up this museum. He will be glad to conduct visitors through it. Those who intend to visit the museum should plan to spend if possible an hour or more. Experience shows that those who take at least this much time get the most out of their visit. Plan your time now, and you will very likely not be rushed during the many activities of Bible week.

—Wadsworth, Ohio: G. A. "Dad" Lehman returns on March 18 to sing and lead a singspiration. On Easter morning will be the annual breakfast and another one of the appreciated dramas at the Sunrise service.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, recently observed Prayer and Gift Day for Freeman Junior College. The choirs will join in a fellowship supper on March 14.

—Bulletin, Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles: The Women's Missionary Society is sorting clothing for relief. A shipment of 280 pounds was sent recently. Mrs. Willis Rich, who has been visiting C.P.S. camps, was guest speaker March 1. The church council has opened a fund for the purchase of a parsonage.

—Miss Martha Burkhalter, missionary on furlough from India, attended the session of the Foreign Mission Board recently. She spoke in the chapel of Bethel College on February 22. On the evening of February 25 she spoke in the West Zion Church, Moundridge. Tuesday she addressed the women of the Bethel College Church, who had met for all-day sewing for relief. Miss Burkhalter is now attending Biblical Seminary, New York City, from which she has her M. R. E. degree. She entered missionary work in India in 1917. Later this year she may visit some of the churches.

—Bethel College: Rev. Arnold Regier is slowly recovering from an illness which kept him in the hospital two weeks. The annual Fellowship Committee Dinner Meeting will be held at 5:30 P. M., March 11. Dr. J. H. Langenwaller spoke to the Student Volunteers on February 6. He related how he had hoped to become a foreign missionary, but was turned down three times by the doctors. Since then he has served in schools and churches and has had the satisfaction of seeing thirty of his students go into the foreign field.

—Winton, California: Rev. and Mrs. Leonard Haynes gave us a nice service on February 8. Rev. J. M. Franz and wife started a series of meetings in our church on February 11. Our church was his last church in California. From here he left for his home in Salem, Oregon. He and his wife are consecrated Christians, and Rev. Franz discussed some deep subjects. He held two interesting Bible study meetings in the morning. We expect Dr. Suckau with us on March 4. Rev. Clarence Hofer from Reedley is to be with us on March 11. —N. A. Koehn, Corr.

—Rev. Gerald Stucky traveled to Oklahoma after the session of the mission board to visit five or six churches there, before he proceeded on to California.

—"Psychologists, whose life work is devoted to examining the minds of men, agree that individuals who attend a church get along better with themselves and with others than those who do not."

—Rev. P. K. Regier.

—Vol. 1, No. 1, of the West Zion Visitor lies before us. It is the organ of the West Zion Church, Moundridge. The four multilith pages are full of interesting items. They are easy to read. This paper is for keeping up fellowship with the one-third of the church membership which lives away from home. It is to be a bi-monthly.

—A number of Bluffton College students attended International Day (February 12) at Wilberforce University in Ohio. This is a negro school.

—West Zion Church, Moundridge: Verney Unruh, a ministerial student at Bethel College, has been serving as a ministerial intern in our church since last November. He comes twice a month on consecutive Sundays. Some Sundays he preaches, other Sundays he leads the worship service, often he teaches Sunday School classes and in the evening he helps along in the C. E. programs. The worship service on February 11th consisted of five short three-minute messages on the great teachings of the "Teacher Come from God." Each message was followed by a special song.

—The small group of Mennonites at Lynden, Washington, has recently purchased a two-room school building with three acres of ground and other improvements. This has been quite an undertaking for this group. . . almost $3000 outlay with the changes which will be made to make it a place of worship. The Home Mission Board of the General Conference loaned them $1100 and they received a gift of $400. —Workers' Exchange.

—A new Mennonite community is springing up near Lancaster, California, seventy-eight miles northeast of Los Angeles. There are eight Mennonite families there at present. Their chief industry is the raising of alfalfa hay under irrigation. A community church had been quite inactive until the Mennonites came and took hold. Now a good work is being carried on. The Sunday School attendance is ninety and the church membership is sixty. They plan to build an $8000 church. Half of this amount has already been raised. The Mennonites are taking a lead in the whole thing even though it will remain a community church for the benefit of the many denominations represented and the 3000 unchurched people thereabouts.—Workers' Exchange —Wayland Iowa: Remodeling of church basement is in progress; the side walls and ceiling are all given two coats of paint. The kitchen is also being painted, and a partition placed between it and the furnace. Most of the work is being done by the men of the church. The improvement, when finished, will make the basement a much more pleasant and attractive place for Sunday School and other activities. It is expected that all the work will be finished by next Sunday. — By a vote of sixty-nine to thirty-nine, a bill providing for "local option" on the sale of beer, passed in the House of Representatives at Des Moines. It now goes to the Senate.

—The Twentieth Century Sunday School Class of the Bethel College Church enjoys a fellowship (pot-luck) dinner in the home of one of the class members about once every two months. On February 25, the class accepted the invitation to meet with the Reverend and Mrs. Hostetler at the parsonage. About twenty members together with Dr. and Mrs. Langenwalter and their host and hostess, enjoyed the dinner and fellowship. The afternoon was spent in visiting and listening to some of Reverend Hostetler's fine phonograph records.

—First Mennonite Church, Halstead, Kansas: On January 7, our assistant pastor, Ernst Harder, who is a student at Bethel College, began serving us. He will be with us the remainder of this school term. Also on January 7, the Young People from the First Mennonite Church at Newton were the guests of our Christian Endeavor and presented a fine program. On the evening of January 14 the Angelina Mission Society presented a play, "White Unto the Harvest." This society is composed of the girls of the church. The first Sunday School teachers' study period was held on February 9. The group plans to meet twice each month. Ernest Mueller is our superintendent. Our pastor, Rev. D. C. Wedel, brought the message at the Bethel Deaconess Hospital in Newton on Sunday morning, February 25. On February 28 he left for Chicago

A Short History of the Walton Church

New House of Worship to be Dedicated March 25

Mennonites have always possessed a pioneering spirit. Perhaps that is why a large number of families have for the past seven years been moving into the community of Walton, a little village seven miles northeast of Newton, on U.S. Highway 50 S. They have come from various Mennonite churches and have sought to establish permanent homes.

Beginnings

In the fall of 1939, a number of these families decided to meet together for worship as it was too far to drive to the home churches. With the help of the Home Mission Committee of the Western District Conference, two students from Bethel College, Erwin Goering and Pete Goering took charge of the meetings and provided for ministers to come in and preach. These meetings were held in the Walton Community Building, as the old Presbyterian church building, which had been rented for this purpose, burned down the Saturday before the first meeting was scheduled. In the fall of 1940, Mr. Jacob Enns, then a ministerial student at Bethel was asked to take charge for the coming year, and in the fall of 1941, Ronald von Riesen, also a student at Bethel, was asked to be in charge of the group for that year. Since the attendance during the years had been growing to about eighty, a number of young people were desiring to receive some special catechetical instruction and so Rev. Gerhard Friesen, of Newton, was asked to teach this class and also preach every other Sunday.

Organization

The group at this time felt more than ever the need for organization to carry on its work more effectively. They met with the Home Mission Committee, and it offered to lend its support to this new enterprise. The church committee then took definite steps in bringing about this organization. First, a constitution was drawn up and discussed by the people and then adopted on April 16, 1942. It was further decided that on June 7, there was to be an opening day at which time they would sign the charter.

On June 7, 1942, the Church was officially organized by forty-seven members signing the charter. In the afternoon, Rev. Ronald von Riesen was installed as pastor of the new church.

Building Program

Soon after the organization, plans were under way to obtain some place of worship more suitable than the Community Building. The Home Mission Committee bought for us a large livery stable at Burns. The church tore it down and moved the lumber to Walton, to be used in the construction of a new building. In March, 1943, a permit was secured from the War Production Board to begin building. Work was begun in August, and the cornerstone was laid on October 3, 1943. The building has recently been completed, and much credit should be given to the members of the congregation who so faithfully gave of their time and means.

Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas

We are grateful to our heavenly Father that He has permitted us to build this house of worship in His honor. We dedicate it to God and to our Savior Jesus Christ, "who has called us out of darkness into His marvelous light." Like the Psalmist of old we also pray, "My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord; my heart crieth out for the living God." (Psalm 84:2)

PROGRAM FOR THE DAY

Dedication Service, March 25, 2:30 p. m.

Morning Worship at 10:30 A. M.

The Dedication Service will begin promptly at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Lester Hostetler, pastor of the Bethel College Mennonite Church, North Newton, Kansas, and Rev. A. E. Funk, pastor of the Bruderthal Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, and member of the Home Mission Committee of the Western District Conference, will deliver the dedication addresses.

Five-minute talks on the subject, "What the Church Means to Us," will be given by Mrs. Ernest Peters, president of the Mission Society, and Miss Irene Schmidt, a representative of the young people.

Others contributing to the program will be Rev. O. K. Hobson, pastor of the Methodist Church of Walton, Kansas, and Albert Meetz, Mayor of Walton, Kansas.

Music will be furnished by the local church choir.

Evening Program, 8:00 p. m.

A Mission Program has been planned for the evening, beginning at 8:00 o'clock. Dr. P. A. Penner, former missionary to India, and Dr. P. P. Wedel, pastor of the First Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, Kansas and chairman of the Foreign Mission Board of the General Conference, will bring the messages.

We extend a cordial invitation to everyone to join us in these special services. We covet your prayers for our church that this day may truly be a day of spiritual feasting.

The Ladies of the church are planning a meal to be served after the dedication service for all those who wish to stay over for the evening program.

Special Evangelistic Services, March 18 to 23

Rev. Lester Hostetler, will hold evangelistic services beginning Sunday evening, March 18, through Friday, March 23. The services will begin each evening at 8:00 o'clock. Everyone is invited.

The General Conference to Meet May 31, 1945

Upon returning the Application Form and sending it in on February 14, 1945, the following approval was received March 9.

• War Committee on Conventions

Washington 25, D. C.

General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America
C. E. Krehbiel, President
Newton, Kansas

Dear Mr. Krehbiel:

Your application for a permit to hold a conference in North Newton, Kansas, May 31—June 5, 1945, has been reviewed. The Committee recognizes that this meeting is for transaction of essential Church business, and for that reason a permit is hereby granted.

However, the Committee earnestly requests your cooperation in doing everything possible to minimize attendance at this meeting, if it cannot reasonably be deferred.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Frank Perrin, Secretary.

Let us make it a point to heed this request as much as possible without detriment to the cause of Christ and His Church. And in line with this it is suggested:

1. That—as some churches have already done—all others elect their delegates or make other provision for representation at once.

2. That all Boards and Committees, that have not already done so, prepare their triennial reports without delay, affixing recommendations and questions for consideration at the session. Since the reports likely were made to cover the regular triennium of 1941 to 1944, it may be desirable simply to add a supplement bring reports up to date. (All treasurers' reports should preferably be for the triennium.)

3. The Business Committee published a tentative program in 1944 and now will want to publish it more in detail, including two proposed amendments to the Constitution and the names of the Nominating Committee. Suggestions from Boards and Committees should be sent the Business Committee immediately. (Rev. Walter Gering, Moundridge, Kansas, is secretary and Prof. J. S. Schultz, Bluffton, Ohio, is chairman of this committee.)

May He, whose we are and whom we serve, grant wisdom to do His work acceptably!

THE FORGIVENESS OF SINS AND THE CROSS

Assurance of sins forgiven is something needed by everyone. Living cannot abound with life as long as there is a sense of unresolved guilt. Guilt is the headache of a man's moral nature; it indicates that something is wrong. It is a warning to become right with God. The human heart longs to know that there is nothing between it and God. Man is made in the image of God, and he is discomfited when out of harmony with God. Feelings of guilt may lie buried ever so deeply, but like the rubber ball pushed far beneath the surface of water raises the water level, so buried feelings of guilt act upon the whole volume of life. They may be hidden, but their effect manifests itself in disrupted, disintegrated living. They swell life with unwholesome compensatory behavior.

The guilt-laden person longs to know that there is someone who can become fully aware of all the ugly sinfulness that pollutes his life and yet love him greatly. That man has plenty of reason to fear that this is an impossibility is evident in the lack of God-like love among men. Man feels that he must be of certain worth to be acceptable to others. He may despair of meeting such an exacting requirement. Mankind is not noted for forgiveness. Jesus told us in a parable how a servant was forgiven a debt of $10,000,000.00, but refused to forgive one of $20.00 owed to him. Today man goes to war against fellowman to collect the $10.00, while he likes to believe that his debt of $10,000,000.00 is being cancelled. No, man does not forgive easily. No wonder that a sense of unresolved guilt becomes to many people a burden that must be borne because of a fear that fellowman, lacking love will not forgive.

And so to those who are guilt-laden and unrelieved comes the message of Christ and Him crucified. To them the cross is not a stumbling block or foolishness. To them it is the message of salvation. For in the shed blood of Jesus Christ there comes to them the experience of a love that forgives to the uttermost. In the cross of Christ they see the full fury of sin in all its ugliness and repulsiveness storm upon the One who hangs there, and then they hear him say in matchless words, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Where is there greater solace for the sinner than that? This love was great enough to cover the guilt of the Centurion who stood by. This love is great enough to forgive the most depraved sinner. This love is not given according to the worth of an individual as usually considered. The most worthless can claim it. It is divine, not human.

This love cleanses from all sin. As the sinner confronts him who was blameless, the stark ugliness of his own sinfulness is glaringly revealed. In the righteousness of Christ, he sees himself for the miserable sinner that he is. His ego is given a knock-out blow. The desire for sinning is taken out of him.

But Christ does not allow him to remain stooped at his depravity. With the love of God he raises the sinner with the assurance of sins forgiven and a glorious future ahead. The saved sinner is enraptured to know that Christ has accepted him. He becomes filled with a knowledge of that love that is self-giving, not self-saving, and he goes forth into the world to lose his life and thereby find it.

Men and women saved by Christ have the privilege of leading guilt-burdened persons to Him who saves from sin and self. It is their privilege to possess a love that is God-like, that is not horrified by the awfulness of sin, a love which does not depend upon the worth of the individual as measured in human terms. It is their privilege to let their righteousness, imparted by God, be a mirror that helps reveal sin in sharp outline. It is their privilege to lead others into a personal saving relationship with Christ by granting to others a personal relationship that reveals Christ and makes him plain and real and gripping, and Saviour of all. It is their privilege to live a life that is an invitation to others and not an imposition.

There is a way out for the man or woman burdened with a sense of unresolved guilt. It the way of the cross.

"If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." I John 1:9

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

From Pioneer Days to the Present

A Short History of the Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church, near Inman, McPherson County, Kansas, 1875 to 1945

The first Mennonite Church to be organized in McPherson County in the state of Kansas was "The Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church." On March 11, 1945 this church was permitted to celebrate the seventieth anniversary of its organization. This was a day of great blessings for both old and young. The old members, of whom there are more than twenty above the age of seventy were vividly reminded of the pioneer days of long ago and of the various events connected with the early history of the church. The younger members heard again of the history of their church and of the sacrifices their fathers and forefathers made for their religious convictions and were thankful for all. The present pastor and the minister as well as others who had served here previously served on the program. Enriched was the day through special music from the celebrating church, the Buhler Mennonite Church and the Inman Mennonite Church. These two were formerly a part of this church. The pastor presented the history of the church by a chart under a Stream of Blessings and its tributaries, the stream widening as it goes on through time.

Eventful Years of Church Life

In October, 1874, a group of Mennonites from the Molotschna Colony in southern Russia came to settle on the fertile, grassy plains in southern McPherson County, northwestern Harvey County, and north-eastern Reno County of the state of Kansas. In the group were about one hundred families who came across the Atlantic on a ship named "Teutonia." On its journey the ship caught fire, and for a while it seemed as if the vessel with all on board would be destroyed and all would perish at sea. But the flames were finally brought under control and all were brought safely to the shores of America. On the return trip, however, the ship sank into the depth of the ocean, and our Mennonites were those who had made the last safe journey on it.

Here in America they settled on land of the Santa Fe railroad company. This land was bought very cheaply ($2.50 - $5.00 an acre) and part of this on credit. The company also gave two sections for the poor in the group and had two large, but simple immigrant houses ready to be occupied when they came.

In one of these religious meetings were held from the very first Sunday that they arrived. Among those who came were three ministers, and they at once proceeded to make arrangements for the organization of a church. A simple constitution was drawn up, a confession of faith presented, and thus the organization began and was effected in February, 1875. On the twenty second day of said month and year, the first persons signed their names as members. Just how many is not definitely known. Soon steps were taken to have their own elder. So in addition to the ministers who settled, Peter Balzer, Peter Ratzlaff, Dietrich Gaeddert and Gerhard Kliever, two more were elected, viz. Johann Ratzlaff and Johann Warkentin. However only Johann Ratzlaff was ordained, for on the day of his ordination Brother Johann Warkentin lay in the casket and was laid to rest.

Out of these ministers Rev. Dietrich Gaeddert was elected as elder on April 17 and ordained on May 14. He served till the day of his death on December 31, 1900. As second elder Abraham Ratzlaff was then elected on April 8, 1902, and ordained September 28, 1902. He served faithfully till December 26, 1925, when he ordained the third elder of the church, A. J. Dyck, who still serves the church to this day. Thus our church has had only three elders and always from among their own group.

The following have served as ministers at one time or another besides those above mentioned: Rev. David Unruh, Rev. D. D. Unruh, Rev. Peter Flaming, Rev. Peter Heidebrecht, Rev. C. H. Voth, Rev. Peter Goertz, Rev. J. H. Epp, Rev. Abraham Albrecht, and Rev. Albert M. Gaeddert.

The church has also had the following deacons: David Unruh, Johann C. Dyck, Heinrich Schultz, Peter J. Wiens, Johann Buller, Abraham B. Reimer, Solomon P. Ediger and John J. Dyck.

The following ministers have served others from our church: Rev. J. H. Epp as missionary among the Cheyenne Indians and later churches in our conference, Rev. Jacob B. Ediger for thirty-eight years missionary among the Cheyenne Indians in Oklahoma and still on the active list, Rev. Johann Ratzlaff organized and served the Immanuel Mennonite Church near Moundridge and later the Meno Mennonite Church near Meno, Oklahoma. Rev. Jacob Dirks, the Friedensfeld Church near Turpin, Oklahoma, Rev. Peter Heidebrecht the Ebenfeld church near Syracuse, Kansas, Rev. Peter Goertz, a group in Carn-duff, Saskatchewan, Canada, Rev. Abraham Albrecht as elder of the Inman Mennonite Church, and Rev. P. K. Regier various churches of the General Conference. Rev. Albert M. Gaeddert at present is in the MCC service. So is also Mr. Harry E. Martens. Two deaconesses, Sister Katharine (Voth) and Sister Sara (Dirks) have also come from our church.

The church at present has a well organized Sunday School, two C. E. societies, one young people's league, a choir of about 60 voices and three mission societies. The Buhler Mennonite Church and the Inman Mennonite church are daughter churches from this church, organized in 1920 and 1921 respectively. In all 1028 people have been baptized since its organization, this is an average over the seventy years of almost fifteen per year.

During these seventy years it has built four churches. From 1874-1880 it had its meetings in the immigration building mentioned above. Then the storm destroyed this building and an adobe (sundried brick) building was erected where our present church now stands. It served until 1898 when our present building was erected and under which a basement was built in 1935. Besides these it built the first Buhler Mennonite Church and the present Inman Mennonite Church:

May God continue to bless our church in the future as He has blest it in the past is our continued prayer.

"Behold We Go Up to Jerusalem"

A Lenten Meditation by Walter H. Dyck

Our Lord had just taken His disciples apart and explained to them what His last trip to Jerusalem would mean to Him. It would mean being mocked, spit upon, scourged, crucified, but being raised again.

But when He said, "Behold, we go up to Jerusalem," (Luke 18:31) what did it mean to His disciples? We are told "they were amazed" and afraid. They had an idea what it might cost.

We, too, have professed that we are His followers. We want to be near Him. What did Jesus still intend for His friends to learn on this last journey?

There were at least seven definite happenings along the road "up to Jerusalem" which can be helpful to us as "we go up" with Him. What, then, should this Lenten period encourage us to do?

1. "We Go Up" to deepen our consecration. A faithful time-piece begins losing time. The regulator is turned ahead without results. By and by it stops. It needs more than stimulating; it needs cleaning. We try to "keep going" by multiplying pleasures and amusements, but find that diversion may be neither food for the mind nor inspiration for the soul. We need to pause before life's Time-keeper and be cleaned, reset, and started again. "Jesus was going before them." This set them to thinking. It was when Peter "thought" that he "wept."

2. "We Go Up" to test our humility. Jesus had no more than finished telling what the coming days would bring when two ambitious, but rather tactless, brothers James and John, asked to be permitted to sit to the "right and left" in Christ's kingdom. They needed to be reminded of what true greatness consisted. Jesus did not brush it aside as an impossible request. It is a worthy desire to be near Christ. But mere wishing will not do it. To be near then means to be near now. The cross goes before the crown. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things." (Rev. 21:7)

3. "We Go Up" to improve our vision. Next the disciple band met the blind men on the road from Jericho. Their cry, "Lord, have mercy on us" should have given the disciples an illustration of their own blindness. Jesus' question, "What will ye that I should do unto you?" brought what should be your and my answer today, "Lord, that our eyes may be opened." "Where there is no vision, the people perish." May we sing with the poet, "Open mine eyes that I may see glimpses of truth thou hast for me."

4. "We Go Up" to share our faith. While near Jericho our Lord, mindful as ever of the need of sinful men, paused to spy a "small but mighty" man sitting in a sycamore tree. Zacchaeus wanted to see who Jesus was but he "could not for the crowd." The disciples were a part of that crowd. Do we share our faith as we should or are we but part of the selfish crowd that hinders the seeking soul? Is Jesus able to say when we return from a visit, "Today is salvation come to this house?"

5. "We Go Up" to try our stewardship. Zacchaeus had suggested a very good point at which we all need to try ourselves. He now devoted fifty per-cent of his holdings to help others. The disciples must be further impressed with such sacrifice, so Jesus tells the story of the "ten pounds." The poor disciples owed their all to him. Consecration must be complete. They had left all earthly goods. But they were also stewards of time and talents. To use was to gain; to hoard was to lose. Shall we ponder this parable today?

6. "We Go Up" to prove our devotion. Why must the disciples be but examples of failure, a part of the crowd, following afar off, when Mary of Bethany spends her costliest gift upon her Lord? Accused of waste, the Lord himself intercedes for her, in the words, "Let her alone, she has done a beautiful thing to me." (Moffatt) A personal devotion must be shown at all cost. We and the disciples should not proceed from Bethany without that spirit of devotion. We will never stand at the cross without such whole-hearted love for our Master.

7. "We Go Up" to proclaim our loyalty. We will call Sunday, March 25, Palm Sunday, in memory of the triumphal entry into Jerusalem. It was triumphal outwardly. Because of the event that had transpired, were the disciples now more consecrated, more humble, more enlightened, more trustful, better stewards, more devoted, actually more loyal than the crowd that waved palms crying, "Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord?" Are we beyond the mere shouting stage in our Christian profession? In our spirituality?

In these days before Passion Week and Easter we are asked to go up with Jesus, at least in spirit, to learn what His disciples were so hesitant to accept. Each of the seven incidents are pointers to deeper spirituality. Jesus "steadfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem." (Luke 9:51b) Dare we go up with Him? If we deny yourselves, take up His cross, and follow Him. Let us set our heart steadfastly upon Him, in this Lenten season, and be prepared for both cross and crown, both Good Friday and Easter, as the Apostle Paul confesses, "I am crucified with Christ, nevertheless, I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." (Gal. 2:20)

The Case Against Conscription

By Frank L. Wright

Both houses of Congress now have before them bills providing for universal compulsory military training after the war. These measures have the support of the army and the navy. After hesitating for a long time, President Roosevelt has at last given his approval to this radical change in American military policy. The likelihood is therefore that a historic decision will soon be reached on this issue. Since this decision will affect every person in our society, no citizen can afford to be indifferent to it or to neglect to register his opinion concerning it. My own study has convinced me that peacetime conscription must be rejected for ten reasons.

First, peacetime conscription is contrary to American democratic principles and practices. It does not contribute to self-control, to love of country or to patriotic devotion. Military training is inimical to freedom of inquiry and to a high type of intellectual and emotional development. Compulsory patriotism is in danger of breaking down into unpatriotism. Says Maxwell S. Stewart, a veteran: "Our conscript is not patriotic, he is cowed and submissive though inwardly seething with rebellion. This attitude may, as military men insist, make a good soldier. It does not make a good citizen." In a comparison of veterans with others, is there any evidence that military training instills democratic self-control?

Second, peacetime conscription will prove a serious economic burden to a nation already staggering under an enormous debt. A committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce estimates the cost at three or possibly four billion dollars per year. Government management is almost universally expensive. The money expended on a million conscripts in one year would easily provide four to seven years of academic, professional or technical training for these same youth. Then, too, a one-year delay in the entry of all men into education, industry or other productive activity would prove a serious economic loss.

Third, a year of military training will make no material contribution to the physical health of the nation. Men with physical defects are not accepted by the army. Colonel Loehler, who received the Distinguished Service Medal for his part in the physical conditioning of men in the First World War, has said: "I deny absolutely that military drill contains one worthy feature which cannot be duplicated in every well regulated gymnasium in the country today." Induction age is too late to check and correct health defects. A health program from birth is necessary.

Fourth, compulsory peacetime training is not justified from the standpoint of the education afforded. Any type of education other than autocratic discipline—even military training if desired—can be given in schools and colleges at from one-tenth to one-third the cost of that under government control. To lose one million man-years of education each year is a serious matter. No educational organization has gone on record for peacetime conscription, whereas the National Education Association, the Educational Policies Commission, the American Council on Education, the American Association of Colleges, the National Congress of Parents and Teachers and the U. S. Assembly of Students have expressed opposition to peacetime conscription. Do we want to inject into our civil educational system, with its decentralized local self-determination, this military camel's nose of a regimented year of goose-stepping education directed from Washington? Let us be careful lest we sell our democratic educational birthright for a mess of military pottage.

Morale vs. Morals

Fifth, military training, whether little or much, has never been known to develop the moral or spiritual life of an individual. An army man wrote: "The average soldier is pretty much the same as he was in civilian life except that his morals are lower, his conversation coarser and his religious outlook more casual." Army officers very generally do not care about morals. Brig. Gen. Henry J. Reilly says: "Morale is more important than morals to the soldiers. Leave the morale to the army and to hell with morals. Some people want to keep the young soldier from women and liquor. That's what he needs."

Sixth, compulsory peacetime training would grant the government—through prejudiced super-patriotic officers—arbitrary control of individual thought and conscience. The present draft law, although explicitly providing non-combatant alternative service to any person who is conscientiously opposed to participation in war, has resulted in prison sentences of from six months to five years for more than 4,000 conscientious objectors. Men physically or psychologically unfit for military service are sent back to civil life with the hope that their abilities will be used to the best advantage. But the man who is unfitted by conscience for military service, regardless of his ability for civil service is packed off to a Civilian Public Service camp or to prison. Then, too, racial discrimination, now rampant in the army, will be aggravated by peacetime conscription, and progress toward peace will be choked off by indirect federal control of educational agencies including the schools.

No Guarantee of Peace

Seventh, conscription does not and cannot provide national security. In spite of its claims, it gives no assurance that war will be prevented or victory won. France has had twelve wars and Germany ten while under peacetime conscription. France has lost five of them. In 1926, prominent citizens of fourteen countries called upon the League of Nations "to propose the abolition of compulsory military training in all countries." "It is our belief," the manifesto continued, "that conscript armies, with their large corps of professional officers, are a grave menace to peace."

Eighth, the legislating of military conscription before peace is established might do more than almost any other factor to cause allies and neutrals to lose confidence in the United States and to isolate her from the rest of the world. The adoption of peacetime conscription now would indicate that we have no confidence in the principles we have pronounced and supposedly are fighting for. It would cause our allies to question our good faith. Demand for a conference in which smaller countries would have a voice in shaping regional and global plans for the maintenance of peace should precede the demand for peacetime training. An important element in any world organization should be a treaty abolishing conscription in all countries simultaneously. That, instead of a permanent draft law, is the way to insure peace.

Ninth, no law imposing peacetime conscription on the American people should be enacted at a time when war psychology is at its height. Over 12,000,000 citizens are already trained and in the armed services, with nearly half of them overseas. Those in service at home are not permitted to speak out in opposition to the army's official position. These men have a right to be heard, but they cannot speak until the war is over. Surveys reveal that 58 per cent of the school administrators who are veterans of World War I are in favor of postponing a decision until after the present conflict is ended. No nation on the globe will recuperate sufficiently, physically and economically, to become a threat to world peace for twenty to thirty years. If peacetime universal military training should become necessary, all efforts at world organization having failed, then the time to start the program would be 1960 or 1965. Training and materials would then be up to date when war came, if it must come again.

New Education Needed

Tenth, universal military training is not the type of education which will best serve the needs of democratic society in the postwar world. Military training gives evidence of hopelessness for a better world. Forward-looking education is needed. World War III is not inevitable. Education should be extended Christ - Stumbling Stone or Cornerstone?

By Maynard Shelly

In erecting a new home the first step in the actual building is to secure all the necessary materials that are to be put into the structure. These materials are brought to the site of construction and distributed on piles according to their kind. As the builder requires material, he chooses it from these piles. Upon completion of the task there are often some materials that still remain which were rejected or not used. An untidy caretaker often permits these unused materials to remain where they were first placed and they become eyesores and are often in the way and we stumble and trip over them as we pass in and out.

Of course, we would not let something like this happen to us. For we, too, are all in a way builders of our lives. We are given certain materials and elements that are to be used in the building of our lives. These materials are laid out on separate piles according to their kind. There are those materials that we will use for the framework, others for the foundation, and still others to decorate the building. Some of these materials are love, kindness, faith, self-respect, determination, and courage. But the most important things given to us to build our lives is a cornerstone which is Jesus Christ. This is the same cornerstone that was used by God to establish his church. It is to be feared that this cornerstone is not advertised widely enough, but we know that it is wise to use it because we have God's own recommendation and opinion as we read in I Peter 2:6, "Behold, I lay in Zion a chief cornerstone, (Jesus Christ), elect, precious; and he that believeth on him shall not be confounded." It might be added that here we have also a money-back guarantee.

In building we are not confined to a standard plan or pattern that is used for all lives. The type of house we build, the type of architecture we choose, and the proportion of materials used often depends not only on the builder but the use to which the building will be put. Peter, Paul, and John built their lives from similar materials, yet they were very different for they were chosen to do differing tasks.

Thus we find many Christians whose lives are not alike because they were created for varying purposes. But all of them are beautiful and all add to the glory of God. It is not up to us to say which life is best and which is more beautiful. It is not for us to criticize or mar the construction which has been built for the Lord's work and for his use with the material he has given.

But, sad to say, there are those lives that have not used the materials given them by God and have left these things where they were first placed, and they are becoming eyesores causing much trouble and worry. These lives are often built according to a plan contrary to all rules of construction. They have used only one kind of material or have substituted cheap and worthless things for the enduring things of God. Worse yet they forgot to use the chief cornerstone, Jesus Christ, which is most necessary. Everything else may seem all right and almost perfect, but if the cornerstone is withheld the building is not complete for it does not have that which gives it stability, strength, and purpose.

If Jesus is not used as the cornerstone and if he is not placed within the structure of our destiny, it means that he has been left without. As we use this building of our life and go in and out we see the rejected cornerstone, because even if we would tidy up our work we cannot remove this cornerstone from our lot. The longer it remains the more annoying it is, but still we cannot rid ourselves of it. Finally, the cornerstone, Jesus Christ, becomes a stumbling block as well as a rock of offense as we are told in I Peter 2:7.

To avoid having Christ as a stumbling block and rock of offense in our lives we must see that he is given his proper place. If he is not put into that place we will always have difficulty in explaining his omission in the building, and it will be in all things most uncomfortable. The only place that we can put Christ to avoid stumbling over him is to use him as the chief cornerstone of our lives.

Serving in this office Christ will be able to bind

Ranks High in Prince of Peace Contest

Miss Marilyn Steiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Steiner of Mt. Cory, Ohio, has won first place in the district contest of the Prince of Peace Contest conducted by the Ohio Council of Churches.

She took part in the semi-finals of the state, but she did not place among the first three who went to the state finals. Miss Steiner is a member of the Grace Mennonite Church of Pandora, and she represented this church in the local, county and district contests. She attends the Mt. Cory High School where she is a senior. As a reward for her achievement Miss Steiner was presented with bronze and gold medals and a scholarship from Bluffton College amounting to $150.00.

The Prince of Peace Contest has been conducted by the Ohio Council for the past twenty years. It is open to all young people between the ages of fourteen and eighteen. This year there were nearly eight hundred separate contests in churches and in schools with about four thousand young people taking part. Miss Steiner was among twenty young people who competed in the semi-finals in Columbus. An increasing number of Mennonite young people are taking an interest in this annual contest because it is an active and a challenging way of educating for peace. It is an encouraging sign of the times that even during the process of a world war four thousand young people representing many different denominations were thinking along the line of their responsibility toward peace.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—“It does not occur to an eighteen-year-old boy that some day he will be just as dumb as his dad.”

—“How can greater interest be stimulated in young people’s work?” is a question that appears in the current issue of the Northern Light (Northern District). Mrs. Erwin Klassen suggests 1. prayer. 2. exchange programs. Pete Regier Jr. mentions 1. exchange programs. 2. knowledge of conference activities by leaders. William Dahlenburg points to 1. the need of personal and practical work.

—The Butterfield, Minnesota, C. E. gave $50.00 for C. P. S. and the Salem young people, Freeman, gave $10.00 to the Y. P. Union of the General Conference. —From the Northern Light.

—The Camp Mack retreat will be a dual one this year with one section for grades five to eight and another for high school and older. The date: June 18-24. Rev. William Stauffer will be one of the teachers.

—The young people of the First Church, Sugarcreek, are planning on a week-end youth conference sometime in April, at which Dalton and Wadsworth will be hosts.

—Service For Peace is the name of a sixty-four page album of the college type that has been issued by the Fort Collins, Colorado, C.P.S. camp. Besides many pictures it has a short history of the camp. “The book goes back to the life of Christ and shows His relation to our stand. It covers the courageous spirit of our forefathers and then takes the camper from the time he registers until he reports to camp. The greater part of the book portrays a typical day in a camp by showing the project work, the religious life, and the activities of the average camper in a base camp.” Cost $2.00.

Our Ministry of Education

By J. H. Langenwalter

Some time ago the writer was asked to furnish a series of short articles for the Church Bulletin Service of North Newton, Kansas. These articles were to be of help toward a better understanding of the history and work of the General Conference, and a preparation for more efficient service in the future.

The Church Bulletin Service has kindly consented to the publication of these articles while the author is visiting a number of churches in order to be of help toward better training needed for the work to be done. May the past speak helpfully to us now.

It is well to remember that Jesus called His “Inner Circle” disciples—disciplined men, and that He spent three years trying to lead a dozen men out of lower concepts of existing into higher planes of living.

It is encouraging that, in the six months since the writer has taken over his present work, there have been a number of requests for practical suggestions for the training of leaders and teachers for Sunday Schools,

Week Day Religious Education and Young People’s Work. These things are all a part of the plan according to which we are working. We are simply working from the more general to the particular. We will welcome further suggestions and questions concerning the training problems in your churches.

A THOUGHT SEED

There is something inspiring about a seed. It may be small and unattractive in appearance, but it is a seed. That means that it has life. If given a chance that life performs wonders. Jesus points that out in a very interesting way in His parable about the mustard seed. Matthew 13:31,32.

About three generations ago a small number of people, whose name we bear, considered a thought which, like a seed, held great possibilities within itself. It was the thought of sharing a great value in their lives with others.

As they thought of the storm and stress periods through which their forefathers had gone for more than 300 years, they raised the thought that what had been good for them would be good for others. Their fathers had sacrificed that they and their children might have the privilege of freedom of conscience and of living under the guidance of the Spirit of Jesus.

There were many who had no such history as they had. They were in close contact with at least three of the world's five races. They knew that everywhere there were those whose lives were not being lived at their best because these lacked the Spirit of Him who had said: "I have come that they might have life, and have it abundantly!"

When a seed starts growing, be it a mustard seed or a thought seed, it always starts things. Those who see its value are glad. Those who only see the changes it brings are disturbed. That is why the thought of sharing the Gospel of Jesus Christ with white, black, and red people, who knew Him not, led to all kinds of misunderstandings and frictions among a people who "believed in peace." Nevertheless, the thought seed grew.

A BIT OF LEAVEN

When our forefathers of three generations ago began to seriously harbor the thought seed of sharing the Good News of Jesus Christ with others they began to realize that the thought had become like leaven which was working its way through the thinking of many. They saw the point in what Jesus had said about leaven being like the Kingdom of Heaven. Matthew 13:33.

It soon became clear that if this sharing was not to be confined to their immediate neighborhoods, they would have to send those who could carry the message to others at a greater distance. That led to the discovery that those who were to be sent would need to learn the languages of those to whom they were to be sent. It also involved the fact that those who remained at home would have to support those who were sent. That called for preparation on the part of all concerned.

Those who were to be sent would need to be prepared to enter upon this new undertaking with conviction. They would need to understand what might be involved for them as well as for those to whom they were going. They would need to be in position to understand those to whom they went as well as to be understood by them. They would need to learn to understand the language, of the tongue and of the spirit, of those to whom they were to go. How could they best prepare themselves for this important undertaking? 1. Through consecration. 2. Through thorough training for the task at hand.

Those who remained at home faced the fact that sharing with those who represented them was at least as important as sharing with those at a distance toward whom they had become sympathetic. That also called for consecration and for thorough training for the task at hand.

IN MEMORIAM

Peter H. Schroeder, son of Henry and Sam Schmidt Schroeder, was born in South Russia, February 15, 1862. With his parents he migrated to Spring Valley Township, McPherson County, Kansas, in 1874. He attended the Balzer Preparatory School, Goessel; the Ewert School, Halstead; Canton High School, and Bethel College. He was baptized in 1880 and received into the Alexanderwohl Church. In 1887 he married Katherine Richert, who passed away in 1894. In 1897 he married Amelia Nickel. Death came February 10, 1945.

Herman J. Frey, son of Jacob and Eva Wedel Frey, was born near Goessel, Kansas, April 6, 1890, and died at Fredonia, Kansas, February 10, 1945. In 1909 he was baptized by Elder H. R. Voth and received into the Tabor Church. He and Anna Nikkel were united in marriage in 1914. For twenty-three years they lived at Watova, Oklahoma. He is mourned by his wife; four children, Mrs. Elma Schmidt, Abe, Rosella, and Elfrieda of the home; a brother, Rev. Gustav Frey, Moundridge; and three sisters: Mrs. J. J. Franz and Mrs. George Pankratz, Newton, and Mrs. John J. Unruh, Bakersfield, California.

Sarah Wiebe nee Unruh was born November 9, 1860, in Sparran, Russia. In 1877 she migrated to Mountain Lake, Minnesota, with her parents. She was baptized in 1880 by Elder Aron Wall and received into the Bergfelder Church. Later she joined the Immanuel Church. In 1883 she married Rev. Abraham Wiebe, who preceded her in death in 1938. Children who mourn her are: Abr. P. Wiebe, Mrs. C. P. Quiring, Mrs. F. F. Loewen, H. B. Wiebe, Jacob A. Wiebe, Mrs. Jacob Gosen, C. A. Wiebe, P. A. Wiebe, and Elizabeth Wiebe.

Mrs. Caroline Nightingale, daughter of David and Marie Unruh Koehn, was born in Antonofka, Poland, Russia, December 15, 1863. In 1874 she migrated with her parents to Halstead, Kansas. Later they moved to near Moundridge. In 1880 she was baptized by Elder Johann Ratzlaff and received into what is now the Emmanuel Church. In 1881 she married Henry J. Nightingale, who died in 1927. Since 1905 the family lived at Ringwood, Oklahoma, and here they were members of the New Hopedale Church. She is mourned by Mrs. Mary Unruh, Ringwood; Herman Nightingale, Edmond; and one sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Kehn, Meno.

Martha Schimnowski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Schimnowski, was born December 29, 1911, at Halstead, Kansas. She was baptized in 1925 by Rev. H. T. Unruh and received into the First Mennonite Church. Her father preceded her in death in 1935. She died February 19, 1945.

Justina Simon was born August 9, 1864, in Danzig, Germany, to John and Elizabeth Ling Simon. In 1870 she left Germany to come to her sister Mrs. John Schimnowski, who was living in the United States. She married Martin Banze in 1885, who preceded her in death in 1932. She passed away February 11, 1945. She is mourned by a son, Walter A. Banze, Great Bend; and two daughters, Clara Haury, Halstead; and Lydia Quiring, McPherson.

Mrs. J. R. Thierstein, nee Margaret M. Dirks was born in South Russia, January 23, 1867, the daughter of Jacob B. and Helena Dirks. In 1874 she came with her parents to a farm thirteen miles northwest of Newton. She was baptized by Elder Jacobi Buller and received into the Alexanderwohl Church in 1883. She attended Halstead Seminary and graduated from it. In 1895 she was married to J. R. Thierstein. After some years of teaching they went to Switzerland for two years of study. Here they adopted Fredric Novalis, but this promising youth died in 1926. Teaching took the Thiersteins to Freeman, Bluffton, and finally to Bethel, where several years ago they gave their home to the College on an annuity arrangement. Mrs. Thierstein passed away February 19, 1945. She is mourned by two sisters: Mrs. D. J. Unruh, Newton, and Mrs. P. R. Voth, North Newton.

Vernon Lee Coil, was born at Geary, Oklahoma, January 22, 1921, and was killed while on a combat flight over Italy, April 25, 1944. He was baptized in 1933 and received into the First Mennonite Church, Geary. In 1943 he married Marion Hall of Geary. A son was born to this union on January 4, 1944. He is mourned by his wife, father and mother, and one sister, Mrs. Lucile McManus of Oklahoma City.

our foundation firmly and securely. He will unite all parts of our building into one. Everything will be centered in and around him. Without Christ as the cornerstone of our lives we will not find the true meaning of life and we will not be able to use our lives for any valuable service until it is consecrated by the installation of Christ as the head of the corner. There he will not only be a cornerstone, but a precious stone to all who pass by. If you omitted Christ in your building it is time that "the stone which the builders rejected (be made) the head of the corner." (Mark 12:10).

Marvin Dirks Reports from Manila

Released on February 4

"On the fourth we were released from Jap control by advance units of the 37th Infantry. Since that time we have been cared for by the American army, which has given us every consideration even though still in the midst of a city with much fighting—mopping up—to be done. . . We are sorry to be unable to give you particulars as to our return to the States. At present we are awaiting removal to some place of rest and quiet for the purpose of being 'built up' before boarding transports for home.

Although we have repeatedly been assured that no one will be sent home against his will, we believe it best to take advantage of the first opportunity to go home.

Health Not beyond Repair

Our health has not suffered beyond repair. Carole Kay (age three and a half) will perhaps respond most slowly to improved conditions, rest, and good food. May I make a very general statement regarding our health? We believe that there is nothing physically wrong with anyone in our family that will not be remedied by rest and good food. Already we are gaining in weight.

Have Not Heard from China Field

Since we have no way of determining conditions at home, we will necessarily make no plans for the future. We are concerned about the future welfare of the work on our China field. We have not heard from Miss Regier and Miss Goertz. For all we know, perhaps, the Board has already sent someone to the field to investigate conditions and renew the work. Unless the Board directs us otherwise, we will doubtless be in the States in the not too distant future.

Jantzens and Wuthrichs will doubtless also write to you, so I will let them speak entirely for themselves.

Three Years Far from Wasted

We have lived three years of our lives behind fences or walls, augmented by guards, which to some may seem to be just three wasted years. Actually much of this time has been spent in study and active service, for me personally in the supervision of a music program for the camp as a whole, the H. S. and the Union Church in particular.

Our equipment and personal belongings can perhaps be checked off as a total loss. At present our entire earthly goods can be packed in two suitcases and even most of that is worthless junk.

But what is left us, namely our health and the possibility of continued service in the Kingdom of God is most essential.

Many of the members of the young missionary groups interned here with us are entirely broken in health and will never see service on the foreign field.

Feel Fortunate and Blessed of God

Thus we count ourselves to be most fortunate and blessed of God—who hath blessed us with unmerited blessings.

With best wishes to all our friends and the friends of His work on the foreign field." Sincerely, Frieda and Marvin J. Dirks, Bilibid Prison, Manila, P. I.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By A. W. Friesen, Henderson, Nebraska

MARCH 17—"And after he had sent the multitudes away, he went up into the mountain to pray: and when even was come, he was there alone." Matt. 14:23. Certainly there never was a busier life than that of Jesus; his whole mission was performed in about three short years. He said to his disciples, "Let us come apart and rest a while, and again when evening came he was still in communion with the father, although the day had been full of work. There is a place of worship in the world of work. Going apart to commune with God is not a refuge from duty; it is the renewal of power to meet the duties of the day. The work of life is not to be done with a feverish and burdened mind; it is to be done with a mind calm and fortified by moments of withdrawal. The hours Jesus chose are the best that there are in any twenty-four hours.

MARCH 18—"I will hear what God Jehovah will speak; For he will speak peace unto his people, and to his saints." Ps. 85:8. In prayer it is not we who momentarily catch his attention, but he ours. So when we fail to hear his voice, it is not because he is not speaking so much as that we are not listening. We must recognize that all things are in God and that God is in all things, and we must learn to be very attentive, in order to hear God speaking in his ordinary tone without any special accent. A man must not stop listening any more than praying when he rises from his knees. No one questions the need of times of formal address to God, but few admit in any practical way the need of quiet waiting upon God, gazing into his face, feeling for his hand, listening for his voice. "I will hearken what the Lord God will say concerning me."

MARCH 19—"Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear" Matt. 13:16. One man walks with his eyes open, the other with eyes closed. It has been reported of some sailors, who had been in all quarters of the world, that they could tell nothing of what they had seen as to the beauty in nature, the big cities, and what is to be seen in the wide world. O yes, they had seen many other things, such as tippling-houses, the price of liquor and many other silly, degrading things, but for beauty and grandeur they had eyes that could not see. We probably do not have the opportunity to travel far and wide, yet this does not exclude us from seeing the things God has revealed. The Bible is a book that is read by thousands; yes, it is the best seller on the market today. Does this also indicate that those that read it see clearly what it has to reveal? "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law." Ps. 119:18.

MARCH 20—"Where there is no vision the people perish." Prov. 29:18. Someone said, "Whatever appearances may be today, whatever may be the religious outlook, however serious may seem the deadly apathy which has stolen over the spiritual natures of our fellowmen, this I believe—that if we can only multiply the number of those who have the vision of God however humble may be their power, however restricted their sphere, the future of the church, the future of the nation and the future of the cause of Christ throughout the world is perfectly safe." As we turn the pages of history we find that it has not been a time of kindness but more a time of selfishness. If those people, we call our enemies, could only feel some of that warmth of heart we profess to have as civilized nations, the future peace treaties would not look so tragic. Love will accomplish that which force never can.

MARCH 21—"Why do nations rage, and the peoples meditate a vain thing?" Ps. 2:1. The writer of this psalm, in his widespread view, discerns a perpetual restlessness, a ceaseless movement of discontent, the throbbing of a rebellion that is never appeased, of a vain, bitter, ceaseless revolt against the ruler of the universe. That rebellion against God, which in the masses is half unconscious, finds utterance in the plans and words of men of power. Why does the world fret against the order of the universe and against government of God? The psalmist clearly sees its utter futility. He would lead us to realize how in the righteous will of God, as revealed in Christ and in the laws of his kingdom, is an omnipotent purpose, which will prevail.

God is with his people when they are right. He is against them when they are wrong. His people must choose righteousness and follow it if they are to have his favor. Since God has chosen his people they are all the more responsible.

MARCH 22—"He hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness by the man whom he hath ordained." Acts 17:31. "Jesus our judge." How terrible this word sounds to the guilty upon the first spur of the moment. Yet, why fear? It is "Jesus." The judge will be one who knows our human life. The judge will be one who is our example. The best of all will be that the judge is one who loves us. He who was called the friend of sinners will be our judge. He who prayed, 'Father forgive them, for they know not what they do' will be our judge. He who gave himself for us, even to the death upon the cross, will be our judge. He whose hands and feet and soul are marked with the prints of the passion, the evidence of his longing and his love for us, will be upon the throne of judgment. That, indeed, is at once the most comforting and most dreadful fact about the judgment, that He who will judge us will be no enemy, nor an avenger, but a friend who loves us all.

Revolving Church Building Fund

What is meant by a "Revolving" fund and what is its purpose? This is a question which has often been asked about the Revolving Church Building Fund since the last meeting of the Western District Conference.

We must realize that there is a difference between just a "Church Building Fund" and a "Revolving Church Building Fund." Money collected, as in the past, was placed into what is called a "Church Building Fund" when it was to be used for the building of a certain church. The title to the lots purchased and the building erected remains in the same name of the Trustees of the W. D. C., and the congregation for which the building was erected in under obligation to pay the money back only if it wishes to purchase the property from the W. D. C.

A "Revolving" fund is one from which money may be lent to young and struggling congregations to assist them in putting up a church building for themselves on land which they already own. The money must be repaid so that it is again available for some other congregation. Thus, in a general sense, we may say that money paid to build churches from a "Church Building Fund" is a type of "conditional gift," while the money used from the "Revolving" fund is a loan.

The Home Mission Committee of the W.D.C. recommended the establishing of a Revolving Church Building Fund" is a type of "conditional gift," while W. D. C. adopted the resolution that each church member of our district should contribute $1.00 to this Revolving Church Building Fund. All contributions should be sent through your church treasurer to Mr. Fred Neufeld, Burrton, Kansas, Treasurer of the W. D. C. For further details regarding this fund refer to the Mennonite dated October 24, 1944.—A. Theodore Mueller, Secretary of the Board of Trustees of the W.D.C.

CORRESPONDENCE

WOODLAND MENNONITE CHURCH Warroad, Minnesota

Although our church building is rather small, we have six different Sunday School classes. The total income for our church from December 1, 1943 to December 1, 1944, was $1,591.14; C. E. $195; Sewing Society $196.60; Relief stamps and certificates $87.50; C.P.S. $141; and $970.24 for other purposes. All of our C.P.S. dues are paid.

Here at Warroad are twenty-three Mennonite families. This makes 106 people, counting children and adults. These families are scattered between three towns. Some of us have as far as ten miles to our church. The young people get together with it is easy for them to slide along. May the Lord strengthen them that they may not yield to temptations, for yielding is sin.

On January 28, Rev. Ackenhead from the Canadian Sunday School mission showed slides of his work and of Canada. His sermons were very encouraging. In this time in which there are so many rumors of war, it takes much courage to keep our hearts from being troubled.—Mrs. Otto Unruh, Corr.

BETHLEHEM MENNONITE CHURCH Bloomfield, Montana

The Bethlehem Mennonite Church is seventeen miles from the nearest railroad which is Richey Montana. About forty miles from the nearest hospital and good rail connections, also that distance from the nearest doctor. Eleven miles from the Postoffice by which address it is reached. This place of Bloomfield had a store, but that has now discontinued; only a garage remains which is operated by one of the "Old Mennonite" brethren.

We have a membership of 220, with about 160 resident. The Church had its peak financial year in 1944, with net annual receipts of somewhat over $18,000 dollars, of which nearly $9,000 went for "Home and Foreign Missions."

It was from the church that Rev. Verney Unruh, who was accepted by our Foreign Mission Board this last year, comes.

God has blessed His Word and Work here, and our prayer is that we may be used of Him for the Salvation of souls and the building up of his saints and Kingdom.
—George G. Dick, Pastor.

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH Pandora, Ohio

In addition to our pre-Easter services which take place March 18-25, with Rev. Russell Mast of Bedminister, Pa. as speaker, five special Lenten services have been planned for the regular prayer service with neighboring pastors giving the messages.

The choir under the direction of Prof. Russell A. Lantz of Bluffton College will render the cantata, "Olivet to Calvary" on Easter Sunday.

Rev. Paul Shelly, professor of Bible at Bluffton College, recently spoke at an evening service sponsored by two Sunday School classes.

The Ladies Missionary Society for their February meeting brought used clothing and soap to the church and spent the day making comforts and bedding, to be sent to the M. C. C. The subject of their March meeting is "War Relief As Carried on by the M. C. C."—Mrs. Sidney Steiner, Corr.

LORRRAINE AVENUE MENNONITE CHURCH Wichita, Kansas

The Ladies Friendship circle meets every second Thursday of the month in the home of one of its members, where they are served by the hostess and co-hostess. An interesting program has been prepared and a special speaker invited. On February 8, Mrs P. A. Penner of Newton was the guest speaker.

The Ladies Work Circle is an auxiliary of the Friendship Circle and meets every fourth Thursday of the month to work for relief. All of the sewing and clothing is sent to the Newton clothing center. Before the Newton center opened, the Circle had sent 600 lbs. of clothing to the Akron, Pa. clothing center.

The Week-Day Bible School in our church is at tended by approximately 230 children, although none from our own church. These children are taught by five teachers, most of them from our church.

Once a month our church sends greetings to our boys in service by means of a church Bulletin, which is edited for this purpose by the pastor, the Young Peoples Christian Endeavor and the Sunday School.

On Sunday evening February 18, a basket Fellowship-supper was held in the church. The girls from the Young Peoples C. E. served. This was followed by a splendid program given by a men's quartet of the Ebenfeld Church near Hillsboro, Kansas.

The collection taken went for the Y. P. New Church Building Fund.—Church Corr.

Camper Attacked by Hospital Patient

Edwin Krehbiel was severely wounded in the abdomen by a patient while working on a ward at the Utah State Hospital, Provo, Utah. The attack occurred February 21. Edwin was taken to a local hospital and an operation was performed. Latest reports are favorable and indicate that he is on the way to recovery. His home is at Pretty Prairie, Kansas, where he is a member of the General Conference Church.

Assignments to C. P. S.

Recent information from the C.P.S. Section at Akron indicates that during the four-month period, from November 6, 1944, to March 6, 1945, there downward to include nursery school and upward to include parental and all other phases of adult education. Better educated, better paid teachers are demanded who will place emphasis on intensive physical, mental and moral training, individual self-discipline, techniques of democratic participation, health services (nutritional, dental, medical, psychiatric), nature study and travel.

Would this be too expensive? Advocates of peacetime military conscription would spend each year more than is now expended for all public elementary and secondary education in the United States. Instead of turning to conscription, we should turn to our school to develop the kind of people we want Americans to be. The survival of America and the rest of the world depends on a constructive program of education which will create in all men the will and the willingness to act for universal permanent peace.

were 836 men assigned to C. P. S. (Assignments do not always equal inductions). Of this number 531 were Mennonite, 86 Brethren, and 31 Friends. The remaining 198 were from other church groups or unaffiliated. During the month of January the number of Mennonite men in M.C.C. camps increased by 73; the number of non-Mennonites in M.C.C. Camps for the month decreased by 7. At the present time a large number of the inductees not affiliated with the historic peace churches are entering government camps.

Authorization has been received to add seven herd testers, bringing the unit strength up to forty-five.

Emanuel Hertzler, director at Grottoes camp, has recently visited a number of the Mennonite camps and units in the East in the interest of Mennonite church history.

JOTTINGS

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: Verney Unruh, student at Bethel College, brought the message on March 4. His topic was "The Fall of Peter." Peter's great mistake was to follow afar off. Many today make the same mistake. At the evening meeting on that same Sunday, Dr. G. S. Klassen spoke very interestingly of experiences in Paragay.

—Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander conducted special meetings at the Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio, during the week of March 4. These subjects were dealt with under the theme of "Problems of Salvation:" "Humility or Complacency about Our Sins," "Is Sin So Bad?" "Turning to God, Who Is Always Ready to Help," "Experiencing the Joy of Salvation," "Does My Church Measure up to the New Testament Church?" "How to Remain Unspotted from the World."

—Rev. Gerald Stucky stopped at North Newton on March 7, after visiting some of the Okla. churches. He was on his way to Nappanee, Indiana, where he will conduct pre-Easter services from March 11-18.

—First Church, Bluffton, Ohio: The Lenten sermons on the "Personalities of the Passion" given by Rev. Erland Waltner of Mountain Lake, were received with grateful appreciation. On Sunday morning, March 4, our former pastor, Rev. H. T. Unruh, was a welcome visitor. Thursday evening, March 8, the Brotherhood enjoyed a covered dish supper. The discussion following the meal was based on the theme, "Why Mennonite Young Men Choose Different Types of Selective Service."—Corr.

—First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio: Rev. Robert W. Hartzler, pastor of the Silver Street Mennonite Church near Goshen, Indiana, a Central Conference church, brought the message on March 4 during the absence of the pastor.

—"The Mennonite Hymnary should be in each of our homes."—From one of our church bulletins.

—The West Zion Church, Moundridge, Kansas, has a provision in its constitution which "requires that non-resident members, unable to attend services in the home church, report annually to the church board with a letter and some financial contribution to the support of the work of the church. When this is done non-resident members remain on the active Membership List.

—Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas: A choir of more than one hundred voices is to give the Easter rendition of the "Messiah." The record attendance in the new year was 705 on February 11. Rev. Donovan Smucker's evening topics during the recent week of services were: "Jesus Christ, King of Kings," "What the Bible Teaches," "Victory over Sin," "Weighted in the Balances," "The Divine-human Encounter as Seen in Paul," "Reflections on Excuses," "The Christian Dynamic for a Fallen World," "The Pocket Book, The Wheel, the Escalator, the Cross—4 figures for the Experience of Mankind," "What Think Ye of Christ?"

—Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita: "... the architect is working on the plans and will soon have some sketches ready to present to the committee in charge... Because of the shortage of labor and material we find that we have many more problems to solve than we had anticipated."

—Rev. D. C. Wedel will conduct a week of special meetings for the two churches at Beatrice, beginning April 15.

—Mennonite Colonization by J. Winfield Fretz is available from the M. C. C. at Akron, Pa., for twenty cents a copy.

—Bergfelder Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: "Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Peters received a call from the Zion Mennonite Church, Arena, North Dakota. They have accepted and will leave for their new work in the near future."—Corr.

—The First Mennonite Church, Burns, Kansas, has voted to apply for admission to the General Conference when that body convenes.

King of Kings And Lord of Lords

HIS TRIUMPHAL ENTRY

By Walter A. Gering

Strange, is it not that our Lord should yield to such a demonstration? Never had He been friendly toward any great public acclaim during those three years of His ministry. Repeatedly He had sought to avoid such demonstrations. When men were overwhelmed by a miracle performed upon their bodies they were cautioned "Tell no man." When the multitude in their wild excitement would have made Him King by force, He sent them away and departed into the mountain to be alone. So it had been throughout His ministry; our Lord sought no personal honors. Yet on this occasion He does nothing to hold back the increasing excitement. In fact, when He is charged by the Pharisees that He rebuke His disciples for their frenzied shouts He answers them with the words, "I tell you that if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out."

I

Certainly, there was no question in His mind as to the meaning of these shouts. They were acclaiming Him as the Messiah, the promised one of God; they were announcing the arrival of their King. Of that there was no question. Was it not one of their own prophets Zechariah who had foretold of such an entry upon the foal of an ass? Had not their own rabbis acknowledged that so their Messiah and King would arrive? In the mind of the multitude there was no question that the hour had come when at last their King was at hand to bring in His Kingdom. So it was that they spread their garments in His way, a custom observed through the ages by the multitude when they discovered that God had appointed a king to the kingdom. When Jehu sat with the captains of the army and Elisha the prophet came, by the order of God, to anoint him King over Israel it was so. As soon as he came out of the inner chamber into which the prophet had taken him to anoint him, and they knew what was done, every man took his garment and spread it under him on the top of the steps and blew the trumpets saying, "Jehu is King." So it was on this day of triumphal entry; palm trees and branches, emblems of victory and success, were strewn in the way. Unmistakable was the cry "Hosanna to the son of David: blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest." Yes, the multitude acclaimed Him as their long sought King, and so it was that our Lord understood it.

II

Why did not our Lord rebuke them and silence their cries? Had not He already once before refused that appeal of the masses? Did not the Old Testament Scriptures present Him as a suffering Messiah and had not He repeatedly announced to His disciples in the closing months that the journey to Jerusalem was to end in a shameful death at the hands of the leaders at Jerusalem? How could He accept such an unmistakable Kingly acclaim on this day? Disciples, Galileans, children and multitudes out of Jerusalem, all joined in the wild enthusiasm and He, the one who was to suffer and die, accepted their homage and honor. Why did He not silence them and remind them of the coming Cross? Can it be that for a moment He thought He might yet be received by His own and given His rightful place?

Surely, we cannot believe that our Lord was deceived by the cries of the hour. Already He heard, over and above the Hosannas of the moment, the shrieks of the frenzied mob: "Crucify—crucify Him." No—our Lord was not deceived. The Cross already was being fashioned and erected for His agonizing hour of suffering.

III

Why then did our Lord accept such acclaim? First of all, because He knew Himself to be a King and by this royal entry He proclaimed Himself as such. Just as a few days later in answer to Pilate's question "Art thou a King then" He answered, "Thou sayest that I am a King" so now, by riding in lowly state into Jerusalem and accepting the plaudits of the people as His due, He announced Himself to the world as the promised King whom God would yet set upon His holy hill of Zion. Not in vain does John see Him riding a white horse having on His vesture and on His thigh a name written "King of Kings and Lord of Lords."

Is not this a truth which we need to learn again in these days of conflicting loyalties? Certainly He is our Saviour who stooped in deep humility to take upon Himself our sins and to redeem us by His own shed blood. Never shall we lose sight of that salvation purchased at such a price. He is our Saviour, our abiding companion, Friend, and Elder Brother.

Case Studies in Evangelism

But He is more—He is a King, our King and as such we owe unto Him our supreme allegiance. His authority, majesty and kingship is above all. As subjects of such an Eternal King implicit obedience to His every command is of utmost importance. Let us never deceive ourselves into thinking that obedience unto our divine King is a side issue. Either He is to be Lord over all or He is not Lord at all.

Riding into Jerusalem upon the day of the triumphal entry was a clear proclamation on the part of our Lord of His kingship. So it was understood by the multitude. But it was more than that. It was the last, final public assertion of His Messiahship before the Jerusalem authorities. One of the most significant facts about our Lord's ministry is this: In Galilee He tended to keep His Messiahship veiled and often escaped from the crowds and hid Himself in some solitary place. But not so in Jerusalem; He paid only a few brief visits to Jerusalem—but He never visited Jerusalem without definitely asserting His Messiahship. The first time He did so by cleansing the Temple in a most dramatic manner. The second time He did so by healing the impotent man at Bethesda on the Sabbath and then asserting boldly His relationship to God. On His third visit He proclaimed Himself as the Light of the World. He took every opportunity of presenting His claims unto the rulers and citizens of Jerusalem that they might clearly see and understand if they but chose to do so. They should be without excuse.

So it was on this great day of the triumphal entry; once more in unmistakable terms He asserted His Messiahship and His divine right to their supreme worship as the Son of God Himself. And, so it was that they understood Him. Filled with envy and unbelief they sought to destroy Him.

IV

Once again the Messiah, God's Holy Son, the Saviour of man is riding before the multitudes presenting His claims in unmistakable terms; on every hand there is evidence of His presence. Men may once more reject His claims as they did in days gone by; once more they may give Him lip service only to turn upon Him to rend Him on the morrow. The multitude is no less fickle today than in His day. But the claim of God's Son is clear. He leaves us facing a decisive decision; we shall be found without excuse.

Palm Sunday presents anew unto us the convincing claims of a King who shall one day be crowned King of Kings and Lord of Lords, a King who shall yet establish His Kingdom in all power, glory and majesty. Let us crown Him now as King of our lives and await the day of His triumphal entry into His Kingdom.

Walter A. Gering is pastor of the Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas.

The following story gives an account of the conversion of a four-year-old girl in one of our Mennonite homes. The father of the home writes thus about the experience:

To me the most striking case of conversion that I have observed, I believe, was that of little Joy.

Little Joy was only four years old when she came to stay at our house for several months. She had many very likeable traits and we loved her from the first, but there were also some characteristics that were not desirable. She was rather sensitive and given to pouting at times.

What gave us special concern, however, was that she made no secret of the fact that she did not love God. In fact, she was embittered toward Him, and she felt that she had ample reason for this attitude, for had not people told her that He had taken her mother away whom she loved so dearly? How could she be expected to love Him. In the evening when she asked for a bedtime story we would tell her some Bible story, especially such that showed love of God, but these seemed to make no impression her; in fact, they did not seem to interest her particularly.

In trying to train her we believed to notice a remarkable absence of sorrow for having been naughty. There was no realization of guilt. She resented any kind of correction. What she evidently most needed was conviction of being a sinner before God. How was this conviction to be brought home to her? We prayed much about the matter. Believing that the Word of God contains all that both saint and sinner needs, we asked the Lord to show us what portion of His Word to use and how to use it to secure the desired result. We finally felt led to use the story of the first sin.

So the next evening when she climbed up in our lap again with the request, "Tell me a story," we told her how the Lord had created the earth with all that is on it, how He planted a garden with all the most beautiful flowers and all the various delicious fruit, and how He put Adam and Eve in that garden, telling them that they might enjoy all the wonderful things. How happy they were and how they enjoyed to have the Lord come into the garden in the cool of the day to visit with them. And then one day the serpent came and persuaded them to eat of the one and only tree that God had forbidden them to eat, and Adam and Eve disobeyed; they ate of the fruit of that tree. I do not recall whether she listened any further than this or not, but anyhow, before the story was ended she slid off my lap saying, "That is enough, you need not tell me any more." And for several evenings she did not ask for a story again, and we wondered had

Need For Emphasizing That "God Is Love"

Although some modern theologians are emphasizing the transcendence of God and are nearly seeing him in an atmosphere of austerity, there are other theologians who, making room for the transcendence of God, declare that it is extremely important to emphasize that God is love. Before me lies a book with a chapter entitled "God As Agape." A Swedish theologian has written an entire book on "Agape and Eros."

In short Agape (Greek) is divine love and Eros (Greek) is the common kind of human love. Agape is defined as "spontaneous, unmotivated, value-indifferent love creative of fellowship." Eros, human love, is not spontaneous; it flows only when there is something to draw it out; is not unmotivated; it comes when there is attraction which it would like to possess; is not value-indifferent; it isn't given to the one who is unlovable; is not creative of fellowship; it is repulsed by the unworthiness in other human beings and thus makes for division.

In contrast to this emphasis has been that of God as Creator in the past decades. This has not always been expressed in words, but men have "devoted" themselves to science, (the orderly ways of God, and by emphasizing his orderly ways have brought into being new creations, which like radio and television stun the imagination. He has also been made much of as "Father," but a very easy-going Father, who by some nearly became "the old man."

The emphasis upon God as creator has brought us marvelous machines but not marvelous human relationships, witness the hell that is raging. Seeing men have repeatedly said that we have let our machines get away with us. They are dangerous tools in the hands of people too unregenerate to use them wisely and rightly. We have not so much lagged behind in creation, but in the right use of our creations in the material realm. We have not emphasized love which is a matter of human relationships, and the most important thing about them.

Now theologians point out to us that the other attributes of God all are a part of his love.

This is a much needed emphasis. Let men give their wholehearted and highest loyalty to God as love—that is, to the divine kind of love and not the human kind that rains bombs upon those who behave contrary to one's desires—and then His Kingdom will come in a way that men have not visioned. Then dynamite will be used to blast roads and not to blast people apart. The aeroplanes will be wings of life and not those of death. Then men will work as hard at inventing for the sake of helping as they now are for the sake of destroying.

No, men have not been much moved by a God of love. They have tried to make of him at times a God of hate and murder. But they can't.

The cross took care of that. There was established for all eternity the fact that God is supremely love—a love that was and is willing to suffer to redeem. Men have not looked enough at the cross; they have not preached it enough in real, honest truthfulness, the kind that leads to changes in human relationships. We will never fathom the furthest depths of its mystery, perhaps, but we might well learn more of it.

Church Bulletin Service

As much as we know from thirty to forty churches in our conference are now putting out Sunday bulletins. It seems that a considerable number of these have been on the lookout for bulletins, the outside cover of which was already prepared in a satisfactory way. Other churches, undoubtedly, have not tackled the job of putting out a bulletin because it looked too formidable.

Now there is a church bulletin service by the Secretarial Bureau, North Newton, Kansas, that may help to solve many of the problems experienced by the churches. This service furnishes bulletins especially prepared for churches of the General Conference. Pen and ink artists are used for creating attractive designs. Writers representing various boards of our conference furnish significant, short write-ups. There are short, historical notes by a Mennonite historian. There are to be special write-ups for the great days of the Church Year. The back cover is different from Sunday to Sunday, thus furnishing a great variety of material. Improvements are being made and will be made in this service. To date ten issues have appeared.

We believe that many of our churches are interested in this service and would like to know more about it. Already about ten churches have taken up the service, and fourteen others have requested samples or indicated tentatively their intention of adopting the service. We believe it a move in the right direction with great possibilities for service.

The cost varies slightly depending on the extent of service required: The "standard" service is fifty cents per one hundred sheets. Some churches have a picture of their house of worship on the front page. This is "special" service and price would vary slightly from the above.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

Churches Plan To Wipe Out College Debt

The Fellowship Committee Dinner Meeting, held at Bethel College on March 12, was attended by about two hundred people. Representatives from surrounding churches and members of the college board and faculty enjoyed a meal and program and adopted the following significant recommendations:

RECOMMENDATIONS

Be it resolved that:

1. We plan to conduct the 1945 canvasses on March 18 or as soon thereafter as possible. (Knowing in advance when the canvass is to be made, the fellowship officers can give the matter proper publicity, appoint and instruct the solicitors, and plan the route for each.)

2. We recommend making personal visits as the most effective method of performing all seven aims of the fellowships. (There is no substitute for personal visits. Monthly offerings and public announcements provide as much income, but by using these methods only, several aims are neglected.)

3. We suggest that the size of each gift should be determined by the individual's faith, interest, and financial ability—not by "what others are giving."

4. We make an effort to increase the number of annual donors and cheerfully accept gifts of any size.

5. We agree to invest gifts of $18.50 or more in Civilian Government Bonds if the prospective donors make this request.

6. We make our financial aim this year to liquidate Bethel's indebtedness and enter an expansion program on a "go-as-you-can-pay" basis.

7. We remember to tell those students with no financial resources to investigate the combination work-and-study opportunities at Bethel before giving up the idea of attending college.

8. When a committee member leaves the community and becomes inactive, a substitute should be appointed by the Fellowship Committee chairman. This substitute should hold office until the next annual election, and notification of the change should be sent to the Central Committee at the college.

9. We suggest that congregations call for reports of and elect Fellowship Committee members at their regular annual business meetings, thus making this a standing committee of the church organization.

10. We urge every church in the Western, Pacific, and Northern Conferences to join us in the seven aims of the Fellowship Committees even though the church has not organized a regular Fellowship Committee. Until sufficient interest is developed to conduct an annual, every-member visit, the aims may be partially realized by the following methods: a. See that every family in church receives a Bethel College Bulletin. b. Keep a supply of Bethel College descriptive leaflets available in the church lobby. c. Plan for regular free-will offerings for Bethel College. d. Preach sermons on the importance of praying for, attending, and supporting our own church colleges to help preserve, purify, and strengthen our Christian heritage.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE CONSTITUENCY OF BETHEL COLLEGE

We share with you the hope that the old College debt can finally be wiped out this year. During the last fiscal year from August 1, 1943, to July 31, 1944, friends contributed a total of $122,012.89 to the College. For this we praise our Heavenly Father, the Giver of all good and perfect gifts. This exceptional record deserves the sincere gratitude of everybody interested in the school. These contributions were used per instructions of the donors as follows: $60,562.83 coming mainly from larger bequests was restricted for endowment and building funds; $21,071.57 was needed to balance the current annual budget; and the remaining $40,378.55 was used for debt reduction. During the last year special emphasis was put on the debt and it was reduced from $73,646.53 to $33,267.98.

For the current fiscal year, August 1, 1944, to July 31, 1945, we need $60,000 to balance the budget and pay the remainder of the debt. If more unrestricted gifts come in than necessary to cover that amount, the balance is to go for the much needed new building fund as per corporation resolutions. If friends of Bethel do as well during this fiscal year in contributions as last year, again making it a total of $122,000 for all purposes, it would not only pay the debt, but otherwise also substantially improve the financial condition of the school.

After the debt is paid let us move forward on a "go as you can pay" basis. But first let us pay the debt and then stay out of debt. How grateful we all will be when that is once accomplished. We are thankful for whatever contributions you may already have made or still will make to that end this year. In our concern over material needs may we never lose sight of the fact that after all our greatest needs are of a spiritual nature. In your giving as well as in all other contacts with the College, we especially desire your continued intercessory prayers for a greater measure of the Spirit of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Gratefully yours,
BETHEL COLLEGE

A Visit to Our Mennonite Missions in India

By Ralph C. Kauffman

I have just visited three of our General Conference Mennonite Missions in India: one at Champa, where Rev. and Mrs. P. W. Penner, Rev. and Mrs. Orlando Waltner, Rev. and Mrs. Harold Ratzlaff, and Miss Alida Schrag are stationed; another at Jagdeeshpur, where Rev. and Mrs. J. Thiessen, Rev. and Mrs. Duerksen, and Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Dester are stationed; and a third at Janjgir, where are found Rev. and Mrs. F. J. Isaac and Rev. and Mrs. S. T. Moyer. The experience was an interesting and instructive one and one in which I wish many of you could share, especially the many of you who through gifts have made this work possible. The "dryness" often associated with missions and missionary work vanishes as one sees this work first hand. Often I found myself remarking as I was shown about the various compounds, "I only wish some of our young people back home could see this."

The Kingdom Comes

At Champa I saw the general Indian-Christian community of about four hundred members, their church and the compound hospital; also the leper colony begun and largely built up by Rev. P. A. Penner and now under the direction of Rev. Orlando Waltner. The names of Missionaries P. A. Penner and P. J. Wiens, incidentally, came up repeatedly in connection with the missionary work of our conference in India. I worshiped with the several hundred lepers in their colony church, ate with them at a rice "banquet," saw others turned away from the colony whom available facilities could no longer accommodate, and through it all gained an impression of the magnificence of the work done at this place. I rode on through jungle territory to the mission at Jagdeeshpur, located in an area which, less than thirty years ago, was itself a part of the jungle. Now it harbors, besides the homes of the missionaries living there, a large church, a fine hospital, a school, and a number of gardens, orchards and rice fields. Luxuriant gardens were in typical Mennonite agrarian fashion a feature of every mission compound. They supply the missionaries with many foods difficult or at least costly to obtain on the market and, perhaps of even greater importance, serve as "Exhibit A" to the surrounding villagers as to what can be done along this line with proper diligence and agricultural methods. The Christian school found here serves Indian children on both the primary and high school levels. It is a place where pupils study, but also work with their hands. There was a weaving department, a printing press, a small paper mill, a carpentry shop, and a school garden.

Driving to Conference in India

It was while at Jagdeeshpur that we got into a Model A Ford and drove out to visit a conference, convening at the time, of the Christian Indian churches of that district. It was a trip of only twenty miles, but took over two hours to make. It involved jumping ruts, dodging rocks, fording streams—in fact it was the sort of a trip for which I think a Model A was originally devised. Children from villages along the way would come running out to gaze at our 1930 automobile as though they were seeing a B-29 bomber. Some, terrified, hurried back into the house as quickly as they had come out; others followed behind like little pups—and kept up for as much as a mile, which gives you some idea of our speed—or theirs! When we arrived, the conference was already in session. It was being carried on in the vernacular, so I could not understand what was said, but I was impressed with how orderly and capably those Indian Christians, some only a short time ago ignorant and illiterate outcasts, took charge and proceeded. The entire procedure reminded me much of a conference at home, though there was perhaps less "rising from the floor." I was told that one of the points discussed and urged was that they make themselves independent of financial assistance from America. Coming from the group itself, it was the sign of a maturing church.

Indian Christians Keep Indigenous Customs

I was a new-comer in their midst and was given a royal reception. In their own fashion, they put a garland of flowers about my neck and struck up a song and dance with tom-tom drum and cymbals. It was a lively but, I felt, very genuine affair. One thing that interested me as revealed in this incident and others as well, was the extent to which Indian Christians are permitted to keep their indigenous customs, that is of course, in so far as they do not actually interfere with Christian character. I had often heard the criticism, and in a measure shared in it myself, that missionaries, failing to discern between Christianity and "civilization," tried to impose Western culture upon a people who, like these, live under radically different circumstances. I didn't find this true of the missions I visited. Indian Christians continue to live in the same general type of house, to use "cow-goleum" floors and plastering, to wear the same sort of clothing (though, to be sure, a bit more of it), to eat the same foods and to enjoy much of the same music as before. In other words, their cultural characteristics are in so far as possible respected, and the Christianizing process is one of addition more than of denial. It is predominantly an enrichment and expansion of their lives, not a restriction.

The Highest Form of "Relief Work"

The last mission I visited, at Janjgir, demonstrated many of the same things I had already observed. Here again there was a fine Christian community, a well-built church edifice and, in this case, a girls' school of some eighty students and taught largely by young Christian-Indian ladies trained for their position.

While I came to India for the purpose of relief work, I left these mission stations with the feeling that the real relief work was being done right there. If the purpose of relief is to establish the personal and social independence of a people, this was it. Through a transformation of the inner self, these folks were being made spiritually, morally, and economically free and independent. Through their soul-quickenning acquaintance with the Master, they gained an inner light, an inner poise and control, which displaced the external controls of sin and society under which they had hitherto existed. In comparison with this, our task as relief workers can be only superficial and of the nature of an emergency measure. The real work in helping India, despite the recently expressed opinions of such notables as Ghandi and Nehru, is being done by Christian missionaries.

The change wrought in the lives of Christian converts is difficult to describe and must be seen to be fully appreciated. It is perhaps for this reason that missionary talks often fail to convey to us the vitality and significance of their work. But the change itself is there and expresses itself not only in the spiritual outlook and moral fibre of a people. It reaches into areas not specifically religious and thus, once again, into the area of relief work. I saw where Outcastes of the lowest order, formerly subservient and on the verge of starvation nearly always, become hopeful and industrious. They start saving and soon achieve economic independence, buying their own land and building their own homes. I saw where they become intellectually liberated and invigorated. People who formerly lived little above the plane of animal existence and who were assumed by others and themselves to have been by heredity deprived of normal human intelligence, come to life and function as capable, intelligent leaders within their Christian communities. They lacked not in native endowment, but in opportunity and incentive.

Prevention Rather Than Cure

Many of our young people today, especially among those in C.P.S. camps, I know are thinking in terms of doing relief work as soon as given the opportunity. That is fine. Emergency assistance is in line with our Christian concern for the needy and will always be necessary. But I hope there will be those of you too who think in terms of the more permanent—the long-run—policy of missionary work. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Relief work is of the nature of a "cure" and shares in its dramatic elements. Missionary work is in some respects less dramatic, but it partakes of the quiet forces of prevention. Apart from missionary efforts, relief work is like dipping water out of a damaged and sinking vessel without stopping up the hole through which it comes.

We Must Christianize the World

For those of us who have grown complacent in our acceptance of the benefits of Christianity and of Christian society, it is well to remember also that there is something about Christianity, even as about democracy, which makes it impossible to confine it to one's self without losing the thing itself. We are aware of how near we came to having this very thing happen in the present world crisis if, indeed, in the fact that we as a nation have once more gone to war in defiance of our Christian precepts, it has not actually happened. In order to remain "Christian" in an unchristian world, we are "forced" to engage in tactics which we all know to be unchristian. This will continue to be true, and increasingly so, until our efforts to disseminate the Christian Gospel keep pace with the dissemination of Western technology. If we, under present day circumstances, are to remain a Christian nation ourselves, it is a practical necessity that we Christianize the world. Those same circumstances which lead us to speak of "the fallacy of isolationism" in matters political and economic, must be seen to apply with equal cogency to matters religious. Thus even from the viewpoint of our own self-interests it is urgent that we recognize, support and promote the work of our missionaries in foreign fields. We must not let the fact that they are far away and that we seldom have an opportunity to see their work lead us to forget them. They are doing a splendid job and I have written this in the hope that there will be others of you to join them and to carry on the work they have so nobly begun.

Divine And Human Triangles

By Cornelius Krahn

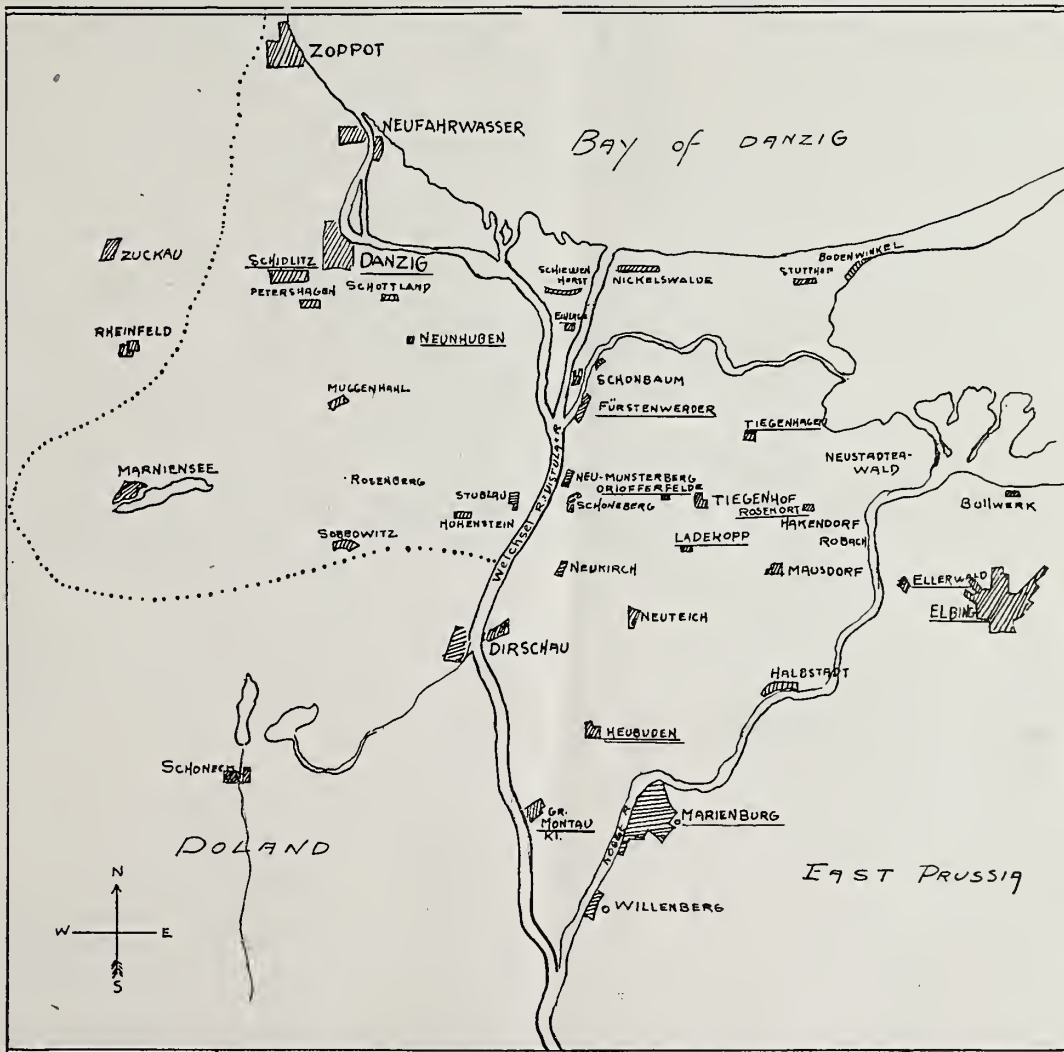

Even though we have become almost calloused to the destruction of life and property, let us pause at this triangle for a little reflection. Like the German mechanized war machine moved into Poland and Russia at the beginning of the war, so the Russians are moving into Germany now. Königsberg in East Prussia has been encircled by the Red Army cutting through to the Baltic Coast near Elbing. Another drive to the Baltic Coast near Stettin has encircled the entire Vistula Delta, formerly the Free City of Danzig.

Mennonites in Danzig

One third of all German Mennonites live in this triangle. The city of Danzig has a Mennonite congregation of approximately 1400 members. Other large congregations are located in Heubuden, Ladekopp, Tiegenhagen, Elbing, Ellerwald, Rosenort, etc. Why do some of us become sentimental when we hear these names, especially now that they are in the war zone? Here are the reasons.

Four hundred years ago when the little democratic country of The Netherlands was an intolerant, persecuting country, many of our forefathers lost their lives because they differed from the majority in their religious beliefs. Others went east and settled on the above mentioned triangle of the swampy and flooded Vistula Delta. For generations they struggled with frequent floods, which they had learned to master through the building of dikes in their home country. Gradually they succeeded in restricting the river to its

The Free City of Danzig has the shape of a triangle (see map). Roughly speaking the boundary lines run southeast from the city of Danzig to Marienburg and from there northeast to Elbing. This is the Vistula (Weichsel) Delta. Here World War II had its beginning and after more than five years of unparalleled struggle is back to its starting point.—Drawing by John Lingenfelder.

course and in draining the swamps. The Christian triangle of faith, hope, and love enabled them to make the delta the garden spot of the country. The "sweat, blood and tears" of our ancestors make us sentimental about this triangle.

Struggle with Growing Militarism

Growing Prussian militarism during the eighteenth century and the jealousy of the neighbors made it hard for the Mennonites to stay on their land and maintain their way of life. Some gradually yielded and gave up some of their principles. It was at this time that the Mennonites expressed themselves, in a petition to the government, thus: "We have become strangers on the land which our forefathers conquered from the sea with much toil and labor and many of us have been forced to leave their beloved homeland with tears in their eyes." They gave up their homes and went to new frontiers with plow and shovel in order to do constructive work. In this manner they fought Prussian militarism, or as far as that is concerned, any militarism, centuries ago. That is what they did 150 years ago when thousands of them went to the steppes of Russia to found new homes. Groups after groups have since done the same. Approximately seventy years ago the last group to protest against this militarism came to Kansas and Nebraska.

A Divine Triangle

When Napoleon besieged and occupied Danzig 6000 people were killed and much property was destroyed. The Mennonites contributed 30,000 Danzig dollars for reconstruction. Numerous other illustrations could be cited which illustrate the divine triangle, faith, hope, love, in action.

Of the one hundred thousand Mennonites of Russia who suffered from revolution, starvation, and persecution about one-third escaped. Most of them found new homes in Canada. Some went to Brazil and Paraguay. The last of these, a few thousand, crossed the Russian border in 1929. During their temporary stay in Germany, a Mennonite World Relief Conference was held in the Free City of Danzig. Mennonite delegates from all over the world met there. They reported on relief which had been done in the past, which was being done, and which was to be done in the future. None of the participants could realize how great the need would be fifteen years later.

The shape of the Vistula Delta is a symbol. The floods of the river formerly made it inundated, swampy and uninhabitable; only faith, hope, and love could make it a garden spot. The waters of fear, despair, and hate have flooded our world of today. This human triangle seems to be leading us to self-destruction and chaos. Only the divine triangle of faith, hope, and love can restore order. It is our duty and our heritage to lend our services to Christ for this great task. His creative forces are still at work. Dear Lord, fill our hearts with faith, hope, and love so that we may do our share in this work.

we made a mistake? We prayed much about it and for the child.

Several evenings went by. Then one evening she climbed into our lap again with the request for another story. Again we told the story of creation and the fall as we had a few evenings before, but this time she listened attentively to the end and when we had finished she had many questions to ask. "Why did Adam and Eve disobey God? Why didn't they do what God told them? Do we ever disobey God, and are we then punished for it?" etc.

Now the opportunity had come for which we had been praying. Now the child was ready to listen to how the Saviour left His heavenly glory, was born as a little Babe, lived a perfect life, did much good, and finally died on the cross in our place, bearing our guilt that we might be forgiven and enjoy Heaven at last. Much of this we had tried to tell little Joy before, but it did not interest her; now, however, she listened with rapt attention. Her conscience had been awakened; she realized her guilt and therefore her need of a Saviour.

What a change came over this little four-year-old. And we were sure it was the Spirit's work, for she had never heard of or observed a conversion in anyone else; nor was it due to any prompting on our part. She danced around for joy, saying, "Oh, I am so glad that Jesus loves me. Are you so glad too?" And at once she was concerned about those whom she loved. "Has my mother gone to heaven? Will daddy go to heaven? and brother? The first time her father came to see her she asked him whether he loved Jesus too. Unfortunately he at first tried to evade her question and then gave not too certain an answer. The child's life was completely changed.

Soon after this experience she attended the daily vacation Bible school, and how she enjoyed it. She could hardly wait from one day to the next to go again. How she liked the songs and choruses they sang, like,

"I am so glad that my Father in heaven
Tells of His love in the Book He has given, Wonderful things in the Bible I see,
This is the dearest that Jesus loves me."

Soon after this the father came to get the children as he left his locality. Where is little Joy now? We wonder. Is this tender little plant that the Father planted being nourished and cared for? Or are the weeds growing around so rank and thick that it is in danger of being smothered? We believe that the Divine Gardener will watch this little life and see to it that in spite of all disadvantages it will some day blossom and bear fruit for life eternal.

The Task of Mennonite Youth

By Jacob D. Goering

When speaking of the task of youth, one is overwhelmed with the immensity of the many of the perplexing tasks involved in living itself. Isn't it the business of Christians to live life at its fullest and best? Christ "came that we might have life and have it more abundantly."

This living at its best involves ever so much more than merely satisfying the physical desires. The life in Christ is spiritual as well as physical, with the spirit controlling the body. Primary emphasis therefore must be given to spiritual development. John 1:12 points to an interesting meaning of this development. "But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become sons of God." The word "become" seems the important word here, and Mennonite Youth need to get acquainted with what it means. To become sons of God individually and collectively can truly be called the task of Mennonite youth.

The Need for Growth

Such pious platitudes are, however, meaningless to the majority of our young people and therefore need to be defined clearly. The word "become" is fraught with a great deal of meaning. It signifies growth, development, and creativity. Becoming Sons of God is a matter of growing out of our selfish and ego-centric selves into a psychologically and spiritually mature and unselfish being. In order to become and take on the qualities of unselfishness, we must give out, and be willing to give even when there may be little or no promise of receiving anything in return. One of the strange paradoxes of the New Testament is this, namely, that we must lose life in order to save it. Dr. Weatherhead says that only idealism translated into action results in character being built. And that is precisely what Mennonite Youth and youth all over the world want to know; what action and activities individually or in groups will contribute to our growth towards becoming sons of God? The following paragraphs are an attempt to make a few concrete suggestions.

Vital Y.P. Meetings

Vital young people's meetings in the church should be intelligently planned and with great care and a great deal of forethought. Topics of real and vital concern should be faced squarely and without hesitation or fear. Questions which perplex youth should be settled, and the young people's meetings in church should be one avenue through which the young people of the church can work out their philosophy of life and of religion, and a sound theology. Topics such as "The Purpose of Life," "What Is Progress," "Meaning of Unselfishness," "Creativity In The Home," "Our Obligations Towards Other Minorities," "What Is Man," "Issues of Peace and War," and countless others, all of which are vital and which need to be wrestled with.

Well Planned Retreats

Well planned retreats for various age groups including young married folk should be part of the larger program of the church. That should call for retreat grounds for each state or similar area small enough so as to enable everyone to attend at some time or other. In order to get acquainted across the state lines, there could be a system of exchange of several retreaters with a neighboring state. Needless to say these retreats must be of the best planning, and the leaders must be stimulating and challenging.

Local Educational Institutes

At the local churches there should be some educational institutes held regularly—one every three months or so. Authorities in the field could be secured, and a series of ten or twelve sessions or discussions could be held on any of the following topics: Courtship (for the proper age groups, and perhaps for some parents), Marriage, Home Life, Children in the Jacob D. Goering was formerly educational director at the Lapine, Oregon, C.P.S. camp and then later at the North Fork, California, C.P.S. camp. He is now director of the latter camp. The men in camp feel that "Jake" has their welfare at heart. Counselling is one of his major interests. Cut courtesy Bethel College.

Home, Proper Methods of Rearing Children, The Purpose of the Mennonites, Our Economic Life, Various aspects of Private and Community Health, and a host of others. This type of education could be carried on in each community and be a service performed by the church college. Of course, this is possible only if the churches first of all support their colleges and make them strong. Such a system of education would give those not able to attend college an opportunity to benefit from her more directly than is now possible.

A Youth Center for Each Community

In a recent conversation with one of the more alert young men of our church, the following conclusion was reached: In our homes we shower upon our children an over-abundance of attention with gifts and toys, and often succeed in spoiling them very decidedly. When they become old enough to be of some economic value in the home, we insist that they work instead of play. One of the best things that can be done for any youngster is to introduce him to performing certain duties about the home even when he is quite young. However, often too much is expected of the pre-adolescent and adolescent youngster by way of work, and he is expected to give up play altogether. During this critical period, however, he needs play as much as he needs work, and it is most important to keep a proper balance between the two if his personality and character are to develop normally. It is in this "Boy Scout" and "Girl Scout" age where, especially in Mennonite communities, probably the greatest atrocities are committed by parents against their children. There just isn't enough to do of a recreational nature that is challenging and growth stimulating. To meet the needs of this group and those of older age groups, each community needs a Youth Center with at least one full time director with duties comparable to a YMCA secretary. Such a Youth Center should contain a gymnasium, bowling alley, leather and other craft shops, woodworking shop, library, possibly a swimming pool, and other facilities. There might well be a good program of educational movies, and perhaps some inter-community activity along some of these lines could also be developed.

Oh yes, it would cost something—quite a bit, but not more than any community could well afford. Which is worth more, a large bank account or young people who have a wholesome, Christian outlook on life and who live an abundant Christian life? Who would rather save his money than keep even one young man or woman from a life of indulgence in worldly sin and lust?

Mennonite Youth who see this as their task will need to establish such a church program for the present and oncoming generations if Mennonite Youth is not to be lost to the world.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

Mennonite Bible Academy, North Newton, Kansas:

Sunday night, March 11, a group of students went to Walton, Kansas, to give a program in the Mennonite Church, where Rev. Ronald von Riesen is the pastor. After the program the group was invited into the basement for some light refreshments.

During the chapel periods of this week, March 11-16, Rev. Phil. Wedel of the Alexanderwohl Church is bringing messages on "Christian Living" to the student body.

The Academy chorus is going to give an Easter cantata "Darkness and Dawn," by Fred W. Peace, in the College Chapel at 8 o'clock on March 23. The public is cordially invited.

Freeman Junior College: Monday, April 2, is the Annual Music Day. Plans are for the churches to join for the morning program as formerly and for the College to give a program in the afternoon. There will be no evening program.

—Christian Youth Volunteers at Freeman Junior College. This organization, active on the campus, is made up of Christian young people who are interested in active Christian service. The group meets weekly in the chapel for an inspirational program. It sponsors a weekly prayer meeting for students and has given a number of programs in the surrounding churches. On occasion smaller groups also go to visit sick people, reading Scripture and singing for them.

Along with the Christian Youth Volunteers group other young people help to give programs in the various surrounding churches. Rev. C. F. Plett of the Bible Department, has charge of this work. For the rest of the school year almost every Sunday will find some of the students from school giving programs. We are grateful for the opportunity the churches are giving our young people for this active Christian service. On the other hand, it also affords the churches a fine opportunity to become more intimately acquainted with our young people and the work of our school.

The Question

*I saw the Son of God go by Crowned with the crown of thorn.
"Was it not finished, Lord?" I said,
"And all the anguish borne?"*

*He turned on me His awful eyes:
"Hast thou not understood?
Lo! Every soul is Calvary,
And every sin a Rood."*

Our Ministry of Education

By J. H. Langenwalter

All Kinds of Ground

In order to grow, a seed needs ground. Good seed cannot do its best in ground which is not fit to give it nourishment. That is as true of a thought-seed which is to be entrusted to human soil as of plant-seed to be planted in earth soil.

This fact was one of the early and difficult lessons to be learned by our forefathers of three generations ago as they turned their attention to the preparation of youth who might represent them in sharing their Christian values with others. Jesus, who had brought them their values, had told men long ago about four kinds of ground encountered by one who went forth to sow (Matt. 13:1-9). One has a feeling that Jesus might have described many more than four kinds of soil. However, four were enough to make clear his point.

Our forefathers found many kinds of opinions which had little to do with the service they wished to render. That did not keep them from going ahead. They believed that they owed it to others to share with them what the teachings of Jesus had come to mean to them. They built a school at Wadsworth, Ohio. A goodly number of the youth of a widely scattered group came to learn. These became leaders in and supporters of the work of the church for two generations. There were the difficulties of a lack of experience. There were also the difficulties of stubbornness, shallowness, and half-heartedness. Over against these there was the good ground of a genuine interest and a generous support.

Those who reaped the benefit of the school at Wadsworth were and still are the best evidence that it was well worth while for our forefathers to sow the thought-seed of their convictions, even though only some of the ground proved to be good soil for the seed.

Sowers

In order to assure a good harvest, it takes good soil, good seed, and good sowers. In Matthew 13:24-30 we find a story told by Jesus about a man who sowed good seed. When he had done his work, another man came and, "While men slept," he sowed tares into the same field. He was not a good sower.

The soil supported both kinds of seed. Men could not see what had happened until it was time for the heads containing the new seed to appear. They were disturbed and inclined to accuse the sower of the good seed. He was the one who suffered most and yet seemed least disturbed. He knew what to do to make the best of the situation. He knew what kind of man he had to meet. When harvest came he would burn the tares (our early pioneers used to call that kind of weed "cheat" when they found it in the wheat) and he would save the grain for its intended use.

Our forefathers who built the school at Wadsworth, Ohio, in order to train youth to help the Church share its Christian benefits with others, also had experiences with different kinds of sowers. That is why the school ceased after only ten years. The students did not stop the school, nor did those who had the great idea which lay back of its existence. Some of these sacrificed to the limit. They sowed better than they knew. They worked in the open. Many of those who did not "see" the value of the undertaking "worked," mostly talked, "while men slept." That produced a sad bit of history for many concerned.

Nevertheless, there was a worthwhile harvest. Many future leaders had learned to know each other, as well as learning some valuable lessons in the school room. Their fruit still lives.

Western District Conference Funds

For the past few months contributions have been coming in generously for the Revolving Church Building Fund of the Western District Conference. This is in response to the resolution passed at the last session of the Western District Conference.

We must remember, however, that such contributions as well as some other funds which are on hand cannot be used for current expenses. Some expense bills for printing will be coming in soon, and they can be paid only by cash from the General or Current Fund. Our Treasurer should be supplied with more money for the Current Fund if he is to pay the bills promptly after the printing is done.

May we ask the congregations of the Western District to prayerfully consider taking contributions or a collection in the very near future for the Current Fund of the Western District Conference. We must take care of our current needs. Please, send your contributions through your church treasurer or direct to Mr. Ferd Neufeld, Burrton, Kansas, treasurer of the Western District Conference. Please, be sure to mark the contribution for the General or Current Fund.

SPRING IS INTRODUCING HERSELF

Spring is making herself known to Kansans. The March winds are blowing. But this morning as I walked to work, the wind was only a soft, warm breeze that stole caressingly over one; somewhere there was a rippling frog chorus. Some robins were pecking out short, sharp enunciations. The air was moist, the sidewalks wet. God was revealing the wonder of his creation in a change of season.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By A. W. Friesen, Henderson, Nebraska

MARCH 25—"But I hold not my life of any account as dear unto myself, so that I may accomplish my course, and the ministry which I received from the Lord Jesus." Acts 20:24. We are moved to repentance for our self-indulgent lives as we read of our Lord and Saviour turning with steadfast will toward Jerusalem and the cross. Remembering his sacrifice for us, and the spirit of heroic consecration that animated the apostles and that has burned in the hearts of great Christian leaders of later days, we are bowing in humility and shame. O Lord, beget in us something of this same spirit. May we truly deny ourselves and take up our cross and follow Him. May all our thoughts be pure and our words truthful and loving.

MARCH 26—"Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and give his life a ransom for many." It is impossible to keep the law toward our neighbor except we love him. We are not made for law, but for love. Love is law, because it is infinitely more than law. God is the ungrudging bestower, and men are his stewards to distribute these blessings. So far as they enter into his mind, the delight will be in spreading abroad, not in accumulating. Their reward will be a continually growing knowledge of his character and purposes. Their treasure will be in whatever things are good, pure, true; their heart will be occupied with these. May the time come when all who labor and all who engage in trade shall think of their work and business, not as means of private gain, but as means of serving their fellow men.

MARCH 27—"If it be possible, as much as in you lieth, be at peace with all men." Romans 12:18. Often we are letting miserable misunderstandings run on from year to year, meaning to clear them up some day. We are keeping wretched quarrels alive because we cannot quite make up our minds that now is the day to sacrifice our pride. It seems hard to bear one another's burdens so as to fulfill the law of Christ. Do we remember the words of our Saviour, that it is more blessed to give than to receive? Before we can pray for a speedy enlightenment and conversion of all nations, we must first learn to appreciate and love those with whom we come in contact daily. May we be more like Christ who rejoiced in the faith of the Roman centurion and praised the noble deeds of the good Samaritan.

MARCH 28—"He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; He breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder." Psalm 46:9. Men pray for peace, and still retain and express those racial prejudices that are one of the most prolific causes of war. They ask for human brotherhood to come, but they are most unbrotherly to the foreigners within their own communities. Many piously frame petitions in behalf of the day when there shall be no barbarian, Scythian, bondman, freeman, but Christ all and in all. Still all the while they violate every Christian principle in their dealings with their servants over whom they exercise power. Do you, do I, when we pray for peace, purge our own hearts of that rancor that lies behind all war?

MARCH 29—"In righteousness shalt thou be established: thou shalt be far from oppression, for thou shalt not fear; and from terror, for it shall not come near thee." Isaiah 54:14. Let us not forget the religious character of our origin. Our fathers were brought here by their high veneration for the Christian religion. They journeyed by its light, and labored in its hope. They sought to incorporate its principles with the elements of their society and to diffuse its influence through all their institutions—civil and political. Let us cherish these sentiments and extend this influence still more widely, in the full conviction that this is the happiest society which partakes in the highest degree of the mild and peaceable spirit of Christ.

MARCH 30—"The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, Because he anointed me to preach good tidings to the poor." Luke 4:18. Each day we should see more and more of ourselves in the lives of others; we should identify ourselves more closely with those who are in need. In the crowded city wherever we walk and wherever we look we should ask ourselves, "How would I behave if I were to live in such circumstances?" People in all vocations do not work for themselves so much, as they are engaged in preparing some commodity for others. When we see a man toiling under a heavy burden of work, do we see that he is working for us? Are we willing to give these folks of our "Best" that God has given to us? We are only stewards and not masters of these earthly goods.

MARCH 31—"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love to one another." John 13:35. Love as many persons and as many creatures as you possibly can. Love is the only power by which we can make ourselves rich. We may, if we choose, make the worse of one another. Everyone has his weak points; everyone has his faults; we may make the worst of everything. But let us not forget that with the grace of God we can also make the best of it. By loving whatever is lovable in those around us, love will flow back from them to us, and life will become a pleasure instead of a pain; and earth will become like heaven, and we shall be a follower of Him whose name is love.

*Not only once, and long ago,
There on Golgotha's side,
Has Christ, the Lord, been crucified
Because He loved a lost world so.
But hourly souls, sin-satisfied,
Mock His great love, flout His commands.
And I drive nails deep in His hands,
You thrust the spear within His side.*

IN MEMORIAM

Jacob Jantzen, son of Heinrich and Barbara Hamm Jantzen, was born November 17, 1863, in the village of Hansau on the Trakt, Russia. There he spent his youth and received his education. In 1880 he emigrated with his parents and many others to Asia, in order to gain freedom for conscience sake, from military conscription. This pilgrimage was connected with great hardships.

In March, 1881, he was baptized upon the confession of his faith, by Rev. J. K. Penner.

In 1884 the family continued their migrations, coming to America, and arriving in Beatrice, Nebraska, on September 12th of that same year. There the deceased made his home until he was united in marriage, on January 24, 1895, to Helena Klaassen. Immediately the following February the young couple came to Washita County, Oklahoma, filing a claim near the present town of Bessie, and establishing a homestead on the same site at which he so recently breathed his last. The pioneer years required much strenuous labor.

In September, 1889, the Herold Church was organized, of which he became a charter member. He was also at once ordained as deacon.

On June 3, 1900, he was elected into the ministry. With two other brethren he served the congregation. The task was an arduous one, for in addition to serving the church, the family had to be provided for.

When the two other ministers moved to Canada in 1918, he was left alone with the work of the church. In 1921 the congregation voted to have him serve as elder; so on October 2 he was ordained.

He served the Church for forty years, until 1940, when, due to his age and failing strength, he informed the congregation that he felt it necessary to resign. So on July 7, at a special service, he gave his retiring sermon on Matthew 16:18. "And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." He served several times since then, the last time being December 24, 1944, the last Sunday before Christmas.

Their union was blessed with nine children, four of whom preceded him in death, three in infancy, and Gertrude, Mrs. H. H. Horn, in 1937.

In 1935 his beloved wife was taken from his side by death. For the following three years his youngest daughter kept house for him, after which he lived alone in his little cottage until a year ago, when an attack of the flu caused him to make his abode with his son, Henry. The Lord gave grace not only to his recovery, but he regained his full strength and remained vigorously active until four days before his death. Sunday night, on February 4, he had a topic at the Christian Endeavor, this being his last public appearance. On Tuesday forenoon he had a sudden attack. After recurring a number of times that day, his condition seemed to improve, but on Friday it became worse again. Except for brief moments he was fully conscious at all times, and recited many hymns and passages of scripture for his own consolation and the inspiration of others. Saturday, February 10, he grew weaker and weaker, but the Lord granted him presence of mind until his last attack, to which he succumbed in a few brief minutes.

He leaves to mourn his departure one son, Henry; four daughters: Marie, Mrs. Ed Schmidt; Frieda, Mrs. Ben Reimer; Katie, Mrs. Barney Regier; and Martha, Mrs. H. H. Horn; one daughter-in-law, four sons-in-law; 24 grandchildren, one great-grandchild, all of whom live in this immediate vicinity. We mourn, yet not without hope.

Rev. Jacob Jantzen

Rev. Franz Albrecht served the First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, for thirty-six years, first as assistant pastor and then as Elder. See issue of January 9 for obituary.

RELIEF NOTES

Relief Workers Serve at El Shatt and Tolumat Camps

The three Mennonite workers who arrived in the Middle East, February 5, report having been assigned to El Shatt and Tolumat as follows:

Marie Brunk, at El Shatt writes, "... according to my present understanding, I will be dealing with the registration of displaced persons. Before returning home all refugees must be accounted for by name, occupation, number, etc. Errors occurring during this registration will have to be corrected and cards kept up to date to facilitate repatriation."

Esther Detweiler, assigned to Tolumat, writes, "I visited the camp and the hospital at Tolumat where I will be located. There is a laboratory and some equipment in the hospital and I believe that I will be able to make a contribution there."

Bertha Fast is to supervise children's activities at Tolumat but withholds comments, for the various phases of her assignment may change considerably when put into actual practice.

Coffmans Directing Taxal Edge Home

A shifting of M.C.C. relief workers became necessary with the transfer of Peter and Freda Dyck to the new camp opening at Hull, England, for Dutch evacuated children. John and Mrs. Coffman transferred from the London Center to Taxal Edge to succeed the Dycks as directors of this home for convalescent boys. Mabel Cressman and Vernon Toews are now at the London Center, to carry on there.

Assistance Given Y. M. C. A. War Prisoners' Aid

John Thut, in late December, transferred from Taxal Edge to the London Center. He has joined Henry Buller in the War Prisoners' Aid Section of the London office of the Y. M. C. A., where an acute shortage in staff and equipment has been requiring their services practically full time. Glen Miller reported that Brother Thut has a responsible position in promoting and directing recreation, shop work, and music for German prisoners in England, and has been making a significant contribution in that service.

Reliefs Briefs

Willard and Mrs. Smith, spending some time in Argentina, met Mrs. Elvin Souder, her daughter, and Elizabeth Keeney in Buenos Aires when they docked, February 21, and intended to travel with them up the Parana and Paraguay Rivers to Asuncion.

The following persons have arrived recently to fill vacancies at Akron Headquarters: Isla Zine, La Junta, Colorado, secretary to John Snyder, and Mildred Blauch, Pinto, Maryland, assisting in the kitchen.

SAM GOERING IN FRANCE

The M.C.C. relayed the following cable message to Mrs. Sam Goering on March 10: COMPLETING ARRANGEMENTS TO LEAVE 17TH SEND COMMUNICATION LYON ADDRESS DUPLICATE TO LONDON INFORM FAMILY signed SAM.

The Lyon address is 27 Rue Sala, Lyon (Rhône) France.

J. N. Byler of the M.C.C. went on to say, "We have no information as to how long he will be staying at this address, but it is likely that mail sent to this address will reach him for some time."

C. P. S.

Hospital Units Open in New York State

The first C. P. S. units or mental hospitals in New York State have been approved. Under Mennonite administration a thirty man unit will be placed at the Hudson River State Hospital, Poughkeepsie, New York. Plans have been made to organize a relief training unit at this hospital.

The State School at Wassiac, New York, has been approved to receive a twenty-five man C. P. S. unit. This institution is a training school similar to the schools at Vineland, and Woodbine, New Jersey.

Hospital Unit at Cleveland

Permission has been received to place a unit of thirty men at the Cleveland State Hospital. Earlier in the history of C. P. S. a unit under another agency had been placed at this hospital but was withdrawn because of problems related to the hospital administration. Since that time the administration of the institution has changed and the new superintendent has requested the re-establishment of a C. P. S. unit.

C. P. S. Cooking Schools

A cooking school in the East is scheduled to open at the Luray, Virginia, camp the week of March 18. Mrs. Harry Wenger, dietitian at Luray, will be in charge of the school with approximately fifteen men enrolled. The cooking school in the West at the North Fork, California, camp, with Mrs. Jacob Goering in charge, opened the latter part of February with twenty-seven men enrolled.

Summer Service Units for Women

Summer service units for women will again be administered by the M. C. C. for a twelve week period during the coming summer months. In a general way the pattern established by the units last summer at Ypsilanti and Howard will be followed. Arrangements are being made to organize a unit at Ypsilanti, Michigan, and at three or four other mental hospitals where C. P. S. units are located. Matrons to be in charge of the units are being secured from the faculties of Mennonite church schools.

The purpose of the program is to provide a channel for Christian service for women who desire to serve in a manner related to our peace witness. Quite a few young women in the churches have expressed their desire to share in the C. P. S. experience. Educational activities will be organized for hours off, and in at least one unit opportunity for relief training will be provided. While the emphasis of the program will be focused on Christian service, members entering the units will be able to earn between $150 and $200 during the twelve week period. A bulletin describing the program in detail will appear in the near future.

Cheering News From India

Reports that come from our India mission field are most cheering. During the India Conference which convened in Janjgir in January of this year, a Mr. Motilal, an Indian Christian, gave to the hundreds of Christians soul-stirring and soul-winning messages. One missionary writes, "An indescribably blessed conference with the Indian constituency." "This brother, Motilal, digs into the Scriptures . . . We have seen him in his tent kneeling before his bed with the open Bible before him."

"During the above named Conference two more churches were added to the General Conference. These are called Philadelphia and Smyrna."

Our India Mission Field now has thirteen organized churches, some of which are supplied with full time Indian pastors. The names of these are: Bethel, Eden, Emmanuel, Antioch, Bethany, Salem, Bethesda, Champa, Korba, Mauhadih, Janjgir, Philadelphia, Smyrna.

The last name church is rightly described "poverty" and "tribulation" from the non-Christian neighbors. "During eleven months of 1944, over two hundred baptisms."

JOTTINGS

—A daughter, Martha Lynna, was born to Dr. and Mrs. Marden Habegger, Visalia, California, on February 22.

—Burrton, Kansas: Rev. P. P. Tschetter will conduct a week of pre-Easter services at the First Mennonite Church.

—Rev. and Mrs. John F. Schmidt, Pueblo, Colorado, attended the Ministerial Conference and Bethel College Bible Week. Brother Schmidt was formerly pastor of the Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas, and then director of C.P.S. camps at Marietta, Ohio, and Fort Collins, Colorado.

—First Church, Newton, Kansas: On March 4 the church held an offering for the Mennonite Bible Academy, North Newton. It totaled $91.91. The Dorcas Sunday School class recently had a "Toothbrush and Toy" shower for the Puerto Rico Hospital. Miss Martha Burkhalter spoke and showed pictures at the Bible Class Hour on February 28.

—First Church, Burns, Kansas: Rev. Ronald von Riesen is to conduct a series of evening services from March 26 to March 30. He is also to serve in the morning on Good Friday. Mennonite Bible Academy students gave a program on March 18. This congregation has started a church building fund. It hopes to join the General Conference at the coming session.

—Rev. Elbert Koontz, Beatrice, Nebraska, has put on the bulletin board of his church a copy of the proposed peacetime conscription bill and a copy of the German conscription law as in force before the present conflict.

—Pastor, could we have your church bulletin? It may contain good news for others. Thanks to those who are sending theirs regularly and promptly.

—Subjects used by Rev. Gerald Stucky at the recent services in Nappanee, Indiana, were: "Walking with God," "The Atonement of Christ," "The Forgiveness of Christ," "Praying Through," "The Believer's Relation to Christ," "We can Know," "The Eternal Christ," "Losing Christ," and "The Judgment of Christ."

—Freeman Junior College: "Dr. John D. Unruh spoke in the morning service at the Bethany church, February 25. That Sunday was designed as College day in the surrounding churches of the communities. His subject was "A Well Rounded Education," emphasizing especially the need for a Christ centered education . . . On March 1st, during the chapel period, the men's club from the North church (Salem) gave a very fine program. . . The students always look forward to outside talent. In this way community and school serve each other and promote interest."—"Freeman Courier."

—Geary, Oklahoma: "The congregation voted last Sunday to entertain the Church Work Conference of the Oklahoma Mennonite churches on April 6-7. The ministers, deacons, and Sunday School superintendents have been invited to attend."

—The First Mennonite Church, Halstead, is another church which has adopted the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan.

—The Bethel Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, has been contributing towards the work of the General Conference. A number of our missionaries have come from this church. But all the while it was not an official member if the Conference. Rev. Peter T. Neufeld now reports that the church at its last business meeting voted to join the Conference and that it is applying for membership.

—Rev. P. H. Richert is visiting churches in Ontario, Canada.

—Berne, Indiana: Rev. J. P. Suderman has gone to Oraibi, Arizona, to hold evangelistic services and attend to mission business. He took along copies of "The Messiah" and of "The Seven Last Words." An organ recital, by him, was to be given at Oraibi on March 18. He plans to return March 24.

—Zoar Church, Goltry, Oklahoma: "On March 4th the choir gave a farewell program for Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Eck, who are to sail for Africa, the Lord willing, March 24. Rev. Eck is a member of our church, from which he is also being supported. Mrs. Eck is a member of the Inola Church and daughter of Rev. S. Mouttet. Her church and the broadcast by Rev. Theo. Epp are supporting her."—Mrs. J. W. Bergen, Corr.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: The Y. P. Choir, the Male Chorus, and the Ladies' Choir and organists were recently invited to a fellowship supper—husbands and wives of choir members also. A discussion of various problems in church music followed the supper.

—A letter from Mrs. Albert Janzen in the Philippines expresses the hope that they can get to the states in time for the children to attend school this term. It mentions fresh eggs from California, and a meal of eggs, bacon, toast, fruit, and coffee.

—Rev. Phil. A. Wedel gave a series of messages at the Mennonite Bible Academy, North Newton, March 12 to 16. March 18 he began a week of special services at the First Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota.

—Bethel Church, Mountain Lake: "An unusual opportunity is in store for the music interests of our church in that Professor W. H. Hohman of Bethel College has consented to come to our church for a Music Institute during Holy Week. While details are yet to be worked out, it is planned that he will meet with the choirs each evening, beginning Tuesday night and train the group for an Easter concert to be given on the evening of Easter Day. Professor Hohmann is widely recognized as an organist, choir master, and has also done some composing.

—Butterfield, Minnesota: "At the annual business meeting of the Brotherhood of the First Mennonite Church, north of Butterfield, it was decided that the minister support for the coming year shall consist of free-will offerings taken three Sundays a month. The first Sunday of the month is set aside for the mission offering. Whenever there is a fifth Sunday in the month, the collection for that day goes for relief."

—Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Illinois, is again sponsoring an "Interdenominational School for Rural Leaders," July 23 to August 24. Rural pastors who attend will have the privilege of taking such courses as "The Program of the Rural Church" by Rockwell C. Smith, "Counselling, Individual and group" by Regina Wescott Wieman, "Rural Community Organization and Development," "Research in Rural Life" by Rockwell C. Smith, "Drama in the Church," and other courses. The school approaches ministerial work from the rural angle.

—The First Mennonite Church of Paso Robles, California, requests that parents or ministers send the names and addresses of their boys stationed at Camp Roberts, California, and of any other individuals having come or coming into this area, to the church. A little information regarding their background and their abilities and interests would also be appreciated. (Address your letters to the First Mennonite Church, Paso Robles, California). To the young men and any others in our community we extend a cordial welcome. The address of the church is 24th and Park St. The Sunday morning services run as follows: Sunday School, 10 a. m. and Morning worship, 11 a. m.

Dr. Hartzler in Easter Services at Kingman, Kansas

—Dr. J. E. Hartzler, Lecturer in Philosophy and Ethics in Hartford Seminary Foundation, Hartford, Connecticut, will appear in Kingman, Kansas, from Monday, March 26 through Sunday, April 1, in a series of pre-Easter services.

Services will be held each evening at eight o'clock in the Presbyterian Church. These services will be union services with the other churches participating. The climax of the week of services will be the Sunrise Service on Easter Sunday with Dr. Hartzler as the principal speaker.

Dr. Hartzler holds degrees from Goshen College, University of Chicago, Union Theological Seminary, Hamilton College of Law, and Hartford Seminary Foundation. He has taught in public schools, was college professor and president for eleven years, lectured two years in The American University of Beirut, Beirut, Syria, and has made repeated lecture and study tours to Europe and the near East.

What Means This Cross?

By Edmund J. Miller

The cool of the morning was passing into the heat of the day as the soldiers took Jesus and led Him away to be crucified; and the sun was low in the western sky when He bowed His head and gave up the ghost. In the six hours between lay the crisis of the world—its judgment and its salvation. The great conflict of the ages was concentrated in these lonely hours of agony. In these few hours were the very core and kernel of the gospel of "Jesus Christ and Him crucified."

I read again those words of Jesus spoken some weeks before His death: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." In these words Jesus was throwing out a challenge . . . "You cannot defeat me. You cannot stop me, even if you put me to the cross." The religious leaders of His day accepted the challenge and ordered the soldiers to nail Him to a cross. Then they jeered, "You saved others, now save thyself . . . let's see you draw all men," and Jesus made good the challenge, for within three-hundred years He had conquered the Roman Empire. Today hundreds of millions of people have been drawn from all over the world to Him, and they worship Him as Lord and Saviour.

But what means this cross to us this day? Is it a symbol to be placed on a church steeple or on an altar and forgotten, or an ornament to be worn around the neck? Or is it something precious worn in the heart to remind us of our sin, of Christ's great sacrifice, of the infinite love of God?

Let us consider the cross as a symbol of the law of sacrifice. This law operates in every realm of life. Plants sacrifice their lives that animals might live. A grain of wheat falls into the ground and dies to produce bread for the world. A tree is cut down to provide many necessities for man.

Human life, spiritual and physical, follows this law. We come into this world at the cost of sacrifice and suffering. The individual who lives for selfish motives, looks out for himself alone, is frowned upon and despised by men, and is soon forgotten when he dies. Those who obey the law of sacrifice, who bear a cross, who give up selfish interests for a larger loyalty, are loved and respected. Losing their lives they find them. This is the paradoxical law

THE WALK TO EMMAUS—GIRARDET

THE CROSS and then the Resurrection

13 And behold, two of them were going that very day to a village named Emmaus, which was threescore furlongs from Jerusalem. 14 And they communed with each other of all these things which had happened. 15 And it came to pass, while they communed and questioned together, that Jesus himself drew near, and went with them. 16 But their eyes were holden that they should not know him . . . 32 And they said one to another, Was not our heart burning within us, while he spake to us in the way, while he opened to us the Scriptures? —From Luke's Gospel.

of sacrifice. It is the meaning of the cross.

Jesus did not draw men unto Himself that they might live lives of ease and safety, but rather for sacrifice and unselfish service. This is one of the great 'ifs' in the Gospel upon which the salvation of the world depends. The other is, "If I be lifted up." This is, "If any man would come after me, let him DENY SELF and take up his cross." This is the challenge of the cross today. What does it mean to you?

THE RESURRECTION

By Rev. Phil. A. Wedel

Jesus said, "I am the resurrection and the life."
John 11:25

The first thought to be remembered about the resurrection it is that it is very certain. According to the Word of God nothing is more certain than the resurrection. The Lord said that we shall all rise from the dead. The Word of God says, "But now is Christ risen from the dead and become the firstfruits of them that slept." I Cor. 15:20. Notice, they did sleep, but now have arisen. Then St. Paul continues and says, "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead." Jesus rose from the dead—and the angel stood at the tomb and said, "He is not here, He is risen" Again the Word of God says, "Marvel not at this for the hour cometh in which all that are in the tombs shall hear his voice and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of judgment." Jesus also said, "I am He that liveth and was dead and behold I am alive forevermore and have the keys of death." John saw the dead great and small stand before God ". . . and they were judged according to their works."

Put the emphasis on the word God and every difficulty vanishes. He who made man once can make him again. Looking abroad in the agony of grief we ask, "Is there no power that can give us back our loved ones?" and He to whom all power in heaven and earth is given answers, "I am alive forevermore and have the keys of death." And when my house of clay shall be laid away I can have this assurance that I shall arise again from the dead. The resurrection of the dead is very certain.

Secondly, the Resurrection is very wonderful. There was an earthquake and rocks were torn asunder, and an angel stood by the grave and said to the holy women, "He is not here, He is risen." The resurrection is always very wonderful. We have many wonders upon the earth, but the keystone of all is the resurrection of the dead through the power of Christ.

It will be wonderful in the way of doing it. The change itself of something that is dead no matter what it is to a live one is always wonderful. As Jesus stood by the grave of Lazarus and called him back to life, so it will be just as if He were standing by your grave and mine and every grave, calling each one of us by name, to come out of the grave. And every one called will come forth. How wonderful that will be! He that made man once, can make him again.

In the Grosvenor gallery of London is a picture of a battlefield where a whole company of dead soldiers are lying in the field. Only their heads are visible, while their bodies are covered by the long grass of the field. It is a dreary picture. Desolation and *within a wooded glen,

When birds fly northward, low,
o'er moor and fen,
When every tree and bush stands clad in freshest green
And 'gainst the white of picket fence
a tulip lends her sheen;
When melted snow falls from the heights down jagged mountain steep
And through the warming earth
the raindrops seep,
When winter's crusted earth rolls back within a garden bed
And waking jonquils, hyacinths, a rainbow quickly spread;
When on the softer hills
the verdant meadows bloom,
Or on some sunkist slope
the crocus wakes so soon;
When then its milliard eyes turn upward to the sun
The early morning lark soars far and, lo, its hymn begun,
When every single blade of grass spring's miracle can tell
And through the quiet of a dawn
there tolls an Easter bell—
Then would my soul join in the song to greet the risen King!
"I know that my Redeemer lives," so would my heart then sing.
And I would fall to clasp His feet as women once on earth
And bid Him touch my waiting soul to give a spring its birth.*

And He . . . Wept Bitterly

"And he went out, and wept bitterly." Wept bitterly. Proud, self-reliant, egotistical Peter "broke down." He "went to pieces."

In the look of Christ he at last saw himself for what he was. Peter had not owned up to Christ's estimate of him before; he had refused to face his own egotism and boastfulness. Oh no, he would not forsake Christ. The other weaklings might, but not he; he Peter, the natural leader, was far too brave and great a fellow for that. Peter was a deeply religious man; he was a follower of Christ. Yet there was something within him to which he would not own up—something which continued and continued until a crisis brought it out naked before Jesus Christ. All the while that he made his mighty declarations and even wielded the sword, there was within that which finally under increased pressure burst out in denying, swearing, and cursing.

"And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter." Christ did not have to say a word. In the searching, convicting, and cleansing look of Christ, Peter saw himself for what he was, a miserable, egotistical, bragging sinner. Now he had to own up and confess. But he saw more.

He saw the love of Christ and in that love the kind of Peter that should and could be. He wept bitterly and a great, great change came over him. His self-reliance faded and he became small in his own sight. To see oneself objectively—as one is—is a great experience. Peter saw himself, but he also saw Christ. Sinners need to come to the place where they see themselves as they are, where they feel themselves guilty, unworthy, and at the end of a dead-end road. They need to experience through Christ the Love of God which forgives to the uttermost.

Sinners of today are addressed by A. C. Oldsen in Voices of the Passion as he writes, "You of the twentieth century weep so little over sin. You cry at the movies or while you read a touching story or over the consequences of sin; but how many of you have shed tears over your sin? Your remorse is mild and moderate. Your hearts are so dry, they never want to relieve themselves by tears. I am not encouraging you to affect religious feeling. God does not want it. But God does want you to recognize the damnable difference between what He in His mercy wants you to be, and what you actually are. When you understand that clearly, your eyes too will be moist."

When Hearts Burn

Christ may not seem very real and alive to us, for sin may stand in the way—sin about which no other human being is to know, no not a single one. That sin blurs the vision of Christ that might be ours. "Blessed are the pure in heart; they will see God." (Moffat) Let that sin be confessed. The greater the sin (recognition of it) the greater the forgiveness; the greater the forgiveness, the greater the love for Christ, and therefore to all human beings. The greater one's love, the more real, the more intimate, the more personal is Christ. Our hearts truly burn within us with the revelation, the insight into the workings of the human heart and mind, which he gives us as we walk together down the road of life. We look into the eyes of Him who is Love, utter Love and into the eyes of those through whom He comes to us, and we find cleansing and inspiration. And we like to look into all people's eyes. Our hearts burn within us, for the risen, living Christ has talked to us and given us precious spiritual insight.

Why They Are Different

The Scripture lessons in the Junior Quarterly are different from those in the Senior-Adult Quarterly for the purpose of making them more understandable and meaningful to the juniors.

Let us turn to the public school field and see how we do the same thing there. In the public school system we do not seek to teach long division to a first grader, regardless of how valuable long division is. It must be given to the pupil when he is ready for it. Ones might attempt to explain it ever so simply to a first grader, but by its very nature it is above his capacities. So we give the first-grader something that is on his level. The same thing holds true in reading. Fifth grade stories do not have the kind of an interest appeal that first grade stories have for the first-grader, regardless of how simply they are put. Of course, simplification helps, but it does not make them as acceptable as the stories which were actually written for the first grade level.

So it is with teaching the Bible in Sunday School. Regardless of how important a section of the Bible may be, if it is above the capacity of a first-grader, it might well be postponed until the pupil is more ready for it. In the meantime there is plenty of other biblical material that may be offered.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

What about the opening exercise? In the first place, this is something that can be changed. The children can and maybe should have their own opening exercise in which they themselves participate very actively. Some churches in our conferences have such opening exercises for children. Really, of course, they should not be exercises. It should be a carefully planned worship service.

Examine our policy and let us have your reactions.

Let Him Take up His Cross

By Carl J. Landes

In the Heart of God, and at the center of the Christian faith there stands The Cross. No human study, interpretation or theology will ever fully fathom its mysteries. Nor can we ever fully understand why that bridge of Grace between God and Man, "from the foundation of the world," should find its clearest revelation in one of the thousands upon thousands of Roman crosses raised throughout the empire. But there it stands, in the center of our Faith, in the midst of injustice and exploitation, rising "O'er the Wrecks of Time"—lighting the way for a sin-sick, stumbling Humanity, reconciling man to God and man to man.

Our concern in these paragraphs is to discover what distinguishes The Cross from the legion of crosses which have dotted history; and to see if it has a bearing on the Mennonite practice of Non-Resistance.

"He that would follow after me, let him deny himself, and take up his Cross and follow me." So, the Cross stands not only at the center of our Faith, but also at the very center of all our living. From God's side, the Cross is his redemptive grace, showered upon all humanity. From man's side, in a very real sense, the Cross becomes a way of life.

The Three Crosses

All crosses which bring suffering into our lives are not a part of the Cross of Redemptive Love. "My, how England, France, Germany, Russia and all of Europe and Asia are being crucified," said one person recently. True, humanity is being crucified on the cross of war, selfishness, and greed, but the cross of war is like the two on either side—hard, cruel, unredemptive suffering, caused by past sins, and born blindly, without hope. That cross can never redeem humanity, or bring in The Kingdom of God.

"I guess that is just my cross," said a mother recently, when suffering came to her home, and especially to her. But suffering which comes to us by the natural processes of life, deserved or undeserved, is not the cross.

The Cross in the Heart of God, the Cross at the center of our Christian Faith, the Cross which Jesus asks us to "take up . . .", is not cold, blind suffering, not a load to be carried. On the contrary, that Cross

Editorial Policy

The articles in this paper do not always represent editorial opinion. We don't see how all parts of an article could always be identical with the editor's thought. We don't want to be a popish editor. However, on the other hand, it would be both unwise and impossible to include in the paper everything that might be contributed. There must be a limit to articles, for our space is limited.

of Redemptive Love, is (1), a joyful experience of sharing in God's plan of redemption—an experience which carries us, "for the joy that was set before him . . .", and that joy is ours. (2) That Cross is not one which is thrust upon us by our sins, others' sins, or by a stern "judge of Fate;" that Cross is deliberately chosen, voluntarily accepted. (3) Through that Cross we bring our own guilt to the Heart of God, but in addition, we consciously accept the guilt of others as our own, "at the points where we are innocent." (4) When we "take up that Cross," we consecrate suffering "for His sake," and dedicate it to the reconciliation of man to man and man to God. Then, and only then, do we "drink the Cup" and accept "His Baptism."

Words and Practice

We have an easy (and fatal) way of letting words deceive us. Because we are "the children of Abraham," and use the same words Menno Simons used, we take for granted that we follow in his train. But I am totally convinced that, though we use the same words Menno Simon used, and repeat the same phrases found in Simon's writings, we do not put the same experience into those words. Men are not imprisoned, burned at the stake, or crucified because they practice passive non-resistance; men are imprisoned, burned, crucified precisely because they do resist with some force in some way. The fact that Jesus was crucified, Menno Simons hunted for eighteen years, his followers put to death by the thousands, while most of us today are safely tucked away in C.P.S. camps, on the farm or in our own homes where we "keep still," while voicing loyalty to the same doctrines, is evidence that whatever our words, our practice is not the same.

Mennonites and Government

That Cross must find its way into the heart of government. When Jesus "set his face steadfastly to go to Jerusalem," I am thoroughly convinced that he was as much concerned with putting the Cross into the civil government as he was in having men and women in the Church "take up the Cross. . ."

Furthermore, I am certain that when he called on authorities—civil and religious—he was not calling upon them to see what the easiest terms of "alternate service" might be, or if he could buy "civilian bonds" to pay the president's salary so that Mr. Du Pont's taxes might swell the total of his war bonds, in providing machine guns and tanks.

When Jesus "set his face steadfastly . . ." He wanted the Cross at the center of life at Jerusalem—in the temple and in the government.

Mennonites delude themselves when they pay their taxes, and think they have "rendered unto Caesar." When part of our money—either in taxes or civilian bonds—is given to the government, a part of us is already in government. That money represents our toil, our sweat, our life, it is a part of our very self. We can cut off that part of ourselves, and give the responsibility to someone else. But that doesn't settle the score with God, Whose stewards we are. Can you imagine Jesus paying taxes with money He earned in the carpenter shop, and saying, "I have no further responsibility?" How can we withdraw at the point where the spirit of the Cross is needed most?

What God could do with one nation, if that nation brought its own guilt to Him, and in addition voluntarily, consciously accepted the guilt of all other nations as its own! To die, as a nation, if necessary so that God and Humanity might be reconciled! But that can never happen until those who bear the Cross in Church and individual life will also help the light of the Cross to shine at the center of government, at any cost.

Mennonites and Injustice

This all strikes hard at the present-day Mennonite practice to withdrawal from the areas of tension and conflict. I think one Mennonite leader was speaking for the vast majority, when he said, "To Mennonites, C.P.S. is a God-send. For what Mennonites really desire is to be put out of sight, and be left alone to follow out their faith unmolested until the war is over." If we take up our Cross, we cannot follow our Faith "unmolested," for we too must take that Cross, and "set our faces toward 'Jerusalem'," and in the heart of conflict say, "Father forgive them . . ."

At "Jerusalem" greed, selfishness, corruption, special privilege are entrenched! At "Jerusalem" decisions are made which crucify or bless the masses who are "scattered as sheep having no shepherd!" We dare not take the word "Non-Resistance" in the life of Menno Simon to mean passive withdrawal, while injustice, selfish privilege, sin crucify the multitudes. With love and forgiveness in our hearts, we must set the Cross in the very thickest of the conflict, and pray "Father, forgive them . . ."

Striking at the Heart

Mennonites must identify themselves with the exploited and underprivileged. When a negro is refused a seat because he is black, we must stand with him, even though there may be a seat for us; if he is refused a meal because he is black, we must go

TO ALL CONFERENCE CHURCHES

Kindly elect your delegates to the General Conference session without delay; please have delegates write Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas, at once. They should give their names and state that they are delegates so that the Lodging Committee may place them first before others who are not delegates are assigned places. Delegates who are making arrangements to be entertained by relatives or friends are also requested to send in their names and to state where they expect to be entertained.

Inquiries are already being received, so please do not delay. The matter is urgent.

Note Church Leaders: Please send the names and addresses of delegates to the Conference Secretary, Rev. Phil. A. Wedel, Goessel, Kansas immediately, as he is to have them in point for distribution.

C. E. Krehbiel, Conference President.

hungry with him. If he is denied a bed, we must share his sleeplessness.

Mennonites must carry the Cross into the "Labor Problem"—which, of course, is just as much (or more so) and "employers' problem." Between employer and employee, we must raise the Cross, accepting the guilt of both, bringing the Redeeming Love of God to bear on their selfishness and injustice—even if we should be "crucified" by both sides.

Mennonites must raise the Cross between those who profit by war, and therefore promote it under the guise of "ending war" or "making the world safe . . .;" and those who trustingly, though blindly, go out to be slaughtered. We must accept the guilt of both as our own, and then carry the Cross to the thickest of the fight.

The Cross is the greatest force God has given to man. But to be effective, it must be set in the midst of the thickest battle, or we lose the experience of the Cross, while voicing its praise. My plea is that Mennonites—with their rich heritage—move into the very heart of local and rural conflict. My plea is that Mennonites will move into the very heart of the Fellowship of Reconciliation (and other pacifist movements) and leaven and be leavened. My plea is that Mennonites will carry their Cross where things are happening. Or, will we permit someone else to move in?

"The Kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." (Matt. 21:43.)

In the Heart of God there is the Cross ("from the foundation of the world"); at the center of our Christian Faith there stands the Cross; at the center of all abundant living there beckons the Cross.

"God, during this Easter Season, open the doors of our hearts, that Thy Cross may find a place in our lives."

Reactions to Bethel College Bible Week

"The inspirational and the informative aspect of the Bethel Bible week meant much to me. The sincerity with which both men spoke was an indication to me that they were both speaking of vital things. I liked the frankness with which they spoke as well. There was nothing covered up, and they were willing to expose themselves to every wind that might blow."

Elbert Koontz

"Words fail me to express my appreciation of what I received at Bethel during Bible Week. Never enjoyed a series of lectures more than those inspirational talks given by the two brethren. Was impressed by the seriousness of Dr. Bowman in his expositions of such deep Bible truths. Perhaps, was too ignorant to find any unorthodox statements in it, and thus did not miss the blessings. Dr. Eitzen, as a wise teacher, spoke of things unknown to me through things known. Christ spoke in parables. Passing events became the vehicles of abiding truth. Secular illustrated the sacred. There is no loss of dignity or impropriety in such mode of instruction. Some people were shocked by Christ's methods. But they were people that needed just such shocks. God bless Bethel."

J. H. Epp

"A word of appreciation is due those who were responsible for the challenging leadership of the Bible Week. Both Dr. Bowman and Dr. Eitzen, spoke with courage and conviction and their message integrated completely. They pointed out that Jesus came to reveal God; His teaching is paramount; and the basic teaching of the Bible is peace. The plea was made that we keep our peace testimony clear and purposefully live out our heritage. We have a mission, and who knows, but what we have come to the Kingdom for just such a time as this?"

Mrs. J. J. Siemens

I feel that this last Bible Week at Bethel College was again very good and helpful, a rare privilege to such who could attend. The educational and inspirational addresses were indeed edifying and challenging. The clear-cut statements on our Mennonite principles, so well grounded in the Word of God, were most timely and needed. The pointing out and the powerful proclamation of a way back to the faith of our fathers was heart searching and clearly showed the path to be taken. It was indeed a season of refreshing and strengthening in the presence of God.

J. E. Entz

"The series of lectures presented to the student body were unique in the fact that they were representative of both differing yet inter-related phases with which humanity is in contact. The studies on Personal Counselling placed into the vanguard of our minds the necessity of such a program and the vast possibilities that the continuance and growth of such would have in our schools and churches. As Dr. Eitzen stressed the necessity of catharsis before we could most fully realize our personality, so Dr. Bowman in his presentation of the character of Christ gave to us the type of personality that should be cultivated when the catharsis through personal counselling has taken place. To me the underlying purpose of each speaker was to help us to become better aware of our potentialities."

Orpha Schrag

"Inasmuch as the collection plate did not reach me Friday evening because I sat on the balcony of Memorial Hall, I am herewith sending my contribution toward expenses connected with Bible Week. May I congratulate you upon securing men of the type of Dr's. Bowman and Eitzen for this occasion. Doubtless, our churches have been blessed and encouraged by the services of this past week."

A Friend

Dr. Eitzen's lectures were very helpful, showing us how in seeking to be of help to people we do well to learn from Ezekiel in the captivity when he "sat where they sat" (Psalm 137:1-4 and Ezek. 3:15) and get their point of view. Merely analyzing people is not enough; we must be able to help them through to a release and integration of personality. But first of all any frustration or "block" in our own life must be removed. We are grateful to Dr. Eitzen for new light shed on many a Bible incident and life situation from the standpoint of psychology.

In his Bible discussions Dr. Bowman spoke often about the "winsomeness and radiance of Christ" and in his own personality radiated that winsome Christianity most beautifully. He emphasized the need of guiding our people in the faith of our fathers through an educational program throughout the church

—Mrs. W. C. Voth

"Both visiting ministers presented very thought-provoking studies. I was happy for the plain but forceful presentations of scriptural truth by Dr. Bowman. Also for helps in pastoral guidance by Dr. Eitzen. Both are wide open fields. We must both sow His Word and carefully tend His vineyard."

—Walter H. Dyck

"I considered it a privilege to attend the Bethel College Bible week, and was blessed mentally and spiritually. While Brother Eitzen's messages were rather unusual, they seemed to me unique in their field. And Brother Bowman, in his earnest and conscientious way, presented to us the Jesus of the Bible, in his divinity, his atonement, and as King of Kings, rejoicing in the fact, that this Jesus was his Saviour too. I would like to express two impressions with the following Bible verses: (1) 'Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines (teachings). For it is a good thing that the heart be established with grace; not with meats, which have not profited them that have been occupied therein.' Heb. 13:9. (2) 'Hold fast that which thou hast, that no man take thy crown.' Rev. 3:11b."

If Clothing Could Speak - Clothing Does Speak

By Elma Esau

If the thousands of articles of clothing collected at the three Mennonite Central Committee relief clothing centers and given out by M.C.C. workers could speak, indeed, they would have many stories to tell! Some of the interesting facts would be that the clothing sent in to the centers are made up of contributions from all branches of the Mennonite churches from coast to coast in the United States and Canada. The center at Akron, Pennsylvania, receives the clothing from the churches east of the Mississippi River; the center at Newton, Kansas, from the churches west of the Mississippi; and the center at Kitchener, Ontario, from the Canadian churches.

A clothing center is a busy place. Several full time workers are busy six days a week at each center unpacking, sorting, and repacking clothing for foreign shipment. Even so, the help of many volunteer workers is greatly appreciated. The clothing is packed mostly in bales averaging 117 pounds each. Many tons of these bales have been shipped to foreign countries, and many more are awaiting shipment.

Having spent more than a year working in the three centers, I know that clothing does speak—yes, in countless ways! Clothing which is clean, well mended, and neatly packed speaks of a genuine interest and concern for those in need. Even a quick glance at an article of used clothing will usually tell whether the former owner was fat or thin, young or old. Sad to say, in an unpleasant way chaff, crumbs, dust, seeds and many other articles in trouser cuffs and pockets, as well as stains and grime, tell something of the former owner's occupation and habits.

The few extra touches here and there, simple as they may be, on a newly made garment speak of love and joy in the making of that garment! The finished garment will tell quite often whether the maker enjoyed the task or was duty bound.

Though the clothing speaks, it can not tell all. Did some poor person sacrifice to give even this worn coat? Was hard-earned money spent to buy that warm woolen blanket? Did a kindly old grandmother spend busy hours piecing the lovely blocks for a warm comforter? Did the former owner of that tattered pair of socks think they would keep anyone's feet warm? Of what use are ragged shoes or almost worn out sheer dresses? These questions and many more are asked again and again as the clothing from hundreds of boxes is inspected and sorted.

"Bethel Bible Week was to me one of the greatest experiences in my life. The messages of Dr. Eitzen brought cleansing; those of Dr. Bowman were infilling. These messengers of God supplemented each other, thus creating a wholeness which might otherwise not have existed."

R. Weinbrenner

Given "In the Name of Christ" is the message each and every article is to bring to some needy soul. In part this is spoken by the motto on the little labels pasted on the clothing. But the individual garments will speak more loudly than the labels. Can you not see the joy and reassurance in the face of the mother who receives a sturdy overcoat for her shivering child?—and the happiness of the child's broad smile? Perhaps, after all, God had not forgotten her prayer! A sick grandmother will not only be warmed by a bright comforter but may also be speeded on the road to recovery.

So it is that through you, the one who gave, that clothing speaks "In the Name of Christ."

Miss Elma Esau left recently for England, where she is to do relief work until the way will be clear to go to the continent for relief activities. Since November, 1943, Miss Esau has worked in the clothing center at Akron, Pa.; Kitchener, Ontario; and North Newton, Kansas. She opened the depots at Kitchener and North Newton, having gained the necessary experience working with Mrs. M. C. Lehman at Akron. Her home address is Whitewater.

We Oppose This Push for Peacetime Conscription

Jay B. Nash, Chairman, Dept. of Physical Education and Health, N.Y.U.

If any compulsory military training is necessary, the idea must stand squarely on its own feet. Its objectives must be clearly stated in terms of protection of the nation. Our people will want to know how much time is absolutely necessary for basic training and what specific objectives and outcomes are sought. If a clear, concise statement of objectives is made, the nation will be inclined, I am sure, to accept the advice of military and other governmental leaders.

I vigorously object, however, to having the advocates of military training hide behind the banners of physical fitness, training for citizenship and discipline.

No one is going to be fit at nineteen who has neglected his fitness up to eighteen. The long years of childhood and early adolescence are crucial years. Organic power must be built over the long years from six to eighteen. Also, a person fit at eighteen may be completely unfit at twenty-five. We have ample proof that fitness does not automatically continue through the years. Therefore, from the standpoint of physical fitness, something more than a year's service is essential. No plan of physical fitness can be made effective which does not include the cooperation of parents, teachers, doctors and the individual himself.

Military discipline is not the discipline of democracy. Freedom is an outcome of obeying self-imposed laws. The type of discipline we want is not acquired under mass instructional conditions or through impersonal teacher-pupil contact. The home, the school, and the church have responsibilities far beyond those of the federal government.

Again, citizenship is not solely built in military barracks. There must be opportunities for an individual to serve his nation with satisfaction. This requires service in an area which the individual thinks is significant. There are real opportunities for citizenship. There is work in our national forests where millions of trees should be planted. Thousands of acres should be wrested from the grip of erosion. The Japanese beetle and the elm tree blight must be fought. These are just a few examples of public work.

Do we want the federal government to direct all these efforts? Has the history of other nations given us confidence that this is the task of a centralized government? Do we even want to experiment with the beginnings of a nationalized youth movement?

The answer is "NO." Desirable outcome in fitness, discipline and citizenship should be forthcoming, but they ought to be fostered by our local communities. Many community agencies should be given an opportunity to experiment. The Quakers and others have already organized effective work-experience camps which combine citizenship, discipline, and fitness-training.

death lie upon it. And at the top of the picture stands a priest with a book in his hand, praying for the dead. It was a kindly service! But the poor fellows in the grass heard no word of prayer. Hearing and fighting were over for them. And no man could bid them back to life again. But what the poor priest could not do Jesus can do. The hour is coming when those very soldiers and all who are in the graves shall hear the voice of the Master and come out of their graves. There are really not enough words in the English language to describe fully the wonders of the resurrection.

It will be wonderful in the beauty that will mark the bodies of those that are raised. If we are Christians our bodies shall be like the glorious body of Jesus which the Disciples saw when they were with Him on Mt. Tabor. His clothing became white as snow, whiter than anybody on earth could make it. His face became bright and shining as the sun, only still more glorious! And this is the pattern according to which our bodies will be made at the resurrection, for the Apostle says He will "change our vile bodies, and make them like unto His own glorious Body." Phil. 2:25. I suppose our bodies will be in size, shape, and general appearance, very much like what they are now, so that we shall know one another as easily as we do now; only all imperfections will be removed, and they will be made to look perfectly glorious. Suppose you have the image of a little man made of iron, or clay, and suppose this image were changed to silver or gold. You could tell it in a moment and as soon as you saw it. And you would be ready to say, "Why, only look; here's my old clay image turned to gold. How beautiful it looks!" And when we think how changed our bodies will be at the resurrection, when we think what multitudes of these bodies there will be, when we think of the wonderful way in which this change will be brought about, and of the great beauty that will mark them, we may well see . . . how wonderful the resurrection will be! Who would not rejoice in a Saviour who has power to resurrect from death unto life!

Following the Master

By Griselda Gehman

In Matthew 11:28-29, we find Christ's message of personal discipleship which reads, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart and ye shall find rest unto your souls." Four Christian imperatives found here are come, take, learn, and find.

I

Come unto me is the call by which many are summoned who are heavy laden and desirous of rest. The call is to come to Jesus who is ever willing to receive us. None are ever cast out who come to him. The most common avenues by which we can find him personally are through the scriptures, silent meditation, and humble prayer. All of these are combined and united by faith and unceasing belief in Jesus Christ who was sent into the world that all who believe on him might have eternal life. Not one barrier can stand between God and the individual in order to have a complete fellowship and communion with God. He is ever constantly calling to us to come, but how often he must sometimes call until His voice can be heard above all other tumult of the world. Why do we not heed the call when it comes beseechingly, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest."

II

The second Christian imperative is, "Take my yoke upon you." We are to take upon ourselves after coming to Him the cross that is ours to bear. In taking the yoke upon ourselves there are other things which Christ would have us do. He would have us keep close to him. Certainly no one can be a guide when he is far separated from the follower. Christ cannot be our guide if we shove him off into the background, and lock him out of our lives. Christ would have us keep the commandments and especially to love God with all our hearts, minds, and souls and our neighbors as ourselves. Christ would have us live the ideals which he exemplified while here on earth, and also in so doing find God's plan for our lives and live it. We have a responsibility for the security of other men's souls. It is our duty to tell them of Christ and his saving love and bring them into the kingdom also. In bearing our own yokes we are to be mindful and helpful with others' burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ even as Paul said in Gal. 6:2, "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." The duties of bearing the yoke are not to be assumed just any time we choose, but as God reveals His plan. Perhaps, we grow weary and are afraid we have been forgotten by God, but patient waiting will in due time reveal each step of the way. When we remember the supreme sacrifice of Christ and the yoke He had to bear, we should deem it a privilege and joy to bear our own individual yokes which are in contrast small and insignificant. The Christian attitude is to deny ourselves and take up our cross and follow him when He commands, "Take my yoke upon you."

Miss Griselda Gehman is President of the Girls' Gospel Team at Bluffton College. She writes, "Every week I make it a point to read our library copy of The Mennonite, for it acquaints one with the work of the Mennonites in every section of the country."

III

The Christian imperative which comes third is, "Learn of me for I am meek and lowly in heart." We today are not so privileged as the multitudes who had the opportunity to sit and learn at the foot of the Master. But we marvel today as we read God's word and learn about the life and teachings of Jesus. Our sources of learning of him are primarily the Bible, and our own personal experience with Him. However, we can learn of him by observing the influence he has had on the lives of others and also in their writings glean what Christ has meant in their lives. To learn of new things and especially of heavenly things one must have an open and teachable mind ready and willing to learn new truths helpful in daily Christian living. None of us are ever perfect and we cannot expect to come to the time when all has been learned. Learning of him is not an act which can be completed but is a series of relations throughout a lifetime.

IV

While passing through these first three stages of personal discipleship the goal one has in mind is "Find rest unto your souls." It is important that not one of these steps is omitted in order to find complete fulfillment and rest unto our souls. Only the faithful and obedient disciples will find this promised rest and spiritual satisfaction. However, it is spiritual satisfaction only if all has been done according to God's will and for His kingdom. We are all travelers on a long life journey and it is at the end of this journey that rest will be found unto our souls. As loving, faithful, and obedient disciples we can come to Him, take the yoke upon ourselves, learn of Him, and find rest unto our souls.

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

PROPHETS AND PRIESTS

In the Christian ministry there are two types of preachers. There the preachers who are prophets and those who are priests. These two types of God's servants are as old as religion itself. We find both types throughout the long Judio-Christian history from its early beginning to the present.

The Priestly Pastor

The priestly minister is the one in whom is vested the authority to perform the sacred rites of baptism, the Lord's Supper, marriage, and burial. He is set apart from the laity by means of his call from God as symbolized in the ordination ceremony. The priestly type of minister is concerned with guarding the status quo. He tends to be satisfied with conventions as they are and is inclined to urge his people to be satisfied with things as they are. He is not an agitator for reform nor given to the introduction of new ideas. His chief functions are advising, instructing, consoling his people. The priestly minister is in a large measure the preserver of the religious heritage; he is the steady force in time of revolutionary change; he is the good shepherd to whom his people come for help and comfort in time of trouble.

The Prophetic Pastor

The prophetic minister is the one divinely inspired to speak in God's name about existing conditions of men and about future events. The prophetic minister, unlike the priestly minister, is inclined to be indifferent to the immediate feelings and attitudes of men. His ears are attuned to the divine will in his effort to discover truth. The prophet speaks out of the depth of his heart the inner convictions he cannot longer withhold. The prophet is God-conscious rather than man-conscious. Popularity or the favors of men have no attraction for him. Criticism does not silence him nor the threat of persecution frighten him. He speaks boldly that which God reveals to him and he cares not how it pleases or affects his listeners. He seems to be speaking to generations and to ages rather than to his congregations and his contemporaries. The prophetic minister tends to be unpopular because he is ahead of his time, because he boldly exposes the sins of his time, and because he pays less attention to petty practices than to major principles.

Both Types Needed

The Church today needs both prophet and priest. The Church needs courageous spokesmen who champion the causes of personal righteousness and social injustices. It needs men of profound spiritual strength who live blameless lives and who are not afraid to convict people of sin. It needs prophetic preaching that exalts God and inspires people so that those who attend church services go away knowing they have been close to God. The Church needs preachers today who will challenge every unholy thing, every unethical practice, every immoral deed, every incongruous religious attitude in home, church, and community. There is no room in today's pulpits for the Levite preachers who bat an eye at wrong and pass by on the other side.

"Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the Sons of God." Love is the identifying substance of God. The crowning grace of Christ, and the redeeming trait of man.

Word of Neufeld's Arrival

Dear Brother Richert:

We were made very thankful when today noon we received a cable from Rev. and Mrs. George Neufeld, stating that they arrived in Leopoldville, Congo Belge, Africa. This is only several hundred miles up river from their station, and thus they will soon be there. We have notified their folks at Inman.

With all good wishes for God's continued blessing to attend you, and with personal Christian regards, we are,

Most sincerely yours,

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Otto Sommer, Akron, Pa.

APRIL 1—He is risen . . . Go quickly and tell his disciples that He is risen from the dead." Matt. 28:6,7.

On that first Easter morning Mary Magdalene and that other Mary, both of whom loved Jesus dearly, came to pay homage to their Lord Whom they mourned as dead. No doubt, they were greatly mystified by the events of the preceding week. They were unprepared for the glorious news told them by the angel: "He is risen." However, when once they had grasped the reality of this great event, the angel asked them to tell it to his disciples. This was something too wonderful and overpowering to keep to themselves. Today this story is still new and real to those who love Him and seek to serve Him. What can we do to make Easter a reality to others?

APRIL 2—"And their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not." Luke 24:11.

The disciples (the men who were constantly with Jesus during his earthly ministry) had lost their hopes for the Kingdom with the death of Jesus. When the women brought the message of the open tomb, they could not believe it, but thought it was some sort of fairy tale. Is our faith in this day any greater than theirs? How often God desires great things of us, and we doubt His power to help. How often would He give us great blessings, but we shun them by our lack of trust. We need to believe in our hearts that "with God all things are possible." It takes a life of simple faith and trust to experience the love and power of God.

APRIL 3—"And ye are witnesses of these things." Luke 24:48.

This verse should be applied to each person who is a professed follower of Christ. He has risen from the dead that we might have life eternal. Because of His death and resurrection we may some day step on shore at the end of life's voyage and find it Heaven; we may take hold of a hand and find it God's hand. He has a place prepared for those who follow Him. If we believe these things in our hearts, then we need to live as if we believed them. We can be channels showing forth God's love to others if we but let Him have full control.

APRIL 4—"Even so, we also should walk in newness of life." Romans 6:4.

Jesus bore the sins of the world on the Cross and arose from the tomb as victor over death. He also longs for His creatures to experience a rebirth. But when we have confessed His name and acknowledged Him as Lord of our lives, then we "should walk in newness of life" day by day. He stands ready to carry our burdens. He watches over us in all that we do and yearns for us in our trials. If we will but trust Him and come to Him for strength each day, He will supply every need. The person who constantly looks to Jesus for strength and guidance can truly say in the words of that familiar song: "Every day with Jesus is sweeter than the day before." Each day we can walk with Him "in newness of life."

APRIL 5—"And this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." I John 5:4.

The victories that count for eternity are not won by mighty armies nor powerful rulers. Such victory comes by a quiet, unassuming faith in the One Who has "overcome the world." If we have this deep and abiding faith He will give us the strength to also overcome the world. "Not by might, nor by power, but by My spirit, saith the Lord of hosts. Do we have that spirit of faith in God, which finds its expression in a love for all men? Or do we, even as the world about us, place our trust in armies and armaments?

APRIL 6—"But rather seek ye the kingdom of God; and all these things shall be added unto you." Luke 12:31.

The world of today is seeking for power and riches. So many professed followers of Christ seem to be straying in that direction too. One of the hardest lessons we have to learn is to put first things first. Our desires should not direct our conscience. Let us lay up treasures in Heaven which do not perish. If someone takes our earthly possessions we need not fear if we have laid up heavenly riches. Why should we desire power over others—it does not last nor bring happiness. If we seek the Kingdom of God first all concerns for self will be displaced by concerns for others. Greatest joy and satisfaction is to be found by serving others, and through this service to others serving God.

APRIL 7—"For the love of Christ constraineth us." II Cor. 5:14.

The love of God not only restrains from doing wrong, but it impels to do good. It constrains. The love of God leads His followers to give up personal advantage to serve others. It sends men to far lands and distant places to bring the glorious gospel of redemption to those who know it not. It impels us to give of our time and possessions to help those in need the world over. The love of God knows no barrier of race or creed. Jesus teaches that all men are our brothers. All are precious in His sight.

"Join hands, then, brothers of the faith

Whate'er your race may be.

Who loves my father as a son

Is surely kin to me."

Our Ministry of Education

By J. H. Langenwalter

DARKNESS

The days which followed the closing of the school at Wadsworth were dark days for those who had thought, prayed, worked, and sacrificed for a great idea. They had done their best that youth might have an opportunity for preparation in order to engage in the work of the Kingdom of God.

The post-Civil War days were dark days all over the Nation as a whole. Our people felt that darkness of economic and social confusion with other people. Some of them were in danger of yielding to the superficial conclusion that the closing of an institution means the death of an idea, great as it had seemed to them. There were those, however, who, consciously or unconsciously, took the attitude that even the "night" is a part of God's day. They thought, and toiled, and wept in the night while others slept. They felt sure that there must be a way out of this darkness of disappointment and discouragement which had overtaken them. Their idea had not died! They saw more clearly than ever before the great need for work to be done, and for youth prepared to do that work.

Out of it all there came a new vision of the possibilities of truly Christian Education. As their vision grew, their fears departed. They felt sure that there would be another day following the night of trying experiences through which they were going at that time. They took comfort from the fact that Jesus had often spent nights alone in order that He might meet the possibilities of a new day greatly. They examined themselves and the things they had tried to do. It was a part of learning the hard way, but they were learning. It was dark then, but they confidently waited for the light.

A NEW DAY

Before men had stopped talking about the "failure of an ill-fated experiment in education at Wadsworth, Ohio," a new day was dawning. All kinds of new possibilities appeared to support the idea which apparently had miscarried. Sunday Schools were being established among groups which had either never paid any attention to this new movement, or whose leaders had looked with suspicion and misgiving upon the innovation. The young men who had attended Wadsworth did not forget the benefits which they had derived from the school. As they visited and corresponded with each other, they sowed the seed of a new interest among others. They had learned to know each other and were becoming acquainted with each other's relatives and friends. All this worked together to create a better understanding of what the founders of Wadsworth really had in mind.

Two of these young men had been sent to Alaska in order to look for a mission field. This experience brought them into touch with the workers of other "families in the Kingdom of God." The field was never established in Alaska, but it was established in the Indian Territory. The work grew. There were trials and even sorrows, especially through the burning of the Mission Home and the death of several children as a result of this event. On the other hand there was a growing conviction that a good beginning reserves the support toward a great end. Men thought more and more of the future possibilities and responsibilities before them.

Then it happened. A new school was started in Kansas. It was in the district school building at Ementhal of the Alexanderwohl area. Then the Conference established a school at Halstead. Then Bethel College was established. The new day had come!

RELIEF

Enroute to India by Air

Baltzer and Pannabecker left yesterday by air, was the information cabled from Cairo, March 9. S. F. Pannabecker and P. P. Baltzer have assisted Middle East Mennonite relief workers for more than three months, especially helping new arrivals to establish themselves in camp positions where they could render their most effective service. February 21 the brethren were placed on "alert," being ready to leave for India on an hour to hour basis, by any available means of transportation.

Due to Leave for England

Elma Esau has terminated her work at the Newton clothing center and is now at Akron Headquarters in preparation for her scheduled date of sailing for England.

Group Worship at El Shatt Camp

Several Sundays ago Delvin Kirchofer acted as leader of a church service that the MCC workers at El Shatt presented to the camp personnel. Henry Detwiler directed hymn singing, Ervin Hooley conducted the devotional period, and Samuel Yoder presented a message on Faith. "The four of us have been practicing at various times as a vocal quartet. We sang two hymns at this service, our first public appearance," wrote Henry Detwiler.

Clothing Shipped for Holland Relief

Shipping space was allotted for ten tons of baled clothing, intended for Holland. The shipment left Akron Headquarters the week of March 5.

Kindergartens Opened at El Shatt

Refugees at El Shatt live in double tents, averaging eighteen occupants, with beds lining both sides. This has left little room for movement, activity, or play, either for children or adults. Excerpts from Delvin Kirchofer's letter, February 4, indicate some success in providing activity space:

"During the past week I have attained one goal—the opening of four kindergartens, one in each of the four blocks in our camp. We have also been able to erect a double tent in each block to use as a welfare center and social center for the people of that block. These will provide a place for the people to gather for an hour or two, off from the wind, where they can read (although our Serbo-Croat reading material is yet all too limited) and play a few quiet indoor games . . ."

Mistake in Quantity of Canned Goods from California

In the report of the C.P.S. Canning and Drying Program, an error was made on the part of the office regarding the amount of food donated by the California churches. The California churches contributed over 17,000 pounds of dried and fresh goods and 184 lugs of assorted fruit during the period from April, 1944, to January, 1945. This was a good response from this section of the country and the C.P.S. office regrets that an error in tabulation was made.

April 8 to 25. Thirty-two men from the camps have been selected to attend the school. The purpose of this school is to train a number of leaders to assume administrative responsibility during the coming months when small groups of men will be separated from the base camps and will live out in the mountains to do fire fighting and perform other services.

Breakdown of C.P.S. by Administrative Agency

The following statistics are as of March 1, 1945:

Friends	1,692
Mennonite	3,710
Brethren	1,984
Government (Selective Service)	420
Catholic	107
Methodist	69
Baptist	26
Disciples of Christ	15
Evangelical and Reformed	1
Detached Service	94
Total Number of men in C.P.S.	8,118

Dairy-Farm Units Expand

Selective Service has authorized the expansion of dairy-farm service for M.C.C.-C.P.S. men. This is in line with the effort to provide opportunities for the older men in the base camps to enter special projects and provide room for the large number of new campers. In addition to the two counties for dairy-farm service which will open in the New England States of Vermont and Massachusetts, Hillsboro County in New Hampshire will also receive a unit of C.P.S. men. All three counties are to receive ten men each. Ten additional men will be placed on farm service in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. The present unit of twenty men on farm service in San Joaquin County, California, will be doubled.

C.P.S. Briefs

Thirteen C.P.S. men have been added to the dairy-herd testing unit in Pennsylvania. At the present time they are attending Penn State College in preparation for their work.

Winfield Fretz devoted two weeks of his time to visit the farm and community schools in the West. He was at Terry, March 4-6, and the Lincoln units, March 10-15.

The Dove Tale is the name of the Powellsville camp paper. The first issue appeared in February.

IN MEMORIAM

Aganetha Schmidt Ensz was born at Marion, South Dakota, on March 20, 1876, and passed away February 17, 1945. She was baptized by Rev. Christian Kaufmann in 1895. In 1899 she married Jacob I. Ensz and moved to Herbert Saskatchewan, where they joined the Herbert Church and braved pioneer farming. The funeral was held at the farm home, Rev. I. A. Derksen officiating.

Henry J. Schroeder, son of Johann and Maria (Schmidt) Schroeder, was born April 16, 1956, in Alexanderwohl, South Russia, and departed this life February 22, 1945, at the Bethesda Home, Goessel, Kansas. With his parents he came to McPherson County, Kansas, in 1874. In 1875 he was baptized by Elder Jacob Buller and received as a member of the Alexanderwohl Church. Later he joined the Goessel church. In 1879 he was married to Eva Pankrat, who passed away in 1913. In 1914 he married Aganetha (Sommerfeld) Schmidt, who was his companion until her death in 1943.

Henry Boese was born in Crimea, Russia, on June 1, 1870. In 1878 he migrated with his parents to York County, Nebraska. He took up a homestead at Mitchel, South Dakota, and lived there eight years. Then he came back to Nebraska and went to Kansas, where he was baptized and received into the Alexanderwohl Church. Later he joined the Bethesda Church, Henderson, and still later the Madrid Church. In 1901 he married Katherine Huebert, who shared life with him until her death in 1944. After living in York County until 1930, they moved to Perkins County. Death came March 7, 1945.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Reedley, California

Spring is here in California, and with it comes certain church functions that are held every year. The women of the church have a birthday luncheon to which all the women of the church and their friends are invited. Each one pays according to age, the money being used for missionary purposes.

March 4th the music departments gave a sacred concert. February 22nd, the men's brotherhood had a dinner in the church basement with a social hour. Usually they have a speaker, but this one was entirely social; games were played.

The Worthwhile Circle met at the church March 5th and then divided into two groups. One group went to the Red Cross sewing room, and the other to the room where they roll bandages.

We are very thankful to have our son and his wife with us, for a short while. He had been seriously injured in a C.P.S. camp in Belton, Montana, but is now well on the way to recovery. He has a month sick leave; then he will transfer to Woodbine Colony in Woodbine, New Jersey, a hospital for mentally deficient boys. His wife will go with him, working at the same place. —Vida Weinbrenner.

GOESSEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Goessel, Kansas

In recalling some of the blessings and happenings during the first two months of 1945, we would mention the observance of the International Prayer Week in January. We had meetings on three evenings.

We again have mid-week Bible study, divided into two groups, one in German and one in English. These could not meet regularly due to weather conditions and bad roads.

On February 11, we met at the church to commemorate the eighty-second birthday anniversary of Rev. Peter Buller. A short program had been prepared, on which appeared two fellow-ministers who had been ordained to the ministry of the gospel, with him. (A third one was not present.) The program was followed by a fellowship hour, and refreshments were served in the basement.

February 18, Rev. Fred Johnson, native missionary among the Hopis of Arizona, presented a gospel message.

In the passing of Brother H. J. Schroeder our congregation has lost its oldest member, having attained the age of 88 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolf J. Schroeder celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage, on March 8.

JOTTINGS

—Eden Church, Inola, Oklahoma: "We too are proud to use the Mennonite Hymnary. Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Eck have left for New York to sail in the near future. Mrs. Eck is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Sol Mouttet."

—Oklahoma Bible Academy to build new $15,000 addition: The Board of Directors of the Academy met on February 26 and adopted a plan which calls "for an addition to the east 54 feet, by 60 feet wide, with basement and first story. . . In this space are the following rooms: an auditorium, an office, and two class rooms on the first floor; and five class rooms on the basement floor. . . Secondly it was decided that "work on the project be begun as soon as blueprint and priority matters can be completed. Members of the various Oklahoma churches may be given the opportunity to donate labor, so that the building may soon be completed—if at all possible, for the opening of school next September."

—Freeman Junior College: Dr. J. D. Unruh visited the C. P. S. camp at Hill City on March 18. Rev. George Dick from Bloomfield, Montana, will be the speaker for the Bible Week at the College, March 26-29. The community "Music Review" will be observed on Easter Monday on April 2 at the college gymnasium.

—Rev. A. P. Waltner, Marion, South Dakota, recently visited the Oraibi, Arizona, mission station. He went there as a representative of the Foreign Mission Board, of which he is a member.

—Rev. Howard Nyce has consented to come to Freeman, South Dakota, for meetings next fall. These services are sponsored by the Ministerium.

—Repeated calls have come through the Bundesbote and Mennonite for German song books. We have quite a number of German books on the shelves in the basement. Where they are now, they are simply moulding. Would our congregation wish to put these books to some practical use? (Books are being solicited for use among German prisoners of war.)—Bulletin, Salem Church, Freeman.

—Rev. Elbert Koontz, Beatrice, Nebraska, recently served a C. P. S. farm unit east of Lincoln.

—Bulletin, Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Dr. David D. Eitzen, Professor at the School of Religion, University of Southern California, was the special speaker at a joint meeting of the C. E. societies on March 18. Rev. Theodore H. Epp was the guest in the pulpit on the morning of March 25. An envelope offering for the Red Cross was taken. "We welcome as guest in our church today Mrs. Willis Rich who has just completed a tour of Western C.P.S. camps, giving talks on 'The Christian Home.' From reports from the men in the camps, we learned that this work was tremendously appreciated." "Beginning Tuesday evening, March 27 to March 30—we plan for a Music Institute for the Church Choirs to begin at about 8:45 P.M. each evening. Professor Walter H. Hohmann of Bethel College will conduct this institute. This Institute will culminate in the rendition of special numbers at our Easter morning services and an Easter Concert on Sunday evening, April 1. An Organ Clinic for those interested in the organ is also being planned for Wednesday and Thursday afternoons at 4:00 P.M. and a Vesper Organ Recital at 3:30 P.M. on Good Friday. This Institute is being sponsored by the Bethel Mission Society with the cooperation of the Music Committee."

—The Pacific District Conference will not convene separately; its business is to be transacted at the session of the General Conference. So states one report in a church bulletin.

—Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon: Members recently made a party out of kalsomining the interior of the church every night for one week. Rev. J. M. Franz began special services on March 18. Rev. Homer Leisy showed slides on March 4.

—Hillsboro, Kansas: The Brudertal congregation, together with many relatives and friends, was privileged to share the sixtieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Funk on March 5. This event was the first of its kind to take place in the church. After a program and a message by Rev. A. E. Funk, a bounteous lunch was served to all in the church basement.—Corr.

—Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita: A recent bulletin tells to whom to write to support the movement to get E. Stanley Jones to be a delegate at the peace table. The church recently received a two hundred dollar check for its church building fund from a friend.

—First Church, Newton: "The Crucifixion" by J. Stainer was given March 25 under the direction of Walter H. Hohmann.

—The indebtedness of Bethel College dropped from over $140,000 in 1932 to less than $40,000 in 1944.

—The Bethel College Choir sang "The Seven Last Words of Christ" on Palm Sunday afternoon.

—Burrton Mennonite Church, Burrton, Kansas: Rev. P. P. Tschetter is conducting pre-Easter services. On March 18 Rev. Walter Gering showed pictures of the C.P.S. project in Puerto Rico. Mr. Stucky, a former smoke jumper, who came along, related many interesting experiences.

—The annual church report of the Upper Milford (Pa.) church has the unique feature of having short obituary statements of those who passed away during the year.

—Rev. Lester Hostetler is to bring the special message at the coming session of the Eastern District Conference.

—Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel began pre-Easter services at the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, on March 25. His subjects for the four-day series were: "Behold Thy King," "In the Garden," "The Face of Jesus," "The Hands of Jesus," and "The Feet of Jesus." Rev. Krehbiel is pastor of the Grace Church, Lansdale, Pa., and Secretary of the Eastern District Conference. Dr. C. E. Krehbiel is his father.

—First Church, Hutchinson, Kansas: Recent guest speakers were: Rev. W. Harley King and Rev. E. J. Neuenschwander. This church has adopted the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan.

—For the first time in the eleven-year history of the gathering, a layman will preach the sermon at the annual Grand Canyon Easter Sunrise Service. Dr. Ronald Bridges, moderator of the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches, will present the Easter Message. His address will be broadcast over the National Broadcasting Company network from 9:00 to 9:30 A.M. Eastern War Time on Easter Sunday morning, April 1.

—“We now the using a new kind of church bulletin, which is prepared by the Secretarial Bureau of Bethel College. The front page, we as a church can plan, and we think the cut that has been made will be very beautiful when it comes out. So far the front page carries a picture of a quiet, peaceful farm scene. The back page is prepared by one of our Conference boards and changes each week. One feature of it is known as “Know Your Conference.” This is a short write-up by one of the boards telling about the projects of service which the board carries on, about its personnel, and about its problems, this is informative and interesting. The other feature is called “Beacon Lights from Mennonite History.” Dr. Cornelius Krahn of Bethel College, an authority on European Mennonite History, writes a short interesting paragraph about some happening among the Mennonites in past days. This too, is really educational.”—Bulletin, West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

Zionsville - Recently at a choir rehearsal meeting held at the chorister's home, Mr. Norman S. Shantz, the choir presented him with a nice purse as an appreciation of his fine work for many years.

Souderton — On Sunday evening, March 4, the young people of the Lansdale Mennonite Church gave a program for the Junior High and Young People of the Souderton Church.— The total C. P. S. offering for January and February amounted to $167.00.

The Fourth Quarterly Conference will be held in the Lansdale Church, April 9. In the afternoon, Rev. Ellis Graber will present a paper on “Menno Simons and the Scriptures.” In the evening there will be an ordination service to the gospel ministry for Mr. John Unruh, and after the ordination service, the Hon. Frederick B. Smillie, District Attorney of Montgomery County will deliver an address on “Juvenile Delinquency.”

Retreats — There will be five retreats at Men-O-Lan this year as follows: Adult Retreat — July 13 to 15; Junior Retreat — July 15 to 19; High School Retreat — July 19 to 22; Intermediate Retreat — July 22 to 26 and Young People's Retreat — July 27 to 29.

Report of the Annual Board Meeting

The Board of Home Missions met in their annual session at the Y.M.C.A. Hotel, 826 South Wabash Avenue, Chicago, 5 Illinois, on February 28. The members present were: J. M. Regier, J. E. Amstutz, W. Harley King, John J. Plenert and A. J. Neuenschwander. Rev. David Toews wanted to come, but his doctor did not give consent to make a long trip. We regretted Brother Toews' absence, but it could not be avoided. The meeting was opened by each one present offering prayer and asking the Lord to guide us in our work.

After the reading of the 1944 minutes, various matters related to the work were taken up. Action taken by resolutions will tell the story in a brief way.

Resolution: That we allow up to $50.00 for this year, to the Women's Missionary Literature Committee, if and when needed.

Three factors entered into consideration of care for orphans. For some time the Board of Home Missions has carried an Orphan's Fund. It was learned that among the Mennonites in Paraguay there are a number of orphans that need care, and the Leisy Orphan's Society, Halstead, Kansas, has differed to give support to needy orphans who are below four years of age and in places where Home Mission work is done.

Resolution: That the Board of Home Missions considers as our field any kind of evangelistic and mission work in Americaca, except among the American Indians, this is to include work of spiritual nature carried on in South America among our Mennonite people there. The Board to make needed contacts and inquiries to administer such aid to eligible orphans.

Resolution: That because of some inquiries and some evident need among our Mennonites in Mexico, the Board stands ready to send a qualified person to help them study and solve some of their problems.

Resolution: That we continue to pay our part in cooperation with the Publication Board, for literature, such as our church papers, Sunday School quarterlies and selected books, to the C.P.S. camps and units, and also to pay our half of the Bundesbote subscriptions that are sent to readers in Paraguay. Our Board stands ready to have the number of subscriptions to South America increased, in order to supply more homes and families with good literature.

Resolution: That we as a Board encourage our Home Mission churches to consider and if possible to adopt the 100 per cent Church Paper Plan, for it would, do in the church homes to become acquainted with all phases of work in the General Conference.

We further strongly urge these congregations (when new hymn books are needed) to consider favorably the Mennonite Hymnary or the German companion Hymnal in Canada. Note, several of our Home Mission congregations have already met both these suggestions.

Resolution: That we favor continuing to issue our "Mission Numbers" as in the past, by using our German and English church papers, and that at no time more than eight additional pages be used, and that the Board of Home Missions use only our apportionment, or about one-third if the space given to both the Foreign and Home Mission Boards.

Resolution: That we kindly ask Rev. John T. Neufeld to serve a full three-year term in the General Conference Evangelistic Committee. The Committee to stand as follows: Rev. Welter A. Gering, 1946 Rev. W. F. Unruh, 1947, Rev. John T. Neufeld, 1948.

This Committee stands ready to help you find a suitable evangelist; they also have a large number of carefully selected tracts, and are now helpful incidents in personal work.

New Workers in New Fields

Resolution: That in view of the cooperative agreement reached with their home church, Grace, Lansdale, Pa., we accept Miss Elsie Pfister, Hyden, Kentucky and Miss Margaret Slotter, Hoskinston, Kentucky, as our workers, and assure them an agreed monthly support for the coming year. Note: These two workers are laboring in the mountain district of Kentucky and their fields are in the region of the "Scripture Memory Mountain Mission."

Resolution: That in view of the desirability to look over various of our mission fields in Canada and also in response to an urgent invitation by David Toews that another Board member come to study and consider the needs of the fields; we ask one Board member to make an inspection trip to Canada this summer for about six weeks.

Executive Committees of Boards Have Session

The Boards that mapped out certain joint projects last year, as the "Bible Institute and Visitation Program" and the study of the General Conference Mutual Aid work, had agreed to hold joint meetings of the Executive Committees. Those involved were: Relief, Education, Home Missions, and the Peace Committee.

The two-fold projects considered are:

I. To consider the report of the Fact Finding Committee on General Conference Mutual Aid.

II. To consider the results and needs as they have come out of the "Bible Institute and Visitation Program," from written statements by all the men on assignments.

Reports if the sessions will be published in due time.

The Board is grateful to God for the active interest and concern as manifested by the regular and faithful support of the work through gifts and prayers.

In the name of the Board,

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

RURAL WORK

WILLIAM MARTENS, GRANTHAM, ALBERTA, REPORTS

For a number of years it has been my privilege to work in the interest of the Home Mission Board in Alberta, Canada. With my limitations, in faith, I sought to fulfill the great Commission: "Go ye . . . and teach all nations." The field of my labors was mainly to the scattered groups and also to individual families in the following towns: Chinook, Sedalia, Naco, Munson, Drumheller, Irma, and Iacombe. Part of my work is to visit and minister to the sick and also to visit the patients in various hospitals work looms friends and of increasing importance. To all mission friends who make this work possible, we say: "The Lord repay."

Since November, 1944, I have been much engaged in assisting in Bible conferences, held jointly with the Mennonite Brethren. All churches in the region will be visited and the theme if their choice will be discussed. One tour of this kind will cover five or six churches and will take about three weeks. This winter I was permitted to make two such tours. Such services bring special blessings to our people, but to the worker also. In connection many homes can be visited and words of comfort and inspiration can be brought to the sick.

New Church Built

In addition to the work outlined above, we have had much work to do in our home church. Among the many hundred Mennonite congregations in America, we were no doubt the most unfortunate, with possibly two others. During the early days of the war, we lost our church building because of a fire. What a loss!! "Should we risk it and immediately build a new church?" The congregation decided: "No." The result was that we decided that for the duration, we would worship in homes. This was done 1939-1944. Our work went on from year to year, by holding our worship services and Sunday

Mennonite Church, Grantham, Alberta, Canada 28x48 feet. Erected at a cost of two thousand three hundred dollars. The men of the church did the work.

School for the children in an overcrowded farm home. Finally the wish and hope found expression in many that we ought to venture forth and rebuild our place of worship.

With great devotion we all went to work. A building 28x48 feet in size was erected at a cost of $2,300.00 On December 24, 1944, we were permitted to have the dedication service. To the Board of Home Missions our sincere thanks for the loan they granted us and thanks go to many churches in Canada who have sent to us their gifts and interest. May the Lord bless you all!

With brotherly greetings from your and the Lord's servant,
William Martens

THE WORK OF THE HOME MISSION COMMITTEE OF THE WESTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE AT FREDONIA, KANSAS

One hundred twenty-five miles southeast of Newton, Kansas, is a little settlement of our people. This group of less than a dozen families has been in the community of Fredonia for about seven years. They have moved out of some of our more popular Mennonite areas around Newton, Goessel, Whitewater, and Halstead.

Fredonia is the county seat of Wilson county, and has a population of approximately four thousand people. It is a typical marketing center for farmers, and boasts of having a large cement plant, flax mill, brick kiln, turkey packing warehouse, and alfalfa dehydrating unit. The community is made accessible through good high ways, trains, and bus lines from Wichita, Topeka, and St. Louis.

The farming is diversified. Alfalfa (hay and seed), corn, flax, beans, oats, wheat, kafir corn, and les-pidesa (sp?) are some of the crops which are being successfully grown. The fattening of livestock for market is practiced with limitations, but the production of dairy products, and the raising of turkeys is profitably practiced by many.

The area is varied having both highlands and lowlands. Many of the hills and creeks are heavily wooded. The soil is not consistent in its quality. Neighboring farms may differ greatly in their soil textures. Improved farms are selling for twenty-five to seventy-five dollars per acre. Most of the country roads are better than average, because rock is sufficiently available for surfacing.

The climate is noticeably different from that of our Newton vicinities. The winds are not as prominent, and the winters are milder. The rainfall is about the same.

Our group there is not living in a compact settlement at present. The town of Fredonia being the approximate center, they live from three to almost twenty miles in various directions. Nevertheless, these families do not fail to meet every Sunday morning in a country schoolhouse for Sunday School and church worship. At present a catechism class is being held for nine young people. Once a month they meet on Sunday evening for C. E. In this organization the Mennonite Brethren group, (which constitutes about the same number of families), meets with us.

All of our people who are there now have faith in the future of the settlement. None were wealthy in material goods when they came there, but now they feel that they have a more secure footing. Some families have moved back to their home communities. Those who remained have, and still are, paying a price for their faith, but they feel that the adjustment in farming methods, which is necessary in all enterprises such as this one, is now complete, and that better days are ahead. (A failure to make this adjustment, rather than poverty of farming conditions, is probably a more valid explanation for the fact that some families have left.) Another severe testing which they have felt, and still feel very keenly, is their limited fellowship with others of a kindred faith. These factors loom large in all pioneering communities.

I believe that this settlement should receive due consideration by all of our people who are contemplating a necessary change of location, but a warning against any blind or hasty decision is in place. I suggest to our men in C.P.S., and military camps, when they return to normal life and seek for a place to begin farming, that they carefully consider the Fredonia vicinity as a possibility for settlement.

(By Willard Wiebe, senior at Bethel College, who has since October, 1944, served the Fredonia group.)

YOUR LIFE TOMORROW

So much is being said these days of the life of tomorrow—when Job 8:9 says—"For we are but of yesterday and know nothing, because our days upon earth are a shadow." How true that is of ourselves, yet when we are enlightened by the Spirit, we too can say as Paul does in II Tim. 1:12—"I know whom I have believed." We praise the Lord for so many that have had the joy of the Lord overshadow them and caused them to become a new creature in Christ Jesus. So many of these, sad to say, have remained as babes—must be taught instead of being teachers already. But the majority of the people by far (that is in Northern Saskatchewan) are as yet blind to the gospel. Poverty seems to be such a great barrier, Satan taking such an advantage on them; yet the sparkling eyes and smiling face of even one soul brought into the presence of the Lord, alone, is joy unspeakable to the worker.

During the last six months of 1944, thirty-eight souls have come to the Lord. How we rejoice to know that the Master does not want His worker to come empty handed some day.

My work, as most of you will know, is in Northern Saskatchewan—where I am kept very busy. There are so many places where no other minister comes, and many, too, where he comes but only once a month or even less. At other places the minister feels weak and he, as well as his audience, expect help from elsewhere.

What tomorrow will bring we know not, but my prayers and desire is for more laborers in the field—yes in our own land. It means a sacrifice here, but joy unspeakable now and through eternity,

More souls for the Master.

BETHEL CHURCH Winton, California

Greetings to all with Jeremiah 17:7—"Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is." That has been our experience again in the past year just simply trusting in the Lord from day to day. The Lord has wonderfully blessed us the past year with wonderful crops; all kinds of fruits are grown here as grapes, peaches, almonds. The crop was very good last year.

So has the Lord also blessed us spiritually. We could gather every Sunday morning and Wednesday evening with the exception of the busy summer season

We made some quite necessary improvements on our church this year. The roof was reshingled, the inside was painted; also varnished the benches; the floor was scraped and varnished, so that we have a very nice building now.

The work is going on nicely every Sunday morning. Sunday School with an attendance now of about sixty. Preaching at 11 a. m with a special song by some family; our evening services are C. E. program and then every other Sunday singspiration.

We have a nice sewing circle. The sale this fall brought about $480.00. We also had a number of ministers visiting, as Rev. W. A. Regier, Rev. P. K. Regier, Rev. Wedel and Rev. and Mrs. J. M. Franz. Pray for us that we may serve him faithfully.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Glanzer

THE LIGHT SHINETH IN THE GREAT SMOKIES

"Thru God we shall do valiantly; for He it is that shall tread down our enemies." Ps. 60:12

We had an unusually quiet time over the holidays, thanking Him for answered prayer, in contrast to other years with its drinking and arousing and sewing satan and all that goes with it.

Our Sunday Evening Bible Class has been steadily holding forth "The Word of Life," as well as our Sunday School.

I am endeavoring to organize a Mother's Class seventeen miles away, this will be another community added to my others.

Just at present we are having our winter rains, which makes roads dangerous, preventing me going far back into the mountains to schools, as there are landslides and washouts in the high narrow roads.

We thank God that two of our young men and one grown mother have taken their stand for Christ and give evidence of spiritual growth.

Progress In The Community

We notice progress in our community, it is slowly plodding upwards for the better spirit in cooperation than the past two years. This is a real encouragement to my heart, though we still have much ground yet to be possessed.

Satan is not asleep, as he is always trying some new method to start discord among our community, but praise His name, God is working in hearts; also our little wee tots are memorizing scripture verses at home.

Weather Hinders Work

We have had an unusual amount of heavy rains this winter; our hills are water soaked, and the roads have been in an almost impassable condition due to landslides and clay mud. At times not even the rural mail man could get thru. From this it is evident it has been too bad to go on the back roads to schools, which have been closed from time to time on account of weather and coal shortage, but our school term is extended to continue till June instead of closing early in April. Thus, I will be able to resume Bible teaching in the schools, again, as soon as the weather permits. This school work brings good interest and results, and the children that learn Bible stories in school take it to their parents in the home. Thus parents as well as the children are receiving His Word even though they do not have the privilege of attending any gospel service.

God is working in the hearts of our boys and girls here hidden among the hills unknown by the world but known to Him.

Will You Pray

We need much prayer and it seems as tho my life is a small candle, but here among the hills I am trying to keep it shining, holding forth His Word.

Please, continue to pray for the many unreached here since they are lost and He died for them too.

1. Please do not send any postal cards (other people read post cards)

2. And I am known as the "Sunday School Visitor." Please never put "Missionary" on the outside of the envelope—Thank you May God still work mightily here. Pray for the parents who are so careless and indifferent to spiritual things.

May God have the very best of my life in this New Year.

Elsa E. Grantland—Point Rock, N. C.

PROGRESS REPORT

GENERAL CONFERENCE MENNONITE FELLOWSHIP OF LANCASTER, PA. AND VICINITY

In response to an invitation sent out by Reverend J. J. Plenert of Philadelphia September 15, 1944, approximately forty of us gathered at the Lancaster Y.M.C.A. on Sunday, September 24, from 4:00 to 5:30 p.m. where we met with Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander and Rev. Freeman H. Swartz for the first meeting of the Fellowship. It was the hope and prayer of the leaders that this new Fellowship might ultimately grow into some permanent organization to draw together all Mennonite friends and others who might be interested in a General Conference Church.

Growth of Interest and Attendance

The response was encouraging and it was planned to hold a second meeting in about a month. Dr. S. E. Yoder of Lancaster and Dr. D. C. Frost of Miller-ville were appointed to serve as a committee on arrangements. Since that time monthly meetings have been held at the same location, and we have been pleased to note a growing interest and attendance. No little credit is due to the preachers who have given of their time and talent to come to the meetings with messages of encouragement and inspiration to all of us.

Those Who Have Served As Preachers

The following men have served on the dates indicated and this listing should serve as open thanks for the service they have rendered.

September 24, 1944—Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, Chairman of the Eastern District Home Mission Committee.

October 22, 1944—Dr. J. Winfield Fretz of the Mennonite Central Committee.

November 19, 1944—Rev. George S. Stonebeck of the Fairfield Mennonite Church, Fairfield, Pa.

December 17, 1944—Rev. Elmer D. Hess of Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Denver, Pa.

January 14, 1945—Rev. Alfred Regier of Calvary Mennonite Church, Mechanics Grove, Pa.

It is now planned that Dr. Fretz, who gave such a fine talk at our October meeting will again be with us as preacher on February 11, 1945.

Special Music Arranged

As a predominant part of our meeting we have been privileged on several occasions to have a group of singers under the leadership of Mr. Otto Sommer of the Mennonite Central Committee, which group has rendered in an exceptionally pleasing manner, songs which have added materially to the meetings. We have also had the support and assistance of many others from the Mennonite Central Committee at Akron. It is noteworthy that they have been with us consistently and in good numbers at all of our meetings.

Adopting of a New Name

As a means of identifying our group and to avoid confusion the name was changed to "The General Conference Mennonite Fellowship of Lancaster, Pennsylvania and Vicinity," as we found another fine group was meeting under a name similar to our original one.

Financial Report

Financially our group has been self-supporting and all moneys turned over to the Committee by the General Conference have been, in turn, passed on to the Mennonite Central Committee boys who have been willing to give their time to our group in furnishing special music as referred to above. Offerings have equalled expenses to date.

Conclusion

It is hoped that this brief report indicates the interest shown and the growing response to our endeavors. We have had approximately seventy in attendance at our recent meetings and hope to enlarge our sphere of influence in the coming months.

—Dr. D. C. Frost

MENNONITE MEETING IN THE LOOP CHICAGO, ILLINOIS—CITY WORK

Although a smaller group of Mennonite students have been meeting for several years on the south side of Chicago, near the Chicago University and Theological Seminary, a need was seen for a more centrally located meeting place where all of these of Mennonite faith and heritage living in and near Chicago could meet for worship and Christian fellowship.

Rev. J. T. Neufeld suggested that we look for a suitable place in the Loop. After looking at various places, an arrangement was made with the Methodist Church for the use of the Dixon Chapel in the Chicago Temple located at 33 North Clark Street, which is in the heart of the Loop. This fine chapel was to be reserved for our meetings to be held on the first Sunday afternoon of each month.

When the plans for contacting the Mennonites in the city and bringing them together in special meetings once a month for worship and fellowship was presented to the Home Mission Board by Rev. Neufeld, they gave their hearty approval and agreed to give some financial support.

The first meeting was held in May of 1944. About fifty attended this meeting and received the blessing of the message brought by Dr. A. Warkentin. They came from many parts of the city and after the worship service many of them remained to visit with old acquaintances and to meet others of like heritage.

These services have continued up to the present time. The attendance has ranged from twenty-five to fifty. The meetings usually open with a song service followed by a ten or fifteen minute devotional period. Students from the schools usually have charge of the devotionals and the special music. Then there is the main message from the Word of God given by a local or visiting minister or missionary.

At the present time there are about 150 names on the mailing list. Cards or letters announcing the service are sent out every month. Some visitation work has been done among these people, and an effort will be made to make a personal contact with as many as possible.

What has been the benefit, if any, from these meetings? Certainly, those that have attended have received a blessing through the worship service. Furthermore, these meetings have been a means of getting together with old friends and acquaintances. The half hour of visiting after the worship service is very similar to that which takes place in so many of our churches in the country. Thus there is a spirit and sense of unity and a feeling, at least, in a small measure that we have "Mennonite" community even though we live scattered out in a large city.

REPORT ON THE MISSION STATION IN CALGARY, ALBERTA

It is possible for me to enclose two pictures with this report. On the one we see the church, while on the other are the people of Calgary who helped to make possible the difficult task of becoming organized in this large city.

For years there has been no opportunity for these people to have fellowship with one another, as no one seemed to know just who lived in this city, or where they lived, nor was there a suitable building available for the purpose. As a result of this many joined various religious denominations, while others, who differed from these denominations in their convictions, had no fellowship whatsoever. It was especially important that something be done for the sake of the little children. After six months of work, it became possible to purchase a church, in which since November 6, 1944, these people have been able to gather for Sunday School and worship every Sunday, as well as for a prayer meeting and choir practice every Wednesday night. On October 8, a thanksgiving service was held, at which gifts totalling $506.65 were received. With this small sum the church was bought within the next few days, in the hope that the Home Mission Board would support them, and they did.

Brother David Toews, Rosthern, has supported this project tirelessly, and the Board of Home Missions of the General Conference of North America has given the financial support necessary to make possible this purchase. On January 3, the Calgary Committee, was able to pay for the church, and, we received the deed.

This house was dedicated to the Lord on November 19. Brother J. Sawatzky made the introduction with John 16:33; after which it was my privilege to speak on Psalm 84; Brother W. Martens then spoke on Psalm 122. In the afternoon of the same day the Lord's Supper was observed, for the first time in Calgary. Brother C. G. Neufeld, Didsbury, made the introduction with Psalm 2:5:11, and Rev. 3:20, while Brother W. Martens officiated with a message based on John 3:16. Brother J. Sawatzky closed the service with Luke 8:39 and prayer.

This is our church, one more church in our chain of churches, where people can have fellowship with God and with one another, where souls can seek and find the Lord. The Lord be praised! And now we see new people every Sunday, Mennonites who had not been seen before, and who were not known to be living in this city. They are all employed in the various industries of the city, or members of the services.

The fact that Brother J. Sawatzky has decided to assume full responsibilities here, and intends to move to Calgary in the near future, will be especially beneficial to this work.

We should now like to extend a hearty invitation to all ministers of the gospel of Canada and the U. S. A. whose travels might at some time take them through Calgary, to stop off there and bring God's Word to these people. The church is at 1706-17 Avenue, S. W.

In the Master's service,

THE NEW YORK FELLOWSHIP

The New York Mennonite Fellowship serves a widely scattered group of Mennonites in the area of Greater New York. Many of these are students or others who live here only temporarily, who have their membership in their home churches and perhaps attend one or the other of the New York city churches fairly regularly, but who feel the tie with their Mennonite faith and background.

This group has been meeting monthly at the Biblical Seminary in New York for devotional and informational meetings, and for the sake of fellowship. Since October we have had as our speakers Dr. Harold S. Bender, of Goshen College, who spoke on "The Anabaptist Vision;" Rev. Cornelius Wall, head of the Mountain Lake Bible School, who spoke on the Christian witness; Miss Martha Burkhalter, who showed motion pictures and spoke of the work of the General Conference missions in India; and Rev. J. R. Barkman, who presented the work of Grace Children's Home of Henderson, Nebraska.

The average attendance at these meetings has been twenty. Many of the people on our list live far out and can come only occasionally. The severity of this past winter has kept many of these from coming for several meetings. As a result of these meetings and of personal contacts one young man has made a definite commitment of himself to Christ.

There is a small nucleus who would be glad to have a Mennonite church in this vicinity and who would support any effort which would be made to establish such a church on a full time basis. These few are permanent residents who do not feel at home in other churches.

Because the Fellowship is made up of members of many Mennonite branches, it seems very difficult for us to start such a church. It might be suggested that the Board of Home Missions try to find someone who would spend his full time to establish a mission here and work it into a church, as has been done by another Mennonite denomination farther out of the heart of the city.

TORONTO MISSION NEWS

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ." Eph. 1. One must agree with the words of the apostle Paul after receiving God's blessings day by day the Toronto Mission was especially blessed during the first week in February when the Rev. J. J. Plenert, Vice-Chairman of the Board of Home Missions, served us with a series of special messages. The theme of his messages dealt with "The Church." Each message challenged us to fulfill our duty as a member of the Church of Jesus Christ. Solo selections were rendered by Rudy Dyck, a member of the Mission.

On Saturday evening Rev. Plenert met with the men of the Mission for an open discussion of matters concerning organization into a church. After due discussion it was decided to postpone organization for the time being, but to take definite steps toward this end in the future. One of the steps to be taken would be to appoint an individual or a committee who would attempt to locate a more suitable meeting place for our mission meetings and activities. We have been tremendously handicapped because of the fact that we do not have proper quarters of our own and thus activities other than Sunday School and Sunday morning worship services are out of the question. Of course, occasionally a special service is held in a home, but such quarters are very crowded.

The annual meeting of our Mission was held after the closing message which Brother Plenert gave on Sunday February 11. Reports from the Pastor and the Secretary-Treasurer were given, after which a new Mission Committee, with an additional member on the committee, was elected. Sunday School teachers and pianists were also elected for the coming year.

As we look back over the preceding year, many have been the blessings which the Lord has given us. We, the Toronto Mission, are looking forward to a greater blessing in the coming months of this new year. Join us in prayer that the work of the Lord, in this great city, might continue to grow and that many others might be reached for Christ.

A. J. NEUENSCHWANDER

By a Co-worker on the Home Mission Board
Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, the Secretary of the Home Mission Board, is also the editor of the home mission section of The Mennonite, and the writer of the home mission news in each issue.

He was elected to this Board at the Upland conference in 1935. Rev. Neuenschwander has been pastor of various churches in our conference for more than twenty-five years. He has ministered in the following places: Trenton, Ohio; First Church in Philadelphia; Upland, California, and is at present serving three churches in and near Quakertown, Pa., Bethany, West Swamp, and Flatland. Any one familiar with the large amount of correspondence that he must carry on as Secretary of the Home Mission Board, will realize that he lives a strenuous life.

There are numerous circumstances which qualify Rev. Neuenschwander well to be the secretary of this board. Here are a few of these:

1. His education and training. He is a graduate of Bluffton College and Witmarsum Seminary. He also has done graduate work in two other seminaries.
2. His past experience. In addition to his long ministry in a number of our own churches, he has also taught in the Mennonite Collegiate Institute of Gretna, Manitoba, and has served as Young People's Secretary, travelling much among the churches of our conference. He has thus become familiar with the opportunities and the needs of our people, both in the United States and in Canada. He does not pretend to be a master of the German language, but he can read, write and speak it sufficiently to carry on his work as needed.

3. His deep interest in our people. Those who know Rev. Neuenschwander know that his interest is not limited to those of the Mennonite church, but he feels his first obligations to those of the "household of faith." Neither is his interest limited to home missions; but he has been quite willing to devote his time and energy to this field of opportunity as the need demands.

4. His quick understanding of the needs and the problems of home missions. This is very important when a quick solution of the problem is to be made.

5. His approachable disposition. He is always ready to approach others and they soon discover that he is always interested in their questions and their needs. This is an asset to one engaged in such work.

6. His deep conviction that man needs salvation, and that in Christ this is always available. This conviction puts an inner drive into any person who has it.

When Rev. Neuenschwander carries on the work as Secretary of the Home Mission Board, he is never mechanical about it, but does it with a deep desire of serving Christ by widening the opportunities of our church.

Our Foreign Mission Work

Report of the Foreign Mission Board Meeting

February 21-24, 1945, North Newton, Kansas

The session was opened by the chairman, P. P. Wedel, with the reading of Acts 26:13-18 and a few remarks about the challenges and promises this passage contains also for us today. This was followed by a season of prayer. All members of the Board were present: P. P. Wedel, H. G. Nyce, A. E. Kreider, A. P. Waltner, D. J. Unruh, P. A. Penner and P. H. Richert. Most of the time also the officers of the Women's Sewing Societies, Mr. R. A. Goerz, Mrs. Frieda Regier Entz, Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz and Mrs. W. C. Voth, were present, as also the President of the General Conference, C. E. Krehbiel, as much as his time permitted.

When South America was discussed, the missionaries G. B. Stucky and L. A. Rutschman were also present; when Africa was under consideration, Brother and Sister C. E. Rediger of the CIM Board were present, he being the representative of his Board to sit with our Board.

The first report read was that of the treasurer, P. A. Penner. The following is a brief summary of the same:

1. Resolved to accept the treasurer's report.

2. Resolved that we propose to the Executive Committee of the General Conference, that it outline a uniform plan as to the period to be covered in the reports of the treasurers of the conference boards of the General Conference.

Arizona

3. Resolved to accept the following budgets for Arizona:

Oraibi
Native helper	$500.00
Miscellaneous	100.00
Hotevilla
Fuel	45.00
Painting, etc.	170.00
Moen Copi
Fuel	80.00
Repairs	250.00

Total $1,145.00

4. Resolved to accept recommendation No. 1, and ask Brother Suderman to contact Mrs. Baumgartner about buying her house at Hotevilla, and report to the Board.

5. Resolved to accept recommendation No. 2 which asks for a new couple for the Arizona field.

6. Resolved to accept recommendation No. 4 that we send Sister Anna Baerg this year again to Arizona as teacher in the vacation Bible Schools and to continue to use her where most needed.

7. Resolved that it is the wish of the Mission Board that the Sudermans return to the Hopi field. But if the Berne church desires to extend the present temporary arrangement with them for perhaps another year, we would be willing to grant that, if we can make adequate provision for the work in Arizona.

Montana

8. Resolved to accept the budgets for Montana as requested:

Lame Deer, Budget	$150.00
Native helper, Frank	180.00
Ashland, Budget	200.00

Total $530.00

9. Resolved that the Foreign Mission Board in session sends its heartfelt greetings to Brother Rodolphe Petter, who this week celebrates his eightieth birthday, and we express to him our appreciation of his labor of love in the preparation of the "addenda" to his Cheyenne grammar, wishing him the continued blessing of our heavenly Father.

10. Resolved that we grant our missionaries to the American Indians the permission to leave their respective fields one month a year (instead of two weeks a year, and ten weeks after a five year period), if so desired.

Oklahoma

11. Resolved to accept the following budget for Oklahoma:

Clinton, Hammon, and Thomas, Station account	$350.00
Native help account	600.00

Canton, Longdale, and Fonda, Station account	350.00
Native help account	240.00

$1,540.00

12. Resolved to authorize our missionaries in Oklahoma to investigate the present valuation of our Cantonment farm and the extra house on it.

13. Resolved that we adopt the plan for introducing a new worker into the Oklahoma field as suggested by Brother J. B. Ediger (in the light of the fact that he and his wife wish to retire in 1947, when their forty years of mission service will expire).

India

Upon invitation by the Board, Sister Martha Burkhalter attended our meeting during the discussion of the India field, particularly the recommendation from India about the building of a Bible Training School at Janjgir, on which she presented a lengthy paper, which showed a thorough study of the problem. Thereupon it was

14. Resolved that we approve of the request of the India Missionary Conference that Miss Burkhalter solicit funds for the New Bible School as planned by the India Conference, with an estimate of its cost of about $5,000.00. (Rs. 15,000).

15. Resolved that we allow the requested budget of $35,015 dollars (Rs. 114,324).

16. Resolved to allow the request of $12,251.00 for building material, etc.

17. Resolved that we approve of the request of the India conference to send three new couples to India, and that we make efforts to comply with this wish.

18. Resolved that we approve of the request of the India conference that Miss Nickel solicit $650.00 for the Educational Fund in India.

19. Resolved to encourage Brother and Sister Curt Claassen in their plans to continue their studies. (In preparation to go to India.)

The letter concerning the new high school was carefully considered, but because of lack of information, such as estimate of cost, etc., be it

20. Resolved that we defer action on this request at this time. In reference to the request for a bungalow at Jagdeeshpur, be it

21. Resolved that after careful consideration of this request we postpone this matter until the return of Dr. Dester and Rev. Duerksen for further information.

Africa

As already stated, Brother and Sister C. E. Rediger of the CIM Board of Chicago attended our meeting, while our work in Africa was under discussion. Brother Rediger, who had come as representative of his Board, reported about the developments of sending out our new workers to Africa. Brother and Sister G. B. Neufeld are on the way, and should arrive now any day. Brother and Sister H. A. Toevs have permission to go, but do not yet have their passage, and may have to wait till March for it. Brother and Sister J. B. Dick do not yet have the permission to go. Meanwhile Brother Toevs does personal work in Chicago with the sick in the hospital.

22. Resolved to give Brother and Sister Rediger a vote of thanks by rising for this helpful participation in our discussions.

China

23. Resolved that we favor the student relief in China as entrusted to Rev. S. F. Pannabecker and that we express to him our deep concern and wish that the greatest care should be exercised that students should attend only such schools that are true to the evangelical Christian faith, and that Brother Pannabecker submit to the Board names of worthy students for endorsement by the Board and the China missionaries.

24. Resolved that we express our appreciation to Dr. and Mrs. John Warkentin for their communication, and we hereby give them the assurance that we plan to send them to the field as soon as possible.

25. Resolved that we accept the recommendation of the China missionaries regarding language study for new missionaries, and that they be sent to the College of Chinese Studies at Berkely, California, at the discretion of the Executive Committee.

In the midst of our discussion on China a telephone call came with the good news that our missionaries in the Philippines are liberated and in fairly good health. This was to us important enough to pause in our work long enough for a brief season of prayer with praise and thanksgiving. General MacArthur has promised the missionaries that he will send them home as soon as he can spare the ships for them.

26. Resolved that we lay aside an additional sum of $10,000.00 for the work in China for reconstruction after the war, etc.

Mexico

While our Board has no mission work in Mexico, we are glad to help with advice and encouragement to the Bergtal church in Manitoba, which has begun a mission not far from the Mennonite Colony there. We asked a member of our Board, Brother D. J. Unruh, to comply with their request and accompany their recent delegation to Mexico to help investigate the field and its possibilities, which he did.

27. Resolved to express our appreciation of the mission spirit and enterprise of the Bergtal church, and that we encourage them in their mission program in Mexico, and that we request them to maintain their affiliation with our Board, and keep us informed of the progress in their work, and send us their reports from the field.

28. Resolved that we thank Rev. D. J. Unruh for his report of the visit to Mexico, and the information given concerning the work among the Tarahumara Indians.

South America

29. Resolved that we plan to send Brother and Sister Stucky to Colombia as soon as their visas have been granted, as we expect within a few weeks. Next summer we send Brother Rutschman and Miss Fischbach (by that time to be Mrs. Rutschman), and as soon as Miss Becker has finished her course in Biblical Seminary, we send her also to Colombia together with Miss Janet Soldner, and Miss Mararite Sprunger, if the reports of those who have gone ahead are favorable in regard to establishing a mission in Colombia.

General Resolutions

30. Resolved to appoint Brother D. J. Unruh as Candidate Secretary.

31. Resolved to instruct our secretary to report to the Secretarial Bureau that the members of our Board are willing to write brief articles for the church bulletins.

32. Resolved to place our missionaries among the American Indians on the same salary scale as those on the foreign fields, beginning January 1, 1945.

33. Resolved that we ask Brother P. A. Penner to write the next annual letter to our missionaries.

34. Resolved that we ask Brother Nyce to visit Montana this year and Brother Waltner Arizona.

35. Resolved to instruct our Executive Committee to take the necessary steps in consultation with the Home Mission Board to lay before the General Conference our definition of the scope of "Home" and "Foreign" Missions.

36. Resolved that we continue Brother P. J. Wiens for the year 1945 on the same basis as in the past few years, and grant an extra $75.00 for medical allowance.

37. Resolved that we go on record that we are willing to participate in a Christian Workers Conference in 1945 on a basis similar to last year, if the other boards enter the arrangement, and if the program be set by a committee composed of representatives of the participating boards.

38. Resolved that the President of the Board appoint a committee of three to secure questionnaire from other mission boards for their foreign mission candidates, and then prepare one for the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America and have it printed.

39. Resolved to thank Bethel College for the free use of a committee room and for the good boarding service.

40. Resolved to thank Brother C. E. Krehbiel for attending, as conference president, our sessions as much as time permitted.

41. Resolved to thank all our mission friends, churches, C. E. Societies, and Women's Associations for their faithful support of our mission work both financially and otherwise, especially through the News and Notes.

42. Resolved to thank all our mission workers at home and on the fields for their faithful service and uncomplaining attitude in the face of adverse war conditions.

43. Resolved to thank the Lord for his continued blessings of our work and the protection of our workers on land and sea and restoring to health those that were sick almost unto death. Especially, do we thank and praise Him for the release of our missionaries in the Philippines, and now also for the encouraging information about entering Colombia for general mission work, for which the money in the treasury has accumulated. We thank the Lord for the large income of over $178,000.00 in 1944, so that we are encouraged to raise our budget for this year.

44. Resolved to accept as our total budget for 1945, $140,000.00.

45. Resolved to adjourn.

Brother C. E. Krehbiel led in the closing prayer.

AMERICAN INDIAN MISSION NUMBER

Last year we had an India Mission Number, and so it is but fair that we have an American Indian Mission Number.

As soon as the work in China can be started again, a China Mission Number would be in order. We have had such numbers before, but not many of them. They contain more material than usual, and should be referred to from time to time as leisure permits to read it all. Otherwise it would be too much material for ordinary readers to read it in one sitting. We have also pamphlets for distribution, and they are fine, but none of them have such an opportunity to get into every home as these Mission Numbers have.

We are using some old pictures, which would be out of date, were it not for so many new readers that have never seen them before. A few weeks ago the picture of our Senior missionary was published with an article about him. But thousands of our mission friends did not get to see it, because they did not subscribe to the paper.

We call special attention at this time, when Missionary Petter celebrates his eightieth birthday, to his life story in pamphlet form. The English edition is exhausted, but the German is yet to be had by the hundreds of copies for ten cents a piece. They can be ordered from Rev. J. M. Suderman, Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas.

MONTANA

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION AT LAME DEER, MONTANA

The phone rang . . . Brother Habegger was speaking from Busby . . . "Shall we not together plan a celebration in honor of Brother Petter's eightieth birthday anniversary?"

That started "the ball a-rolling" . . . The Busby missionaries and a number of government employees at the large Indian boarding school there began at once to practice special songs for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Habegger both sing well, and Mrs. Wenger plays nicely.

I wrote at once to the Swiss Federal Railway offices in New York city for Swiss slides, well knowing the delight it would be to my husband to gaze on scenes of the land that gave him birth, as a special part of the celebration. We are all familiar how beautifully a poet expresses our common feeling, in the words,

"How dear to my heart, are the scenes of my childhood,

When fond recollection presents them in view."

Not even the poet felt these words more deeply than does my husband who left Switzerland in 1890, to come preach the gospel to the American Indians. I asked especially for scenes from southern or French Switzerland, centering about Vevey, his birthplace, then Lake Geneva, the Jura mountains, the high Alps, Bern, Zuerich, and especially Basle, where he spent seven years of intensive study preparatory for his career as missionary . . . They very graciously sent 103 fine slides and four reels, and my only expense was transportation and insurance charges in sending them back . . . The entire shipment was valued at $150.00.

The lady stenographers at the government offices here in Lame Deer very kindly typed eighty postals, which were sent to the churches, to mission and personal friends, announcing the celebration. These brought a very prompt and gratifying response, which tended however to "let the cat out of the bag" before the time. Since my husband had had one bad fall on an icy place near the road, which might have been serious, I began to stress most vigorously the danger for older people, and promptly insisted that I, and not he, get the mail each day. This I did for two weeks, either going to the post-office myself, or waiting near the mail box until the mail "stage" would bring our incoming mail. Thus it was a simple matter to lay aside all special mail.

Mrs. Habegger baked the angel food cake and furnished the decorations. Other ladies furnished cakes, and the stores here ordered enough from the Miles City and Forsyth bakeries for a good sized crowd. Two Lame Deer ladies made the punch from donated fruit juices, lemons, oranges and pineapple juice.

The Sunday School pupils readily took to the idea of making original birthday greeting cards, which they gleefully presented to him at the regular Sunday School hour, even though his birthday was on the day following, the 19th. They also sang their birthday song as he dropped his dollar into the birthday bank. To this he responded with a nice little talk about Switzerland and his younger days in that far-away land.

Dr. and Mrs. Rodolphe Petter

The home of Missionary Rodolphe Petter, Lame Deer, Montana, and the chapel nearby

The State Seed and Nursery Company at Helena followed my suggestions and sent a very beautiful blooming Cyclamen, saying that it was especially appropriate, as it grew in the Swiss Jura mountains. This came on Saturday and pleased Mr. Petter very much. He gazed at it, petted it, carried it where the sun's rays would bathe its foliage with warmth, got snow to moisten the ground in the pot, saying its nature required that.

Thus it seemed perfectly natural that we begin a home celebration one day ahead of time. . . .A simple festive noon meal was also in place. For this a neighbor lady graciously cleaned and prepared a nice fat duck which needed but to be replaced in our electric oven. This with "trimmings" and cake was simple enough and soon ready after our morning services were over. All this helped to dismiss any surmises, and he expressed none, even though I had been unusually busy during the week, coming and going.

After our simple dinner was over he listened to the radio a few minutes, then took his usual after-dinner nap. I took the precaution to draw the shade quite low, lest in stirring he spy cars around the church, if any came before the time.

Quickly I slipped over to the church, and began putting it in order. The Busby crowd was soon here, and together we placed more chairs, found a fitting place for the angel food cake and decorations, also for the beautiful blooming Cyclamen. Mrs. Habegger had also brought a beautiful narcissus, which filled the air with fragrance. We also practiced some of the songs, arranged the numbers on the program. Promptly at 2 o'clock the crowd had gathered, and I offered to call the celebrant.

He was sound asleep. . . It took some minutes before he realized that I was in the room. Sleepily he opened his eyes, and asked, "What is it?" "Somebody wants to see you." Again a sleepy query, "Who is it?" no doubt thinking it was an Indian on a trivial errand. "Put on your coat, brush your hair and come over to the church. They are there."

Of course as we left the house, he at once spied the cars, though they had parked on the south side. . . I insisted that we enter from the rear, so he face the entire assembly which began promptly to sing "Happy birthday to you" when he appeared at the door.

Brother Habegger took charge of the program, which consisted first of two piano selections by Mrs. Wenger. Brother Wenger followed with a brief Scripture reading and prayer. A biographical sketch was read. The double quartet sang two songs from the Mennonite Hymnary, a ladies' quartet sang, "Near to the heart of God." Rev. Habegger gave the opening address and also sang, "He shall feed His flock like a Shepherd" from Handel's Messiah. Rev. Milton Whiteman and an Indian woman, whom we all know best as "Hevesa," who is the oldest Christian among our Montana churches, both made remarks which were much appreciated. . . . Someone said they were the best on the entire program, coming from two Christian Indians. . . . Cheyenne song, "Gott ist die Liebe" was sung by the missionaries and the Christian Indians. Milton also sang a solo.

During the program, I presented the basket full of accumulated mail. There were seventy-three items, which together with the ones the Sunday School children had handed him in the morning, brought the number well over eighty. . . . Fifty-four came the following day, and some later, bringing the total well up to 175. They came from as far east as Rhode Island, and as far west as California. It just happened that one also arrived from friends in Berne, Switzerland, and another from relatives living in France just across the line, not far from Geneva. These two broke a long silence between that country and the United States.

In a few heart-felt words the celebrant expressed his joy and gratitude for all the kindness that was being shown him. . . ."I stand, as it were, upon a high mountain. Down far below I see the tortuous paths by which I climbed in making the ascent. In the face of all the grandeur and glory of God's creation all about me, I feel very small indeed. In retrospect on my past years of service for the Master and my eighty years, I am very conscious of much weakness and many imperfections. This keeps me from self glory and I thank Him for it. . . . In serving my Master, I simply tried to do what He expects of all His servants, and in two words, that is to do my duty. . . . Even that He made possible by His grace and blessing ever bearing me in patience and long suffering." He then joined a few of us in singing one of his favorite Swiss songs, which he had been singing all week, "Thr Berge lebt wohl." Before leading in a closing prayer, Brother Habegger favored us with that beautiful selection from Mendelssohn, "But the Lord is mindful of His own."

Immediately after the program, a number of ladies busied themselves with cutting the cakes and pouring the fruit juices, while our Sunday School pupils flitted back and forth eager to do their part as delighted waiters and waitresses. The cake and juice disappeared as by magic. Everybody had a grand time, including the celebrant who had been so completely surprised and overwhelmed.

The Swiss slides and Swiss films were shown on two different evenings to a large crowd of Indians and whites in a hall used here in Lame Deer for educational and instructive "shows." Our own stereopticon was used for the slides, but the government electrician operated the government machine for showing the films. The lady who owns the building made no charge. Several in the audience have since told me that they enjoyed especially the keen interest and delight Mr. Petter showed as he watched the panorama of lakes, mountains, cities, industries, sports bringing back to him scenes indelibly printed on his mind in childhood and growing manhood. Having had but two trips back to the land of his birth after over fifty years of exile, it is natural that his mind and heart, especially now in old age, perhaps more than others, goes back to that land of charm.

Here follow a few excerpts from some letters he has written in answer to some that came, regretting deeply that he cannot possibly answer 175, much as he would like to do so.

"The potted flower of the Alpenrose kind, looks like a flaming bush with its beautiful red blossoms among the myrtle green. They look as though they had just come from the Swiss mountains to greet me on my eightieth birthday, to fit into the memories of the past, while I muse on the high point of my fourscore years."

"The potted narcissus given to me by Mrs. Haggler also reminds me of my childhood spring days, when we children used to wade on the high mountain slopes above Vevey, through millions of beautiful narcissus growing in their wild state."

"A Swiss banker in Billings sent me beautiful red and white carnations. All these flowers did my soul good, as I watched how they responded to the warmth of the sun's rays, I too responded to the warmth of all these greetings and messages. They were as angels used of God to bring me cheer and soul refreshing."

"When one has crossed the ten years over the seventy mentioned in a Psalm by Moses, one naturally sees the circle of brothers and sisters in the faith, with whom one has been more or less intimate, grow smaller and smaller. . . Sister Frieda, who did so much for me in making my seventieth birthday anniversary unusual by sponsoring my first trip back to the land of my birth, is no longer with us. My dearly loved son, Valdo, who was present at that celebration, has also been called Home. So many ministers in our churches and fellow-missionaries, whom I treasured as warm friends, are no longer here."

"I have missed all these. I have felt their loss. But just then God provides for the pilgrim a new circle of pilgrims, who are also walking towards Zion. Their fellowship expressed in so many messages has become a blessed substitute. . . These more than 175 cards and messages became in my soul the still small voice of God satisfying and strengthening me. . ."

To Brother Langenwalter, he writes as follows: "Thank you from my soul for the remembrance of my eightieth birthday, and the very kind mention you made of me in The Mennonite. Likely that your article started the avalanche of cards and messages. I naturally sprang from publicity but you expressed yourself as a friend who knows his friend, and thus presents him with warmth to his friends. I truly appreciate what you said and treasure it in the spirit in which you gave it."

"Some time ago I was asked by a young college student whether the ideal I had formed about my mission service had changed under the influence of changed circumstances, and in what way had it changed. I answered him that I had not entered the mission service from the standpoint of an ideal, but because of a clear and definite call that came not from the realm of my desires or my own mind. This call was renewed at divers times and under different circumstances, until I could not interpret it otherwise than as a definite call from God to serve Him on the mission field. Thus I followed in obedience to His call, and not an ideal. That gave me ever after the full assurance that I was where God wanted me to be, and that God knew why He wanted it so."

"A fine old professor at Basle often told us pupils, 'Follow God in full obedience. If you are sure of your call, then no future storms or difficulties, defeats in combat with heathendom will ever discourage or shake you. Even if the result from your labors may appear small, you will never yield to despair and a desire to leave the work. He who knows all things, knows exactly how your labors will unfold themselves.' That has been my experience. I feel not proud or elated over my achievements, for I know how imperfect they have often been. On the other hand I have the inner satisfaction of having followed God's call in simple obedience and full trust."

May this report serve in a measure to thank all the kind friends who so generously helped in making this birthday celebration a complete success and an abiding blessing.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Rodolphe Petter

THE FIRST AND THE LAST

In nineteen hundred forty-four there were seven accessions to the church at Busby, Montana. These seven were Indians, and a white man from Billings was won for Christ. I cannot tell you in detail about all of these, so I have decided to tell you about the last. You are interested in individuals and not in numbers, and I would like to share with you the joy of knowing these two.

A boy of fourteen, Theodore Yellowrobe, was ill with pulmonary tuberculosis, and also tuberculosis of a hip joint. This made it impossible to walk and he was bedfast. Since he could read quite well we brought him Christian literature and read to him whenever we called on him. Much time was taken to make the way of salvation plain to him. He accepted Christ as his Savior and found much joy in Him. Together we sang many songs, both in English and Cheyenne. He asked to be baptized, which rite was administered to him on February 27, on his sickbed. He was very happy in the Lord; his face beamed with real joy. His lovely big brown eyes and beautiful countenance plainly showed his feeling although he didn't say much. In April we had a Communion service for the family in the home. He joined in the singing. He realized that Christ had died for him too and that he was saved.

In May he was out in the tent when the weather was warmer, and enjoyed the sunshine. One day as we were returning from Lame Deer we stopped in again to see him. After reading to him from the Word of God we sang several songs. One was, "O that will be glory." The next time we came, which was in a few days, he was lying on his blankets in the tent, in a state of coma, suffering from terrible spasms. Within twenty-four hours the Lord had taken him home. He was well prepared to go, and his suffering was ended.

Ever since we came to Montana in 1918 we had a neighbor to the south of us, who was the postmaster at Kirby, about eighteen miles from Busby. We were always on friendly terms but could make no impression on him with the Gospel; it seemed he couldn't be reached. Four years ago his health failed; he sold his ranch and store, and went to live in Billings. We did not see him during this time. In October we were in Billings a few days for business, and going through the clinic for check-ups. We thought we were through one afternoon and were ready to leave the city after the last examination. But my doctor said, "X-Ray Therapy" in the morning at ten o'clock. That meant we had a free evening in the city. What would we do? We were so disappointed we couldn't go home.

We agreed we would call on our friend, Mr. Charles R. Foley, with the main purpose of bringing him to Christ. In his beautiful city home he was in bed, not able to get up, but not suffering much. When asked if he had ever accepted Christ as his Savior he said he did not, but that he believed in God and that Jesus was His Son. He had never told us before that his mother was a Mennonite and that he came from Pennsylvania. Her name was Shrock, and she died when Charles was a boy. He knew the ten Commandments, the names of the books of the Bible, and many scripture passages. He told us of how he wept when he read of Christ's death and crucifixion in his first Bible. Now he had no Bible at all, but had a fine library and read many papers and books. When asked if he ever prayed he answered "I have never prayed." He was ready to be taught how to pray and pray fervently. He signed a card that he accepted Christ and gave his choice of the church he wished to join.

The next morning we wished to call on him again and decided to bring a gift, what should it be? Flowers? Something special to eat? A book? We decided on a Bible, the best we could buy, and it was a Scofield Reference Bible, a gift copy. This pleased him very much, he read in it for an hour every day, he showed it to his friends who called and with it he could testify for Christ.

On January 10 he was with the Lord; a heart condition proved fatal. So the first and the last are with the Lord.—Mrs. Alfred Habegger.

LANGUAGE STUDY

For almost ten months now it has been our privilege to study the Cheyenne language. In these short months we have felt the vital need of being able to speak to these people in their own language. It is true that many of them speak some English. But their meager vocabularies, which are sufficient for simple conversation, are not enough when one tries to meet the need of their souls.

Of course, it is possible to use interpreters, but this method has its difficulties and misunderstandings. After our first experience with an Indian interpreter we discovered that every time we had used the word "God" he had translated it by an expression that meant "the white man above." What he did with the rest of the message we do not know because we knew so little Cheyenne then. It made us long to be able to speak for ourselves in this language.

An early explorer who spent twenty years among the Indians reported that Indian languages had "extremely limited vocabularies" and "no words to express moral ideas." We have discovered how mistaken this man was in our daily work with Rev. Rodolphe Petter's 1,126 page English-Cheyenne Dictionary and his translation of the New Testament into the Cheyenne. Even since the publication of the Dictionary in 1915, Rev. Petter has recorded many new expressions.

Cheyenne expressions are made up by combining a word root with other word parts which explain more about it. For example, na-mese means "I eat" while na-vessemesematano-tovo would mean "I want to eat with him" (Literally I with-eat-want to-him). Because the words are built in this way it is possible to create new words to cover ideas for which no word previously existed. This Rev. Petter has done in the translation of the New Testament. This type of word building sometimes results in long expressions and frequently causes us to think hard before we can say even simple things correctly.

Cheyenne words often describe the objects they name. This characteristic has allowed the Cheyennes to name many objects which were new to them. For example a telephone is "the telling metal," a typewriter is "the knocking writer" and a storage battery is "the thunder fire."

At times our attempts to read and speak the Cheyenne are amusing—at least for the Indians. Some of the young men almost doubled up with laughter the first time they heard us try to read Cheyenne. We hope, however, that the day will come when we can give them more than amusement, the Word of God in their own tongue.

Not many weeks ago a baby died in a poor little cabin about ten miles from Busby. Since Rev. and Mrs. Habegger were away helping at Birney that weekend, we conducted the funeral service for the child. As we stood in dark interior of that cabin we knew that those who were gathered there were not Christians. Here was a real opportunity to reach needy hearts with the message of the Saviour, but we knew too little Cheyenne. The best we could do was to sing a few songs and read a little from the Scriptures in our stumbling, faltering Cheyenne, and then in the simplest English try to point them to the only One who can take the sting out of death.

We trust that God will enable us to learn and use the Cheyenne language for His glory and for the advancement of His Kingdom among these people.

FROM A CHRISTMAS LETTER TO FRIENDS By Mrs. Valdo Petter, Ashland, Montana

"My two little Indian girls are still with me. They get along quite well together. The one, Darlene Littewhitman, two years old last September could be had for adoption. I wish there were some one who would feel led of the Lord to take this little Miss and adopt her and give her a good home. How much better chance she would have away from the reservation than being raised on it.

Just yesterday Miss Black, the field nurse, called me and asked me if I would take a boy three years old into our home. His mother had had T. B. about nine years ago. She has only one lung, but she was well. Just recently she caught cold and was afraid that the T.B. might start again. So she wants to go to the Sioux Sanatorium in Rapid City, South Dakota, to have a real good check up. She did not have a good place to put her boy. The father is in the army. I said I would take him and see if he got along all right with the two girls. Likely the mother will be gone only a week or two, unless the T.B. does show up. Sometimes I wish that in the beginning of my work here I had been able to take Indian children and give them a good home and Christian training. I mean unfortunate children. I think of the good work Miss Schirmer did in raising Daniel who is now in full time service . . . Do continue to remember this work.

REPORT BY MISSIONARY RODOLPHE PETTER

"Grace and peace to you be multiplied!" Another year of mission work here in Lame Deer sped by as on wings. Tho conscious of physical limitations for I shall soon begin my eightieth year of pilgrimage on earth, I am mindful that God's love and grace sustain me in a wonderful way.

In our physical bodies God has provided double parts. When the one becomes somewhat disabled or less efficient, the other is there to fill the need. In my case, He provided, so the mission service here needed not to suffer. Thus Mrs. Petter shouldered mission duties which I could no longer actively perform. Her strength is still unimpaired and she has command of the Cheyenne language. We also have Frank Littlewolf, as native minister, having been ordained two years ago. He conducts our regular Sunday morning services, and also visits Indian homes.

Thru his personal contacts with his heathen tribesmen, he finds out their inner attitude towards Christianity better than a white missionary. He finds most of them friendly to his ministrations, and listen well when he reads the word and speaks to them, but they have ever ready excuses for not coming on Sunday to our church services.

This keeping aloof from the church is something we did not have to contend with in former years. . . They came eager to listen to what God had to say in His Book. . . During the past eight to ten years the attitude of the entire tribe has changed very much. . . We attribute this change largely to continued pressure brought on them from the side of authorities in control of Indian affairs, "to keep the inheritance of the fathers." they are definitely encouraged to revive all their heathen ceremonies.

This is of course "water on the mill" of the entire heathen element who naturally despise the civilization and religion of the white man. . . One government official here, who retired only recently, said frankly before he left, "This advice to the Cheyennes to hold on to the 'inheritance of their fathers' has definitely strengthened them in their superstitions and their heathen philosophy of life, and naturally makes them shun hearing better things. I know it is the main reason for their indifference to Christianity. . ." This official is an able man, and has had a long experience in working among Indians, so that he is able to compare the past and the present. . .

Then the war has greatly influenced our Cheyennes. The money allowances which not a few "dependents" now draw regularly, then the high wages that are paid to such who are attracted to earning them, together with the unbridled material appetites abetted by the old heathenism, also the new peyote cult . . . all act as tentacles of the Evil one to choke all higher aspirations. These hold the Indians from Life and Light in Christ and lead them to perverted forms of worship. . . Recently they even began their gambling games with prayer. Such praying is full of continuous repetitions in asking material benefits only. . . Thus they want God to hear them, but they do not trouble themselves to hear Him.

The Christian Indians are constrained to live daily in such an atmosphere and need much grace, strength and guidance from God to overcome the downward pull. The weaker ones are over-powered and become indifferent. Others are intimidated and fail to "show their colors." They find it easier to swim with the current than against it. . . All have to hear constantly such reproaches as this, "Are you not Indian? Live like one. Be not ashamed of your people. Hold to the inheritance of our fathers."

However that "inheritance" does not wholly satisfy even those who hold tenaciously to it and even praise it. That never brought enduring happiness to their hearts, nor prosperity to their homes and their tribe. They cannot hide a deep undercurrent of misery. It manifests itself in all kinds of troubles, wants, sicknesses, sorrows, and deaths. Then their inner soul pines for something their "Indian inheritance" has never offered them. Only the proclamation of the gospel has brought help near to their ears and their minds. Almost unconsciously they long for it, for directly or indirectly all have heard the call of Jesus, "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest."

Their oft-repeated requests for Christian prayers for their sick and dying, also for the young men who have been called to serve in almost every theater of the war, becomes as it were pressed out of their hearts because of deep grief and anxiety. This shows that the Word of God proclaimed among them has influenced the entire tribe. God only knows how many have been affected by it . . .

Years ago a young Cheyenne girl became a Christian and was baptized in our church. Alas, she drifted into very evil ways. She seemed even to glory in it, and was thoroughly embittered against the church and its message . . . Even the heathen pointed her out as a bad woman, tho otherwise attractive and intelligent. Sickness overtook her . . . She became a prey to tuberculosis and was sent to a distant sanitarium. Failing to gain as she had hoped and becoming intensely homesick for her people, she asked her old mother to come and get her . . .

But Anna was beyond hope. . . After being cared for in the camp she was brought here to the government hospital. Repeatedly she called for us to come and minister to her . . . Each time a smile of welcome greeted us. We sensed the cry of her heart like the cry of the prodigal son, "Father, I have sinned against Thee and against Heaven." We read to her. We prayed with her and for her. Her Testament was always found tucked away under her pillow . . .

Not long ago God called her. One of our Indian Christian women who works during the night at the hospital said, "Anna had a beautiful death. She died praying . . . Visions of heaven and of a dear Christian sister who preceded her, filled her last moments with glory . . ." At her funeral here in our Lame Deer chapel, after Mrs. Petter had read fitting Bible portions, this Indian woman spoke to the assembled congregation telling them how Anna had repented and had died in peace, rejoicing to go to Heaven.

The Home-going of this one soul forgiven and redeemed is a mighty reason to praise and thank God at the end of one year of service and the beginning of another, that far outbalances the apathy and indifference towards the Salvation in Christ which seemed so to dominate the minds and hearts of our Indians.

Die Sach ist Dein, Herr Jesu Christ,
Die Sach' an der wir stehen,
Und weil es Deine Sache ist
Kann sie nicht untergeh'n.

In this firm assurance, we commit the future of this mission work upon Him, asking Him to richly bless our Mission Board, our mission churches, our mission friends, our co-workers in our common efforts for Christ's kingdom.

With greetings in His name,

Rodolphe Petter

WE LIVE IN TWO WORLDS

Young Indians are growing up in two worlds. There are many profound adjustments to be made in the difficult process of assimilating an old and a new culture. A group of young Indian girls said, "What we want more than anything else in the world is not to be different. We don't want to be set apart. We want to be just people." I believe that is a common feeling. Any feeling of separateness, strangeness, or aloofness between Indians and non-Indians should be broken down. Normal, natural contacts in religious meetings, social gatherings, schools, and athletic contests is especially desirable.

Pressures from all sides are exerted on Indian youth. There is the deeply implanted Indian ideal of hospitality and generosity. The American economic system teaches the accumulation of goods and property for a rainy day. The former brings greater recognition from his group than money will. Shall he betray those ideals for a new system? A young man is eager, energetic and ambitious. He wants to introduce new methods of agriculture to his group, but according to Indian tradition leadership belongs to the old men. What shall he do? Marriage tradition may be that the young man must live with the wife's family and help support them. The American way is to take a house and farm for himself and work only for his own family. The wife has been taught parental obedience. Shall he break all family ties?

There is another new world. In the old life, play and recreation were closely tied into the religious and work life of the people. This has disappeared. The best part of white society live apart from the Indian and often think of them with pity and contempt or are entirely indifferent and unconcerned. Indians are thus forced to accept the most destructive element of our society. And these are often out to exploit the Indians. Often only the less constructive forms of recreation, such as gambling, drinking and loafing have remained. I believe these are symptoms of conflicts, just as they occur in any human being under like difficulties, and are not signs of racial weakness. It is lack of equal opportunity and not capacity that retards Indian progress.

Indians are almost universally in grievous poverty. They live under enforced dependency. Tribal assets, and his own property, are controlled by other hands. They have little to do with community planning, and often not with the church either. Everything is done for them.

If we are to judge Indians fairly, we must try to understand why they act as they do. Most Indians do not desire, or think it worth the effort, to accumulate money in the bank and own a lot of property. The close family circle, the approval and support of the tribe, the unhurried existence with time for dreaming have a stronger call. Many of the wants of Indians are extremely simple.

In religion, social pressure is also very strong. The old and the new are ever present forces here as well as in all other aspects of life. There is much that is good in the old. A Christian Indian woman, the wife of an ordained minister serving an Indian church said, "There is no use hammering away at the evil of the past if we have nothing better to offer." Jesus, in referring to Judaism, said, "I came not to destroy but to fulfill." Indian leadership will help the Indians to find their place in American life. Christian Indian leadership will lead their people into an adjustment of the two worlds. Through them they will find Christ, their hope and the hope of the world.

ARIZONA

FROM TUBA CITY, ARIZONA

"But I say unto you, love your enemies, bless them that curse you, be good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to shine on the evil and the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust. For if ye love them which love you, what reward have you?" Matt. 5:44-46.

Another year has become history, and I shall try to give you a few things that have taken place here in Moen Copi the past year of 1944.

With the above scripture verses taken from the word of God, I now wish to say, that such a Christian life is possible only by the grace of Jesus Christ who gave those words to his disciples of old. We, the native Christian workers, have such experience of persecution from our own people, but we have also the experience of God's grace to learn to love those who had been our persecutors. And only with the love of God in our hearts are we winning men and women and children to our church services among the Hopi People, who are considered to be the hardest of all American Indians to be won over to the side of the Lord Jesus Christ.

During this past year here in Moen Copi we had a large Sunday School of both adults and little children. The children outnumbered their parents, of course.

It has been a problem in the past year, as to how and with what method to get men interested to attend the church meetings. This is hard because the men among the Hopi Indians have plenty work to do in summer time, and come home late from the fields and orchards, and from sheep herding and cattle round up, etc. Hopi people are hard working people. And when winter comes, there are religious ceremonies and night and day dances to keep up. These people have their own social entertainments and religious ceremonies, besides their own traditional teachings. All these things keep their minds from being interested in the gospel of the Lord. They are so set in their own ways, that it keeps us studying, what we can do to get them interested to come to our meetings. After much prayer the Lord laid it on my heart to send for a large Bible chart, which I could hang anywhere to show the people, especially the older class of men. The Bible chart came, and I hung it in the church, and announced it for the people to come and see it, and I would explain what the teaching of it is. The people came, some of them for the first time came inside of the church. After our song and music and prayer, I began to explain the creation story from Genesis, going through the whole Bible for some weeks, and while we are studying, more people are coming in to see and know. As a result of this Bible class, an elderly man who has never been in the church before, went out to our villages and actually scolded people for not studying the Bible; he invited people to come. A young man who is the son of a policeman, was so deeply interested, that he told me in my visit to his home, that he had been preaching the story of the Bible which he has been studying with us in the church. He said, every time he goes to his cattle ranch or to the people in Hotevilla, he preaches to his people what he had been able to see from the Bible. Furthermore, these people told me, that the Bible agrees with the Hopi traditional stories, and one old man said to me in one of my visits to his place, that what I explain from the Bible is reasonable to believe. If the government ever interfered with our children going to church, you let us know, and we will take care of that. That was old man Honshai, one of the council leaders of Moen Copi.

The devil has successfully covered the minds of our Indians so long, and the light of the gospel is just beginning to dawn upon their hearts. We have young men and boys in war service in all parts of the world. And because of this war, there has been no trouble to get mothers to come to church services here, where we pray for the boys in service together. They come for the church, but also attend the dances of their own in our Moencopi village.

These are not yet Christian people, but they are members of our Sunday School classes. Yes, they are concerned, and we must pray for them. I know for sure that they are secret believers in the word of God, but not yet ready to break openly for the Lord. For it requires separation to be a Christian and member of the church in Hopi land. I am sure when you read these lines you will join us in praying and serving these people, who need the gospel to be saved.

GREETINGS IN JESUS NAME FROM HOPILAND!

"O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good; for his mercy endureth forever." Ps. 136:1. We give thanks unto the Lord for his working among these people, though perhaps not always in the way we had hoped or expected, but in His wisdom and counsel, far more wonderfully so that His name might be glorified.

Jennie was probably in her sixties. She had a very bad case of tuberculosis, a disease so prevalent among these Indians, but she knew the Lord. She had been saved only a little over two years ago, when at the funeral of a young Christian lad, who had accidentally been shot by her son. At the same time her husband, Willie, took a stand with her. Sometime later she was taken to a sanatorium away from the reservation and her home, but she preferred not to stay but return home, where she could hear the word of God proclaimed to her. As the word was read to her, she would ask the meaning of words, and sometimes it was no easy task to explain in words simple enough for her to understand. In her sickness she was happy that she knew the Lord.

Just one year ago her husband passed away after a few months illness. In her weakened condition she bore it bravely as his body was laid to rest. She did not know much of the truth revealed in the Bible, but she did want to do that which was right. Even when her ideas about some practical thing had been wrong and leaning toward the old heathen life, she willingly changed and carried out what she had been taught as God's word. He grew weaker, and soon became apparent that the end was near. The last time we read to her while she was yet conscious, she asked her daughter who held before her the Hopi translation, so she could follow, though she was already too weak to do so. "Let not your heart be troubled, ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions . . ." A few days later her son came to our home, asking us to come over, saying that his mother was near the end. He is not a Christian and apparently not interested but he remarked as we went together, "She told us, she was not afraid to go." What a testimony in her closing days, when there is such hesitation by the unsaved Hopi to even think of death and what comes after it. A soul has gone from our midst! What comfort to know she is with Christ. Like Lazarus of Luke 16 Jennie is freed from her suffering and pain, which she knew here upon earth, and now knows by experience that "To be with Christ is far better." In her "Father's house" where there are "many mansions."

Her earnest desire was that her children might all come to the Lord. Several are believers; a number are not. Your prayers for them will avail, for God has promised, "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." They, as many others of her people today, stand at the cross roads. They see that the old life of ceremonialism, dances, tradition, and superstition is leading them nowhere. Leaders are openly advising to dispense with certain dances held at this season. They are seeking for reality. The present strain and stress brought on by reports of missing and wounded boys is too much for any one to bear alone. The Lord alone can give grace for such experience. The battle will be fierce in many a heart, but pray, that they might see the Lord as the only one who can meet their every need, both here for this life and the life to come.

THE LIFE OF NANNIE SEKAYESNEM

Nannie Sekayesnem comes from Hotevilla, a village of about five hundred people from which leaders and their followers have set their minds and wills to take no other religion nor adopt any of the white man's ways or to accept any thing from the white man, for by doing so, it will disturb their peace. For it is only the Hopi's own tradition that they are to fellow, which would bring peace to the tribe. The former Chief and his follower would not accept nor sign any treaty of any kind, and was against the Government in building schools, nor did they believe in any education, but rather live as their forefathers had lived. The Government did build the Day School at Hotevilla in spite of the Chief's objection, the children were forced to go to school, and the Chief was sent to the San Francisco penitentiary, and still he would not accept any treaties nor accept anything from the Government.

It was from amongst these people, Nannie lived, who comes from a very poor family, as she has often related her story of earlier days, that in her younger days, to be poor, meant not to have enough food for the whole year round. She was also one of the followers, grounded in the old traditions, which meant that if they live up to their old tradition, they would be saved. They must not be influenced by the Missionaries and the Government, also were forbidden to accept any materials from either.

Then later in her life, she had trouble with her eyes, both of her eyes got infected, suffered days and nights, had medicine men come to purify her from evil spirits and drive them out, for it was the evil spirits that was causing her to suffer. When the magicians showed no signs of healing and restoring her sight, her own husband put both wet, dry compresses on, by heating a flat stone, and so doing this, burned out both her eyes.

With no eye sight, this brought her to a miserable condition, both Spiritual and physical darkness. Then some thing took place. Nannie accepted the Lord Jesus Christ as her personal Savior, and by doing so, she knew what it would mean, persecution, and giving up her old belief, but she found the true Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ.

As a babe, so she began in the spiritual life, was fed on milk from the word of God. As years went by, little by little she grew, but her weakness was that she was very sensitive and easily offended, when Missionaries didn't give her any thing, always complaining, and never satisfied. She would not speak to us for many days, and when we came to see her, she would go out through the back door. We prayed that the Lord would bring tribulation. She did have many trials and testings; then one day we read to her the nineteenth chapter of John, prayed with her when she broke down, confessed and asked for forgiveness for the way she had been treating her Lord and us.

Since then she began to grow stronger spiritually day by day, this was three years ago, from there on until her home going, she has been praising the Lord for the trials, afflictions and testings that she had gone through in order that she might see just where she stood. She has been happy ever since, and oh, the joy that she has spent with the Lord. She thanked us for being stern and frank, also for not patting her on the back, and saying, "you have been a real true friend to me, I love you both. I remember how I used to weep over every little thing, no friends, helpless, when there was no water in the tub for cooking and drinking, I'd cry. Now I leave all things unto the Lord. No friends, blind, and handicapped, but still I am rejoicing in the Lord, trusting Him for guidance, in all my cooking, house work, and sewing my quilts, and testifying where I can for my Lord. There is nothing to fear." Nannie has also learned to read the braille, she reads the Gospel of John to the English-speaking people. Nannie has not been any too well the past year, her stomach seemed to upset her frequently, also she was not young, perhaps in her seventies or near the eighties.

It was on September the nineteenth, 1944, on Sunday morning that we found Nannie sick in bed. She too, didn't think it was serious; she thought she would be better in a few more days, but she grew worse, so her husband moved her into a junk room, a filthy place. We called on the doctor, and he said she has her husband and two strong sons in the home to help take care of her, for she was already too sick to be taken to the hospital which is forty-five miles from Hotevilla. So we cleaned the place up and tried to make things as comfortable as we could. Twice we asked the Dr. if it would be alright to move Nannie to the Mission where she would be at least in a better place, but the answer was, that she is alright in her home.

Then on September the 20th, in the evening her husband and the two sons who were there, began to disown Nannie as their mother because she is a Christian, the husband said she belonged to us, and "you take her to the Mission and let her die there, for I don't want her to die in our home, for if she dies here, the people will never enter our home again." Yes, afraid of death. He talked over three hours of her life, saying how helpless and useless her life had been to the family. Yet, she did all the cooking, cleaning and washing the best way she knew how, and sewed quilts. Yes, a true child of God receives no reward on earth, but our reward comes from above which is far better. Her husband is a medicine man.

So at 3 o'clock that morning we moved Nannie to the Mission, as her husband told us that if she should die in his house, that he would bury her in the Hopi way, (that is the heathen way) so we just had to take her there. On September 22 at 10:45 p.m. Nannie Sekayesnem went to be with the Lord.

Yes, we miss her, and she was very faithful in helping us with the street services. There were very few times that she missed the street service and when she did miss the service it was on account of illness.

We need your prayers, for our people are still in darkness.

Yours in the Lord's Service

THE SECRETARY OF THE BOARD OF FOREIGN MISSIONS

As the work of Foreign Missions of our General Conference takes on larger proportions, it is self-evident that the responsibilities and duties of the members of the Board of Foreign Missions increase.

This is true especially of the board's secretary, and have an idea of the great volume of work brother Richert has done during these years. His duties have constantly increased, until today he must spend over half of his time in the interest of the Foreign Mission cause of our General Conference.

He was born in Gnadenheim, South Russia, on August 11, 1871, and came to this country with his parents in 1874. The family settled north of Newton, Kansas, in the Goessel community. Here he attended the church and district schools. From 1891-93 he was a student at the Halstead Seminary and from 1895-97 at Bethel College, where he graduated from the "Evangelist Course."

On August 11, 1900, he was married to Eva Schmidt and they became the parents of two daughters and three sons. For many years brother Richert was engaged in the teaching profession. He first held positions in district and church schools and then taught for fourteen years in the academy at Bethel College.

In 1896 he was elected as an evangelist to serve in the Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church at Goessel, Kansas, and after serving for two years he was ordained as a minister of this Church. When the Tabor Mennonite Church was organized in 1898 he became pastor of this congregation. In 1910 he was ordained as its elder and is still serving in this capacity.

But his activities were not confined to one congregation. Many important positions were entrusted to him in the course of years in the Western District Conference, in the General Conference and in other Mennonite organizations. When the president of the Board of Foreign Missions, Rev. C. H. Wedel was called to his reward in 1910, Rev. P. H. Richert was appointed to fill the vacancy in the board, and at the 1911 session of the General Conference he was elected as member of this board and was chosen as its secretary, continuing in that office to the present time. Thus he has been secretary of our Board of Foreign Missions for forty-three and a half years.

Only those who can "look behind the scenes"

Dr. P. H. Richert

To give the reader an idea of some of his secretarial activities we enumerate some of the work for which he is responsible. He supplies the material for the weekly mission page of The Mennonite and the Christlicher Bundesbote, and furnishes all the foreign mission material for the "Mission Numbers" of these church papers. True it is that most of this material is in the form of reports and experiences written by missionaries, but the secretary must request this material or select it from what is at hand. Most of it too he translates for the German church paper.

All the reports and most of the letters from our missionaries and much correspondence from other sources are typed by our secretary in sufficient quantities, so he can furnish each member of the board and the Executive Committee of the Women's Missionary Association with a copy. This in itself is a voluminous piece of work. Then he carries on the official correspondence of the board with all our missionaries. Triennially he writes the report of the Board of Foreign Missions to be presented to the session of the General Conference. Much painstaking thinking, planning and collecting of material is involved, and the typing of the report in itself is quite a task. Keeping record of the minutes of the annual meetings of the board and of the meetings of its executive committee, which are held on the average of about twice a month, answering requests for information of various kinds, taking care of the correspondence connected with the special support projects, contacting people in personal interview—these and many other activities occupy much of his time and require much driving.

The members of the Board of Foreign Missions thank God for their faithful secretary and commend him unto the intercession of the saints. Pray and all who are connected with the work of missions, that the Lord might guide and direct through His Spirit and that many souls might be redeemed through the blood of Jesus Christ.

—P. P. Wedel

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Earl Salzman, Upland, California

APRIL 8—"Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I unto thee." Acts 3:6. Peter might have prolonged the list; his education was nothing to brag about; his social position was very ordinary; his personal appearance was not very attractive. He was just a common fisherman. This world doesn't care much what we don't have and can't do and don't believe. Had Peter that day lived in the negative mood, nothing would have happened but failure. But when he stood ready to use what he had, a lame man was placed on his feet and he began to walk and leap and praise God.

This lame man serves as a type of present day human need. When we are ready to use the gifts God has given us for his honor and glory the results will be just as marvelous.

APRIL 9—"There is a lad here with five barley loaves and two fishes; but what are they among so many?" John 6:9. What value are five loaves and two fishes in feeding a multitude of five thousand? It is only a drop in the bucket. It seems impossible to do anything. Why give the problem any serious consideration? It is foolish to think about it. But when the lad placed his small food supply in the Master's hand, the large multitude was fed. Our problems today are so gigantic in extent and so complex in detail, that the individual is beaten down to a feeling of insignificance. What can I do, he asks, where do I fit in? I feel so helpless. Remember the lad with his modest resources. He is a good example.

APRIL 10—"Behold there ariseth a little cloud out of the sea like a man's hand." I Kings 18:44. A cloud about the size of a man's hand isn't much of a cloud. About like a pint cup of water for a dry and thirsty land. But to the prophet it was at least a cloud. The weather bureaus of that day (had there been any) no doubt would have issued their pessimistic report, "continued hot and dry." However, for the prophet this cloud meant victory. He was going by faith and not by sight. He endured seeing him who is invisible. "And it came to pass in the meanwhile that the heaven was black with clouds and wind and there was a great rain." I Kings 18:45. It isn't so easy to draw a sharp line between the prose and poetry of this narrative, but the meaning is plain. "The prayers of a righteous man availeth much." How much? The answer is for those who truly pray.

APRIL 11—"Even so the tongue is a little member and boasteth great things. Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth." James 3:5. A little spark starts a great forest fire. One misspoken word brings disaster to a whole community. The bit in the horse's mouth brings the whole body under control. The ship so vast and the storm so fierce, yet the course of the vessel is determined by the use of the rudder. In like manner the one who controls his tongue, controls his whole being, but with the tongue not in control the whole life is imperiled. The use we make of our tongue is a good test of our lives. The gift of speech may prove a deadly peril unless the power of Christ controls the tongue.

APRIL 12—"Choose you this day whom ye serve." Joshua 24:15. Life is made up of choices. We grow by the choices we make. This means we must be selective. Choices must be made between the good and the bad. To live the good life we must choose the good. Choices frequently made become habitual. This means they are becoming fixed in our life. Crease your hat a certain way the first few times you wear it, and the crease will be difficult to change. Somewhere in Missouri at a certain cross road, when the spring thaw makes traveling almost impossible a sign is placed which reads, "Take care which rut you choose, you will be in it for the next twenty miles." In like manner, take care of your choices, they determine your destiny.

APRIL 13—"If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." This sounds almost too good to be true. Of course there is a condition to be met. If ye abide in me is a very important matter. Abiding is something close, intimate, vital. It means much more than being attached. During childhood it was my privilege, along with the other members of the family, to receive an orange for Christmas. To be sure, I enjoyed the orange that had been attached to a Christmas tree. Now it is my privilege to eat oranges, thoroughly ripened on an orange tree. I am ready to say there is a vast difference between eating oranges attached to a Christmas tree and eating oranges abiding on an orange tree. To abide in Christ is to let him fill us with his life. We will ask for what he has to give.

APRIL 14—"Thy word have I hid in my heart that I may not sin against thee." Psalm 119:11. The Scripture was to the psalmist a safe guard against sin, like a vaccination that get into the blood stream and sets up equipment against contagion. Many large buildings are equipped with automatic water devices to put out the fire. Just below the ceiling is suspended a water pipe having at certain intervals, holes in which are placed metal caps that easily melt. When a fire breaks out and raises the temperature to a certain degree these caps melt, the water is automatically turned on thus flooding out the fire. The Scripture was like that to the psalmist. As soon as the fires of temptation were burning in his soul, automatically there came to his mind some word of God and flooded out the temptation.

General Conference

The Conference Secretary, Rev. Phil, A. Wedel, Goessel, Kansas, kindly urges all churches that have not sent in the three blanks he sent them last year to do so at once. They were: the three year (1941-44) and the one year (1943) statistics, and the delegate list of your church. In case blanks should be mislaid, please write Brother Wedel a postcard, and he will be glad to send others, but please do not delay. Sould there be changes in the delegate lists already sent in, please send them in at once so lists may be printed and handed out at the beginning of the session. Address all to Rev. Phil A. Wedel, Goessel, Kansas.

To The Deacons of all Conference Churches

Some time ago I addressed a letter to all pastors of our conference churches, calling attention to the resolution of conference, requesting that churches contribute ten cents per member per year toward a "Ministers' Aid Fund."

It has been suggested by a layman, that it would be better to address pertinent communications to the church deacons rather than to the pastor, because in a way it involves the pastor. So since I do not have addresses of the deacons, I am writing this to them in our church papers.

Will you kindly present this matter to your churches, and have an offering taken before the General Conference meets, and send the contribution in to "General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas," and mark it "For Ministers' Aid Fund"?

Individuals and some churches have made nice contributions. Let us remember that as all laborers, a spiritual laborer also as Jesus says, Luke 10:7, "is worthy of his hire, or meat".—C. E. Krehbiel, Pres.

Seventeen Churches Adopt Bulletin Service

Seventeen churches have adopted the bulletin service recently begun by the Secretarial Bureau, North Newton, Kansas. These churches are: West Zion, Moundridge, Kansas; First Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota; Bergfeder Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota; First Church, Nappanee, Indiana; Fredonia Church, Fredonia, Kansas; Shafter Church, Shafter, California; Deer Creek Church, Deer Creek, Oklahoma; Grace Church, Enid, Oklahoma; Fairfield Church, Fairfield, Pa.; First Church, Halstead, Kansas; First Church, Hillsboro, Kansas; First Church, Inman, Kansas; First Church, Beatrice, Nebraska; Hebron Church, Buhler, Kansas; Buhler Church, Buhler, Kansas; First Church, Burns, Kansas, Bergthal Church, Corn, Oklahoma.

Will You Help?

No the war is not over yet—let us hope anl pray the end may come soon. We have supported our Conference C.P.S. program so far. Shall we now fall short? The Conference Peace Committee comes to you once more and asks for a hearty support of the program. Due to heavy draft calls the number of men in camps has increased. Can we also increase our contributions? For a month or two we have fallen short.—The Peace Committee

Farewell Message from Wilhelmina Kuyf

"This week I spent one day in Washington and two in New York, but things are finally in order, and I hope to sail today for Lisbon. This is the first step on my journey to the Orient. There will certainly be more time on shipboard for writing than there has been during this time of preparation, and I shall try to keep our Mennonite readers informed."

"By the way, it just came to me that on the same ship will be Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Eck, who were at the Turpin, Oklahoma, church when I was itinerating. They are going out under the Sudan Interior Mission. Also we hope to have as fellow passengers, Rev. and Mrs. Ed. Weaver and their three children, enroute to the Old Mennonite Mission field in India. Mrs. Weaver is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. C. Lehman, which already makes me appreciate her."

"I'm counting on the prayers of our folks as the new way opens out before me.

Very Sincerely,
Wilhelmina Kuyf

Vacation Bible School Curriculum Material

What is listed below is the curriculum material and teaching aids that the Education Committee of the Western District Conference is recommending for vacation Bible schools this year. It is published by the Mennonite Publishing House of Scottsdale, Pennsylvania. It is truly biblical in every sense and the best for our use at present. In future years we may be able to improve on it, but for now we heartily recommend it. It is the material on which our Vacation Bible School Workshop on March 17 was based.

The list follows by grades and the prices are attached. The Bethel College Book Store in North Newton still has a supply of the material left over from Work-shop days. It can also be obtained at the Mennonite Publication Office in Newton.

THE WORLD OVER

By Cornelius Krahn

RUSSIA: Occasionally letters from Russia reach this continent. From a recent letter we learn something of the fate of the Mennonites of the Ukraine. When the Germans invaded the Ukraine the writer and her family were taken thousands of miles from home into Siberia. Here she was employed in connection with a canning factory. This is the fate of many of the Mennonites of Russia.

Reports, however, have reached us that not all were evacuated before the German army moved in. Many of those remaining were later taken into Germany by the retreating army. We can imagine that some of them are again under Russian rule. How many homes, family ties, and lives must have been broken up through all this struggle!

The fighting around Chortitza, the oldest Mennonite colony in Russia, must have been especially heavy, according to an article in the bulletin Voks which was printed in Moscow in 1944.

ALONG THE RHINE: The territory west of the Rhine from Alsace-Lorraine to Holland is now in the hands of the Allies. A large number of Mennonite Churches are located here. Most of these Mennonites were of Swiss background and settled here during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Many of those in Alsace-Lorraine were Amish, but have by now forgotten their Amish traditions and adopted the French language and culture. The Palatinate (Pfalz) has sizable congregations in the city of Kaiserslautern, at the Weierhof, Monsheim, etc.

Along the Lower Rhine the largest Mennonite Church is to be found in Crefeld. It was from here that the first Mennonites came to this country and founded Germantown.

SUFFERING IN THE NETHERLANDS: Much of the low countries has been flooded. The island of Walcheren where a number of Mennonite Churches are located has suffered probably most severely. The Mennonite Church in Rotterdam was destroyed when Holland was first invaded. According to reports Amsterdam has no electricity or gas. The food rations are getting smaller and smaller. A single boiled potato is purchased on the black market for forty cents.

MUTUAL AID IN MANITOBA: The Mennonites of Canada have quite a number of Credit Unions. The first and largest is the Altona Credit Union. Since its founding it has loaned out more than one hundred thousand dollars. There are approximately ten more Mennonite credit unions in Manitoba.

RELIEF

Farewell Service for Four Relief Workers

Sunday evening, March 18, a farewell service was held at Akron Headquarters for four departing relief workers. Titus Lehman, R.N., and Wilhelmina Kuyf are both due to sail for India, Brother Lehman by way of the Pacific and Sister Kuyf by the Atlantic route. Halifax is the departure point for Elma Esau, who is leaving for relief work in England. Harry Martens will take a plane from Miami, for Puerto Rico, the latter part of this month, but will leave Headquarters, March 22, to attend conferences at the Gulfport, Mississippi, and Mulberry, Florida, units while enroute.

Mennonite Relief Unit in Egypt Increases

A cable arrived at Akron Headquarters, March 17, announcing that Arthur Jahnke had arrived in Cairo. Through UNRRA channels, Headquarters was notified that both Helen Moser, R.N., and Arthur Jahnke were in Cairo being assigned to refugee camp duties, although no direct cable confirmation has been received regarding Sister Moser's arrival.

Seeing Aftermaths of India's famine

J. Harold Sherk, now director of Mennonite relief activity in India, and his fellow relief workers —Clayton Beyler, Clarence Burkholder, R. C. Kauffman—have had several weeks to view the vast needs of India's populace around Calcutta and surrounding areas. Inspecting villages that have been recipients of Mennonite relief, the brethren report that cholera has appeared in one village, and a smallpox epidemic in another. Brother Sherk summarizes the situation as follows, in a letter written February 6:

"We are finding there is no lack of work to do here. Due to changing conditions here it has been necessary for us to completely re-organize our work since my arrival. The needs now are not so much famine as its aftermath, but they are tremendous. Your MCC unit in India is agreed that we can use all the workers and all the money that MCC can send us for a long time to come."

Directing Children's Play Activity in Convalescent Camp

Bertha Fast, three weeks ago entered her relief assignment at the Tolumbat camp for convalescing refugee children. The following excerpts are taken from her letter of March 10:

"I am considered a welfare officer in the welfare division here at Tolumbat. I am working under an English lady, who is experienced and capable in her field. She has allocated to me most of the work that we are allowed to do with the children. I go to the hospital every morning to visit the children and provide them with activities. Their need and desire for some form of recreation is evidenced by the cries of "Zduavo, Sestro, Sestro!" that greet me as I enter the ward with my arms full of books and slates and my basket full of stuffed cats and dolls, balls, and crayons. Then, also we have established a play room in a tent which is used as a waiting room for a baby bathing center. Two or three afternoons a week I also have a play and activity room for the Well-Baby Clinic waiting room. Much of my other time is spent in improvising toys out of practically nothing. I make stuffed cats and dolls out of antilouse belts, bean bags using small sea shells, and construct baby rattles out of milk tins."

Changes in Law or C. O.'s Proposed

Francis Biddle, U. S. Attorney General, in his annual report to Congress, among other things, recommended new legislation to overcome difficulties in dealing with conscientious objectors. He suggested that a five-man civilian board be established to classify C.O.'s and that the various types: "artful lodgers," "Jehovah Witnesses," "absolutists," and others be distinguished, and then assigned to "suitable and useful work." Mr. Biddle also recommended that certain types of war objectors be permitted to volunteer for overseas relief, and that money paid to the Government by private employers of C.O.'s be used as allotments to dependents.

Peacetime Conscription Institutes

Three or four C.P.S. institutes on the subject of peacetime conscription have now been held. Following the Powellsville, Maryland, conference, the second institute was held March 10 and 11, at Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas. The sessions were supported with interest and attendance on the part of C.P.S. men, visitors from the community, and Bethel College. The third conference was held March 18 and 19, at the Medaryville, Indiana, camp with similar interest. A fourth institute will be held at the Camino, California, camp in April in connection with the Side-Camp Leaders Training School.

Special Projects Notes

Authorization has been granted to expand two MCC-CPS units in Ohio. The Hawthornden State Hospital, Macedonia, will receive a ten-man increase, and the State Hospital, Lima, a five-man increase.

Recent word has come from Selective Service that due to the protest of the American Legion, the C.P.S. unit in Addison County, Vermont, will not be authorized.

JOTTINGS

—Mennonite Bible Academy, North Newton: March 23, a group of students, representing the Hi-Y of Goessel High School, were the guests of the Academy and gave a chapel program. This consisted of quartet and solo numbers, both vocal and instrumental. Mr. Ed. Stucky, the sponsor, accompanied the group.

—First Church of Christian Mennonite, Moundridge, Kansas: Rev. P. P. Wedel, the church elder, suffered a light stroke. He is improving and hopes to be back at work soon. Dr. Fast brought us the message on March 25.—Linda V. Kauman.

—Dr. A. M. Lohrentz arrived in Philadelphia (Fernheim Colony) on March 1 as he had planned to, so reports Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz. The trip was a strenuous one, but Dr. Lohrentz is in good health and getting along nicely. He stopped at the Friesland Colony for a week to get the feel of the situation. He saw some patients there. He also visited the Hutterhof for a day. This is about thirty miles away.

—Bulletin, Second Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: "Saturday evening . . . there will be a meeting of the baptismal class and those who wish to join the church in the church basement. We are asking that the parents of the members of the class come also as well as the Church Board, the Sunday School Superintendent, and the Young People's C.E. President."

—Rev. William H. Stauffer, Sugarcreek, Ohio, recently attended a discussion program on the "Rural Church and Community in the Post War World," held in the First Community Church, Columbus, Ohio. Dr. Roy Burkhard extended the invitation to Rev. Stauffer.

—The Annual California Mennonite C.E. and S.S. Convention will be held at Los Angeles Church April 27-29.

—Prof. B. Bargaen of Bethel College will speak on the subject of "A Personal Faith for Today," at the annual convention of the Marion County Council of Christian Education, to be held at the City Auditorium at Marion, Sunday afternoon and evening, April 15.

—First Menninite Church, Colfax, Washington: Mr. and Mrs. Hanes, who are going to Columbia, South America spent an evening with us giving their testimonies and presenting a real challenge. A stoker has recently been installed in the church. Since we have no regular janitor this should be a great help to the ones on which this task falls. A S. S. missionary was with us during the C.E. hour, March 8, showing pictures on "The Way of Salvation." The S. S. and C. E. made up an offering of over $165.00 to help in spreading the gospel. . . —Bluffton College: On March 25, the Girl's Gospel Team, with the speakers, Griseld Gehman and Maynard Shelley, seniors from Pennsylvania, had charge of an evening service at the Berne, Indiana, Mennonite Church. , —Walter W. Van Kirk will cover the "United Nation's Conference at San Francisco. His problem will be twofold: "First, to keep the churches and the religious press informed regarding the work of the conference, in such a way as may be appropriate, information regarding the action taken by the churches on the Dumbarton Oaks Proposals and relative issues."

—One of our ministers recommends the book The Comfort of God by Dr. Harold J. Ockenga.

—Missionary Albert Jantzens have two children: Grace Joan, nine years old and Lyman, four years old.

—N.B.C. gave a Television Easter program on March 31.

—The Friedenstal Church, Tampa, Kansas, dedicated its remodeled church building on Easter Sunday. A missionary festival was held in the afternoon.

—The Mennonite Clothing Center, Newton, Kansas, received word from Akron recently that plans are being completed for a shipment of clothing to Egypt. A shipment in the near future to Holland and France is also anticipated. Clothing from the Newton Center must be at Akron some days in advance if it is to be included in the shipment. Frequently the Akron office receives notice only a few days before the shipment must be ready for sailing. Recently the Newton office was asked to ship twenty thousand pounds to Akron. The car was loaded by men of the community, with Ernest Bachman in charge of the loading of these one hundred and seventy-three bales. During the month of February the workers at the Center packed one hundred bales of clothing. Volunteer workers helped make these bales and otherwise prepared them for storage and shipment. Many women have given their help, mended and prepared clothes for shipment. Only clothes in good condition can be sent "In the name of Christ," the clothing workers feel. Societies and individuals from near and distant places help with the work. Three young women, Should Churches Establish and Maintain Hospitals for the Mentally Ill?

During Christ's life on earth He ministered to both the physically and mentally ill. Before He departed this life He commanded His followers to preach and heal in His name. Since that time the church has come to recognize her responsibility to those afflicted with physical illness but it has been slow to sense her mission to those who suffer far worse—the mentally ill.

It requires no complicated reasoning to show that the care of the mentally diseased is as much a concern of the church as the care of physically sick people. From the Bible and from the implications of Christ's life we are obligated to act on this problem.

There was a time when the church or one part of the church did a better job of meeting her responsibility to these neglected and often abused people. In the early history of the development of institutional care for the mentally ill the Quakers took a leading role. True to their historic tradition, they kindled a new spirit of love and kindness toward victims of mental disease. Through the institutions they were able to establish and improve and with their own religiously-motivated service they helped to lessen the cruel, unhealthy, dungeon-like existence of these unfortunate people.

If the Mennonites would undertake to establish and maintain small mental hospitals they would accomplish several important purposes. First of all,

SERIES OF ARTICLES

Here we present the first of a series of articles dealing with the very timely and important question: "Should Churches Establish and Maintain Hospitals for the Mentally Ill?" The articles are reprinted by permission from a symposium issued by the Hospital Section of the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa. The remainder of the series will include articles by:

Loris Habegger, A C.P.S. Unit Leader

Dr. David D. Eitzen, Professor of Pastoral Counseling

Sister Lena Mae Smith, A Head Deaconess

Possibly one or two other articles may be included. We invite reader reaction to these articles. These should not exceed three hundred words.

these hospitals would be an evidence that Mennonites believe in the Christ-inspired spirit of love and helpfulness to all of mankind. They would provide an opportunity for the new interest among young Mennonites in the psychiatric field who are dissatisfied with the operation of state institutions.

Mennonite-operated hospitals would be more sympathetic with and could facilitate with greater ease a plan of psychiatric training for ministerial students and others interested in social service. This would open up for them the whole problem of mental disease and its prevention and give them an insight into the neurotic behavior of people.

A decided advantage of small Mennonite hospitals would be the removal of the corrupting influences of politics from the care of their patients. The waste and injustices committed against patients and citizens of the state would not occur.

The most important difference in church-operated hospitals from state institutions would be the higher calibre of attendant help. From CPS we know that this is unbelievably low. Probably the most important factor in the treatment of mental patients is their ward care, which is handled by attendants. The doctor's time with each patient is very limited. The attendant is with the patient the whole day and he can determine to a great extent the behavior and emotional state of the patient.

It is in this area that state institutions fall so far short and that Mennonite mental hospitals with their consecrated, religiously-motivated employees could do so much. CPS has proved that, and after the war we can expect non-conscripted individuals to choose this area of service for their own.

In the fact of permanent postwar conscription this takes on an added significance, for mental hospitals would probably remain an area of alternate service for CO's, and our Mennonite hospitals would be assured of employees and workers possessing the spirit and patience necessary to care for mental patients.—Paul Goering, CPS Unit 85, State Hospital for Mental Diseases, Howard, Rhode Island.

Program for General Conference Given on Page Twelve

Ministers' Conference of the Western District—March 13 and 14, 1945

The meeting was opened by the chairman, Rev. Walter Gering. Rev. Clyde Dirks then presented the subject "Feed the Flock of God through Preaching the Word."

1. Preaching should be based on divine revelation. (a) The authority of "thus saith the Lord." (b) Should have the approval of God rather than of men.
2. Preaching should be reflected. The Word of God reveals the sin of the hearers, and they should see themselves in preaching as in a mirror.
3. Preaching should be redemptive. The central theme of scriptural preaching is Jesus Christ and Him crucified.
4. Preaching should be re-informed by the preacher's personal experience. Men who know God by experience more than by hear-say.
5. Preaching must have regeneration as its object. The test of a sermon is not its length but what effect it has on the listener.

The second part of the program was a presentation by Rev. D. D. Eitzen of the theme, "Feed the Flock of God through Pastoral Counselling." He called attention to the passage of scripture found in Matthew 14:14, "And Jesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, and was moved with compassion toward them," emphasizing the phrase "compassion toward them." This was considered in the light of the theme of the conference "Feed the Flock of God" and the fact that the Lord Jesus is most beautifully pictured as a shepherd. What is counselling? Counselling is that consecrated effort by the servant of God to help men to choose the avenue provided by God. For this the servant of God needs humility. Humility is the greatest attribute of a minister. Counselling is sitting with people as illustrated in Ezekiel 3:15 and seen in the light of Psalm 137.

"Feed the Flock of God through Catechetical Instruction," was presented by Rev. Phil A. Wedel. What is adequate preparation for baptism? Should it be brief, example four weeks, or several months, or none at all. This was answered in the considerations which he brought to our attention.

1. Qualifications of the teacher. (a) He should know God—theology. (b) He should know man—psychology. (c) He should know the scriptures. (d) Must be a Spirit-filled teacher. (e) Deliver the message. 2. What should be taught. (a) Teach God's plan of the ages. (b) Teach them of the person of the Lord Jesus. Create Christian faith. (c) How one can become a Christian. (d) Hindrances to the Christian life. (e) The young Christian's attitude to public worship. (f) Stress memory work. (g) Supplementary material. 3. What are the results. (a) Missionary interest and activity. (b) Church support. (c) Active Christianity and active church membership.

The discussion, led by Rev. P. A. Penner, revealed that there are quite a number of ministers who use only the catechism in their instruction classes, but all the ministers do some supplementary teaching.

Wednesday

Topic by Rev. L. W. Jantzen, "Feed the Flock of God through Teaching the Word." "Feed" means to nourish, shepherd, tend, or the German "weidet;" and "the Flock" is not our flock but God's flock. Therefore, we as under-shepherds obeying the chief shepherd. How to do this: through teaching the Word. This is fundamental. The Lord Jesus taught; the apostle Paul taught. The result: Teaching created missionary spirit. Our Mennonite Church would do well to re-emphasize the teaching of the Word of God. It develops real Christian character. It develops efficiency in service. Requirements for teaching: The shepherd needs to know and hold the truth. The pastor needs to apply the truth in his own life. Study the truth. I Timothy 4. Live the truth. The message: Teach the Word. Half an hour in the Sunday School sufficient? Teach the Word in our churches, our schools, our homes, in fact everywhere. The discussion was led by Rev. Arnold Funk. What is the difference between teaching and preaching? Dr. E. G. Kaufman. Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, and Rev. H. J. Dyck participated in the discussion.

"Feeding the Flock of God through Church Administration." Rev. Rufus Bowman. I. Definition of Church Administration: Carry out the program of church effectively in all its aspects. The minister, head of the church, working through all of the members. II. The minister should work hard to get other people to work. The church program should be built upon the needs of the people. (a) Doctrinal needs (b) Biblical needs (c) Moral needs, etc. Religion deals with all areas of life. Anything which concerns persons concerns the church. III. Through counseling with the Church Board, the church program should be built in the light of great objectives. Preaching program should be planned. Two great objectives: 1. Life Commitment (a) to the Saviour 2. Development (a) Evangelism (b) Home Life (c) Christian Leadership. IV. To understand the great principles of carrying out this program. 1. Built on the needs of the people. 2. The needs cannot be entirely met in groups. 3. Offer more whole experiences. (a) worship (b) discussion (c) activities united. 4. Should be built with the understanding that sincere people have different needs and then provide for these needs. V. What is the program of the church that we shall administer. 1. Worship. 2. Teaching of religion. 3. Develop a fellowship. VI. The organization to make the work of the church effective. No organization applicable for all churches. Organizations must be adapted to local needs and abilities. Rev. Bowman

Confessing One to Another

There are individuals who beseech God with burning prayers and plead for the forgiveness of all sins, and yet find themselves a problem unto themselves in spite of all their earnest endeavors. They are a problem unto themselves, a problem they cannot understand. Not understanding they know not how to get the answer. The Bible is a book of answers, but the individual is perplexed, for he is unable to tell which answer or answers go with his problem. God can do all arithmetic, the very highest, but generally the boy in public school had better depend upon his teacher or fellow pupil to help him understand a difficult problem rather than depend upon God to explain it to him. After all, God does explain it to him, only through someone else, who already understands. So it is with spiritual problems. God can and does help through those who already understand the problem. Confessing to another person all one's negative feelings of guilt, shame, fear, etc., enables the other person to give that clarification which finally helps the confessor to analyze the problem that he is to himself. The one who unburdens himself (reads out the problem) finally is better able to see himself as he is because of the clarification offered by the other person. Maybe Protestantism has gone to the extreme in trying to get away from confession. Perhaps, more attention ought to be given to the admonition, "So confess your sins to one another and pray for one another, that you may be healed; the prayers of the righteous have a powerful effect." James 5:16, Moffatt.

An Unchristian View of God

"I don't believe that God loves and (two widely known and maligned men)," declared a zealous witness of the Lord God. When encountered with "For God so loved the world. . .," she declared that the word "world" was used in three different ways in the Bible and that in this instance it referred to the world of the righteous. This was surprising. She went on to declare that God hated the wicked. She was hesitant about the statement that Christ came to save sinners. To the assertion that we are to love our enemies, she replied, "Doesn't God say in the Old Testament that we are to hate our enemies?" All in all she pictured a Lord God who was very much in love with a small, exclusive group to which she belonged, but who was none too loving to those outside of this sect. Unfortunately this view, which limits the love of God in a way such as Christ never limited it, is not held only by this present-day believer in God. To a lesser or greater degree it is held by a considerable number of present-day believers. It is one of the chief weaknesses in present-day "Christianity." Christendom needs to realize more clearly the implications of the fact that "God is love" and that of all God's attributes, love is the paramount one. Yes, God's orderliness (wrath) is extremely important and needs to be considered more, but it is subordinate to his love and exists because of His redeeming love. Any view of God that minimizes His love is bound to be an unChristian one.

"Conference"

A true conference holds marvelous possibilities for finding partial or full solutions to problems. Conference, according to one of Webster's definitions, is an "interchange of views." In an interchange there is a mutual give and take. To confer means "to bring together." In conferring views meet each other. It can not be a one way matter. The Latin root "ferre" means "to bear." Conferring, that is, coming together and letting different views meet, makes possible the bearing of new thought fruit. One view fructifies another, and a new thought, view, or solution is born. For one or some participants to behave as though there were no other participants leads to barrenness of thought. There must be receiving as well as giving. Perhaps, in money matters people are not so sure of the blessedness of giving, but when it comes to wisdom they are sure of it. Frequently, a conference does not reach its maximum possibilities because of a restricted willingness to receive on the part of those who engage in it. The willingness to receive must be equal to the willingness to give. When this condition prevails there is a smooth functioning of conference that suggests the kind of cooperation that leads to new life. Naturally there will be some views which are comparatively sterile. Let that fact be gracefully accepted as it becomes evident. But an interchange there ought to be. Perhaps, a good conference motto might be: "It is as blessed to receive as to give."

Church Education

The Christian Church ought to do its best in educating its members. Strong educational agencies are the public school, the radio, screen, and press. The last three exist largely for profit and not for the sake of the Kingdom of God. How very necessary it is then that the Church should do its best in educating its members relative to what the Church stands for and what it is seeking to accomplish with God. Churches in our Conference are discovering the merits of the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan as an effective method of informing their whole membership about conference activities. Our congratulations go out to the little church at Hydro, Oklahoma, which is the latest church to adopt the plan. Forty-seven churches now have the 100 Per Cent Plan.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

"In Japanese Hands"

Reviewed by Wilhelmina Kuyf

IN JAPANESE HANDS by H. J. Brown. 254 pp. North Newton, Kansas, The Author, 1936. Price: $1.50

One of Rev. Brown's avowed purposes in writing this book, according to the preface, is "to help others who have so earnestly prayed for our deliverance to thank and praise the Lord for bringing us out," and for the many who come under that classification a wealth of interesting detail is provided in In Japanese Hands. All who are concerned about the China mission field of our church and who will read this book with frequent consultation of the map of the field which the Mission Board issued some time ago, will be rewarded with clearer insight into the problems and joys of our Chinese Christian friends, and the missionaries. It is a "war book" too, and as such will interest those who wish to know how Japan handled some enemy aliens.

The circumstance that Rev. Brown had his diaries and numerous newspaper clippings from China, put him into the position of being able to present much that otherwise might not have been available. One can't help but wonder how it was done, for we have his own word for it, that "not one written word was allowed to go through."

That the book is arranged in forty-three short sections is due to the fact that Rev. Brown probably followed the diary in part, and interjected additional material.

The first section begins with thoughts of evacuation which had come to some on the field as early as the fall of 1940, and goes on with the detail of later meetings, and the actual evacuation of the women and children. The intervening time, until the fateful day of internment, is reported in the next three sections. The following seven headings cover such phases as the missionaries' relation to the Chinese churches, the signing over of the church and mission property (here, almost incidentally, much encouraging information about continual Christian activity is found), troubles that arose, and then the account of the repatriation of half the interned group. This is followed by the story of the next moves of the four who were left. Up to this point events move chronologically, but mission property reports are inserted here, as well as a historical sketch. Next a retrospective view of 1942 finds a place, together with a bit about

Miss Goertz and Miss Regier's newest project in Kai Chow. Here a long paragraph about the difficulties of war and famine and how they affect some of our church leaders, is included. The following sections, "Nanking Declares War" and "Extrality" are profusely documented and can be the basis for much serious thought. We might add that final judgment should be left until time can supply a perspective.

The section headed "Toward the Concentration Camp" resumes the story of our missionaries as they come to and actually take up life in the camp, a former Presbyterian Mission Compound. Directions, dimensions, numbers all help us to get the setting for the subsequent history of days of hard work, monotonous diet, religious fellowship, as well as disagreement. One gets the feeling all along of an overcoming faith, and that our senior China missionaries possess complete satisfaction that they had done the best thing in committing their way unto the Lord. The rest of Wilhelmina Kuyf is now on the way to India, where she will engage in relief activities until she can enter China, where she will also serve as relief worker. Miss Kuyf, who has served as missionary in China, is much interested in the Chinese. She, too, was interned by the Japanese when they took over the area in which our mission work is located. Until recently she served at M.C.C. headquarters as secretary to Dr. M. C. Lehman in the relief section. See correspondence on page 14.

the book deals with the routine life in camp, varied by rumour, by weather, by personalities of all sorts. One notes that although the head officer of the camp is called a commandant, and that there are guards, there seem to be little else of the military about it. The final chapter begins with a personal spiritual experience of Rev. Brown's, and ends with him and the rest of the Grispholm passengers safely back on American soil.

It is hard for the reviewer to be completely objective about the book, because even at a distance of several years, parts of it come very close, but one can wish that a different title had been selected, even though enemy aliens in occupied China were under Japanese control. They definitely were not prisoners of war. Since it is a personal narrative, the use of the first person would have been permissible. It would seem that a little rearrangement of the material, placing the Mission Property Reports, the Mennonite Mission Historical Sketch, and perhaps the five sections beginning with the one on "Nanking Declares War" in an appendix, might make for smoother reading. For those who are not familiar with Chinese, it appears that there are too many Chinese titles and expressions used without explanation. Place names are not consistently spelled. Along the same line, the name "Reds" for the guerrilla forces should be explained by more than saying they are Chinese troops, as many people in this country tend to place all "Reds" in the Russian Communist category. Chinese Communism is really more a land reform movement, and they have troops separate from those of both the regular Chinese, and the puppet Chinese armies. A sketch map of China, and another of our mission field and adjacent territory, would have been most helpful.

For some reason, very little has been written about our China mission field, but this candid account of some of its work, and of the internment of some of our China missionaries might raise questions that will lead to further publications. One result of reading In Japanese Hands will inevitably be more intelligent prayer for the interned missionaries and for the hard-pressed Chinese Christians, and certainly this will be in partial fulfillment of the other aim of Rev. Brown, "to honor and extol our God and Saviour Jesus Christ."

Serious Problems for the Future

Thoughtful writers are now pointing out with some concern the precarious future of missionary work in the Far East after the war. Militarists are loudly claiming credit for the liberation of a few missionaries. We are glad to hear of their liberation. The war which was not of their own choosing has cost them untold suffering, but as far as the kingdom of Christ on earth is concerned liberation at the point of a bayonet will raise serious problems for the future missionary. Maps, pictures, and strategic information have been sought by military intelligence officers. In some cases missionaries have supplied this. In the future it will be known that not all missionaries are innocent visitors with only spiritual functions, but that they carry explosive possibilities of harm in case of war. The great pioneer missionary Livingstone never himself carried a weapon even among the most hostile natives of Africa. It is hard to believe that a missionary imbued with the spirit of Christ will gloat over his liberation by the army; that will be incidental to say the least. He knows that the Christian gospel is not spread by physical violence. Where missionaries have been taken in by the tide of hate and revenge, it will be a sad day for those who must continue their work in the future. —Willard Classen in bulletin of Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota.

Vacation Bible School Workshop

About seventy-five people, some from as far as Cordell, Oklahoma, attended the Vacation Bible School Workshop held in Memorial Hall, N. Newton, Mar. 17. This in a sense an epochal meeting the first of its kind in the Western District.

Need for Course

Last fall the Western District asked the Educational Committee to prepare a course for this year's use. So Mrs. H. J. Andres and others were asked to help arrange such a course, and this "workshop" was to acquaint us with the materials and methods to be used.

Material To Be Used

Mrs. Andres then presented the course to be used, copies of which had been distributed to those in attendance. It is the Scottdale Course put out by our sister conference, the Old Mennonite General Conference, with additional memory work, also songs and hymns selected from our own Mennonite Hymnary and an outline of the mission work of our Conference. Alternative courses for the first three years are also suggested. The Scottdale Course is a ten-years' progressive course.

Demonstrations

During the afternoon session interesting demonstrations were given on: Worship, By Marguerite Sprunger, Teaching a Hymn, by Mrs. Muriel Ebersole who had brought ten of her pupils from the Cooper School for the demonstration, Telling a Bible Story, by Mrs. J. E. Entz, Using the Flannelgraph, by Elda Wiens, and another demonstration on Teaching Memory Work by Mrs. Entz. All of these were most effective.

Appreciation of History and Conference

It was emphasized throughout that Mennonite history and the teachings of our church are to be made an integral part of the teaching program. Menno Schrag, editor of the Mennonite Weekly Review gave a talk on "Teaching our Children to Know our Faith, Our Conference and Its Activities." It is hoped that some day there will be a suitable short history worked out for use in Bible schools. Hymns from the Hymnary and used rather than miscellaneous choruses with the hope that at a gathering of young people they will be able to sing the same things. The Conference was recommended.

The Educational Committee of the Western District is acting also as sort of a "clearing house" to get vacation Bible school teachers to churches that desire them. Just write to the Teacher Placement Bureau, Bethel College, we were told. Reported by Mrs. W. C. Voth.

Tentative Survey of Conference Attendance

Local Committee Requests Cooperation

Due to critical problems pertaining to both food and lodging the Local Conference Committee is attempting a survey of probable attendance.

The local Committee is printing the coupon below, in all Conference papers and other publications in the earnest hope that everyone (delegate or visitor) who plans to attend even though his plans are uncertain will fill in the coupon, turn it in to their pastor or send it direct to the Local Conference Committee.

Pastors, upon receiving these coupons, are earnestly requested to send them to the address below by May 1 (and again May 20).

This is not a registration. It does not bind you to attend. It merely gives the women in charge of food preparation and lodging the information they need.

Food rationing points, shortage of gasoline, and bedding seem to make this almost essential.

Prices of meals the last conference were: Mornings, 20-25 cents; noons, 40 cents; evenings, 35 cents. They will be somewhat higher this conference. Dormitory rooms on the campus will be 50 cents per person per night.

For accomodations in private homes the following prices are suggested: (arrangements to be made with the host) Rooms: per person per night.....75
breakfast.....25

REMEMBER: Give this coupon to your pastor or mail direct to: B. Barga, Chairman, Committee on Registration, North Newton, Kansas.

Place a check-mark in the square of the appropriate day.

1. Which days of the conference do you plan to take breakfast at the Conference Dining Hall?
2. Which days of the conference do you plan to take noon meal at the Conference Dining Hall?
3. Which days of the conference do you plan to take the evening meal at the Conference Dining Hall?
4. Which nights do you wish the Conference to reserve a room for you?

Wed.	Thur.	Fri.	Sat.	Sun.	Mon.	Tue.	Wed.
May *30	May 31	June 1	June 2	June 3	June 4	June 5	June 6

Are you coming as a delegate? Yes _____ No _____
 Is your coming reasonably certain, conditions permitting? Yes _____ No _____
 What day and time do you plan to arrive? _____
 Is this coupon for a single person _____ or a married couple _____?

*Coupon includes May 30, although Conference actually begins the morning of May 31.

GROWTH

Within a short time after the new start had been made a number of Mennonite Schools were established. Bluffton College was established at Bluffton, Ohio, in 1900. Freeman Junior College was established at Freeman, South Dakota, in 1903. Bethel College had begun school work in 1893. That means that within ten years three large areas of the Church were supplied with schools doing work of Academy rank or more and with all of them looking forward to doing work of collegiate rank. All this happened within twenty-five years of the time that the doors of the school at Wadsworth had been closed.

About the same time a number of schools were started by other branches of the Mennonite Church. Hospitals followed soon after. The work of missions grew apace. The dream of the forefathers was being fulfilled to a degree that none of them had ever dared hope. When youth had a chance to prepare, they found work.

Teachers were being prepared, not only for the parochial and other schools springing up among our people but also for the public schools, academies, and colleges of other denominations and of a number of states.

Ministers and missionaries were being prepared. That stimulated better work and more interest in the work of the churches at home and abroad. The work of foreign missions spread to India and China within half a generation. The work of these fields, as well as that among the American Indians, grew to a remarkable degree. This in turn called for better work at home, and for better preparation to do it well. Physicians, deaconesses, and nurses were needed. Young people turned to these callings in increasing numbers and asked for opportunities to prepare themselves. The idea of the forefathers was not dead. It was growing.

TODAY AND TOMORROW

We are living in a day of severe testing. That is as true of our schools as it is of our homes and churches. The World War of 1914-18 brought its tensions which threatened the work so well begun. The present orgy of moral insanity in the world is testing the homes, the churches, and the schools as never before. This is a time when a cool head and a warm heart are needed in the work of the Kingdom of God as well as in the field of statesmanship. That is why the dream of our fathers for the preparation of youth for better service dare not be forgotten or neglected. The pressure upon the schools is especially severe this time. If they are given a chance to weather the storm, they will make contributions to the well-being of the world of the future which we can little understand today as could our forefathers the success of the schools which followed the apparent defeat when the doors of Wadsworth were closed.

Between the wars, the depression handicapped the growth and the most efficient service of our schools. Their problems and their opportunities are growing. What shall they do to meet the needs of our returning youth? They need buildings, equipment, more teachers, and more interested friends. The schools exist for the good of the students, the faculties, the administrators, the parents and the communities. It will take all of these groups as never before to be prepared to weather the storm and to render the service needed in the post-war world.

Our ideas of education and our ideas of the kind of schools which will be needed in the future must be ready to rise to the new occasion. That means all of us. Those who will fail the cause in this crisis will place an unfair burden on those who will carry on in the Spirit of Him who still calls, "Follow Me!"

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

THE MENNONITE CHURCH AND INDUSTRIAL CONFLICT

Organized labor in the United States began about the middle of the previous century, and thus by coincidence, from the standpoint of years is about the same age as is the General Conference. Organized labor has, however, been making its most rapid gains in the last two decades. It is interesting to note that despite the considerable number of General Conference members who are affected by organized labor, there has been barely a word spoken at either District or Tri-annual General Conference Sessions as to the church's attitude toward industrial conflict.

Class Conflict

Labor unions are organizations of working people created for the purpose of securing improved working conditions, better wages, a larger share in management, and in general the advancement of the worker's welfare. They represent an attempt on the part of the workingman to create a bargaining agency adequate to cope with the power and authority of his employer. Labor unions are to the working man what manufacturers associations are to the industrialists and chambers of commerce are to the business man. These two groups of citizens are pitted against each other in a constant struggle for power which is, in essence, class warfare. In most cases the long run objectives sought are justified, but the methods employed to obtain them are far from peaceful. This logically brings us to the question of how Mennonites, who are professing believers in the doctrine of Biblical non-resistance and who seek to be guided by the Sermon on the Mount, can consistently be parties in the struggle for power whether on the side of labor or on the side of capital.

The Duty of the Church

In view of the increasingly large number of Mennonites engaged in industry and business both on the side of capital and of labor, and in view of the ethical issues involved for non-resistant Christians, does the Church not have an obligation to its members to define the issues and to help members face their problem? It does so in the case of war and international violence, why should it not in the case of industrial conflict and domestic violence. The Old Mennonite Church through its Committee on Industrial Relations has made a splendid beginning. For ten years it has sought to protect its members from compromise by making agreements with unions such as the United Mine Workers, the C.I.O. and the A. F. of L. whereby those who have conscientious scruples against joining unions may do alternative service. Under such arrangements non-resistant people may contribute the equivalent of union dues to a mutually acceptable charitable cause; in case of conflict, they maintain an attitude of sincere neutrality, and in general abide by the regulations with regard to wages, hours, and working conditions.

THE READER SAYS

CREED AND CONDUCT

By Rev. H. D. Burkholder, Quakertown, Pennsylvania

The trend of thought among American church leaders is expressed in the phrase, "Christianity is a life not a creed." One suggests that a reborn "Church of the Living God," promoting "applied religion and not theoretical religion," must come into existence at the end of this war if we are to escape spiritual collapse. He states that a creed is non-essential for admission into the kingdom of God. The essential is "love for God which is translated into a Christ-like life." A life not a creed would be the test.

Everyone agrees that "the life" is important. However, life without a creed is impossible.

Another church leader says, "The church must have the life of Christ at its center, not a theological creed or a particular set of doctrines about Christ or the nature of God." "Theology should be minimized and discipleship encouraged." "Men are justified not alone by faith, but by the fruits of their faith."

Beloved reader, if we minimize doctrine we destroy the foundation of "the love of Christ," and true "discipleship." To maintain the structure we dare not destroy the foundation.

To defend the validity of doctrine it becomes necessary to commit our position on the scriptures. According to our General Conference Constitution, the Mennonite Church "acknowledges the Sacred Scriptures of the Old and New Testament as the only and infallible rule of faith and life." Our catechism sets forth some of the most important doctrines which we as pastors are encouraged to teach to our young people. Thank God, our forefathers saw the importance of doctrine.

In an above quotation we notice that "Justification is not alone by faith, but by the fruits of their faith."

Please examine the revised catechism of 1937, pages 49 and 50. Question 133 asks: What is Justification? Answer: It is the act of God, whereby He pronounces the sinner, who believes in His Son, free from all guilt, and righteous in His sight.

Romans 4:5 "But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness."

Question 134: How, then, are we Justified? Answer: We are justified freely, without, merit of our own, by God's grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus.

Romans 3:24,25 "Being justified freely by his grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus: whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God;"

Gal. 2:16 "Knowing that a man is not justified by the works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, that we might be justified by the faith of Christ, and not by the works of the law: for by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified."

Justification, according to the scriptures, is by faith only. James, in his epistle, says, "Faith without works is dead." The "works of faith" are not the basis of justification; they are the result or evidence. That is why Creed and Conduct always have an equal emphasis. It is possible to hold to a creed without manifesting too much life. However, it is impossible to have conduct without a creed. Hitler realized that the youth of Germany must be indoctrinated in his philosophy of life before he could expect that type of conduct. The type of life found in Germany today is the fruit of the creed they had been taught.

OPPORTUNITY FOR NURSES' TRAINING

The Mennonite Deaconess Hospital of Beatrice, Nebraska, is again sponsoring the Community Nurses Training Program for young Christian women. The course is twenty-four months in length, and students receive training in bedside nursing, the care of children, first aid, and a theoretical course adequately preparing the student for future hospital service.

Registration for this course is open now and will continue for the next few months. A student is paid a monthly allowance, and the hospital furnishes board, room, and laundry in addition to the allowance. Text books are loaned to the student and this expense is covered by tuition fee of $25. For information write to: Mrs. Ursula Frantz, Mennonite Hospital, Beatrice, Nebraska

Excerpts from the Letters of Dr. A. M. Lohrentz

SELECTED BY MRS. LOHRENTZ

(These excerpts are from a second edition sent to friends. Dr. Lohrentz has gone to Paraguay to render medical service.)

I do not seem to find the First Edition, so you will have to pardon me if I overlap a little. I believe in the last one I ended with Quayaquil in Ecuador. Because of the bad weather they missed a day or more and hence missed the one-plane a week to Asuncion, so they decided to wait in Lima instead of farther on in some small place. And they were wise in doing this, for in some of the places in which they stopped, there wasn't even anything like hotel accommodations, so that the Pan American Co. had some rooms right on the airfield; the towns were so ramshackle and unsanitary. In Lima, Abe had the address of Dr. J. H. Enns' daughter, Ann Beth, and her husband, Rex Youngquist. Mr. Youngquist was very busy, of course, as he is employed by Pan American in their freight department. He is also studying very hard to become a pilot. Abe was so enthusiastic about Ann Beth and her husband, what fine people they were and how kind they were to him and the Mr. Gundersen with whom he was traveling to Asuncion. Mr. Gundersen is from the U. S. Dept. of Education on a good-neighbor trip. Abe told about visiting a Women's Charity hospital with Ann Beth and watching the doctors do several operations. He speaks especially of the super-fine equipment and drugs. This hospital has some six hundred beds, hires fifty doctors at fifty dollars (Peruvian money) and one hundred fifty doctors work there free but have their own practices uptown. This hospital is some fifty years old. He says there are jewelry shops all over. There are many sterling silver articles, quite reasonable too. They were also permitted to go through the President's palace. That must have been something quite rare, for Ann Beth wrote to her parents about the great opportunity too. It corresponds to our Capitol. Abe said it was very, very beautiful; everything was massive in structure, to correspond to the size of the rooms and the building in general. He used the words beautiful, wonderful, etc. quite often, and he is not in the habit of using expressions like that unless they really are. He spoke that about some cathedrals and museums too. He says gasoline is only .12 a gallon, but tires are hard to get and expensive. There are many very beautiful flowers and many fruits. They have been getting watermelon quite often.

They left Peru (Lima) on February 3, and they went on south along the coast and then turned east to Lapaz. The altitude was so high and they did not have sufficient oxygen that he and the other passengers became desperately sick. They were flying in mountainous regions at about 18,000 ft. From Brownsville to Guatamala he must have been quite sick too. He says when you are up so high one sees nothing but a vast expanse of wooly white and since one is flying above the clouds the sun is shining straight down on them making it very, very bright. Here I am going to quote from his letter of Feb. 6: "Well, here I am in Asuncion since 1:50 p.m. yesterday. We landed at the airport at that time. We should have been here at about 8:30 a.m. but when we wanted to land, in fact we could see the landing field and were only a mile away, they discovered a terrific storm, and it caught our plane, but they were able to get it out of the grip before they were too far in. They turned to the right and went east to a landing field about one and one-fourth hour flight. Here we waited till the sky cleared and came back here. The place we made the emergency landing was Iguassu Falls, the highest waterfall in the world, but we did not see them for it was in the other direction from where we landed. On the walls of the port hung tiger skins and a long snake skin from the surrounding jungles. One of the men told us that they have snakes here eight meters long and a meter is a little over thirty inches. On the way to Santa Cruz I saw a part of Lake Titicaca, highest altitude lake in the world. Now remember these are the high Andes Mts. Now we have EWT time." At Campo Grande he was in a hotel, on Sunday, that looked quite nice in front, but was anything but that in back. That surely reminds one of China, only there the front often wasn't even so nice looking. Abe started to ask for a Protestant church because they had arrived there early enough for the services. "Finally I managed to make them understand. One young fellow asked me to follow him and he would take me there. It was only three blocks away. It was all in Spanish, but it was interesting how they carried. I could make out enough that they used the International S. S. lessons as we do. It was a Baptist church. There was a Presbyterian church there and also a Seven Day Advent church. The Baptist church has a very large attendance. At Campo Grande I met a German speaking dentist, Dr. Blobel, who helped us out with the language. He spoke Portuguese and with my German we got along swell, for the language here is Portuguese."

"At Asuncion I caught up with the Hieberts; they arrived on January 31 and I on February 5. We will leave here February 13 on a riverboat. I am stopping at the Friesland and the Hutterite colony, but they are going straight to Fernheim, for their school is to start on March 1. I will not get there before March 1. I have met the Willard Smiths here. They are going on a little vacation to Buenos Aires in a few days. They are in charge of the Home here and of the business of the MCC—their commissioner in South America. I also met lawyer Souder, (his wife and baby are on the way out here now by boat) and lawyer Geigley, both on the staff and from Pennsylvania. Other people are Anna Enns, Kroeker, Duerksen, Siemens (he is the minister from Fernheim and it is his daughter who is in Tabor College) Neudorf, Neubuhr, Langerman, Walde, and others. All speak the Low German and I appreciate it, for I speak it too. Every now and then I lapse into the English while we are together at the table (we all eat at one table) or some other place when we get together, especially if Souder and Geigley are present and soon Rev. Siemens will say: "Waut sadst Du?" I do not mean to do this, but just do it unconsciously. Quite a combination of languages are spoken here: High and Low German, Russian, Spanish, Guaranie (that seems to be native Paraguay) English, Chinese, and Pa. Dutch". He says he has been doing some shopping. He had a suit made of good English wool material, some mosquito netting, because up the river there are so many mosquitos, paper, etc., but he says everything is so high there for none of these things are native there, but imported. Canned fruits are especially high; the exchange is over 3 Guaranie to $1.00 U S money.

He says that the week he got there and the following practically all South America was having carnivals, decorations, masks, colorful dresses, etc. galore. Many parades and other ways of celebrating were seen. Personally, I would like to know why, for if nearly all the country celebrates, there must be some pretty good reason for it. Maybe Abe will tell us later.

Last Sunday morning they went to a Spanish Service at the Christian church, and in the afternoon to a tea at the Collegium International which was built by the Disciples of Christ, or the Christian Church. He met several people there, among them a Miss Agnes Fishback, whom some of the people around Bethel have met. She lived in McPherson along in 1900; her father was janitor of McPherson College. They also lived in Beatrice and she knows the Claassens there, also Justina Regier Claassen. She has visited with the John Linschied family once and Abe thinks she may have met Emma Linscheid. This is her third term of service there.

He says he plans to stop at the Hutterite colony too, but that these are not of our kind in South Dakota. Their names are all different like Trumpe, Hussi, Bolli, Arnold, Davies, Vigar, Harries, etc. They speak high and low German and English. They have only the belief like ours, but when their property was confiscated in Germany some twenty-five years ago, they fled into England. I was just going to say that today he will have been worshipping with the Hutterites, but I guess not, for if he is going to be in Fernheim by March 1, he is very likely spending this day on that narrow gauge train or driving cross country. The Hieberts were going to go on the Autovia—auto on the rails and make the trip in four hours instead of twelve on the rather open cars—from what he said he will not get to go on the Autovia.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL TEACHERS

Calls have already come in for teachers for Vacation Bible Schools. Most likely there are other communities that need them. May we urge to make those requests known to Dr. A. J. Regier, Teacher Placement Bureau, North Newton, Kansas.

We are in need of teachers who can fill those places. Anybody prepared and willing to render that important service please write to the place directed above.—Western District Conference Education Committee.

An Airgraph Letter Sent from Champa, India

(Following from bulletin of First Church, Reedley, California.)

Miss Emma Ruth has received a letter from Miss Elenore Schmidt, who was ordained as missionary to India in our Church last year. The following is a part of this interesting letter:

"It was a long journey, but the destination was worth the long way around. We arrived in Bombay on February 14 and Champa on February 20. The Christians had lighted tiny lights and placed them on the walls of the compounds. As we went by on the train at about 9:00 P.M. we saw all these tiny lights burning a welcome to us. They made me think of God's boundless mercy shining all along our way from America to India. We stopped at many ports along the way. In West, South and East Africa, and saw many interesting things, even had a thrilling sail boat ride around the Bay of Mosambique. Christmas on the ship was a gala affair—in fact a little too much so. I have never seen so much food in one place for one meal as was prepared for the buffet midnight supper Christmas Eve. The missionaries had prepared a pageant for Christmas Day and we also had services. The weather was very hot for we were just south of the equator.

I surely enjoyed Cape Town. As we came into the harbor we could see the beautiful mountains and the town below. It made a picture I will never forget. We were in Louvence Marques a week. We went inland by train and up the Inconafi River on a motor launch to see the crocodiles and hippopotami.

The African villages were interesting and in one we found a native preacher reading a New Testament to a group. What a thrill.

I am fairly well situated in my new home. Alida Schrag and I live in one of the bungalows on the Medical Compound. We will board with the Ratzlaffs since we both study language. We will go to the hills the later part of April for language school. I have begun study and really enjoy it. Mrs. Wenger had initiated me on the boat, so it isn't all new to me. I can read Hindu characters and can speak sentences. Thank you for your prayers.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By George Dick, Bloomfield, Montana

APRIL 15—Dan. 7:13—"I saw in the night visions, and, behold, One like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him."

Daniel, the prophet, was transported in spirit to the time of the end. The Son of Man, even the Lord Jesus Christ, was seen coming with the clouds and was brought before the Almighty God. We do not know when this will take place, but some day we who love Him and look for Him shall see this in fact. It will not be a vision but an event.

APRIL 16—Dan. 7:14—"And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, . . . should serve him. . ."

When Jesus came among men almost two thousand years ago, He gave Himself to be a ransom for the world. When He comes again He shall receive from the hand of God, His dominion, the world. He came to serve; He shall come to rule. He came in humility; He shall come in glory. He came to minister, but when He returns all shall proclaim Him, "King of Kings and Lord of Lords!"

APRIL 17—Dan. 12:1—"And at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book."

We sing from our hymnals, "Is my name written there, on the page white and fair?" If so, there is deliverance for us body and soul. No more fretting about conditions and times. We will be delivered from all our infirmities, quirky personalities, and absurdities within ourselves. For then we will be as we ought to be. And things will be as they ought to be. Just so that our name is written in The Book,

APRIL 18—Dan. 12:2—"And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake. . . to shame and everlasting contempt."

But if our names are not written in The Book, we are delinquents before the bar, criminals before the great Judge. Then we shall receive justice, not mercy. The holy God will give us what we deserve, everlasting punishment and separation from the face of God. The time of forgiveness and love is past. We didn't take it when it was offered.

APRIL 19—Dan. 12:3—"And they that be wise shall shine. . . and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever."

How foolish to postpone the work of the grace of God in our hearts. We may have forgiveness of our sins now through our Lord Jesus. It is the wisest move a person can make. The next move is to follow Him, and invite others to join us. We will be happy here, and will shine over yonder.

APRIL 20—Dan. 12:10—"Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried:"

Not a life of ease and sensual pleasure awaits us. For some it may be a hard and rigorous life. We must deny ourselves and seek the pleasure of our Master. We must follow Him implicitly—even to the point of persecution. Then we will come to the end of life, purged and purified. Many will not understand why we are so peculiar, but "the wise shall understand."

APRIL 21—Dan. 12:13—"But go thou thy way."

Don't wait and sit around for things to happen. We must get busy with our work, for there is a lot to be done. We must work for our bread as unto the Lord. But besides and along with, we must let our neighbors know what it is that is most important of all things. Maybe we can get some of them to join us on the narrow road. You know who "us" is, don't you? "My Lord and I."

Thank you, Lord, for saving my soul.

Thank you, Lord, for making me whole.

Thank you, Lord, for giving to me,

Thy great salvation so full and free.

Recommendation of the Executive Committee to the Session of General Conference May 31, 1945

Proposed Amendments:

1. That Article "39-Treasuries" of the General Conference Constitution be declared void, and be replaced by the following:

"39-Central Treasury"

The General Conference has a Central Treasury located at the General Conference Headquarters. To this Treasury contributions for any and all Conference purposes shall be sent, there to be booked and to be used for causes specified by the contributors.

Offerings, gifts, bequests, etc. will be received for: The General Conference Treasury

Home Mission
Foreign Mission
Publication
Education
Relief
Peace
Church Unity
Placement
Doctrine and Conduct
Ministers Aid Fund
Tract Distribution
Other pertinent causes

Out of the General Conference Treasury the expenses of Conference connected with its sessions, the printing of the session minutes, and such other expenses as cannot properly be paid out of other treasuries, shall be defrayed. Orders on this treasury shall be signed by the president and the secretary of the Conference.

To carry on activities delegated to them each conference board and, or committee is authorized, on orders signed by its respective chairman and secretary, to draw on funds booked in its favor with the Central Treasury.

Upon request the Central Treasury shall report to each participating body the standing of its account.

Any undesignated contributions received shall be subject to (annual) allocation by action of the Conference or its Executive Committee.

Upkeep and current expenses of the conference headquarters shall be chargeable equitably to all participating bodies.

The Conference Executive Committee shall employ the Manager of the Central Treasury, who shall be in full charge of the Conference headquarters. In consultation with advisors from the Executive Committee, the Manager shall employ necessary office help.

Those employed in this office shall be placed under bond in amounts satisfactory to the Executive Committee.

All Endowment, Annuity, Permanent and Temporary Trust Funds shall be in charge of and invested by the Conference Board of Trustees.

Any part of the Constitution in conflict with this Article is hereby declared null and void.

2. Amendment to Constitution proposed by the Unity Committee at 1941 session (Res. 10)

"Under 'Admission' under Article 13 of the Constitution, add: The General Conference stands ready to unite with any conference of Mennonite churches where such union can be achieved agreeable to both parties"

recommended the book "Putting the Church on a Full Time Basis" by Bevan.

"Feed the Flock of God through Pastoral Visitation" by Rev. W. F. Unruh, Advantage—Purpose—Preparation—Personal Solicitation—Ministry to the Bereaved. Advantage—Personal insight into the needs of the people. Purpose—He calls because he loves them. To discover any particular needs. Build reciprocal confidence. Strengthen friendships, confidence and trust. Preparation—Should be purposeful. Neatness and cleanliness are vital. There should be spiritual preparation. Be forgiving and loving. The greeting used may set the tone for the visit. Direct the conversation so that prayer will fit into it naturally. Make the prayer the prayer of the one who has been visited. Make definite plans for visitation. The pastor should not only visit his own people; there are stray sheep who should be visited by some one. Visit to the sick and the bereaved. Brother Unruh recommended the use of a little booklet "Daily Comfort." Discussion led by Rev. Ben Rahn. The meeting was closed with prayer by Rev. Paul Kuhlmann. Condensed from report by D. J. Unruh, Sec. Pro. Tem.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Philadelphia, Pa.

"Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." Col. 3:17; a verse left us by Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf at the farewell services held in her honor on March 11th at 3 P. M. The occasion was one of blessed fellowship. All organizations affiliated with the church and each department of the Sunday School presented to our beloved Wilhelmina a precious thought, either in Bible verse, hymn or poem. Rev. Howard Nyce, a member of the Foreign Mission Board, was unable to be with us but sent a letter to be read. Unfortunately the mail delivery was made too late, so Rev. Plenert read it at the following Sunday morning worship period which Miss Kuyf attended. Rev. Russell Mast, Eastern District Conference President, gave a brief message. Miss Flora Heebner, a returned Missionary from China and her brother Rev. Harvey Heebner also spoke a few words. Attending Eastern District Conference pastors, Reverends Johnson, Burkhalter, Mast, Landis, Dick, and Neuenschwander extended greetings for their congregations, followed by our pastor Rev. J. J. Plenert. Then Wilhelmina gave us a short talk, in the course of which she challenged the young folk to the call of missions. After the hymn "The Work is Thine, O Christ," selected by Wilhelmina, the congregation, as a token of their love and esteem, gave her a "Purse" together with a precious promise from God's Word, Isa. 43:1-3. Special musical features of the afternoon were two duet numbers by Rev. Dick and Rev. Plenert and a number by our choir. Rev. Harold Burkhalter led the congregational singing. Miss Kuyf will serve as a relief worker in India while awaiting the opportunity to enter China.

On February 11th we were privileged to have in our church a group of C.P.S. men of the Mennonite Brethren and Krimmer Brethren faith, who are serving in camps or units in the East. A few spent the entire day with us, and several of the men had their wives with them. Prof. A. E. Janzen, Tabor College, Hillsboro, Kansas brought the morning message in the absence of our pastor. The afternoon session was conducted by the C.P.S. men for their own group, at the close of which they were served a cooked meal by the ladies of the church. Thirty-three guests were served. In the hour preceding our evening worship period, which was in charge of the C.P.S. group, they celebrated the Lord's Supper. Features of the evening worship were special musical numbers, a reading, and an interesting stereoptical lecture on the life of the Mennonites in the Chaco area by Prof. Janzen, who recently visited Paraguay under the sponsorship of the Mennonite Central Committee.

In brief, we have a thriving Junior C. E. Society. Our Intermediate C. E. Society, altho only one year old, is much alive and quite active, also serving as our choir. The Sunday School attendance is fair even though the percentage should be higher. Members of one Ladies' Class devote on Sunday afternoon a month to singing for shut-ins. Rev. Plenert frequently provides transportation by driving his car. Beside singing, there is scripture reading and prayer. Shut-ins and visitors alike receive a rich blessing. Another ladies' class has recently redecorated their class room and now share it with the pastor for a study. Miss Bertha DeCray, harpist, is playing for our morning worship service every fourth Sunday of the month, and is greatly appreciated. The Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies hold regular meetings once a month. Currently, the Missionary Society is having a series of studies on "Mennonites"—their origin, experiences in Europe, immigration to America, basic principles of faith, etc. A baptismal service will be held on Good Friday evening for folk who are now receiving Catechetical instruction by our pastor. We invite your prayers in their behalf, and for us, as a Congregation, as we plan to celebrate our eightieth anniversary in October.—Corr.

BETHESDA CHURCH Henderson, Nebraska

Twenty-one young people are attending catechism class. They will receive baptism on Pentecost.

About thirty-five young people attend the evening Bible school on Wednesday evenings. Rev. A. W. Friesen teaches a course on the "Life of Christ."

A group of C.P.S. Men from the Agricultural College Unit at Lincoln rendered a fine program in our church on February 18.—Maria Kroeker, Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Newton, Kansas

The church has two able ministers Rev. J. E. Entz and Rev. D. J. Unruh. We have a worship service every Sunday night after the C. E. program. Wednesday and Thursday night of each week we meet for Bible Class and S. S. Teachers meeting. Besides these there are the S. S. class meetings, choir rehearsals, men's chorus practice and men's fellowship meetings. The home church letter is being sent every month to the boys in the service, and a copy is also given to each home. During this quarter the church has had the privilege of hearing the Rev. S. A. Aston from New York and Rev. J. W. Schmidt of Gretna, Manitoba, Canada. Rev. D. J. Unruh, as the representative of the Foreign Mission Board, together with a delegation of the Bergthal Church of Altona, Manitoba, went to Old Mexico in the interest of mission work among the Indians there. During his absence Dr. Abr. Unruh of Winnipeg, Manitoba served both the Bible class and the S. S. Teachers at their meetings. Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wiebe entertained relatives and friends in the church basement on their silver wedding anniversary. The Women's Sewing and Mission Societies have had Missionary J. B. Ediger from the Oklahoma field and Mrs. G. S. Klassen, Hillsboro, Kansas who spent a year with her husband Dr. G. S. Klassen in South America, speak to them at their gatherings. The Ladies' Mission Society of the First Church of Christian, Moundridge, also gave them a program. Palm Sunday night the combined choirs rendered "The Crucifixion," led by Prof. Hohmann. The last day of March Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Entz gathered all the children of the S. S. and Sunbeam C. E. together at the country manse where they all spent a very enjoyable and instructive time. Spring is here in all its beauty. The fruit trees are in full bloom and balmy breezes are blowing. The gardens are made in hope that the dear Lord will give us a harvest. —Corr.

THE FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Hutchinson, Kansas

Our congregation which is not as large as some others, is still growing, however, not without adversity. Our dear pastor has resigned and expects to leave in May, and that leaves us as a flock without a shepherd, but we still trust in God that He will provide for one in the near future.

Several of our members are not able to worship with us now on account of illness, some in hospitals and others in their homes. Two from our group have just recently passed to that Great Eternal abode —Mrs. B. J. Stucky and Mrs. Albert Wiens, a young mother of three children.

An open communion service was held March 29. All Christians, whether members or non-members were welcome. A sunrise service was planned for Easter morning by the Senior C. E. A service of baptism and reception of members was on Easter. —Mrs J. S. Friesen, Corr.

LORRAINE AVENUE CHURCH Wichita, Kansas

On Easter Sunday the senior choir rendered the Easter cantata, "Christ Victorious," by Roy E. Nolte.

The Senior Christian Endeavor is trying to make this a banner year for the church. For each of the next nine months, the C. E. programs have been planned and the leader chosen for each program. —Marie M. Dyck, Corr.

Rev. Krehbiel Addresses New York Fellowship:
Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel spoke to the New York Mennonite Fellowship at their March meeting on the subject "The Pulse of the Church." In the course of the address Rev. Krehbiel compared the apostolic church and the modern church on such points as prayer, fellowship, stewardship, and Christian instruction.

Present at the meeting were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Westrich of West Hempstead, Long Island; Irene Sprunger of Berne, Indiana; Rev. J. Irvin Gnagey of Richfield Park, New Jersey; Marvin Nickel and Daniel Klassen from the Marlboro, New Jersey C.P.S. camp; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Niebuhr and Herman Niebuhr Jr. of New York; Gerhard Epp of Richmond Hill, New York; and the following students of Biblical Seminary: Martha Burkholder, Mary Becker, Paul Barkman Mr. and Mrs. Robert Behnkin, Jacob Friesen, and Arthur Kaiser.

JOTTINGS

—Missionary Albert Jantzens have arrived in California. They landed in San Francisco on Good Friday, and from there they went directly to Rev. F. F. Jantzens at Paso Robles. It is expected that they will soon go to Deer Creek, Oklahoma.

—Word has come that Brother Ed Yoder, prominent writer of Sunday School materials for the Old Mennonites, passed away recently.

—Miss Eva Pauls, on furlough from mission work in India, plans to go to Canada in April.

—St. John Church, Pandora, Ohio: Rev. Paul Shelly of the College faculty was our guest speaker on March 25. During the morning service four young people were welcomed into the church by baptism. Another special feature at this service was a vocal solo by Miss Fanny Basinger, who celebrated her eighty-sixth birthday during the week. Miss Basinger had a perfect Sunday School and church attendance record during 1945. The choir gave "The Mystery of Easter" on Good Friday evening. The interior of the parsonage is being remodelled.—Corr.

—The First Church of Hillsboro, Kansas, recently extended a call to Rev. H. T. Unruh to serve for a period of five years.

—Clinton, Oklahoma: Rev. August Schmidt, principal of the high school department at Meno, and a girls trio gave a program in the Herold Church. Rev. H. P. Fast conducted meetings in March. Each evening there was a Bible study in connection with the preaching. Rev. Fast brought a large chart along, "The End of the Age," which was helpful in his teaching the "Second Coming of Christ."

—Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio: Rev. A. J. Neuenchwander held a series of Lenten meetings on the subject "Problems of Salvation." The attendance was gratifying. The C. E. recently engaged in a very interesting and informative discussion on the proposal for peacetime military training. The subject attracted unusual interest among the older members of the church, who do not usually attend C. E. regularly. Many were there and took part. Rev. A. S. Rosenberger was in charge and made the discussion very effective. It was decided that many of our people should write our senators and representatives when the proper time comes. —Mrs. Edward Miller, Corr.

—Missionary J.B. Edigers, who have been spending their furlough in Newton, have gone back to their mission field at Clinton, Oklahoma. Rev. and Mrs. Albert Claassen, who had charge of the field during the absence of the Edigers, are back in Beatrice, Nebraska.

—Rev. Walter Gering will give an illustrated lecture on Puerto Rico in the Inman, Kansas, Church on the evening of April 15.

—The Bethesda Church, Henderson, Nebraska, is building up a post-war fund for the men in service.

—The Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas, hopes to celebrate its golden anniversary on May 6. This year also marks the fiftieth anniversary of the call of Rev. C. J. Goering (long-time Elder of the Eden Church) to the ministry.

—Mennonites, who are planing to give clothing for relief during the nation-wide clothing drive, are urged to send theirs to our Mennonite clothing centers.

—A beautiful "Good Friday Candlelight Communion Service" has been worked out by Christine O. Miller, Lind, Washington. If interested, you might write Mrs. Miller. You may want it for next year.

—Rev. P. P. Wedel suffered a light stroke on March 18, but by March 31st hoped to be back at work in a week or two —The approaching marriage of Carl M. Lehman and Miss Sally Miller was announced at Goshen, Indiana, on Easter Sunday. Carl Lehman is editor of the "Practical Notes" in the Senior-Adult Quarterly. Miss Miller is a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Alvin Miller of Sugar Creek, Ohio. She is a Senior at Goshen College. The two met during the relief training school which was held at Goshen two summers ago.

Correction

In the poem "When Spring Awakes," the twenty-third line should read:

And lo, the early morning lark soars far, its hymn begun,

The poem appeared in the issue of March 27, page 2.

—Waldo Kaufman, until recently a ministerial student at Bethel College, has accepted a call from the Bethel Mennonite Church, Hydro, Oklahoma, to serve as its pastor. He is to be ordained as minister and Elder in the First Mennonite Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas, on April 15, at 3 p. m. Rev. P. P. Tschetter, Pastor, invites the public to attend. The ordination will be by Rev. Phil. A. Wedel, with President Ed. G. Kaufman of Bethel College and Rev. P. P. Tschetter speaking. Brother Waldo Kaufman plans to begin his service at the Hydro Church on May 1.

—"The Spiritual Significance of the San Francisco Allied Conference" is the title of a talk to be given by Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert on NBC'S "National Radio Pulpit" program (Sundays, 10:00-10:30 a.m., EWT) on April 22.

—"Rev. A. H. Schultz of Nebraska will become the new minister at the East Swamp Church (Quakertown, Pa.) on the first of June."—"The Grace Mennonite Church Messenger."

Peacetime Military Conscription

By Leona Krehbiel

Today in the midst of a war, supposedly being fought to destroy dictatorship abroad, Americans are urged to adopt the conscript system which is the foundation of the totalitarian state. Permanent peacetime conscription is based on the idea that the individual exists for the state, not the state for the individual. This is a radical departure from the ideals of our founding fathers, and directly contrary to Christ's teaching regarding the sacredness of human personality.

The bills, now in Congress, for compulsory military training after the war would require one year of military service from all our young men at the time they reach their seventeenth birthday, or finish high school. Not only a year's training would be required, but after that year they would still be a part of the army as reserves, and forced to return periodically for refresher courses. Such a law would put the United States on a permanent wartime footing. The army once granted this much would soon be demanding more. Before long it would ask for two year's training on the argument that one year is not long enough to give a soldier the technical training required for modern warfare. Nor would conscription stop there, soon we could expect a drive to conscript young women of the same age.

An effort is being made to rush a bill through Congress now during the war, before the passions aroused by the conflict have time to cool off. General Marshall and the Secretary of the Navy have both used the argument that conscription should be adopted now so as to keep up an interest in military affairs and to discourage possible sentiments for disarmament. Undoubtedly they are fully aware of the fact that the American people, as a whole, did not want this war and are not giving it enthusiastic support. Thus remembering the disillusionment of the public after the last war, they may fear an even more serious reaction against war this time. In the period following the last war pacifists did a splendid job of peace education, although not good enough to prevent the present war. Is this pressure to pass peacetime conscription during the war an attempt to guard against pacifist activities after this war?

Can it be that those in charge of military affairs are afraid the pacifists might succeed this time?

Conscription has been the curse of Europe ever since Napoleon resorted to it in order to raise an army for his military campaigns. If compulsory military training made for peace, Europe should have become the most peaceful continent in the world; instead it has been the most belligerent, its soil has been drenched with blood, and it has been the source of conflict in all other parts of the world. Yet, today Americans are urged to adopt this evil to enforce the peace of the future. Against whom is our conscript army to be used? Surely not against our enemies whose military power we are aiming to destroy completely. Therefore, we must be planning to use it against our present allies. Apparently we do not trust the other members of the Big Three, in spite of the perfect agreement reached at Dumbarton Oaks and Yalta. Perhaps we have imperialistic ambitions which are likely to conflict with the ambitions of the other two.

Although history has proved conclusively the fallacy of trying to achieve peace by preparing for war, we are being told that compulsory military training is essential to preserve peace. Mr. Churchill has said that "the only way to insure peace is to be twice as strongly armed as your strongest enemy."^a To follow his advice would be the one sure way to make other nations fear and hate us and as a result form coalitions against us. After the war we will have a navy larger than the combined navies of all the rest of the world. Now, if we adopt peacetime conscription before the war ends, we will block whatever chances there may be for universal disarmament. As long as such a large and powerful nation as ours is armed to the teeth, we cannot expect the other nations to be willing to destroy their armaments. Of course we are told that our arms are merely for our defense, but other nations will also feel the need for defensive armaments. As a result the peoples of the world will be burdened by the cost of maintaining huge armaments and sooner or later these will be used in an even more destructive war than the one in which we are engaged at present. Someday we must learn that peace is not built upon suspicions, fears, armies, and bombs; but on goodwill, trust, cooperation, and the removal of the basic causes of conflict.

To make peacetime conscription compatible with the American people all sorts of irrelevant arguments are introduced to confuse the issue. It is urged that such training would improve the health in our country, educate for citizenship, solve our unemployment problem, and build moral character. Not a one of these arguments is valid.

In the first place the army accepts only those young men who are in excellent physical condition, the ones who need medical care are rejected. In this war one third of the rejections of the army were due either directly or indirectly to malnutrition deficiencies. If we want to have a healthy nation, we must begin many years before our young men reach their seventeenth birthday. Instead of wasting our money on our young men in the army, we should use it to provide an adequate diet and proper medical and dental care for all children born in our country.

The army may educate men to be good citizens in a dictatorship, but it cannot educate them to be good citizens in a democracy. Education in the army is aimed to instill the habit of blind and implicit obedience; while education for democracy must encourage the student to form his own opinions and judgments, and to develop his initiative.

It is true that placing 700,000 or more men into the army each year will reduce the number thrown on the labor market, but it will not remove those economic evils which cause unemployment. On the other hand it will give the employers an effective weapon for controlling labor. Any time the men, who are in the reserves, strike for better conditions they can immediately be threatened with a forced return into the army. This has been the experience of the laborers in the democratic Swiss Army.

As for the moral training of the army, surely no one who has observed our soldiers in the cities and on the trains can give any credence to this argument. Military training teaches men to destroy and kill. How can such training build men of high moral character? E. E. Conroy, head of the New York F.B.I., recently said at a criminologists' meeting, "commandos are going to be post graduates in crime." Have the family and church in America failed so wretchedly that we must now turn our young men over to the army for moral training?

Surely we Mennonites, if anyone, should oppose the adoption of military conscription in our country. Our forefathers left their homes in Europe to escape the evils of conscription. They came to America with the hope that they and their descendents might worship God according to the dictates of their conscience. How long can we hope to continue to do this, should conscription be forced upon our country? It would mean not merely the training of our young men for one year, but the complete militarization of all of American life. The American Legion is already advocating that our children be prepared for military service from the time they first enter school. In such an environment, how long can we maintain our way of life? Under those conditions our brothers in Europe have failed to uphold their peace principle. Why should we think we could be more successful than they?

Some of us are trying to convince ourselves that we would have a wonderful opportunity for witnessing to our peace testimony through an alternative service, a special privilege we expect the government to grant us. That is hardly being realistic, for it will be extremely difficult to get our young people to follow the teachings of our church after they have been subjected to the nationalistic and militaristic teachings in our public schools for twelve years. As a church we have failed sadly in this respect already—as witness the number of our young men who have taken full military service in the army or navy. Even if the majority of our men should accept the convictions of our church and take alternative service, what about the other young men who do not belong to our church, have we no responsibility or duty toward them? Surely we are not willing to allow the evils of militarism to be fastened upon them, and to send them out to slaughter and be slaughtered twenty or thirty years from now. All this talk about our rare opportunity should conscription come is extremely self-centered and selfish, for it shows an utter lack of concern for those outside our fold. We dare not call ourselves Christians, unless we share Christ's concern for all men, "even the least of these."

KNOWING CHRIST

E. Stanley Jones says that "This generation has been inoculated with a mild form of Christianity and is absolutely immune to the real thing." The mild form evidences itself in a superficial grasp of Christian ideals, ethics and activities. It knows about Christ, but does not know Him as an experiential reality. To know Him is to be so identified with Christ that He lives within us as Savior and Lord. It is in this way that we become new creatures in Christ Jesus, and it is as a result of this that all things become new.

The Wrath of God

A great lesson on the wrath of God is given in Matthew 18:23-35. It is the parable of a servant who was forgiven $10,000,000 by his king and then refused to forgive a fellow servant a debt of $20.00. As a result the first servant had to suffer the wrath of his lord. He was delivered unto the tormentors until he should pay all that he owed. Jesus ended the parable with the words "So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not everyone his brother their trespasses."

Let us use the parable in a modern situation. There was a leading nation with vast natural resources. It sinned greatly against God, but God who is slow to anger loved its people and forgave much. But the nation became unmindful of what it had been forgiven, and in a fury it turned upon three other nations which had been vexing it with the sinfulness of their armed might. And straightway it sought to grip these three nations by the throat, and it did so. But while all this was happening, the great king learned about it. Straightway he called the first nation to account and said, "How much have I forgiven thee, and now thou dost not forgive these three fellow nations. Since the forgiveness of thy sins has not taught thee to be forgiving, I will deliver thee to the tormentors to learn from torment what thou shouldst have learned from forgiveness." And he delivered that great nation unto exceeding torment in which its young men were slaughtered like animals and mothers cried until their eyes became dry with a ceaseless hurt.

Yes, Jesus says that our heavenly Father must treat us so unless we truly forgive each other from the end in the orderliness of God. Neglect or defiance of God in the orderliness of God. Neglect or defiance of his ways brings torment.

Man Reaps What He Sows

It is quite plain to man that in the realm of nature he reaps what he sows. Those of us who have planted peas will expect to reap peas and not beans. The whole natural process of sowing and reaping seems very obvious to us. Jesus referred to the same obvious fact when he said, "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" Paul pointed to the same fact that like produces like and not like unlike when he wrote "a man will reap just what he sows. . .,"

Gal. 6:7, Moffat. The law of physical nature is quite clear.

However, this law is not so obvious to man in the realm of the spiritual. Is not that why Jesus applied the example from nature to spiritual matters and Paul couched a great spiritual truth in terms of sowing and reaping? Just like primitive man, perhaps, did not know enough to plant wheat kernels (or whatever seed was available) to reap wheat in quantity, so today man does not seem to know enough or have faith enough to plant seeds of love to reap a harvest of love. Man is a master of science. By means of its formulas a scientist can say do so and so and the result will be so and so. Because of insight into causal relationships, various processes can be so controlled that the desired goals can be achieved. In science men are tracing out the orderly ways of God. Scientists have faith that those orderly ways exist, and then they go after them. But for many it is not so in the realm of the spirit. They are not so sure that God has orderly ways in this realm. Not filled with a great faith in them, they do not zealously search for them. The result, there is chaos in the realm of the spirit just as there once was comparative chaos in the realm of material inventions. Men plant hatred and destruction and expect a bountiful harvest of cooperation and goodwill. Germany planted conscription and expected to reap the blessings of peace for its people. But Germany's conscription brought conscription elsewhere, so much so, that some in the United States would today copy after Germany with peacetime conscription. Conscription brings conscription. Sow bitterness and you reap bitterness. Sow understanding and you reap understanding. Sow acts of goodwill and you reap acts of goodwill. Should it not be our faith that the law of sowing and reaping will work out as well in the realm of the spirit as it does in the plant world.

Members of One Body

From one viewpoint we can regard our General Conference as a Christian body with Christ as its head and the various boards and committees as its members. Using Paul's thought as given in I Cor. 12, we may say that there is a distinct need for each member, that is, board or committee, for each member has its definite function to perform for the welfare of the body as a whole. All members of the body need to cooperate smoothly if the body is to function in the right way. Whenever, one member gets more

"IF HIS SON SHALL ASK HIM?"

Our topic is only part of a question asked by Jesus in Matthew 7:9. However it is a very significant part of His question and one with which we wish to deal for a few minutes.

There are two possibilities found in this question which are of far-reaching importance to us. 1. A child may ask of us. What will we do if he does? 2. He may not ask questions anymore! Too often those who were either not ready or unwilling to answer questions when they were raised are the ones who complain most bitterly when the child goes to others for answers to his questions.

The facts before us are of vital interest to the home, the church and the schools. All of these need to recognize the fact that normal children do ask questions and that they expect answers which have meaning to them. They also need to recognize the distressing fact that there may come a time when they have lost their opportunities with those nearest and dearest to them because they neglected to understand how much questions mean to children who ask them.

The boy who came home from his first day of school and said that he did not want to go back because his teacher did not know enough made a statement which can give us food for thought. The teacher had plied and worried the little fellow with a lot of questions which meant little to him. He wanted to ask questions also but was not permitted to do so. The teacher, now dead, often told the story on himself with deep regret that he had thought more of how cleverly he had prevented a little boy from expressing himself than he had thought of the needs of the child.

There are good reasons why a normal child should ask questions. It is well to keep these in mind.

1. It is natural for the child to wonder. He wonders about everything imaginable, especially about those persons and things which come close to him.

2. He thinks. It is one thing to learn when we may expect to find what we call thought in a child, and it is another thing for us to meet the needs of his thinking at the right time and in the right way. The expressions of his thinking may surprise and even shock us. That is all the greater reason why we should draw him to us by helping him with this interesting experience in his life.

3. The child feels. Before we know it he feels with somebody or something. He wants fellowship. This is a great need in his rapidly developing power to arrange in orderly fashion the things he has been wondering about. He has had no time to establish any definite philosophy of life. We should not be surprised that he is both generous and selfish by turns with those whom he wants present. His fellowship is still in the making.

4. The child senses rather soon that there are some things which ought to be. If he is to have any convictions later worthy of the name he needs to be guided wisely when he expects us to show by our acts what we have expressed by our words. Perhaps this is the time when too many children cease asking questions of parents, other relatives, friends and teachers.

5. The child feels himself compelled to act. He sees something drifting through the air and runs after it. He hears a word that stirs his feeling and he wants to do what has been suggested to him. If he cannot act, he asks why. That is the time to answer him intelligently, sincerely and honestly.

Seven Thousand Consciences

The following is an article published in the Quote a national magazine, and because it is of special interest, we bring it in full.

"The Baptist Journal, Missions, has been making a survey of 7,000 conscientious objectors in 35 Civilian Public Service camps in the U.S. In speaking of young people, an army officer said: "The government pays me for following my conscience as a soldier. That's why I want to help the other fellow, who when he follows his conscience as a pacifist not only gets no pay, but has to shell out $35.00 a month and also buys his clothes, unless his family or his Church do it for him. If there were more as brave as those men, we might not have to go to war. What kind of courage does it take to be a "conchie"?"

"Among these men are 125 parachute fire-fighters. About 1600 are employed in hospitals at Welfare Island, N.Y., where he submits to nutrition and altitude tests, cancer and T.B. experimentation. Three times he has passed out completely because of the severity of the tests. The son of a well-known pastor has been immobilized over a period of weeks in a plaster cast for experimental research.

"These men have long become accustomed to the shout, "Slacker, draft-dodgers, yellow bellies." What really gets them down is the burden of financial worry and frustration. Almost fifty per cent are married. Many have little children. They not only receive no pay, but the government makes no allotment for dependents. Thus a real predicament, confronts the men who follow their consciences all the way."—Bulletin, Reedley Church.

Should Churches Establish and Maintain Hospitals for the Mentally Ill?

This is the second article in a series reprinted by permission from a symposium issued by the Hospital Section of the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa.. Copies of the symposium may be had for ten cents from the M. C. C.

The reason for giving thought to church hospitals for the mentally ill is based on the opportunity and the duty of the church to be concerned and responsible for its WHOLE constituency.

In view of the concensus of opinion expressed in a great many discussions that care of the mentally ill is not adequate in state institutions, we analyze the possibilities which lie in church-administered institutions.

First, let us not deceive ourselves into believing that we propose an easy task. If we cannot do better in establishing and administering mental institutions than those now in operation, perhaps our efforts would avail more if projected toward the betterment of present conditions. If we can improve the care of our mental casualties through the establishment of church-financed and administered institutions, and I think we can if we WILL, I am sure the church will be blessed in its service.

In a critical analysis of our problem we arrive at various conclusions of which the following are but a few:

We could have a more concentrated and devoted personnel if this project were approached as a missionary endeavor, as it must be if it is to be successful. I doubt seriously whether the church could afford to pay employee salaries equal to that which these employees would merit. The bane of state institutions is poor attendant staffing due to low salaries, and unless salaries are in keeping with contemporary wage scales, this will be a continuing problem. Should not then the church prayfully consider this as a missionary effort? Would not consecration and devotion to this work result in the sympathetic and kind care which we so much desire?

Conversely, let us not idly presume that sympathy is the curative medium for all mental illness. In numerous instances, the patient has sought the escape route for exigencies of modern life through mental indifference and breakdown. In such conditions, it has been shown that state institutions are able to effect improved mental behavior, whereas private institutions (perhaps the nearest approach to church-owned and operated institutions we have for comparative purposes) have been less able to strike at the root of the illness. Why this? Where mental patient has been brought to face reality, there comes to the fore a desire to improve and once more resume the rightful place in society, and the recovery is accelerated. If life's realities become too complicated, catering to every whim is often the means of aggravating the root of the mental decadence.

From the foregoing we can derive the conclusion that trained personnel in the care and treatment of mental ailments is necessary. We must have men with Christian background and the proper training in psychology and psychiatry to give a healthy balance to the administration of such church institutions. Shocking though it may be to some, the ministers of the churches need not hope to cure our mentally ill through great revival efforts in our church mental hospitals. Their part is to aid people to a healthy mental outlook on life through a practical, solid, and wholesome Christian experience. Any contribution from the ministers after people are mentally ill and in our institutions should be through cooperation with the trained personnel in charge. This could be most effectively expressed through the organized religious program for the patients (chapel services, etc.) and through personal counseling after having learned and studied the case history of the patient.

Another factor to consider is whether or not we shall put all of our funds into one large and efficient hospital or add wings to our present general hospitals to care for our people, for each institution must be equipped to care for physical and mental ailments. In the first event a great many of our people would necessarily be a long distance from home, which may give rise to some objection in addition to a negative therapeutic value from lack of contact with loved ones. Weighed against this would be the positive value of more efficiency in the total treatment. In the second event we would have a much better distribution of our service for our unfortunates, though at a sacrifice of the more efficient over-all treatment of our mental casualties.

Thus we arrive at the final conclusion that perhaps before we attempt a project of such magnitude and yet of such opportunity we should educate fully our church constituency. Few of us in CPS realized even on a small scale the all-inclusiveness of this work and even now are only in the initial stages of full realization. The church must know where it is leaping before it leaps.

REAPING WHERE THOU HAST NOT SOWN, AND GATHERING WHERE THOU HAST NOT STREWED

By Harold Ratzlaff

These words were spoken by the slothful servant in his answer to his master when he was called on for an account of his activities during the master's absence. As they stand (in Matthew 25:24) they constitute a part of his excuse for having been unfaithful. But I want to take this opportunity to share with you an experience which has brought the words of that servant to my memory each time I contemplate it.

Since my time in the Champa district, we had never gone to the village of Bansula to preach or teach the gospel of Christ's saving grace. We had been busy in other villages and baptisms were few indeed. But suddenly, on the first of February of this year, we got word from Bansula; some people wanted baptism there. On that same day it was my privilege to baptize three souls whom God had taken into His fold.

I hope and pray that I am not a "wicked and slothful servant," like the one who spoke the above words, but as I baptized those three souls I was certainly 'reaping where I had not sown and gathering where I had not sown and gathering where I had not strewed.' I had never seen those people before that day of their baptism but as I talked to them about Christ and about their belief in Him, they left no doubt in my mind as to the fact that they had and were experiencing His saving grace and that they were taken into God's fold. Hence the baptismal rite was administered and that amid great joy on our part and even a certain amount of joy on the part of the non-Christian villagers who could not help but see that these three people were receiving something which meant more than temporal life to them.

Many years before the seed had been sown in this village. The gospel of salvation through Christ had been told to these people but they were only now accepting it. I felt only one lack as I administered baptism to those people and that was the absence of Dr. P. A. Penner, of Mrs. Blackwood (known to our workers as Miss Lehman) and of others who did sow the seed in those people's hearts. In the servant's lord of our parable, it tells us that the servant's lord came to receive his own. Certainly the Lord Christ was receiving His own as those people confessed

Him there, even though it was at the hand of one who had not done the sowing, and I am sure that those who did the sowing would also have rejoiced had they been privileged to be there that day.

ONLY THIRTY-ONE NURSES IN THE STATE OF KANSAS?

H. E. DESTER M. D.

Major General Hance, writing in the Indian Medical Gazette of May, 1944, gives the following challenging facts. According to his article, India has one doctor in 10,000 of population, one nurse to 56,000, one qualified pharmacist to 4,000,000, one qualified dentist to 350,000.

On the basis of this proportion Kansas would have had only 31 nurses, basing the estimate on 1927 statistics of Kansas. What will be the future health conditions of Kansas and the United States since these conditions prevail in your neighboring country?

According to Major General Hance's estimate, India should have 300,000 more doctors, 778,000 more nurses, 120,000 more dentists.

Ignorance is one of the chief causes of India's appalling health conditions. Several days ago I was called to a village some three miles out in the jungle. The mother had been in labor three days. On receiving such a call the first thought is, "Poor woman, no food, and practically no water for three days!" On arriving at the village I found that the woman had been in coma for twelve hours or longer. I had no idea that she would live through the night. This is the fourth day and she is still living. They brought her to the hospital the next day after delivery.

Are we doing our part in training men and women to meet these needs? Until they are trained, are we willing to go and to send? Our Medical Association here in India thinks that the medical college for men and women, to be enlarged and established at Vellore, is the outstanding contribution that we can make towards meeting India's great health needs.

Have you read, "So that Mothers May Live," in The Reader's Digest, November, 1943? "Right now Dr. Scudder and her friend, Gertrude Dodd (age 85), are in the U. S. raising money to improve the school." This is quoted from the article in The Reader's Digest.

Marie J. Regier Sends Good News from China

John Regier, father of Marie J. Regier, received the following message on March 27, 1945. The message which came to Whitewater, Kansas, on this date had been sent off from the Civilian Assembly Center, Weihsien, Shantung, China, on February 25, 1944. The message read: "Comfortable, happy, cross section of life in camp: saints, sinners, successes, failures, births, deaths, weddings, but no rich and poor. Greet the friends. Much love."

REPORT BY CATHERINE NISWANDER, PHILADELPHIA

I can say with the Psalmist, "Bless the Lord, O my soul: and all that is within me, bless His Holy Name. Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all His benefits." Yes, God gives grace, even tho one has to at times, well, as the old saying goes, act as if one had not noticed it, and with as much grace as possible just "let it out the other ear." I do praise God for grace He gives, and for strength for the work.

Over a thousand calls were made, and much Christian literature was distributed. The little paper Rev. Plenert ordered for our church, called "The Visitor" has been a great help. People like to read it and seem to get benefit from it. The Sunday School and the Women's Missionary Society paid for some of the literature, and the rest was obtained from various sources.

Some new children and some parents have been brought into the Sunday School; some of these families have already moved away. Most of them are renters and move a great deal. Many babies were enrolled for the Cradle Roll Superintendent.

A few garments were given to some children. Very little relief work seems to be needed in these days. as most every one has work.

The Community, in the immediate vicinity of our church, west of Germantown Avenue is getting to be largely Jewish, and further over one finds many colored people.

East of Germantown Avenue many foreigners are moving in, Greeks, Russians, and Ukrainians of the Greek Orthodox Church, Armenians of the Armenian Church, Hungarians, Poles, Albanians, Italians and others, who are mostly strong Catholics. Then there are also some Jews scattered through the district. And one finds many colored in sections on Reese, 6th, and Orkney Streets. Also some on Berks, Norris, Hewson, and Leithgow Street. One also finds some colored scattered here and there through the district. You can see by these facts that this district is changing, and because of this our church here may never be a very large church.

It is interesting to note the reaction of Jewish people toward Christian literature. Some accept it willingly and courteously, others indifferently, but some reject it furiously. Catholics react somewhat similarly toward what they consider Protestant literature.

At the meetings of the Ladies Aid, they asked me to have charge of the devotions, and in the Women's Missionary Society to serve on the program committee, and to help with the sewing group on Wednesdays.

In Sunday School I taught a class, served on the Friendship Circle, and was Superintendent of the Junior Christian Endeavor. Twenty-three children were taken to a Bible Club dinner in the city. On the World Day of Prayer they asked me to give the message to the Children's Group of this district. On June 3rd, seventeen of our boys and girls were taken to the Jr. C. E. Conference of the Eastern District at Quakertown. On November 4th four of our children went along to the Eastern District Jr. C. E. Christmas Rally at East Swamp Church.

Served as a member of the Constitution Committee of the Eastern District Women's Organizations, and as President of the Women's Federated Bible Classes of this District. Represented our Mennonite Women's Groups in the Women's Interdenominational Union of Philadelphia, and served as a member on the Children's Worker's Council of Christian Education.

A temperance message was given to two of our Sunday School groups, and a message one Sunday morning during Rev. Plenert's absence.

Acted as one of the boosters for our retreats. The Eastern District Retreat Committee asked me to serve as Girl's Counselor at the three retreats, and to have charge of devotions at the Junior Retreat.

Over one hundred children were enrolled for our Vacation Bible School before it opened. We had over eighty in attendance.

Several messages were given during my vacation in August.

Emphasize the Positive

The world is full of angels. Angels in disguise, they are, and some not even very much disguised, for the love of Jesus and the light of heaven shines through the thin human veneer very plainly.

The correspondent recently had the privilege of being a patient in one of our hospitals, and there the angels began appearing. If you have never been ill, never bereaved, never in trouble, or never in need of help in a Christian community, this will sound highly imaginative and unreal. But if you have, then you know what is meant.

First they began appearing in the form of the neighbors next door and the neighbors up the street, and then the folks farther away. You could tell that they were angels by the things they did and the way they did them: day by day taking care of the child, running errands, dropping in to tidy up the house, do the dishes; some spending money, others spending even more precious hours and steps and weariness—and all with a "no-trouble-at-all" attitude that took away the heavy weight of indebtedness which some gifts bring with them.

Every nurse and every helper in the hospital seemed to work "as unto Him." There was no mechanical coldness; the work was done as if it were enjoyed. One had the feeling Elijah must have had when he discovered that there were yet seven thousand in Israel that had not bowed the knee unto Baal.

After looking long and hard at the war and the darkness of the world, let a little of His God given trouble come along to you and perhaps you will see a comforting flock of angels such as this, sent right along with the trouble to remind you of Him.

He emphasized the positive. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another," John 13:35.

The love of God is poured out to us through the love of others.

Whom Shall We Send?

By N. E. Byers

I can imagine a Mennonite congregation that became interested in sending out one of their own number to represent them in the work of foreign missions. They believed in their own church and denomination and in the distinctive beliefs they held, and they wanted to be personally represented in the great work of Christianizing the world.

In looking about for some one to send they found a fine young man who was an earnest and sincere Christian but lately he had been attending the large Presbyterian church in the city nearby. He thought it had a more fluent preacher, a wonderful choir, and he especially liked the teacher of the young men's class in the Sunday School. There was also a young woman who was a very devoted Christian, but she usually attended meetings at the Tabernacle in town. She thought they were more spiritual, and she enjoyed the stirring, evangelistic meeting they conducted every Sunday evening, and she was disturbed because the preacher said her people were not fundamentalists.

Now these were fine Christians and well qualified to go as missionaries, but their congregations did not think they met their needs. They wanted some one of their own fellowship who was in harmony with the teaching of their own church to represent them in the field. If they wanted to send out a Presbyterian they might better just hand their money to the Presbyterian Board and have them send him out. After all being baptized in a Mennonite church and having one's name on that church roll does not make one a Mennonite.

The problem would be much the same if the General Conference Mission Board wanted a candidate to represent them abroad. They might find a fine candidate, well-trained, but had spent four college years and three seminary years in the schools of other denominations. If during these seven formative years he had all his fellowship and worship with another church and was trained by them for service in their church, would he be one of us? If we want to send out those of other faiths why go to the added expense of having our own board send them out?

Of course, we do not have a seminary and so what can our young people do for their final training? I wonder who is responsible for our lack in this respect? We are in the position of an army waiting to send out troops before they have completed their training. But an army would not do that—"for the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light."

We have been so eager to send out workers that we didn't have the wisdom and patience to build up an efficient and complete training program. Our Mission Board seems more able to make plans and get support to extend work than the College and Seminary Boards are to complete their programs.

Is the work of our boards properly coordinated? Perhaps, this is a problem for the next meeting of the General Conference. Should we continue to expand our missionary program before we have a complete and satisfactory training system? Let us plan to have workers who really represent our church to man all our missionary enterprises.

FACTS ABOUT THE HYMN, "AH, DEAREST, LORD JESUS"

The hymn, "Ah, dearest Lord Jesus" (534), was written by Johann Heerman (1585-1647), one of the greatest of German hymn writers. By many he is regarded as second only to Paul Gerhardt. He was dedicated to the ministry and became a pastor, but owing to ill health he was compelled to retire, and devoted himself to literary work. The hymn was written during the miseries of the Thirty Years War. It was written for Passiontide and was entitled "The Cause of the Bitter Sufferings of Jesus Christ and Consolations from His Love and Grace." The author suffered years of privations and persecutions, which may account for the tenderness and depth of feeling that characterizes his hymns. The translation is by Robert Bridges, an English scholar and surgeon, who gave up a successful practice of medicine in order to devote himself to literature and music. In 1913 he was made poet laureate of England.

The grandly impressive tune, "Herzlieber Jesu," was composed by the distinguished musician and writer of chorales, Johann Cruger (1598-1640). It has been observed that nearly five-sevenths of the whole melody has a downward movement which accounts for some of its intensely solemn character.

Following Christ

By Gordon D. Kaufman

"And (Jesus) saith unto them, Follow me." (Matthew 4:19.)

The chief job of all of us who claim to be Christians is to follow Christ. It is very important, therefore, that we comprehend as nearly in full as possible just what the conception of following Christ involves. It is of course obvious that if Christ were living on this earth today, and we would recognize him as our spiritual leader (which is doubtful) the job of following him would be greatly simplified. However, since such a happy situation is not the case, it is our duty as Christians to determine both collectively and individually just what kind of a life Christ would be living if he were on this earth today, and then to attempt with all of our strength to live up to that Christ-like pattern. This is what constitutes "following Christ."

Many Christians today attempt to pick the story of the historical Christ out of its geographical, ethical, political, and theological setting and instead place it in the cultural setting of now and here, yet not allowing the chief character of that story, the Christ, to undergo any change whatsoever in even the details of his adjustment to his environment. In other words, many Christians make the great mistake of projecting their leader into a radically new and different environment and then saying that his reactions will be identical with those which he exhibited in the old environment, irrespective of the fact that the stimuli which are responsible for those reactions are not at all the same. This is not to say that the general pattern and spirit of his actions would not be identical with the general pattern and spirit of his historical actions, but it does mean that in the somewhat unimportant, yet many, many times enacted details of living there would be some radical differences from the historical.

Putting it more concretely: Simply because Christ wore sandals and a robe does not mean that we, too, in order to be Christ-like should wear sandals and robes. Rather we should look a little deeper and attempt to determine Christ's reason for wearing such articles. His reason in this particular case was, of course, that robes and sandals were worn by the common laymen of his day, and he wished to be identified with that group. Our judgment, then, in this specific case would, of course, be that, in order to be Christ-like, we should maintain our persons in keeping with the customs of the common men of our day. Being Christ-like means also that, just as Christ was always ready to criticize constructively some of the baser aspects of the religious organization of his group and certain of the obviously hypocritical persons who were delegated to administer them (though he never rejected fully his group's religious organization) so we, too, should probably not reject the religious organizations with which we are affiliated, but should at least be ready to criticize both organizations and leaders where we are convinced that criticism is due and necessary. This line of thought has very important implications. Many persons see many evils in their church, and they say that therefore they feel they must sever their relationship with the body. Such action would not be following Christ's example. On the other hand, many persons, probably many more than in the first case, are entirely too prone to accept their church's positions on most questions without criticism or even inquiry into the reasons for those positions. It is important to remember that this position is no more Christ-like than the first. If we are to be followers of Christ at all, we must be intelligent followers of Christ, ones who can intelligently criticize and constructively rebuild the Church of Christ wherever it fails to fulfill its purpose.

Following Christ, then, means to attempt to solve life's problems by interpreting them in the light of Christ's spirit. It means that we need not retain and participate in many practices simply because Christ participated in them, but it also means that we should not reject high-handedly all practices of the church and common man of today simply because we feel that they are superfluous and perhaps superstitious. But most important of all, for us to be Christ-like means that we must influence all others whom we contact to become more Christ-like.

MENNO SIMON'S PRINTSHOP AND BURIAL PLACE

After having been a traveling bishop for many years without a home, Menno Simons finally found a place of refuge near Hamburg in the Province of Sleswig Holstein. The owner of the land had seen how the Mennonites were persecuted in the Netherlands just because they differed in their religious beliefs and practices. He invited them to settle on his estate in Wuestenfelde which was a desert field. Soon Mennonites from the northern countries congregated at this place. Menno established his headquarters and a print shop here. He was buried in his own garden and a plain monument with a bronze plate in which Menno holds a Bible in his hands marks the place, as can be seen on the picture. The other picture shows the printshop in which Menno Simons' writings were printed. He himself is supposed to have planted the linden tree in front of it. In 1929 many thousands of Mennonites from Russia went to Moscow in order to get permission to leave the country because of terror and persecution. Only a few thousand gained this permission. From a temporary camp some of them visited this historic place where Menno Simons was buried. Those above seventy appear on the picture. Through the help of their brethren in Europe and America they have meanwhile found new homes in Canada, Brazil, and Paraguay. In our day homes are being broken up again. Many are without country, shelter, and food. And Christ is still saying, "In as much as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren ye have done it unto me."—Cornelius Krahn.

Letter from Switzerland

Switzerland, because of its neutrality and its geographical position in Europe, has become a haven for many war refugees. For some time it was known that Swiss Mennonites have had a part in ministering to the need of the refugees, but only recently has direct word been received concerning the relief situation and the Mennonite activities. A letter, dated October 17, 1944, written by Fritz Gerber, pastor of the Mennonite congregation at Langnau, was received February 7, 1945, by the Central Committee.

Concerning the refugee situation in Switzerland, Brother Gerber writes, "Besides the Italian refugees we have over 10,000 French children in Switzerland at this time. Among these children there are also Mennonites from the Montbeliard region who according to my knowledge have found shelter with our brethren and sisters in the Jura. But daily more refugees enter the country. The soldiers at the borders often have to witness unspeakably heartrending situations. Oh, this satanic war!"

In March, 1944, when the lines of communication with Switzerland had been opened, a cable was sent to Brother Gerber stating that Mennonites in America were eager to assist the Swiss Mennonites in their relief efforts. It was June before direct word from Brother Gerber was received, but it was favorable and suggested that financial assistance be sent. Accordingly, in July the M.C.C. passed a motion to send $500 monthly to be used through Mennonite channels for the assistance of needy war sufferers. Funds were transmitted for the months of August, September, October, and November. Because of the difficulty of communication reports regarding the use of the funds were delayed. Upon the receipt of the above-mentioned letter, it was decided to continue sending $500 monthly, beginning March 1.

Concerning the contributions sent to Switzerland, Brother Gerber writes, "Our Swiss Committee transmits your generous donation in your name to the refugee camps and relief services. The good brethren in America can be assured that the money will be spent in accordance with their desires. . . . My greetings go out also to your congregations and heartfelt thanks to all the benefactors for their service in the name of Christ."

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

A TERRIBLE THOUGHT

If we have our choice between pleasant and terrible thoughts we naturally prefer the pleasant ones, but the terrible thoughts are the sobering ones. They are the thoughts that cause us to think most deeply.

Following the War Map

As we follow the course of the present war in Europe on the maps of our daily papers we are compelled to think of Mennonite history. There is hardly a single area in the entire European war theatre, except Italy, where heavy fighting has been done that has not touched areas where Mennonites are settled. Many American Mennonites have their ancestral homeland in one of these European centers. Several years ago it was in the Ukraine, then in the Volhynia district of Eastern Poland, now in the Danzig area where about fourteen thousand Mennonites live. In Konigsberg, Elbing, and Marienberg are located large Mennonite congregations. On the Western Front where the heart of the fighting has been going on are names of cities familiar to us; Mulhausen, Belfort, Strasbourg, Karlsruhe, Colmar, Krefeld (from which the first Mennonites in America sailed) Emden, Hamburg, and Berlin all are the homes of Mennonite congregations.

The Terrible Thought

As one reads the accounts and sees the pictures of the obliteration bombing, the wiping out of homes, and the blotting out of towns and cities one wonders how many of our twenty-two thousand German Mennonite brethren are victims of the war carnage. Then comes the terrible thought that perhaps some of our four thousand American Mennonite boys in military service are spotting those targets, releasing those bombs and throwing those explosives that result in obliteration, devastation, starvation. And the equally horrifying contemplation that German Mennonite boys are shooting down our planes, firing cannons, killing and wounding men who may be Mennonite boys from Holland, Russia, and America. Brothers in Jesus Christ are wounding and killing each other. Why are they doing it? Because that is the nature of war; because they are responding to the call of their country which does not operate according to the ethics of Jesus Christ, nor according to the will of God. Mennonites could not have avoided the war, but brother could have been prevented from bombing brother if both had been true to the faith of their fathers. It might have meant enduring suffering rather than inflicting it, but that would not have been difficult because the suffering would have been for a victorious cause. As it is both are the losers. In war nobody wins except Satan.

Wichita Church Wants to Build

Wichita, Kansas, March 25, 1945

Wichita's new house of worship shall, with the help and by the grace of our LORD and MASTER, become a reality. This is the determination of the members of the Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, even though the obstacles are many and sometimes seem insurmountable.

It is impossible for us to start the actual work of building at this time because no priorities are being given for any private construction that cannot be classed as war work. Last week our committees in charge of the work met with the architect to look over and discuss the plans that he is making for us. The architect is now completing the details of the plans. Just as soon as there is a chance to get priorities we intend to put in our application. In the meantime we are diligently working on the task of obtaining more money. Prices of material and wages of labor are now higher than they were when we started planning, and we realize that they may go higher before we get our building complete. Consequently, it will take more money. Then too, material and labor are hard to obtain, which will probably delay the work. With the growth of Wichita, restrictions are also increasing. We had hoped to be able to move our old parsonage to the back part of our lots and temporarily use it for Sunday School rooms. Our City Building inspector has, however, informed us that this will not be permitted, because our buildings will be too close together, making it a fire hazard. This means that the old parsonage must either be torn down or moved off. It also means that in order to have sufficient room for our Sunday School and for the needed growth of our Mission Project (The Week Day Bible School) it will be necessary to build on some Sunday School rooms. So now we are hoping and praying that we may be able to obtain sufficient funds so that we can at least build the exterior walls of these much needed Sunday School rooms and if the money does not last the interior can be completed while they are in use.

As these problems arise they challenge us to put forth ever greater efforts in the work. This war has made Wichita a large industrial center. It will undoubtedly continue to be such. This also means that it will always be a large and live mission field for the church. May the Lord give His followers grace, wisdom, and courage to meet the challenges of this mission field and develop them to the fullest extent. This is our prayer.

We are glad and thankful for the assistance of friends in this work. We again thank those many friends who have remembered our work in their prayer and those who have sent contributions. May all our friends join us in bringing our work before the Throne of Grace. Any individual who wishes to give direct financial aid may do so by sending his gift to the church at 655 South Lorraine Avenue, Wichita, Kansas.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Ellis Graber, Souderton, Pa.

APRIL 22—For me to live is Christ. Phil. 1:21.

Have you and I really decided what is the central purpose in our life? And have we fully dedicated ourselves to this one thing? We are told that Bernard of Clairvaux placed over the door of his cell where he worked the sign "Bernard, why are you here?" so that every time he entered his place of work he had to face anew the great purpose of his life. You and I need to ask ourselves that question as we go about our daily work. "_____, why are you here?" We too, must be able to say with the apostle "For me to live is Christ."

APRIL 23—Let him that readeth understand. Matt. 24:15

Of course, all Christians read the Bible, but do we really understand? There is a big difference between reading and understanding. One may eat much and be undernourished. One may read much and still be ignorant, or one may read and yet have mental indigestion. Yes, one may even know great literature and still not partake of its goodness. A man who could quote the entire New Testament served a long term in a state penitentiary. You and I must not only read but also understand—we must put the actual message of our Bible reading into practice if we are to say with Paul, "For me to live is Christ."

APRIL 24—For who hath despised the day of small things? Zech. 4:10.

A lettuce seed or a mustard seed is a very small thing. Some of the things you and I do day after day may also seem rather small. Doing the chores on the farm, tending to details in business, doing the family laundry, keeping the yard clean—all these may not seem to important. We might call them "little things," but wait till they have reached their ultimate conclusion. These "Big little things" are seeds that will some day bring a harvest. They are also included in the verse "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus—" Col. 3:17

APRIL 25—Suffer hardship with me, as a good soldier of Christ Jesus. II Tim. 2:3

When in our daily life we come upon a difficulty we are all too often prone to attempt walking around it. Perhaps we sidestep the difficulty, crawl out from under it or even push it off on someone else. And then later when difficulties come again we don't have the power and strength to meet them because we neglected development of our God-given strength.

What the apostle asks of us is to measure these hardships as they come. Do not sidestep them. Meet them. Run a good race. Don't avoid difficulties but pray for strength to overcome them, and then if you must endure hardship endure it as the apostle did—as a good soldier of Jesus Christ.

APRIL 26—If any man would come after me, let him deny himself. Luke 9:23a.

Persons who came in contact with Jesus and who expressed their desire to be disciples of his were put to the test. Not only the twelve but also the rich young ruler, Nichodemus—Zaccheus were given a test of self-denial. And the responses Jesus received were varied. Some went away sorrowful for they had great riches, while others did put self aside and gave all to follow the master.

For us today who would be followers it may at times become easy to give some possession or give up a convenience for the cause of the Church. But self-denial means far more than just casual concern for the Church. If we truly desire to follow Him our entire self, all it is and has, must be dedicated to Him. The Christian Way, then, comes first and all possessions including self are subordinated and determined by that way.

APRIL 27—and take up his cross daily, and follow me. Luke 9:23b

The word 'cross' appears in the New Testament twenty-eight times. But when we study the gospels we find that according to our records Jesus used the word only at two occasions. First, in the above passage and secondly when he said, "Whosoever doth not bear his own cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple." Luke 14:27 Those are serious words. You and I have a cross that we must take up daily and follow Him. And that cross will not be a piece of wood. It will not merely be a word which we can repeat for our own satisfaction. No, as you and I follow him it will mean suffering, heartaches, pain, drudgery, sorrow—but we look to Him for the power for each day, for only then will we have strength that will enable us to bear the cross. And certainly we do no less than follow for he has made a way for us.

APRIL 28—And the Lord said . . . Lift up now thine eyes and look from the place where thou art . . ." Genesis 13:14

Begin from the place where you are! That is the place for making a beginning. Often we begin to think about the rich heritage of our Mennonite forefathers and perhaps secretly wish we could make a beginning with them. And then we continue by letting our dreams get the best of us and so we see a world of the age to come. Quite different from what it is today. But the admonition coming to us is to claim the heritage of our Fathers, to take firm hold on it, and then make a beginning.

THE WESTERN DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The Western District Sunday School Convention met April 8, 1945, in the Alexanderwohl' Mennonite Church, near Goessel Kansas. This was the sixty-first annual' convention. The church was filled to capacity both at the afternoon and evening sessions. The convention theme was, "A Charge To Keep." The topical discussions centered around adequate preparation, presentation, and application of the Sunday School lesson; consisting of faith and fruit-bearing and evangelism. Dr. I. D. Harris spoke on "Evangelism, the Supreme Mission of the Church." Habakkuk 3:2. Music for the convention was rendered by the Bethel College Orchestra, a massed junior choir, and by various churches. The new officers are as follows: President, Rev. D. J. Unruh, Newton; Vice president, Albert Graber, Pretty Prairie. A delicious lunch was served by the ladies of the Missionary Society of

Local Committee Requests Cooperation

Due to critical problems pertaining to both food and lodging the Local Conference Committee is attempting a survey of probable attendance.

The local Committee is printing the coupon below, in all Conference papers and other publications in the earnest hope that everyone (delegate or visitor) who plans to attend even though his plans are uncertain will fill in the coupon, turn it in to their pastor or send it direct to the Local Conference Committee.

Pastors, upon receiving these coupons, are earnestly requested to send them to the address below by May (and again May 20).

This is not a registration. It does not bind you to attend. It merely gives the women in charge of food preparation and lodging the information they need.

Food rationing points, shortage of gasoline, and bedding seem to make this almost essential.

Prices of meals the last conference were: Mornings, 20-25 cents; noons, 40 cents; evenings, 35 cents. They will be somewhat higher this conference. Dormitory rooms on the campus will be 50 cents per person per night.

For accommodations in private homes the following prices are suggested: (arrangements to be made with the host) Rooms: per person per night.....50
breakfast.....25

REMEMBER: Give this coupon to your pastor or mail direct to: B. Bargaen, Chairman, Committee on Registration, North Newton, Kansas.

Place a check-mark in the square of the appropriate day.

1. Which days of the conference do you plan to take breakfast at the Conference Dining Hall?
2. Which days of the conference do you plan to take noon meal at the Conference Dining Hall?
3. Which days of the conference do you plan to take the evening meal at the Conference Dining Hall?
4. Which nights do you wish the Conference to reserve a room for you?

RELIEF

Reconditioning Homes in India

Our four Mennonite India relief workers were completing final plans on a proposed house building project, according to their January report. The project aims to rehabilitate the homes of widows with small children and low-income laborers. Through the four areas where Mennonite relief is given the brethren found a minimum of 200 homes that seriously need attention. Approximately half of these need only new roofs, but the rest need to be rebuilt from the ground up.

Personnel Changes in Puerto Rico

Roland Kaufman has charge of the community center at Comerio, where a rural housing project has been established. He also conducts group work in health and physical education in the Comerio High School. Kaufman's transfer placed Victor Buller in charge of the La Plata community center left by Kaufman.

Ten Tons of Clothing Shipped from Newton Center

A clothing shipment of 20,000 pounds, processed and baled at the Newton, Kansas, clothing center, is enroute to an eastern seaport, where it will be shipped to the Middle East relief area. Delvin Kirchhofer, director of the Mennonite relief unit, has requested clothing, especially shoes, to meet the present needs of the refugees. The assurance has been given that, should the refugees return to their homes before the clothing arrives, the clothing would be transshipped to the Balkan areas. This could be done with greater facility than attempting to ship clothing to Europe directly from the United States.

Medical Activity in Puerto Rico Unit

Recent developments in the medical program of the La Plata unit are community advancements. The permanent x-ray equipment for the La Plata community arrived in February. The U. S. Public Health Service has loaned a dark field microscope to the hospital. One Monday, recently, 200 patients were treated at the hospitals and clinics by Dr. Amstutz, Troyer, and Stover.

Dr. and Mrs. Preheim have exchanged with Dr. Troyer, and have transferred to clinic work at the Buena Vista and Rincon medical dispensaries, Hugh Hostetler accompanying them as laboratory assistant. Dr. Troyer now assists at the La Plata Hospital.

Relief Briefs

Robert Geigly, after two years of M.C.C. service among the Mennonites in Paraguay, is enroute to the States on the "Rio Tunuyan," a boat that left Buenos Aires March 28.

All members of the Mennonite Middle East unit gathered in Cairo, March 17, for a period of spiritual inspiration and for a report of the latest developments pertaining to European relief opportunities. Three members have been delegated to keep informed and report accordingly. Several unit members planned to spend Easter-leave days in Palestine.

CONF. C. P. S.

Mental Hygiene Program in C.P.S.

The Mental Hygiene Program of C.P.S. has grown out of a concern on the part of a number of C.P.S. men serving in mental hospitals and training schools that something should be done to coordinate the results of the experiences of C.P.S. men and improve the attendant care in general of mental patients. Selective Service has recognized the value of this organization and has permitted two C.P.S. men to serve on detached service in order to devote their full time to the promotion of the program.

One of the first activities of this organization was the monthly publication of The Attendant. This paper is concerned with ideas, attitudes, and methods directly related to work in mental hospitals. In many ways this is the first attempt on the part of mental hospital attendants to share their problems and ideas and thus seek to make a greater contribution in their work. The Attendant may be secured for fifty cents per year by ordering from P. O. Box 6000, Torresdale, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

The Mental Hygiene Program is also active in inter-unit exchange of materials which relate to methods of handling difficult patients, recreational programs, etc. A summary of the experiences of C.P.S. men in mental hospitals is being made and is being prepared in cooperation with mental hospital authorities. A study of all state and federal laws which govern the care of mental patients is being carried out. More recently, this organization has begun the preparation of a series of pamphlets designed to help public understanding of and interest in the mental patient and his care.

Director for Puerto Rico Unit Leaves

Harry Martens, formerly M.C.C.-C.P.S. regional director for the Eastern area, flew by plane from Miami, March 31, to assume directorship of the Mennonite C.P.S. and relief unit in Puerto Rico. Brother Martens relieves H. Clair Amstutz who was serving as director of the unit pro tem. Erwin Goering formerly regional director of the Rocky Mountain area succeeds Harry Martens as Eastern area director. David Suderman succeeds Erwin Goering in the Rocky Mountain area.

MEMBERS OF ONE BODY

of the vital blood supply than it should normally receive, the other members of the body are bound to suffer. Is the blood supply going to the various members of our Conference body in the right proportion, or should some members, which have very important functions to perform, receive more blood? Neglect of one or two or more important members finally harms all members. Paul writes, "Yes, God has tempered the body together. . . so that there may be no disunion in the body, but that the various members should have a common concern for one another." I Cor. 12:24, 25, Moffatt.

Missionaries to Africa

Rev. Marvin Eck, member of the Zoar Church, Goltry, Oklahoma, and Mrs. Eck, member of the Church at Inola, Oklahoma, are missionaries to West Africa under the Sudan Interior Mission Board. They had expected to leave last August but were not able to get the passport for their child. They finally got the passport and left not long ago.—Mrs. J. W. Bergen, Corr.

JOTTINGS

Marvin Dirks Family arrives in U. S.

Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Dirks and children landed in San Francisco on April 8. According to a letter from them, they planned to leave by train for Newton on Wednesday, April 11. If all went well they should have reached Newton, Kansas, on April 13.

—Note of thanks: Praise, glory, thanks and honor be to our God! Rev. and Mrs. Albert Jantzen and children have arrived safely at San Francisco. This is wonderful before our eyes. They landed on March 30.

Now to all who interceded for their release and their safe sea voyage, we wish to express our heartfelt thanks. And may the others also soon be safe on American soil. Let us not forget our Elizabeth Goertz and Marie J. Regier still in China in our intercessions, and they, too, may soon be free. God grant it! Sincerely, Rev. and Mrs. John Lichti, Deer Creek, Oklahoma.

—The Annual Session of the Northern District Conference will convene at Henderson, Nebraska, on May 26 to 29, preceeding the General Conference. A missionary program is being planned in which a number of missionaries will take part. The program for the Conference will soon follow for publication. In these critical times we feel that we need to have our sessions even more so than in normal times. Let us be earnestly in prayer about the matter.

The Business Committee
L. H. Linscheid, Sec.

—Arthur Keiser, student at Biblical Seminary, New York, spent Easter at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Keiser, Quakertown, Pa. He delivered the Easter morning message at the Saucon Mennonite Church, and in the evening he spoke to the Bethany C. E. Society.

—Miss Martha Burkhalter, who is taking post-graduate work at Biblical Seminary, spent Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday after Easter among friends in Pennsylvania. She brought a message at the East Swamp Missionary Meeting.

Easter Sunday was an enjoyable and blessed occasion for the Beatrice, Nebraska, Second Mennonite Church. Twelve new members, six through baptism and six through the hand of fellowship, were united with the church in connection with an impressive Easter service. A musical program of Easter praise, including several selections by a quartet from a Lincoln C.P.S. Farm Unit, was presented to a large and appreciative audience in the evening.—W.C.A., Corr.

—“Rev. Gerald Stucky has been chosen as temporary assistant pastor of the First Mennonite church here and installation services for him will take place on Sunday during the morning worship. The selection of an assistant pastor was provided through a decision reached at the annual business meeting of the congregation on New Year’s day, and Rev. Stucky, who is a member of the congregation, was chosen by the board of deacons of the church. The assistant pastor will share many of the detail duties which have heretofore been carried by the regular pastor. In his response on Sunday morning, Rev. Stucky plans to tell the congregation some of the details why he and his missionary party which had planned to go to Colombia, South America, has not gone and why the doors to that work have not been opened. He still hopes to be able to open a Mennonite mission in that country. Rev. and Mrs. Stucky and their 10-month-old daughter, Judith Ann will make their home in the Noah Habegger property on High street. Mrs. Stucky and daughter, and her father, Frank Wood of Monrovia, California, are expected to arrive here Saturday. Mr. Wood, a Monrovia industrialist, is enroute to a business meeting in the east. Rev. Stucky is a graduate of Bethel College, Newton, Kansas, where he received his A. B. degree in 1940 and in 1943 he received the S. T. B. degree at Biblical Seminary in New York. He also had some clinical work at the University of Michigan hospital. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Stucky.”—The Berne Witness.

—Bethel College: The Student Volunteers recently discussed the problems and possibilities of an effective General Conference Young People’s Union. The Dr. Walter H. Judd lecture on “What Is Going on in China” was attended by over 2,000 people. The commencement date has been changed to May 28. North Newton now has its own system of street lights.

—First Church, Reedley, California, had its general Church Cleaning Day recently. Members brought own mops, buckets, rags, and lunch.

—The Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita, is another church to adopt the new bulletin service of the Secretarial Bureau, North Newton, Kansas.

—Rev. David Toews of Canada is seriously ill, according to a statement by Rev. C. E. Krehbiel.

—The Einsiedel Church, Hanston, Kansas, has also adopted the new bulletin service of the Secretarial Bureau, North Newton. Rev. A. S. Bechtel writes, "We started using the bulletins on Easter Sunday. We believe we shall like it real well."

—If pastors would put the name of the church on the inside of the bulletins they get from the new bulletin service, the editor could more easily tell from what church the bulletin comes. Of course, a number of pastors do this, but a few do not and this is confusing.

—Buhler Church, Buhler, Kansas: An offering for the Board of Publication was held on April 8. The Hoffnungsau C. E. gave a return program to us on April 15.

—Bluffton College: The Peace Club sponsored an Easter fast on March 28, with a meditational meeting at noon for those fasting. The money saved from the fast was used for relief. I. B. Beechy recently donated a tract of land to the college. This enlarges the campus. Elected as officers at the annual board meeting were: President, J. S. Slabaugh, Nappanee, Indiana; Vice-president, B. F. Thutt, Elida, Ohio; Secretary, Jerry Sauder, Grabill, Indiana.

—David C. Wedel held a week of services in the First and Second churches, Beatrice, beginning April 15. Subjects were: "A Sheep Is Lost," "On Losing God," "Lost in the Far Country," "Who Is on the Lord's Side," "Lost at Home," "I Will Go to God," and "Building on the Rock."

—Mrs. M. M. Horsch recently visited friends at Beatrice, Nebraska.

—John Unruh of Lansdale, Pa., has accepted a call from the church at Madrid, Nebraska. Brother Unruh writes that he plans to begin his work there about April 22. He was to be ordained at Lansdale on April 9.

—Miss Erna Fast, Editor of the Mennonite Junior Quarterly, will teach a course on the "Educational Task of the Church" during the summer session at Bethel College. She will also help with the field work of the school. It is probable that Miss Fast will be willing to speak at retreats.

—Immanuel Church, Moundridge, Kansas: About fifty people attended the Easter Sunrise Service which was held in front of the church, which faces east. The sermon made one feel like saying with Paul, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" We could feel the nearness of the Risen Lord.—Corr.

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: The Brudertal Church together with our church held joint pre-Easter services, conducted by Dr. J. H. Langenwaller. The messages were on "Christ's Last Week."

Easter Monday services were in German. That evening relatives and neighbors gathered at the Albert Plenert home to celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Brother Plenert has served as deacon for ten years. Their oldest son Harold could not be home. He is serving in a C.P.S. unit in a state hospital at Mariboro, New Jersey.

—Total disbursements for the building of the new Walton, Kansas, church are given as $7,924.70. The church was dedicated on Palm Sunday. The annual report of this church shows an average S.S. attendance for the past year of seventy-two. The church takes an active part in conference work.

—Mennonite Bible Mission Chicago: Young people of this church together with some folk from the Institute and from the Alexian Brothers Hospital enjoyed an evening of fellowship on February 28. One of the games which required a knowledge of missionary personnel of our conference showed that the young people had been reading The Mennonite.

"AND HE TOOK A LITTLE CHILD"

Why did Jesus do that? For whose sake did He do it? Mark 9:30-37 suggests some interesting answers.

Jesus had tried for three years to teach some outstanding truths to His followers. After all that they did not understand, and they were afraid. Jesus had tried to help them understand and He had made clear the dangers of fear. He had called them "disciples"—learners—students—disciplined men—in order to challenge them toward the goal which He had in mind for them. All they had caught thus far was that there was something great involved. In the light of this fact they quarreled among each other as to who was the greatest—most important—among them. That did not help. It only filled them with fears. They were afraid of each other. More than that, they were afraid of Jesus who had been so helpful to them. They were afraid to reveal their thinking to Him who had so fully revealed His thoughts to them.

"And He sat down, and called the twelve; and He said unto them, If any man would be first, he shall be last of all, and servant—minister—of all." That was the answer of Jesus to the situation which confronted the disciples, and Him. How quiet, calm and confidential was this answer! The followers of Jesus are not to seek preferment but service. In that direction lies greatness, according to Him!

"And He took a little child, and set him in the midst of them: and taking him in His arms, He said unto them, Whosoever shall receive one of such little children in my name, receiveth Me; and whosoever receiveth Me, receiveth not Me, but Him that sent Me!"

Jesus was not trying to teach the child on this occasion; He was trying to teach the disciples. This is not the only time that this occurred. That is rather thought-provoking for us. Is it possible that children are still the teachers and adults the ones who need to learn?

Children wonder. What opportunities do we give them to wonder as God intends that they should. Are there still people who, like a pompous visitor to a Sunday School some sixty years ago, appear before the children, unprepared but self-important and say, "Well, children, what shall I talk about?" Our children may not say it aloud, but they probably think as a boy answered on that occasion, "Say amen and sit down."

What can they wonder about when they make comparisons between their week-day school experiences and their Sunday School opportunities as to teachers, surroundings and equipment? Is the State wiser than the Church in this regard? Is that necessary? We can have trained teachers and really useful equipment, and we can provide healthful and attractive surroundings for our children. That is cheaper, more desirable and more wholesome than to have the comparisons which our children make lead them away from the influence of the Church at a time when our opportunities are at their best.

Our Children Think. Are we helping them to think at their level or are we throwing our thoughts at them? It is interesting, distressingly so, to find with what misconceptions children often have to battle because of what they were told in Sunday School. Reason: Somebody tried to impose himself upon them instead of following their thinking and answering their questions in a language which they could understand. Remedy: Study your children as well as the prescribed lesson. That is most interesting and instructive for the teacher, and helpful for the children.

Our Children Feel. Their feelings are personal. They want to feel with others. They want fellowship. They personify things if understanding people are lacking. They are not sophisticated, and he who is sophisticated cannot hope to help them much. Here it becomes literally true, "Whosoever shall receive one of such little children in my Name—Spirit—receiveth Me! and whosoever receiveth Me, receiveth not Me, but Him that sent Me!" (Pronouns are capitalized for emphasis.)

Our Children Have the Roots of Convictions. They sense more than they understand that there are some things that ought to be. They ask about those things. That is the supreme opportunity for those who are to teach them in the home, the church or the school, also for those on the street! Blessed are those adults who meet the questions of children with patience and with good judgment. Woe is the lot of those who miss the opportunity and then complain about youth. Children are patient and will ask a long time. Some day, however, they follow those who take time for interest in what really interests children, and do it in a way which children can understand, for their good or harm in the future, as well as now. If they have notions which seem queer to us, let us find out what they mean to the children and learn to lead them on to the next steps. The best training is none too good for this important task.

OUR Children Need Action. Driving them is fatal. Guiding them aright means "receiving" them in the Spirit of Jesus.

If children simply "run circles" in their activity, some older persons have failed. If they are inactive, they are either ill or suppressed. The latter is the worst of the two ailments for the future of the child and his influences.

In the light of what Jesus did with, for, and to children and in the light of what He said about them to adults of His day upon earth, is it not worth our while to do our best for those who still look to us for answers to their questions with longing looks and hopeful words?

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

Church Discipline

This is an undisciplined generation. Stanley Jones suggests that the modern generation would translate the first line of the twenty third Psalm into: "The Lord is my chauffeur, I shall not walk." Someone else has suggested that the present generation is trying to drink its way into prosperity, war its way into peace, spend its way to wealth, and enjoy its way to heaven.

An Undisciplined Church

The modern Christian Church rather clearly reflects the influence of the undisciplined age in which it lives. Many denominations have literally tossed church discipline out the window. They have contended that discipline smacks of Puritanism which is entirely out of harmony with the present age. Those who oppose church discipline do so in part because they think it requires passing judgment. And to pass judgment on others always focuses attention on the person doing the judging. The attitude of the undisciplined and the undisciplining church is aptly expressed in the consoling ditty: "There's so much good in the worst of us, and so much bad in the best of us, it hardly behooves any of us to talk about the rest of us." The net result of absence of church discipline is that we have in many places a condition similar to that of the Israelites expressed in the Book of Judges where "every man did that which was right in his own eyes."

Why Church Discipline

The Christian Church needs to discover the place and function of discipline within its program. It does not need the kind of discipline that confines itself to enforcing petty social customs. This is what church discipline has sometimes resulted in, much to the detriment of churches so affected. Church discipline of the kind that concerns itself with maintaining moral and ethical religious principles is needed. A church without discipline in time becomes a church without disciples. An examination of statistics of religious bodies will show that disciplined churches tend to be the most rapidly growing churches whereas undisciplined churches tend to be the most rapidly dying churches. As one of the leaders in a liberal denomination used to mournfully remark that his church was the ventilator of Protestantism. By this he meant that a large portion of members in his denomination was composed of people who left the more rigidly disciplined denominations and from there left the church altogether. Discipline is needed in the church as well as it is in the family, the individual or in any worthwhile organization.

Full Allegiance to Christ

Here are a few thoughts which have made Ephesians 6:10 to 17 very meaningful for me these days.

Many Christians prefer not to take the whole armour of God. Some "intellectuals" are only willing to gird their loins. They "objectively" search for TRUTH. Some "militant fundamentalists" feel completely armed with the helmet of salvation. There are "moralists" who feel adequately protected with the breastplate of righteousness. There are "pacifists" who apparently consider the shoes of primary and single importance. There are those who would take the Sword of the Spirit of the Old Testament, but not of God as revealed in Jesus Christ. And there are even some who will take the shield of Faith but will reject the idea that a breastplate of righteousness is also vital. To them the Sermon on the Mount is not for this age. They, somehow, manage to overlook Christ's final injunction to teach men to observe all things He has commanded.

And, of course, the "power politics" suggested in verse 12 is not found exclusively in big business and government. For this reason we give full allegiance to our Saviour and Lord, rather than to human leaders of either Church or State.

—Willis Rich

(The call to repentance which was recently made to the members of the Church of the Brethren is of great importance, we feel. This call appeared in the April 14 issue of the Gospel Messenger, which is the official organ of the Church of the Brethren, one of the historic peace churches. The symposium of articles which enunciate this call are the work of a committee which was appointed at a meeting of the faculty of Bethany Biblical Seminary and the Elgin (place where publications originate) combined staff. This "conference agreed that one of the first steps toward abiding peace in our hearts and within our world is repentance." Herewith we present one of the articles in this symposium. It is written by Rufus D. Bowman, President of Bethany Biblical Seminary. We believe that in its emphasis upon the need for repentance it strikes upon something that can bring healing to the Mennonite Church. Here is the article:)

We Must Repent

Rufus D. Bowman

"All war is sin." It is contrary to the spirit of God, to the teachings of Christ and to the highest welfare of mankind. Physical force may crush human life and property, but it does not solve human problems because it does not get at their roots.

People are becoming disillusioned about the idealism of the war and about any real victory. Power politics now seem to be national policy among the big nations. People have forgotten the eternal moral principle that evil is to be overcome only through love, fair treatment and persuasion. Goodwill and suffering love are the greatest moral forces in the world. The cross on Calvary showed a Savior dying to save other people. That is our religion.

But thousands of Brethren have not followed Christ's teachings and spirit during the war. For Christ-like living by church members and for a dynamic church at work for the kingdom of God, repentance is necessary now. We must repent, and soon, or it may be too late. Here is a list of who should repent and why—

1. All Brethren must repent for forgetting the cross, for failing to trust the power of goodwill, for becoming indifferent to the needs of those without sufficient food and clothing, and for sometimes allowing hate of enemies to creep into their hearts.

2. All Brethren must repent for doing so little to prevent this war from coming, and for failing to apply the gospel of the Prince of Peace courageously to this particular war.

3. Some Brethren elders and ministers must repent for failing to teach church members the peace principles of Jesus and the peace position of the Church of the Brethren, and for not counseling adequately with young men regarding the Christian course to follow in war situations.

4. Some Brethren must repent for allowing war propaganda to change their minds, and for feeling that this war must be fought before peace teaching can begin.

5. Some Brethren believe in goodwill, but have run for cover until the war is over, and have thereby failed to give their testimony for peace. They need to repent.

6. Brethren who have supported the war industrially and economically without applying the church's peace principles to industrial and economic problems—they need to repent.

7. Brethren who in their normal occupations have profited financially because of war prices without feeling that those extra profits should be used for purposes of goodwill and for the support of Christian causes which build the kingdom of God—they must repent.

8. Brethren men in Civilian Public Service who have followed the advice of the church, but who sometimes under conditions of strain did not go the second mile in giving a heroic testimony for the cross of Jesus Christ—they must repent.

9. Brethren in noncombatant service whose sincerity the church does not question, but who seemed to think it necessary to join the war system in order to meet human needs most effectively—they must repent.

10. Brethren in combatant service, whom the church loves while realizing that their efforts either directly or indirectly have resulted in the taking of life—they must repent.

All of us need to repent for sins of commission, for sins of omission, or for both. The writer of this article is applying its contents to himself. Instead of pointing out any one particular group, may our church call all members to repentance. This repentance will build a great church fellowship; such repentance is essential to the spiritual foundation on which a vital peace program for the future can be built.

Where Repentance Should Begin

Repentance should begin with those who want others to repent. So says Jesus. "Why note the splinter in your brother's eye, and fail to see the plank in your own eye? How can you say to your brother, 'Let me take out the splinter from your eye, when there lies the plank in your own eye? You hypocrite! take the plank out of your own eye first, and then you will see properly how to take the splinter out of your brother's eye." Matt. 7:3-5, Moffatt

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

Non-resistant Christians would today take the splinter out of the eye of their brother who has gone into the armed services. A crucial question for the historic peace church is how to take out the splinter. Surely, the splinter ought to come out and much besides, but just as surely the plank ought to come out also, and much besides the plank ought to come out first. Quite naturally a man with a splinter in his eye hesitates to be operated upon by another who has a plank in his own eye.

Members in the historic peace churches have become acutely aware of the splinter, but the plank has been largely overlooked. Yet the plank must come out before the splinter can be taken out. Splinter operations will fail as long as the handicap of the plank is not taken care of.

Those who had sinned grossly came to Jesus and found in him understanding and forgiveness that brought wholeness. The very nature of Jesus Christ helped sinners to come to confession and repentance. He did not judge or condemn them; he understood and loved them. That resulted in wholeness (holiness). Those who have erred in our day are helped to confession and repentance by those who are like Christ in righteousness and love--who are so deeply right with God and man that they can drop their guarding actions and freely admit the sinful tendencies within themselves and who love so genuinely that nothing shocks them or repulses them.

Before one can be filled with some of the rightness and love of Christ, one must repent and confess his own sins and keep right on doing that, for there is no danger of being sinless that quickly. We all have gone astray and are going astray in some way. We are all sinners. We all have something to confess and repent of, and we may be sure that we always will have on this earth. He who comes to see himself as a sinner becomes aware of how much he is like others, of God's great forgiveness, and of a great love toward man and God. He becomes humble. Is there someone who has nothing to confess? Who among us is without sin? Confession and repentance are indispensable for each one of us.

True it is that war is sin, and true it is that all are sinners. Let him who feels that he knows God best be the first one to recognize his own sinfulness and repent of it. That will pave the way for more confession and repentance on the part of others. The need for confession is there. There is a choice before us. Our own choice may be very important for our church, our conference. Repentance should begin with those who want others to repent. So says Jesus.

In Memoriam

The death of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt has made the multitudes of America deeply conscious of him. The good that he has done is being treasured in the minds and hearts of many. The faults that he had as a human being have receded to the background, and his strong points fill the forefront. America mourns the passing of a strong leader.

The San Francisco Conference

The San Francisco Conference has been chalked down as the "Peace Conference" of this war. The Christian Church feels that the conscience of the Christian Church should be felt at this conference. Some have urged a rather direct representation of the Church. However, a large body of Christendom as represented in the Federal Council of Churches, is not seeking representation. John Foster Dulles has gone to San Francisco, upon the invitation of the Secretary of State, concurred in by the late President, to serve as an advisor to the American delegation. But he has not gone there as Chairman of the Commission on a Just and Durable Peace. He has for the time being resigned his chairmanship and has declared, "I am, and always have been strongly opposed to representation of the churches at any peace conference." "A similar stand has been taken by the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of Churches which passed a resolution two years ago opposing church representation at the peace table." The Christian conscience is not to be a sledge hammer, but a leaven. It is interesting to note that this viewpoint is in line with the historic position of the Mennonite Church.

RELIEF

Cable from Brethren Enroute to India

A cable message, sent by Floyd Pannabecker, AM WELL, SAFE WITH BALTZER, BOTH WELL, gave no indication as to the whereabouts of the brethren, but it is believed that P. P. Baltzer and S. F. Pannabecker have arrived in India. They had left the Middle East area about March.

Worker Arrives in England

Elma Esau, who sailed for England from Halifax, March 25, cabled from London, April 9, ALL IS WELL.

Excerpts from Burkholder's India Diary

Lawrence Burkholder, in diary form, summarized the Bengal relief activities which required his attention during December, 1944, and January, 1945.

"I was advised by F. J. Isaac to take special interest in the bookkeeping and banking work. I inspected the relief projects near Calcutta . . . Became acquainted with the Indian relief workers and helped to a limited extent with the rice distribution. Accompanied Beare on an investigation trip to a flooded area near Canning, Bengal, to determine needs of that area. I accompanied our director in a first hand survey of an industrial scheme as conducted by the FAU (Friends Ambulance Unit). Investigated and reported to District Health Officer an outbreak of smallpox in a remote village. Purchased clothing for free distribution at Howrah wholesale market. Purchased medicine for free distribution. Completed final plans and made first purchases for experiment in house building."

Milk for Paraguayan Child Feeding Program

Among other matters of business, Willard Smith investigated the possibility of buying for the Friesland Colony methyl-chloride gas, during his stay in Argentina. The Friesland colonists have established a creamery, through their program to encourage milk production. Their present plans includes the purchase of milk cooling equipment which would require this gas. The price of methyl-chloride gas in Paraguay makes its purchase almost prohibitive.

Milk production among Paraguayans is virtually a non-entity. It is hoped that the Friesland Colony will become an adequate source for the milk supply necessary in the child feeding program that Elizabeth Keeney is to inaugurate at Itacurubi.

Elizabeth Keeney, upon her arrival in Paraguay, promptly visited the Friesland Colony and the area around Itacurubi, adjacent to the colony, with Robert Geigley. Brother Geigley, who was due to embark from Buenos Aires for the States, March 28, had surveyed areas in Paraguay for this type of service, as part of his work. Sister Keeney returned to Asuncion to lay initial plans for the new feeding program.

C. P. S.

1945 Relief and C.P.S. Canning and Drying Program

A program of canning and drying for C.P.S. camps will again be conducted in 1945. Jars and sugar ration points will be provided through M.C.C. as in last year's program. A folder, to be released later, will be distributed to all churches and further articles will appear in the church papers giving full information about the program.

A "Food for Relief" program is being planned this year as well as for C.P.S. It is apparent that unlimited amounts of staple vegetable protein foods can be used advantageously for foreign relief feeding. The following should especially be emphasized: 1. Dry beans, including lima, navy, soy, and other varieties. 2. Dry peas and lentils. Federal inspection requirements apparently prohibit the exporting of home-processed meats and fats. Announcement regarding canned vegetables, including beans, peas, and concentrated sweet fruits, will be made as soon as plans shape up more definitely.

Director of Canning Program Arrives

Russell Massanari, former business manager at Denison, Iowa, C.P.S. camp has recently transferred to the Akron headquarters office to take charge of further planning and administering the program for processing foods for relief and C.P.S. William Snyder, who had charge of the program the past two years, is now serving on the C.P.S. staff as director of the Mennonite units on dairy farm service.

Training School for Sidecamp Leaders

A school for training C.P.S. sidecamp leaders is now in session at the Camino, California, camp with thirty-five men attending. The school will be in session from April 8 to April 25 and will take up a study and discussion of sidecamp religious life, counseling, project education, administrative duties, recreation and crafts, etc. Leaders of the C.P.S. program who will be present to assist in conducting the school are P. C. Hiebert, Harold S. Bender, Albert Gaedert, D. D. Eitzen, Rufus Franz, and members of camp staffs on the West Coast. In light of the expansion in number of sidecamps which seems to be ahead, the training school will fill a vital need. Many of the 500 men to be shifted to the West Coast will likely see sidecamp experience before the coming fire season is over.

PEACE SECTION

Nurses Draft Legislation

From recent correspondence apparently some confusion prevails among our nurses regarding the present status of the pending nurses draft legislation. The bill passed by the House on March 7 has recently been reported out favorably by the Senate Military Affairs Committee with the amended measure to include married nurses from the ages of twenty to forty-five who have no children under eighteen or without other dependents. The proposed bill is an amendment to the original Selective Training and Service Act of 1940 and consequently in the event of its passage, the same statute provisions for the classification, induction, and assignment to alternate service will be applicable to the CO nurses as now obtained for the CO men. Form 47 will need to be filled out to establish CO status following which the registrant will be processed in accordance with established procedure.

There is no immediate need, however, for undue concern or hasty action on the part of our nurses. The bill has not yet become law. In fact, in view of the imminent termination of the European war, and further, that the armed forces have already secured 56,000 of their 60,000 nurses goal set for July 1 through voluntary recruitment, the chances for securing any nurses or labor draft legislation are receding very rapidly.

In certain localities it is reported that considerable pressure is being exerted by public opinion, hospital administrations, and government agencies to secure the voluntary enlistment of Mennonite nurses in the armed forces. Naturally, this is to be expected. Adequate opportunity, however, will be provided by the government and the church in case of conscription to serve in capacities entirely consistent with our peace testimony. Possible types of service may be as follows: Mental, crippled children's or general hospitals, T. B. institutions, etc. This office is in constant touch with current developments and will keep our constituency informed accordingly through the regular church publicity channels or through direct contact with the pastors of our Mennonite congregations if occasion demands. In the meanwhile, our nurses should continue serving quietly but confidently where they are always ready to give a consistent, courteous, and positive peace testimony whenever opportunity affords.

four months that they were kept at the Buckingham Side Camp. They were very good books.

Since I am being transferred from the Buckingham Camp to a new camp, I am not making up a new list. Mr. Donald Leichty, who is replacing me, will in all probability be interested in keeping up this book loan from your library. I want to say again that I have appreciated being able to get these books from you. The type of books that you offer are hard to get at other loan libraries. I want to thank you for your kind help to us in the camps.

I hope that the books came back to you in good shape.

Sincerely yours,

REV. JOHN G. UNRUH'S ORDINATION

Rev. John G. Unruh, Lansdale, Pennsylvania was ordained as minister of the gospel, at the Fourth Quarterly Conference, held in Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Monday evening, April 9, 1945.

Practically all the churches of the eastern part of our Conference were represented at the impressive occasion. The Rev. Howard G. Nyce, Pastor Upper Milford and First Church, Allentown, was the speaker, using II Timothy 4:1-2a as text. The Rev. Russell L. Mast, President Eastern District Conference, performed the ordination, and Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel, Brother Unruh's pastor, gave the right hand of welcome to the new Home Mission worker. Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Quakertown, Pa., Secretary of the Board of Home Missions, read the Scripture Lesson and offered the opening prayer.

Early in the year, Brother Unruh had visited First Mennonite Church, Madrid, Nebraska, at the invitation of the congregation. He preached six sermons. The Board of Home Missions had recommended Brother Unruh to the church. A unanimous call was extended. This was accepted after much prayer.

Rev. and Mrs. Unruh, with their daughter, Geraldine, left Lansdale for Madrid, Nebraska, on April 11, in order to start their work on April 15.

First Mennonite Church, Madrid, Nebraska, is in the Northern District. The church received partial support from the Northern District Mission Committee and the Board of Home Missions. The Mission Committee has the direction of the work in their hands.

We enlist a prayer interest in this field that the church might be built up and the Lord Jesus Christ honored.

Letter from Rev. and Mrs. Wuthrich

Feb. 27, 1945

To the Mennonite Foreign Mission Board
 Newton, Kansas

Dear Friends in Christ:

Since we are free now, we will attempt to write to you. Your no doubt heard of our release from concentration camp by the American forces on February 4, 1945. We had opportunity to write to our folks at home soon after our release.

We praise God that we have been freed and that as a mission group we are all quite well. Agnes and I had hoped to return to China from here, but it seems that conditions in China are not too good now, and that it will probably be awhile before we can carry on our work there. So we have decided to go home for awhile. We certainly hope we can return before very long if conditions permit.

Albert Jantzen, wife, and family left for the states a few days ago. They may even arrive home before this letter reaches you. We all expect to leave in a week or so. It will be a relief to get where it is quiet and peaceful. It has been quite a nervous strain in this place

We shall be glad to hear of our mission work in other fields and how it is progressing. We have heard no news of either Miss Regier or Mss Goertz, but trust that they are well and O.K. We hope they have been repatriated unless they were able to carry on mission work in our China field.

We received very little mail during our three years of internment. However, we have had word from our folks since we are free. It means everything to us to hear from friends and loved ones again.

We expect to see you before long when we can speak more freely than we can write at the present time.

We do praise God that we are free again, and that He has preserved our lives.

Yours in Christ,
Lester and Agnes Wuthrich

A PRAISE SERVICE IN THE FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH, NEWTON

The Newton church, in consultation with some Board members, has arranged for a praise service for the safe arrival of Brother and Sister Marvin J. Dirks from the Philippines.

This is the second couple that has arrived home safely, and the third has started on the way home, we understand. Thank the Lord. The first to arrive were Brother and Sister A. L. Jantzen, Paso Robles, California.

While this announcement will appear too late in the papers, it will not be too late to join our praise when this appears in print.

Should Churches Establish and Maintain Hospitals for the Mentally Ill?

My answer to this question is in the affirmative with one major qualification—professional adequacy.

The requisites for proficiency in the field of psychiatry and clinical psychology: (1) A psychiatric point of view—e.g., an attitude that maladjustment is an adjustment, albeit an inadequate and abortive one. The victim is not helped by having "the truth" preached to him. For reasons not recognized by him he cannot do what he may understand to be the correct thing to do (see Rom. 7:19). (2) Understanding becomes then a very significant qualification for serving those who are emotionally involved and disturbed. (3) This calls for thorough training in psychology and in all the social sciences, biology, and medicine. (4) Knowledge of and skill in gaining rapport, and making it possible for a neurotic who is extremely subjective to objectify his feelings. (See Earl R. Rogers, Counseling and Psychotherapy). (5) Supervised clinical experience comparable to a medical internship.

Assuming professional competence, I favor the care of those who are spiritually, emotionally, and mentally ill under Christian auspices for the following two reasons: (1) The objectives as well as the techniques of psychotherapy are of the essence of Christianity, particularly as seen from the Mennonite point of view. Jesus' dying on the cross is the final evidence of His profound faith in overcoming evil with love. Stripped of religious verbiage, this is the heart of psychiatric theory. But—its practice demands Christian motivation. (Do you CPS men working in mental hospitals find it so? I am writing this under the unreal circumstances of a private study.) (2) I further favor church sponsorship for the care of the emotionally ill because a truly Christian-motivated psychiatrist has the organismic or psychosomatic point of view which constitutes the most challenging hypothesis in philosophical, psychological, and medical research. (See Carroll A. Wise, Religion in Illness and Health, Chapter IV; T. H. Howells, Hunger For Wholiness, H. F. Dunbar, Emotion and Bodily Change; George Gray, "Anxiety and Illness", Harpers, May, 1939.) Specialization is an extremely good thing gone to pot. The world cries for Seelsorge.

CHANGING THE TUNE

One cannot help observing the tremendous change that took place in radio programs during the last few days out of deference and respect to the president's death. No rattling tin can music, no crooners, no plugs and irritating commercials, no serial sob stories. Instead we all enjoy the peace and solace that grand stately music brings to the soul. We suspect that the old diet will be sent out over the airways shortly, but for the brief time it is relief—even though mingled with sorrow. It does however seem incongruous to this writer that the networks should suddenly fall over backwards to bring the nation religious programs when for the last few years, not one but thousands of men have been falling every day. Do they and their families deserve no word of hope and assurance? The seriousness of the time at least warrants a clear note of sobriety and respect for the suffering of mankind and it will take more than second-rate song-hits to bring that hope!

R. C. Kauffman Writes from India

As far as my work is concerned, I don't know just what to tell you about it. Some of it is very interesting and some just an arduous attending to details. For example, the other day I wanted to get some (ten pounds) sugar for our new Medical Unit. Sugar is rationed here too, but they have a pathetic lack of organization in many of these things, so that it took me over half a day to get it. Time means nothing. First I went to the Deputy Controller or Rationing who sent me to the Deputy Chief Inspector of Calcutta who sent me to the Deputy Chief Inspector of 24 Parganas who sent me to the Controller of Rationing who sent me to the Director of Rationing who sent me to the District Supply Officer who finally gave me a permit with which I could go to the store and buy my ten pounds of sugar. Reminds one of the Little Red Hen story—"Not I," said the cat, "not I," said the rat, "not I," said the mouse, etc., etc. So much of one's time goes in attending to details like this. Fortunately, I don't often go through this myself as I have hired myself an Indian helper to do this sort of thing. He is a very capable fellow, has lived in Calcutta all his life and knows every nook and cranny of it and is really a great help. His name is Shanti Sarkar; he is a Christian and, so far as I have been able to tell in his several weeks with me, entirely trustworthy. This last quality is important, since he is often sent out with large sums of money, and yet one that is often lacking in Indian helpers. The temptation to take something is great since most of them are desperately poor and then they become distrusted which inclines them to further dishonesty. So I'm very glad to have this Sarkar. I have my hands full with office work, attending to applications for help, writing letters and traveling about visiting outlying areas in an effort to determine need and get rehabilitation projects started.

I got out into a place last week where I was told that I was the first "saheb" (white man) to visit them in their recollection—and judging by the way the villages around there looked at me, I could believe it true. They had heard I was coming (with some Indian companions) and there must have been over one thousand people gathered. As I approached them, a "welcoming committee" came running out and placed several garlands of flowers about my neck, shouting (in Bengali). "Victory to the American saheb, joy to the American saheb," etc. The hospitality of these folks is hard to beat. Also in supplying meals. When I go out into villages, I usually have my meals there—real Indian food; rice, dahl (split peas), fish, chicken, various fried things, and sometimes sweets made out of sour milk and sugar. No matter how poor they may be, they see to it that you get plenty to eat. I've often been thankful for a healthy stomach with the kind and amount of stuff one is expected to eat. And, of course, one eats with the fingers of the right hand. If the meal is good and one has had enough, which means too much, it is entirely proper to burp.

But in this same area I saw about the worst conditions I have seen coming to India. In getting there I had to walk the last six miles. As I walked along, I passed a burning ghat heaped high with the ashes of famine victims. A little further on I came upon an area one-half mile square littered with human skulls and with huge vultures and fat dogs and jackals still hovering about, waiting for more carcasses to come. Even as I was there looking about a young girl, starved to death, was brought out on a stretcher. At first some of the famine victims came to that place to die of their own accord. Since then, others, too poor to pay for the wood needed for the burning ghats, (the acceptable Hindu form of disposing of their dead) have been brought out there to be buried in shallow graves which dogs, jackals and vultures soon unearth. The village which I finally visited was itself still further impoverished by the fact that it was a fishing village. When Japanese invasion threatened, the government confiscated all their boats. Originally, I was told, there were two thousand fisherman there. Now there were only five hundred left, and these still without boats, confronting utter destitution. When they get into this condition, diseases of various kinds soon take over. Almost every other child has a distended stomach caused by the enlarged spleen of prolonged malaria. In this village we hope to be able to get a boat-building industry started if possible. The famine itself is over and has been, in a sense, for half a year. But there is always a terrible aftermath which leaves thousands on the borderline, ready to be plunged in again. This condition will obtain for another several years and, to a lesser extent, has apparently always been true of India.

This past Monday I went out to an isolated region called Gangrai for the "formal opening" of a medical unit we have set up there. The unit has two doctors and plenty of medical equipment and is set up in a very needy area. It is, as I said, quite isolated. When I first went out there, in order to select the site, I went the last seven miles by boat, since there are no roads. This time the water had gone down and I walked that distance and still further in getting back to where I could get other transportation, so that altogether I walked close to twenty miles that day. Boy was I tired. But we had our formal opening. I even made a little speech as the representative of the sponsoring organization and the thing is off to a start. The boxes were opened and a hundred people or so had gathered and were already expressing their thanks for anticipated treatment. Today one of the doctors came in for some further equipment and he said that patients are coming from five o'clock in the morning to eight at night. I got some pictures of this medical unit the day I was there. I also got pictures of the famine scenes I described above, though I do not know whether I dare get these developed at the present time. They are Kodachrome and have to be sent to Rochester and undergo censorship. I forgot to mention that the night before going out for the "formal opening" I spent at an Indian Christian's house in that vicinity, so as to get an early start. Well, he put me up with usual hospitality, but on his Indian type of bed—which consists of a board platform with only some matting spread over the top and no springs whatsoever. Did I ever have the kinks to take out of my legs the next day. In general I feel very well and hope to continue this way.

To hear about winter and blizzards out your way sounds odd when the sun is beating down and one sweats in shirt-sleeves, short trousers and tropical hat. This is however supposed to have been the coldest "winter" Calcutta has had since temperature records have been kept for years and years. I wouldn't know when it was, but they say the temperature got down to 45 above zero. Perhaps that was during Christmas vacation when we weren't here. Nights are nice and cool so far and days haven't been too bad.

An interesting thing happened the other Sunday night. Every Sunday night they have a lot of American Soldiers come to Lee Memorial for tea and a devotional program following. Well this Sunday night one of the G. I.'s was looking thru the register and he noticed the name Kauffman there. He thought that sounded like a familiar name and he asked someone to introduce him to this fellow. Of course the Kauffman was me, but who should this soldier turn out to be but Walter Boese, Aunt Lydia's nephew.

He has been stationed in Calcutta for some time, and it was only in this accidental way that we met. We have gotten together since then. When one is this far from home, finding someone like him, whom I knew as a boy, is almost like getting home.

Sam Goering Writes from England

"Today is the last day of January. On the second of February it will be two months since I left home. It really seems much longer, perhaps because so many things have been crowded into such a short time. Often the voyage seemed long and hard, but now that it is all over, I feel very grateful to God for his goodness and tender care.

"After we arrived in port we could not land for a number of days because of high wind. Especially one day it was very stormy and we were glad that we were not out on high sea. I think I wrote you about the stormy weather along the way. Some days it was really terrific; that is the best way I know to describe it. The high waves with their foaming white crests would sometimes fairly swallow us up, as the waves rolled over the deck. One night, especially, I shall long remember, because I spent several hours, at first dipping, and then mopping up water from our cabin floor. We piled all our belongings on the beds and the table so nothing got soaked, but the water was a nuisance just the same. I ruined a perfectly good bath towel in the process of getting the water out. Working in my pajamas with the ship rocking like a cradle made me act like an acrobat, but I got by without getting injured. No, the ship did not spring a leak, the water came through the cracks of the closed door and just could not be stopped; so it gushed in every time a high wave came over.

"Exercise on the ship was a real problem. We had an upper deck eighteen x twenty-eight steps, but only one fourth of that was under roof. So we walked back and forth on this little space when the weather was bad. Often it was too cold so we stayed in the stuffy smoke-filled, little dining room. The food was good but almost no vegetables and very little fruit. The whole trip was very interesting, and it could have been worse, so I have much to be thankful for. Now that it is all over I recall with pleasure, even the cockroaches that befriended me on the way, often playing hide and seek together under my pillow.

"When we arrived in port the immigration officers were very kind to us. The baggage was all placed into a hall on the ship where it was inspected. The fellows stood around mine just as I came up, and I heard one officer remark to the other, "I would like to examine this guy's baggage. Just then I introduced myself and we had a good laugh. Finally one of the men said, "It really is not Goering but Hitler we are looking for." After we got off the boat and I had tended to the necessary business I boarded a train to London. From London I tried to call the MCC Center by phone, but could not figure out how to use the British dial phone, so I got a taxi which took me straight to the M.C.C. Center.

This is the first installment of quotations taken from Sam Goering's letters to his family.

From the Egypt of Russia to the Canaan of Ontario

By P. H. Richert

That is the impression one gets when visiting our Mennonite settlements in Ontario as I had the privilege a few weeks ago, having been invited for protracted meetings by the four largest churches there. These settlers are all fugitives from the oppression of godless bolshevism in Russia, from where they came scarcely twenty years ago. Now nearly all have fine homes and prosperous farms, or, as in the case of the Waterloo city church, earn more than their bread in factories.

When one hears of the rundown farms which they brought at a cheap price, one cannot help but see the Lord's special leading in bringing the fugitives here just at a time when so many old settlers wanted to get rid of their farms and orchards because of lack of industrious and scientific farming. Now these same orchards are outstandingly productive through industry and scientific cultivation. This together with God's faithfulness in keeping his promises accounts for the remarkable prosperity of our new settlers: When Christ said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you," he meant just what he said. These settlers from Russia sought first the preservation of their faith when they fled from Russia, and God has blessed them abundantly, both materially and spiritually. When the English neighbors found out that the Ontario churches had united like one man to help each other to pay their passage debts, and accomplished it, they remarked that such a spirit was a new thing to them. This also explains why Mennonites find no difficulty in borrowing thousands of dollars from the banks when they buy farms. They have even started their own "cooperative" in order to get the highest prices, and a canning factory for their products, which is chiefly fruit in the eastern part and vegetables and wheat and corn in the western part. Yes, "He who hath, to him shall be given," is another promise of God he is fulfilling there before our eyes. He expects us to use what he gives, and use it to his glory and for his kingdom. When the largest church recently held a mission festival one Sunday, the offering was $1,800.00. Why should God not give to people who use their money like that?—The churches now plan to build a Bible Academy.

Greetings from Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Dirks

To all friends and the friends of our mission in China we extend our heartfelt thanks and gratitude for your interest in us and for your prayers to God in our behalf throughout the time of our internment by the Japanese in the Philippine Islands. Surely God has preserved us through perilous times. Let our praise be to the God of our salvation.

At 8:28 A. M. we passed under the Golden Gate Bridge. By noon we were on American soil and on our way to our hotel in San Francisco. It had been only a few months less than six years since we were last in Frisco enroute to China. It was well that we at that time did not know what lay before us, and under what conditions we would return.

Our release from internment by the Japanese took place on February 4. After five weeks, on March 10, we were flown in army transport planes to Leyte. In the intervening time the battle of Manila was fought, and much of the city was destroyed. At one time, Bilibid Prison, (old Bilibid, famous from the time of the Spanish conquerors), was almost surrounded by fires. Late in the evening of February 5, we were forced to evacuate the Prison to safety from the fire. After the fires were under control we returned to Bilibid to await repatriation.

But now I must resume the account of our return home. We remained in Leyte for five days. Then we boarded a big navy transport with about eight hundred other internees and many soldiers, sailors and marines aboard. After waiting in the harbor we set sail for our beloved America on March 20. The voyage itself took nineteen days.

Upon arrival all our immediate needs as to food, transportation, and clothing were taken care of by the federal government, the Red Cross, and social agencies. Throughout the entire return trip we were given every possible consideration and opportunity to rest and build up our health. All of us have gained in weight, and our energy is gradually returning. Although many of the internees are broken in health, we are thankful that we were spared a like fate.

Although our actual time spent in China was less than two years, we were at least privileged to begin our work there. We hope to return to the field as soon as conditions warrant.

At present we are enjoying to the utmost, renewing old friendships and visiting our parents. Until we make definite plans for the future, our address will be Halstead, Kansas.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Ronald von Riesen

MAY 1—(Read Isa. 6:1-8) "In the year that King Uzziah died I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple." As I sit here writing these messages, memorial services are being held to pay tribute to our late president. Prayers are ascending to God for future guidance. The prophet Isaiah also felt the need of Divine guidance after the death of Uzziah, Israel's leader. Two things stand out in Isaiah's experience in the temple. First, God was still sitting on the throne and carrying out his divine purposes, even though Uzziah had died, and he was putting his trust in the Great King of Kings. Second, the prophet reconsecrated his life to the great cause of righteousness and justice and peace. "So we should remember to trust in God, who is our Refuge and Strength and reconsecrate ourselves to the high calling of being citizens in the Eternal Kingdom.

MAY 2—(Read John 9:24-38) "... one thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see." John 9:25b. These words were uttered by a man who had never experienced light. Now he had been healed by Christ. He could see. Not only had he received physical sight, but he had also experienced spiritual insight. When Jesus asked, "Dost thou believe on the Son of God?" he answered, "Lord I believe." The greatest miracle was not the restoring of sight, but the creation of a new creature in Christ Jesus. He had beheld Jesus, as the Savior of the world, the Divine Son of God. Dear Reader, can you say that; "Whereas I was blind, now I can see." Do you behold, Jesus as the Christ, the Son of the Living God?"

MAY 3—(Read Gen. 43:1-8) And Judah spake unto him, saying, "The man did solemnly protest unto us, saying, Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you." Genesis 43:3. These words were spoken by Joseph to his brethren when they came to buy corn. He told them in effect that he would give them no more corn unless Benjamin came with them. These words could well be applied to us as though God himself spoke them to us. "Ye shall not see my face, except your brother be with you." Christianity begins with the Love of God, but it does not stop there. It begins with personal salvation but it does not end there. It is a triangular affair—God, My Soul, and my Brother. "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God; and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God; for God is love." I John 4:7-8

MAY 4—(Read Luke 7:36-50) "There was a certain creditor which had two debtors. The one owed him five-hundred pence, the other fifty. And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore, which of them will love me most?" Luke 7:41-42. Simon answered correctly when he said in reply, "I suppose that he, to whom he forgave most." (vs. 43) Jesus was trying to teach Simon that great love to God, which had been manifested by the act of adoration by the woman, who had before lived deep in sin, was a result of much forgiveness. Great love to God is a result of great forgiveness. Simon, who had felt himself self-righteous and little in need of forgiveness had expressed little love for Jesus. If we would have a great love for Jesus, we must first experience his forgiving grace at the foot of the Cross. "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. I John 1:8-9

MAY 5—(Read Psalm 24) "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein." Psalm 24:1 During springtime one is again reminded of the beautiful tribute of the great psalmist, David, to God, the Creator and Sustainer of the Universe. Perhaps, as he was out in the green pastures shepherding his sheep, being in close contact with nature and watching God provide grass for his sheep, he was reminded that God was manifesting His great love for his earthly creatures. He was reminded that the earth belonged to the Lord and all the fulness thereof. This is Rural Life Week. It would be well for us to remind ourselves that the earth is the Lord's and that we are but stewards of His creation.

MAY 6—(Read Gen. 2:8-17) "And the Lord God took the man, and put him into the garden of Eden to dress it and to keep it." Genesis 2:15. The story of the Creation tells us that God made the heavens and the earth and created man in his image and put him in the Garden of Eden for the purpose of tilling it and looking after it. Notice, God did not give it to him to do with as he pleased. He was not to be the owner but the caretaker or steward of the earth. God was very wise. When someone asks us to be stewards over their possessions we usually exercise greater care than we do with our own possessions. It would be well to remind ourselves that we are God's stewards in all we do. The business we own, the farm we till, belongs to God. We are stewards of his possessions.

MAY 7—(Read Song of Sol. Ch. 2) "Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines: for our vines have tender grapes." Song of Sol. 2:15. Much of the teaching in the Bible has a rural atmosphere. Many of the great prophets were acquainted with the wide open spaces. The spiritual truth in this verse grew out of the experience of a husbandman while caring for his vineyard. High stone walls were built around the vineyards to keep the foxes from eating the tender bark and thus destroying the vines. These walls could keep out the large foxes but not the little foxes. They were sly and crept over the wall. They were the ones that had to be watched. How true to life. It is not so much the large sins of stealing, murdering, etc. that seek to destroy the Christian's spiritual life, but the little sins that creep into our lives, such as partial truths, disobedience, breaking of promises, dishonesty, etc. They are the little foxes that destroy the vines.

NEED FOR RELIEF

A greatly needed relief for distressed people in liberated countries of Europe through increased priorities for civilian goods was strongly urged in a resolution adopted by the British Famine Relief Committee, of which the Bishop of Chichester is chairman, and sent to the representative of the UNRRA March 8. Reference is made in the resolution to earlier official promises that there would be speedy entrance of food into these areas as they were freed. The physical condition of the peoples, it is pointed out is worse than in the last year of German occupation; hunger and edema are returning to Greece and Belgium, and undernourishment prevails in a large part of France, with infant life threatened in the southern areas. In part of Holland the situation is stated to be equally serious. The resolution, an outline of which was cabled to Dr. Howard E. Kershner, Chairman of the Committee on Overseas Child Service Program and Operation of the Save the Children Federation, New York, urges that small quantities of civilian supplies be included in all military shipments. Dr. Kershner expects soon to leave for Europe to develop plans for extension of the Federation's overseas program.

ZION MENNONITE CHURCH

Kingman, Kansas

Because our little church is not much heard of I wish to give a little summary of our church; its location, function and so forth. The Zion Mennonite Church is located in the city of Kingman, Kansas, which is on U. S. Highway 54, forty-two miles west of Wichita. We have sixty some members, but due to the war there are perhaps less than fifty active members. Because nearly all of our young men are away, practically every branch of the church's activities has suffered. Most keenly has their absence been felt by the musical branch and the Christian Endeavor. In fact, we have no choir at all now. To date all of the boys in the service are O.K. with one exception. Burdett Kaufman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Kaufman, is missing in action since January, 1944. It is our sincere hope and prayer that the war will cease soon, and our boys return to us.

We have a nice new church building, erected in 1937, and may we not forget to be thankful to the Lord for the fact that it is paid for.

Rev. John H. Epp, formerly of Hillsboro, Kansas, is our minister now. He is one of the well known older ministers of the Western District Conference. The ladies of the church have carried on such activities as sending parcels to the service men, gathering clothing for relief, and canning for the C.P.S. camps.

Our church has made it a practice to cooperate with other Protestant churches in various community Christian functions, feeling that we can learn from them, as well as expecting to teach them our point of view "on the peaceful way of life." The last four years the Protestant churches of our town have joined in a special pre-Easter service. These services lasted from Palm Sunday through Easter Sunday. These services have served to teach us all to love and respect each other more and to feel that too often we make too much of denominationalism. Dr. J. E. Hartzler of Goshen, Indiana, was the speaker for this year. He very ably presented our Christian duties in a world of need. Dr. Hartzler closed the week, having won many ardent friends among all participating denominations, and I sincerely believe many Kingman citizens have a new conception of what it really means "To love my neighbor as I love myself." I put it in the first person deliberately, as I feel that it means vastly more when I apply it to myself than when I ask you to apply it to yourself. We have outlived the day when our neighbor is just the man next door; my neighbor today is every human soul whose agony reaches my ear or eye, by radio or by newspaper. We have been able to send out our forces of destruction to the ends of the earth. Make no mistake about it; you and I have had a part in it, whether active or passive. May God grant that we have a greater part in repairing the damage done.—"What ye have done unto one of the least of these ye have done it unto me." Let everyone ask themselves, "Were you there when they crucified my Lord?"—Corr.

BERFELDER MENNONITE CHURCH

Mountain Lake, Minnesota

Dr. David D. Eitzen, son of Rev. D. P. Eitzen and formerly a member of this church, now a professor at the School of Religion at the University of Southern California, gave the morning message on March 18. His message was taken from Acts 8:5, "And Philip Preached Christ." In the evening the men's chorus gave a program in the Baptist church at Windom.

On Palm Sunday our pastor's subject was "God Establishing an Earthly Kingdom." In the evening the ladies chorus, under the direction of Mrs. August Ewert, rendered a program, and Rev. Victor Graber from Delft spoke on "I am he that liveth and was dead," Rev. 1:18. From Thursday through Sunday night, Rev. J. R. Dick of the Grace Bible Institute held a series of evangelistic meetings, which came to a climax with an old-fashioned revival among Christians and non-Christians. —Corr.

On April 8, while Rev. August Ewert was gone to participate in the ordination of Alvin Peters (member of this church) as Elder, H. H. Quiring preached. In the evening Rev. Ewert showed slides of the China Mission field at a mission program held in the church of which Rev. and Mrs. Alvin Peters are in charge. Gerhard Friesen, a county S. S. worker, and his group of youngsters took part in the C. E. program on April 8. April 15 Rev. Paul S. Rañneff of the United Temperance Movement brought the morning message.

FAIRFIELD BETHEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Huron, South Dakota

Rev. Waldo Flickinger from Alsen conducted evangelistic services for us from March 4 to 15. The Lord spoke mightily to the salvation of precious souls, but we are also glad for the parents and young people who came out of backsliding and defeat into a life of joy and victory. Several also consecrated their lives for service. On March 25 we had memorial services for Albert Wollman, our only man in any branch of the service. He was killed in Luzon, January 17, 1945. On Good Friday we enjoyed the songs by the girls' trio from the Grace Bible Institute.

—Frank S. Harder, Pastor

EDEN MENNONITE CHURCH

Moundridge, Kansas

Large crowds turned out for the special meetings conducted by Rev. Don Smucker from March 4 to 11. In the mornings he conducted a study in the Revelation of St. John. Because of illness Rev. Smucker had to cancel his last meeting. Martin Schrag, educational director of the C.P.S. camp at Fort Collins, Colorado, spoke instead and showed slides of the work and surroundings at Fort Collins. The chorus of 135 voices and the orchestra presented "The Messiah" on April 1. Benj. Zerger was the director and Mrs. Erwin Goering the pianist. Soloists were: Mrs. Roland Juhnke, Mrs. Elmer H. Goering, Robert Senner, and Herbert Richert. Grandmother Anna Stucky was called to rest on January 14 and J. R. Waitner on January 31.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Monroe, Washington

On March 25 an ex-convict told us in a very interesting way about the work that is being done in jails and prisons. From March 28 to April 4, Rev. Stavness from Saskatchewan was with us and gave some very helpful sermons. One in which he showed slides of Palestine and told how prophecy was being fulfilled there was of special interest. He also gave two messages over the air. We had a very beautiful Easter sunrise in spite of the rain we have had this spring.—Corr.

BETHEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Winton, California

Good Friday was observed in our church with the Old Mennonites, Mennonite Brethren, and Presbyterians taking part. A real blessing comes when different churches work in fellowship this way. Thanks be unto God. Three more members have been received into the church. On Easter Sunday we had communion services. Some of our young people will very likely attend the S. S. and C. E. Convention which will be held in Los Angeles, April 27, 28, 29.

—N. A. Koehn

IMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Los Angeles, California

On Good Friday the C. E. societies gave the pag-eant, "The Cross Triumphant." After the Eastern sunrise service a hearty breakfast was served to all present. The children gave a program after the S. S. session. The Easter message "The Greatest Event of all History and What It Means" was delivered by Dr. Bauman to a large audience. The church choir gave the Easter cantata "The Glory of the Garden," directed by E. E. Yoder.—Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Lehigh, Kansas

The three churches of Lehigh commemorated the World Day of Prayer in the Lutheran Church. Mrs. Fred Weyand, one of our oldest active members, passed away on February 26, at the age of eighty-one. The old ladies Sunday School class is getting smaller because of death and illness. While Rev. B. H. Janzen visited some of the C.P.S. camps and hospital units in Colorado, Rev. J. F. Sawatzky of Newton served us. Mrs. Milford Blair is the director of the newly organized choir. It meets on Wednesday night when the senior choir, directed by G. F. Friesen, and the S. S. teachers training class also meet. Concrete is being poured for the new church basement.

JOTTINGS

—An article entitled "The Theological Triumph of the Early Anabaptist Mennonites: The Re-discovery of Biblical Theology in Paradox" and written by Donovan E. Smucker appears in the current issue of the Mennonite Quarterly Review.

—A review of Jacob H. Janzen's Die Geschichte der Grafschaft Ebenfeld also appears in the above mentioned periodical.

—Rev. William H. Stauffer is scheduled for some meetings at the Terry, Montana, camp just before General Conference.

—Rev. Ernest Bohn is at present teaching the philosophy courses at Bluffton College and farming the college farm.

—Bulletin, West Zion Church, Moundridge, Kansas: "The offering this morning is to go for the support of the Conference "Ministers, Aid Fund." Our deacons decided that it would be well to take this offering today since the request is that this money be sent before conference."

—Church bulletins bring out the fact that church members are attempting to clear church lawns of dandelions. Weedone is a new commercial product (listed in Montgomery Ward) which is supposed to kill way down to the small toe of the dandelion.

—Members of the Salem Church, Freeman, South Dakota, are urged in the church bulletin, edited by their pastor, to express the convictions on the peace-time conscription bill to their representatives in Washington.

—"Reflections on the Life and Death of the President" was the sermon topic for the First Church, Wadsworth, Ohio, on April 15.

—Bulletin, First Church, Berne: "At the business meeting last Monday night the congregation voted to construct or arrange for adequate church offices for the pastor, his assistant, and for the church records, etc." This church is collecting relief clothing for the M.C.C.

—The Middle District Conference will convene at Pulaski, Iowa, May 26-29.

—The First Church at Nappanee, Indiana, recently had an evening service in which the Twenty-third Psalm was given in Hebrew, the Lord's Prayer in Greek, German, French, Spanish, Swedish, and I Cor. 13 was read from the following versions: Tyndale, Douai, King James, Goodspeed, Weymouth, and Moffatt. Dr. Rodolphe Petter was featured as a Mennonite translator. The April Workers' Conference dealt with "The Use of Painting and Pictures in Religious Education." It was an illustrated program. One Sunday School class has purchased an outfit for relief.

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Plenert celebrated their Silver Wedding Anniversary on April 2 and Mr. and Mrs. Dan G. Jost theirs on April 23. The Johannestal and Bruder-tal Sunday Schools have been having joint S. S. teachers' meetings weekly for about twelve years.

The Mennonite Fellowship Group in Minneapolis-St. Paul is continuing to meet.

—Dr. J. D. Unruh, president of Freeman Junior College, will be commencement speaker at Bethel College this year.

—Bluffton College will have as its commencement speaker Dr. Henry H. Crane, Pastor Central Methodist Church, Detroit, Michigan. Date: May 19-21. Dr. William Beahm, Bethany Biblical Seminary, Chicago, has been selected as the speaker for the 1945 series of Bible lectures to be held next November.

—Missionary H. J. Browns expect to return from Aberdeen, Idaho, to Newton Kansas, towards the end of May.

—Lantern slides of religious subjects can be secured from the Ryan Lantern Slide Service, 4089 Harrison Street, Davenport, Iowa.

—First Church, Halstead, Kansas: Dr. Cornelius Krahn showed slides of the early Mennonites in America on the evening of April 15.

—Correction of statement in mission number: Brother P. H. Richert has served as Secretary of the Foreign Mission Board for thirty-three and one-half years.

—Indian Mennonite Church, Canton, Oklahoma: "One of our Indian churches has since the beginning of the year set aside the second Sunday of each month for an all day service. It was their suggestion. These services have created new interest, and the attendance is very gratifying. Indian dances and pleasures of all kinds help people to forget troubles and worries for a time but they do not satisfy. 'But thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. This group also has plans under way for a prayer service in the church the day victory is announced in Europe.'"—Arthur Friesen.

—Missionary Albert Jantzen was with the First Church, Paso Robles, California, on the evening of April 12, and he and the family were honored at a reception at the Second Church April 15.

“Thou Crownest the year with thy goodness”

Thou makest the outgoings of the morning and evening to rejoice.

Thou visitest the earth, and waterest it: thou greatly enrichest it with the river of God, which is full of water: thou preparest them corn, when thou hast so provided for it.

Thou waterest the ridges thereof abundantly: thou settlest the furrows thereof: thou makest it soft with showers: thou blessest the springing thereof.

Thou crownest the year with thy goodness; and thy paths drop fatness.

They drop upon the pastures of the wilderness: and the little hills rejoice on every side.

The pastures are clothed with the flocks; the valleys also are covered over with corn; they shout for joy, they also sing.

Psalm 65:8b-13

May 6th is Rural Life Sunday

Thoughts from a Rural Parsonage

By Mrs. H. D. Raid

As my husband and I go about our tasks in our rural parsonage home with its ten acres of land, we have opportunity for thought on life with its many phases. Every moment of each day from early morn until bedtime at night is filled with activity. Nevertheless, during these moments of each passing day we may meditate and reflect upon the good things of life much more easily than our city friends, for we are surrounded with all the beauty of nature and are not distracted by the noise and confusion of their city life. Thus because we live close to God through nature, through working with Him in not only our church on Sunday but every day of the week in His out-of-doors, we must look up to Him in thanksgiving for guidance and strength. We feel that it is an aid to us to be able to live in a rural parsonage which is near to the people whom we have come to serve. For through doing the things that they do we feel that we have a common bond of understanding with them. And thus together we can more easily find God and seek to do His will. We in the parsonage look forward to the times when our people come to visit us, and the times when the young people come for the weekly study class on "Mennonite Heritage," after which the boys work in the shop and the girls sew or sing. For through fellowshiping together in this manner we come to a better understanding of each other and the Christian Mennonite way of life.

In June, 1944, our happy home was blessed even more abundantly by the coming of our daughter Elizabeth Ann. She is a happy, healthy little girl full of vigor and pep. From the first day of her life she has breathed the fresh, clean, pure country air. How safe I have always felt in giving her the pure tested milk from our Holstein cow, and the fresh eggs from our flock of White Leghorn hens. I have gotten so used to using these fresh things that I have come to think they must be only those that are fresh each day. We are looking forward to more fresh vegetables from our garden; she has already enjoyed the first asparagus tips. When I stop to think of it I am always thrilled; this taking some seeds of this kind and some of that, then putting them into the same earth, side by side and then watching them come up, here peas, here lettuce, there carrots and so on across the garden. Is it not just perfectly amazing that out of that little bit of material could come so many different kinds of food for mankind? How good they are when in the cool of the morning

Mrs. Howard Raid fulfills the functions of a pastor's wife for the Bethel Mennonite Church, Fortuna. She likes music very much.

you can go out into your own garden and gather all the fresh vegetables that you want for the day, for they still contain all the vitamins.

When we lived in town we were often awakened by the singing and shouts of drunks leaving the tavern. But did you ever awaken in the night to the beautiful singing of the mocking bird down the hedge row? How pleased we were to see several new birds down here, the flashy Orchard Oriole, the beautiful Indigo Bunting, and the rather tame Tufted Titmouse that has built its nest on our porch, as well as the gifted Mocking bird which is almost unknown in Iowa. Equally enjoyed is the little Jenny Wren's song. We have known the wrens for a long time still we never weary of them, for they always bring us cheer with their little songs.

Rural life also offers good opportunities for developing hobbies. Anyone that will use his time wisely at all can study the birds, stars, plants, rocks, and other things of nature while he goes about his regular work. Gardening, carpentry, sewing and other things fit in well for they will be a part of the work. While during the slack season of the heavy farm work many other interesting and useful hobbies may be followed to our and others' enjoyment. We have a shop where my husband spends much time and where he has made a number of pieces of furniture which add much convenience to my work. We have enjoyed the hobby of singing with piano accompaniment, also taking moving pictures of our friends and family. These are always interesting, not only to ourselves but to others who visit us.

This experience has taught us that living in the rural areas has much to offer in making life richer and fuller, for here one comes to realize that he is dependent not only on man but also on God for all of his living.

Directors of Cutting Rooms Meet at Akron Headquarters

Mrs. Menno Snyder, Kitchener, Ontario, Mrs. John J. Hershberger, Kalona, Iowa, Mrs. J. S. Schultz, Bluffton, Ohio, and Miss Anna Mellinger, Gordonsville, Pa., gathered at Akron Headquarters for a two-day conference, April 18 and 19. Those sisters, directing the cutting rooms for relief clothing in their respective areas, considered problems pertinent to their cut-garment service to sewing groups in their areas, and had the larger relief clothing program presented to them.

Far East Worker Arrives in Lisbon

Wilhelmina Kuyf, who sailed March 25, arrived in Lisbon April 10. There is no confirmation that she was assigned passage on a boat scheduled to leave Lisbon to sail directly for Bombay, India.

The Returning Service Man

As men return from the armed forces they very much need the understanding of those among whom they will live, and they need especially the deep understanding of someone who has insight into the ways of human life and into the changes which military life and indoctrination work upon a human being. Without a deep understanding from someone these men will find it practically impossible to come to a release from the influences of militarism and to a wholeness of spirit, mind, and body.

All of this is suggested in a story and comments given by Dr. Amandus W. Loos, Secretary of the Department of Ministry To Service Men of the Church Federation of Chicago. He writes, "A sailor lad literally blue with the cold, walked into a Loop office on one of our cold winter days. He had walked twenty-six blocks into the Loop. When asked why he had not ridden a street car, he replied: 'I was on a street car, but it had to stop suddenly at a corner. The sand dropped on the tracks and the wheels screeched. I was carried right back to the Anzio beach head with the bombs dropping. I hit the floor. Everybody laughed. I had to get off the car and could not get on another one. So I walked into the Loop.' This incident about the sailor was related to a group of religious educators. The chairman remarked smugly, 'What that boy needs is to develop a sense of humor so that he, too, could laugh at that situation.' The tragic lack of understanding on the part of the passengers on that street car who laughed at the overt evidence of tensions telescoped within a sailor and the more serious obtuseness of the religious educator reveal an all too prevalent civilian attitude. Civilians are hurting the returning men emotionally. We may well ask why so many men are leaving their homes to go back to redistribution centers before their thirty-day leave is over. The reasons are obvious."

Have we any reason to believe that Mennonite men who have served in the armed forces, and especially those who have seen combat, will not need a great measure of understanding from those to whom they return and the helpful counselling of someone who understands human nature and the ways of God? If the need is there, then some provision ought to be made for filling it. Something similar might also be said for Mennonite men in C.P.S., for they also have been under unusual strain. Let us hope that our Conference will be able to go a long way towards meeting this need for understanding from all and helpful counseling from someone. We have made a beginning. God would help us to do well.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

Deaconess Sunday

May 6 has been designated as Deaconess Sunday. This focal day helps us to think of the Christian emphasis which the "Sisters" give to the service which brings wholeness to body, mind, and spirit. This emphasis is not so obvious in all hospital and medical service. In Medieval times the progress of medical science was shackled by religious superstition. It took effort to throw off the superstition, and in that attempt the men of medicine perhaps tended to go to the extreme. Once freed from the encumbrances of superstition men of medicine quit guarding so hard, and today there is coming back into the field of medicine a spiritual emphasis. It is becoming clearer that much sickness has to do with spiritual conditions. A new area of insight is opening up. Deaconesses with their emphasis upon the spiritual should have a great new highway to travel upon in the future. The day for a greater emphasis upon the spiritual has broken. Well may we pause with gratitude on May 6 for the Christian service that the "Sisters" in our institutions are rendering.

Will It Happen at San Francisco?

Those who have been very enthusiastic about the world security organization envisaged by Dumbarton Oaks have also been very insistent that certain changes be made in the structure of the proposed league.

1. There ought to be a provision for much easier changing or amending of the charter. At it now stands one of the Big Five can prevent any change in jot or tittle for all time to come. It is evident that nothing can be so well-done as to justify this. In fact, the world is changing so rapidly that there must be very adequate provision for these changes.

2. There ought to be included some provision for united action in regard to colonial problems, from which wars may so easily spring. As the Dumbarton Oaks proposals now stand each nation can have its own say-so over what it has in firm grasp.

3. The small and middle nations should be given a real say-so in the discussion of world problems. As it stands the Security Council can block any such discussion.

4. A clear statement ought to be made that the new league is to function as an instrument of international justice.

The above four points give us something of a basis for judging the success of San Francisco. Let us hope that the emphasis will be upon organized cooperation and not upon militaristic coercion. President Truman in his address to the conference pointed out that the leading nations ought to serve rather than dominate. May this kind of a spirit be victorious among the victors of this war as they gather at San Francisco to arrange for the security of mankind.

Rural Life Sunday

Rural Sunday falls on May 6 this year. On that day there will be a strong emphasis upon the desirability of rural life. Here as elsewhere, we need a happy balance of emphasis. Undoubtedly, rural people have been plagued with a "hayseed" inferiority complex. In trying to counteract this there is a danger of developing a superiority complex. We need to see the good and the bad in both the rural and the urban. They need each other, perhaps, with some very substantial modifications. For all Mennonites to become rural people might not be desirable at all. On the other hand for many of them to be swallowed up in the Sodoms and Gomorrahs of our day is not desirable either. In a city it is much harder to be a thermostat than a thermometer, and yet the problems arising out of the complex relationships of a great density of population call for new, stronger, and better thermostats. Who will be the thermostats? Maybe our rural heritage unfits us. We are told that the city corrupts us. We must admit that it perhaps is easier to be good in the wide open spaces of the country, but how good are we in the rural atmosphere where temptations are not so numerous or strong as in the city? Are we too comfortable and smug in our "rural goodness," thereby condoning its inadequacies and extending them?

Our Ministry of Education

The following letter has been sent out. It is being reproduced here in order that it may be directly available to all members of our churches, thus relieving the responsibilities of busy pastors by giving all a chance to study its content.

One reason for the slowness of response is that the new work was started shortly before most of the churches make their budgets. A number of the churches, as well as quite a few individual members, have responded. The Board of Education is grateful for such evidences of interest in its work.

"To the Pastors of the General Conference Churches:

Dear Brother:

The Board of Education finds it necessary to come to the churches with an appeal for greater financial support for the work of this Board. Sometime ago we launched out on an enlarged program whereby we felt that we could render a very necessary and vital service to the churches of our conference and to the needs of our people. We had a conviction that there was a large place for some consecrated minister to give full time to the work of a minister at large. This piece of work has been carried on since September 1, 1944. Naturally with this arrangement our expenses have increased considerably and to date the churches have not responded in proportion to our needs.

There has not been time enough to prove the actual worth of what is being done. Thus far much of the effort has been devoted to writing for our church papers and to making thousands of contacts by letter with young people in various branches of service, and with their parents. Through these letters there have been opportunities to help many face the problems that come to people in these days. The inspiration and strength that have come from friendly and spiritual counsel is a value that cannot be realized to date. There have been a number of visits to camps, farm and hospital units, eighteen churches, Freeman Junior College, Bluffton College and Bethel College. In addition there have been many contacts with men in all kinds of service. There have also been many meetings with smaller groups for counsel and inspiration for promoting various phases of our church program.

Thus this Board is needing your financial help to enable us to work out this, and other phases of our program. We feel sure that there are many who would not want us to drop this program and to this end we appeal for a larger place in your financial contributions to the work of our conference. We would much appreciate a special offering for God's work through this Board.

We come with this appeal in the spirit of seeking to do the Lord's work in the tasks that fall to us as a part of our conference program. Our prayer is that God might direct us in our work, and that He might guide us all as we work together for the building of his Kingdom.

Sincerely in Christ,

A. S. Rosenberger, Treasurer Board of Education."
P.S. Please send money for the Board of Education to General Conference Headquarters, 722 Main St., Newton, Kansas.

India Worker Accepts New Position

Upon arriving in India, November, 1944, R. C. Kaufman was asked to assume the directorship of the Mennonite relief activities in Bengal until the arrival of J. Harold Sherk. F. J. Isaac and George Beare, former directors of the relief work, had returned to their respective mission stations. When Bro. Sherk arrived and took over the work in January, 1945, Bro. Kaufman received a request from the Bengal Christian Council Relief Committee to direct their activities in India. After consultation with the Mennonite Relief Committee in India (M.R. C.I.) Bro. Kaufman accepted this new position. The Bengal Christian Council represents the Church Committee for Relief in Asia.

"Inasmuch Then as I am a Deaconess, I Will Glorify My Ministry."

(PAPER READ BY SISTER FRIEDA AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BETHEL DEACONESS HOME AND HOSPITAL SOCIETY, FEBRUARY, 4, 1940)

"Inasmuch then as I am a Deaconess, I will glorify my ministry."

"Now in these days, when the number of disciples was multiplying, there arose a murmuring of the Grecian Jews against the Hebrews because their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations. Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them and said, 'It is not fit that we should forsake the word of God, and serve tables. Look ye out therefore, brethren, from among you seven men of good report, full of the Spirit and of wisdom, whom ye may appoint over this business. But we will continue steadfastly in prayer, and in the ministry of the word.' And the saying pleased the church and they chose seven men full of faith and the Holy Spirit, whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed they laid their hands upon them." Acts 6:1-6. Thus was born the Diaconate, a ministry of good works, which was from this time forth a service of the church supporting the ministry of the Word.

The apostolic writings reveal that soon women were also chosen to help in the church in various ways. The Greek word Diakonos—of which the English word Deaconess is the translation—has at heart the meaning, prompt and helpful service. In connection with Paul's work, the activity of women is constantly recognized. Phoebe and Mary and Junia are named by him with affectionate regard; also Tryphaena and Tryhosa, "who labored in the Lord," Persis, "who labored much in the Lord." All these others are mentioned in a single chapter. The first Deaconess, called by that name Diakonos, is Phoebe. "I commend unto you Phoebe, our sister who is a Diakonon of the church which is at Cenchrea, that ye receive her in the Lord, worthily of the saints, and that ye assist her in whatsoever matter she may have need of you." Romans 16:1-2a. Notice she is not called the deaconess, the only one, but a deaconess. The fact of her traveling, probably alone, and of her being certainly the bearer of this important letter, in the journey from Cenchrea to Rome, speaks well for her character and bravery. And her business too—since the church is urged to help her on with it, is it not reasonable to suppose that it was church business?

The deaconesses of the post-apostolic church were an important order. They are constantly mentioned by the writers of the church and occasionally even by profane authors. The early church, like its great Founder, reckoned the care of the poor, a religious service. There were peculiar duties pertaining to the care of the sick and destitute, that only a woman could perform. As the organization of the church became more complicated, their duties increased. The deaconesses instructed female and youthful catechumens in the doctrines of the church and assisted in the rite of baptism. They acted for the bishop in his spiritual ministrations to the women of the congregation. They also nursed the sick women and helped care for the poor. Since women could gain access to prisons more readily than men, deaconesses visited the cells of those who were soon to receive the martyr's crown and administered to them the consolation and encouragements of the gospel.

Deaconesses were ordained with solemn ceremony, by the laying on of hands of the bishop or some ecclesiastical authority. A form of prayer to be used at the ordination of the deaconesses has come to us in the Apostolic Constitutions, which gave us a very interesting picture of the church in the second and third century. This scriptural and historical prayer has found general use in the consecration services for deaconesses in motherhouses and various churches today, and we also use it in the ordination of our sisters.

We quote from Lucy Rider Meyer's book, "Deaconesses." "A single large church in Constantinople, had at one time forty Deaconesses pushing its work, and a smaller church in the same city, had six of these assistants. We are always amazed at the rapid growth of the early church... May not the explanation of this astonishingly rapid growth be found, partly at least, in this multitude of devoted Christian women, who as ministrae worked side by side with the ministers of the gospel; spreading the story of Jesus Christ and Him crucified, as only a woman's heart of love and tongue of enthusiasms can do it? Suppose a large church in Chicago had forty deaconesses earnestly pushing its work on every side?" Thus far Lucy Rider Meyers.

After the Emperor Constantine became a Christian, and Christianity became the state religion, the female diaconate declined rapidly, although we find traces of it till the twelfth century. While on the one hand, many Christians relapsed into a worldly, voluptuous life, on the other hand the crucifying of the flesh and the renunciation of the world were so much more accentuated. The cloister became the refuge of pious meditation and asceticism, of study and benevolence. The deaconess gave way to the nun.

First Sunday in May is Deaconess Sunday in the Western District.

Time does not permit us to trace the blessed service of devoted women through the history of the so-called dark and the later Middle Ages. The rise of the great monastic orders for both men and women are not only interesting but reveal, at times, a depth of spiritual devotion and heights of attainment in Christian service which are unsurpassed today. The names of St. Francis of Assisi, St. Elizabeth of Thuringa, St. Catherine of Siena, and many others are not only well remembered since the twelfth century but still exert a lasting influence upon the thought life of thousands today.

After the gigantic upheavals of the Reformation and the long religious and civil readjustments which followed the Thirty Years War, it is of special interest to Mennonites that history mentions the Waldenses, the Mennonites, and Pilgrim Fathers as being the first to re-establish the deaconess as a helper in the congregation of Protestant believers. Through St. Vincent de Paul, the great order of the Sisters of Charity was founded in the Catholic church, and soon new life and vigor became evident everywhere as seen in the renewal of many earlier organizations of monks and nuns. The Catholic church of today points with just pride to the great army of men and women who renounce the world and its attractions and opportunities to follow the footsteps of the Master in teaching and healing, in serving the poor and needy, in humbleness of heart as a free will service to the church. Whatever our ideas may be regarding this form of service, the Catholic church claims its evidence as a proof of her divine origin and history and peculiar place as the only church which brings true salvation for time and eternity.

Two years ago, the class in deaconess history in Bethel College worked at the task of trying to count the Roman Catholic sisters in the United States. We estimated their number to be in the neighborhood of 150,000. By far the largest number of these are teachers, serving their church in the thousands of parochial schools, in girls boarding schools, academies, and colleges. Thousands of Catholic sisters own and conduct general hospitals and institutions for those suffering from mental and nervous disorders, homes for the aged, homes for epileptics, defectives and imbeciles, and homes for every phase of human need and suffering. Schools, hospitals, and orphanages comprise the main divisions of these sisters' work. Who can estimate the helpful service which is thus rendered to all classes of people? Who can estimate the respect and honor which they bring to their church? It is easy to criticize the motives and ideas which sweep large numbers of men and women into the diaconate of the Roman church annually. The fact remains that though formalism, spiritual degeneracy, and other evils may be present in some orders, true consecration and devotion to the Lord Jesus Christ and His church can only produce the fruits which are evident to the world at large.

Germany and probably Sweden and Holland have been able to outnumber the Catholic sisters with Protestant deaconesses. In the United States, a pathetically small group of deaconesses try to carry on the woman's service of charity of the Christian church. In the Lutheran church, however, the number of deaconesses is growing steadily, and the scope of their work is enlarging.

The Protestant church at large has overlooked the importance of offering to its women the opportunity to enlist in an organized diaconate service. In some instances, at least, in the United States, where efforts have been made to develop the work, pastors and church leaders have not supported it, in fact, have helped to undermine its influence and growth. History reveals the fact that men must furnish the leadership and direct the work if organized female diaconate shall prosper. The church in Germany has produced such leaders, great men of vision and love for the service of the ministry in works. Such names as Fliedner, Wichern, von Bodelschwingh, Gossner, Schulze, Zollner, and scores of others, are inscribed upon the history of the church as shining examples of faith in and devotion to this cause. The pioneer of organized deaconess work in the Mennonite church of America is the late Rev. David Goerz. His co-workers strengthened and supported him in his convictions, and they and their successors have carried on the service for over thirty years.

As we mention this, we trust that each member of the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital Society will realize as never before how important a part each one bears in the future development of the diaconate service in the Mennonite church. It is the duty of each member to acquaint himself with the principles of this work, to support it by his prayers, and to interest young women in the opportunity which the deaconess work offers to them to invest their talents in service to their church. Because deaconess organizations usually begin in connection with a hospital, deaconess work is often confused in the minds of the public with the nursing profession. Why go to so much effort and expense to train and support a Christian nurse, they may ask. A deaconess may be a nurse, but she is not only a nurse who occasionally reads the word of God and prays with a patient. All Christian nurses will do that. A deaconess is first and foremost a Christian woman who wishes to serve in the ministry of good works under the auspices and direction of her church. These deeds of mercy may include many forms of service besides that of nursing the sick. The care of children in day nurseries and orphanages, teaching in kindergartens, elementary and high schools for girls, conducting schools of domestic economy, institutions for training maid servants and providing Christian homes for working women—all these are definite branches of the deaconess work. The deaconesses also care for demoralized children and juvenile criminal girls in rescue homes, serve in institutions for epileptics and defectives, feeble-minded and idiots. Homes for aged and infirmaries, parish work, city missions, and district work among the poor offer other fruitful fields for service. The deaconess undertakes her service with the thought of making it a life vocation, contributing freely her strength and talents that the task may be accomplished to the glory of God. Shall we say that a deaconess seeks to obey literally that which Jesus requested of the young ruler: "Go sell that which thou hast and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, and follow me." May not some Christians be allowed to do this?

The deaconess usually wears a garb or so-called religious habit. She wears this for the sake of simplicity and economy, not because she attaches any religious merit to it. She just can not be bothered with the demands of fashion and wears her garb as a soldier wears his uniform.

There is in the heart of every woman touched by the spirit of God the desire to give herself to others in sacrifice and love. This desire can find full expression in the life of a wife and mother. But a woman can also mother the children of another, she can mother the sick and aged, the poor, and helpless. The deaconess service does not ask too great a sacrifice of the sisters. Anyone seeking to save his own life can lose it also in the deaconess work, but whosoever shall lose his life for the Master's sake shall truly find it.

C.P.S. NOTES

C.P.S. Unit Approved for Tiffin, Ohio

The most recent mental hospital approved to receive a unit of C.P.S. men under Mennonite administration is the Tiffin State Institute, Tiffin, Ohio. A twenty-five man unit will be set up at this institution which has recently been opened by the State of Ohio for the care of epileptics. The M.C.C. is planning to establish a unit at Tiffin composed of campers who have a special interest in church music.

Matrons Appointed for Women's Summer Units

The C.P.S. Section at Akron has recently announced that the matrons for the Mennonite Summer Service Units will be as follows: Edna Ramseyer, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Miriam Barge, Wernersville, Pa.; Louella Smith, Cleveland, Ohio; Lois Gunden, Ypsilanti, Mich.; Mary Miller, Kalamazoo, Mich. Units will open the last week in May and the first week in June. A considerable number of applications have already been received.

Should Churches Establish and Maintain Hospitals for the Mentally Ill?

A SUPERINTENDENT OF NURSES SAYS:

Three reasons for answering this question in the affirmative:

1. The need is obvious. When one out of every twenty persons goes to a hospital sooner or later because of mental illness, when over 500,000 patients are confined in hospitals in one year because of this illness—it would seem the church must assume some responsibility in providing care for these patients, for Christians as well as non-Christians are afflicted.

2. Christianity alone has the solution to many of the great spiritual problems faced by sufferers of this type. Physicians everywhere, as well as hospital administrators, recognize the fact that the most efficient hospital service can be rendered by Christians. One leading neurologist made the statement that every patient suffering from psychosis is either not right with God or not right with man. Many of the patients are ill because they have been unable to cope with the complexities and contradictions of modern life, and while the church is far from perfect, our heritage gives us a standard of values which should enable us to help untangle some of these problems. Many patients have a religious background and, even after suffering a long time, the ability to appreciate and find comfort in spiritual things remains.

Mentally ill patients undergo intense suffering. They deserve the best care that both science and religion can offer. Physicians and nurses admit that frequently the most effective medicine is an understanding physician, attendant, or nurse. Where can you find more gracious, more understanding, more sympathetic, more faithful, more intelligent, and more scientific men and women than in the church?

To establish an institution under the direction of the church with Christian personnel well trained would not only provide adequate care for those in need, but would also serve as an outlet to some of our young men and women who through CPS appointments have found themselves qualified and called to this particular field of service.

3. As we encourage and engage in this ministry in our church, we will become more charitable, more Christ-like, and the riches of God's grace will be seen both in the church, in the lives of those ministering, and in the experience of those unto whom we minister. "As we have therefore opportunity, let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith." Gal. 6:10. "And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work." II Cor. 9:8.

Life on the Land

By William H. Stauffer

Human life began in a garden. When God created the heavens and the earth and every living thing, He made man in His own image as the crowning achievement of the entire creative process. He took this first human pair and "planted" them in the heart of the earth, a garden, and told them "to be fruitful and multiply and replenish the earth." Apparently God saw some genuinely basic values in having this first man and woman deeply rooted in His holy earth.

Life deeply rooted in God's holy earth has profound spiritual significance. The daily attitudes of life of a man whose normal experiences are constantly tied up with ongoing life; birth, growth, and death as the very processes of nature, are very different from the attitudes of a man whose daily experiences are tied up in the artificiality of "nuts and bolts" in our large cities. Living close to the soil the man rooted in the holy earth, does not find it difficult to live close to God, its maker. A man whose daily bread comes directly from the holy earth with the effort of his own hands pauses before the table which is spread before him with a different attitude than does the man whose milk comes from bottles and whose fruits and vegetables come from tin cans. When God placed Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden He placed them in surroundings where it was most natural for them to live a normal life which He had intended. This is true even though it was in this Garden where the first human pair made a grave mistake.

Life on the land has further spiritual significance. He who owns land breathes the air of a free man. He who owns the land he tills, or is becoming its owner, is armored with some of life's deepest security. The flow of his daily bread from the holy earth to his table is in the hands of himself and God rather than in the precarious hands of the stock market or the board of trade. In good times or in bad he still lives; he lives better than any other man. In spite of all of the hardships and handicaps of farm life the farmer is not subjected to the demoralizing factors involved in unemployment and bread lines. He can always have a pretty well stocked larder of food and a good roof over himself and his family.

Someone has said that the chief end of man is to glorify God and enjoy Him forever. Granting this, how does one better glorify His maker than to live in a wholesome, fruitful, normal, deeply spiritual way? This is more readily done out on the holy earth than in any other place. On the farm the family is the basic unit of life. On the farm the father, mother, and children have their definite responsibilities and family chores to perform. The success of the farm flows out of successful family life. By their common responsibilities they share a common life. There are fewer quarrels, less divorces, less juvenile delinquency on the farms of America than anywhere else. This does not just happen. There is a profound reason for it. The land is the natural habitat for the family.

Life on the land is more than just tilling the soil. Farming is a sacred calling. Farming is a way of life. To a Christian farmer the earth is holy. The soil is sacred. The land which he farms has been committed to his stewardship as a sacred heritage. It has come to him from the past. And it is his God-given task to so use it that he can pass it on to his children as a richer heritage than it was when it came into his stewardship. Someone has very truthfully said, "No one in all the world breathes so securely the air of a free man as the farmer who, through industry and thrift, has won a landholding as a living space for himself and family."

One of the best and most secure foundations that we can lay is one of life on the land on an owner-operated family type farm, large enough to permit the use of labor-saving machinery and to provide full employment and a satisfactory living for the operator and his family. Out of such an experience can flow the most vital living stream of Godly living.

A Rural Parsonage

By H. D. Raid

When the first and second generation of Swiss Mennonites moved into this community from the "Sonnenberg Community" of Wayne County, Ohio, it was but natural that they should continue in their original occupation of farming. All of them settled on what was then the open grass prairie of the Ozark upland. Since then seldom has there been a time when any of the active members have lived in any of the surrounding villages. So you see this is truly a rural church. Located four miles from even the nearest small village, it was but logical for the church to purchase some land for the parsonage. This they did in about 1919 when they purchased the buildings and about ten acres of the land adjoining the church. At the present time this has a large house, a barn ample for a preacher farmer's livestock, a new chicken house which the men of the church have built since we are here, and a brooder house. About two acres is in permanent bluegrass pasture, about one acre in garden, lot and lawn, one acre in one small field and two larger fields of three acres each. This provides enough pasture and hay and part of the grain for our livestock. We have two cows, one Holstein and the other Brown Swiss. Together they produced over 22,000 lbs. of milk during the last year which gave us all the milk that we wished to use, raised two calves and left more than 17,000 lbs. to be sold. One of the calves we butchered, and the other we will sell. At first it seemed a bit strange to leave the milk can set on the front porch for the milkman to pick up instead of going out there to get our milk. But when the end of every two weeks comes and he leaves a check instead of a bill it suits us all right.

On our little farm we also keep one sow and raise two litters of pigs each year. The last litter we sold in March when they were six months and one week old; they averaged 235 lbs. I was amused one day when coming suddenly through a door I surprised the old sow; she made a startled grunt and all of the little pigs just froze, perfectly still. Then when she saw that it was I she told the little pigs it was all right and they went their way. One would not think that pigs which have been tamed for centuries would still have such primitive instincts, as remaining motionless when they think danger is near. But is it not true of us also that we have many lower or baser instincts or reactions which are covered up most of the time, but yet which are brought out under unusual conditions, such as war, which thrives upon the release of the meanest and basest side of humanity. Is it not true that only love of Christ and the Christ-like way will enable us to hold these baser sides under control?

We started out last fall with 145 culled 4a White Leghorn pullets and R. O. P. cockerels; these eggs bring twelve cents per dozen above market price. Did you ever stop to watch a chicken drink water? Because of the way that their organs are made it seems that each time they take a drink they look up to God in thanksgiving. They can never take a drink without looking up to the Heavens in thankfulness. Do we human beings willingly thank our Father for such simple things as a drink of water? For many other simple and yet necessary things of life, do we thank the Father? We so often take water for granted until the pump wears out or the pressure is all gone. But they tell that when they first settled in this area they could not dig deep enough for wells so many of them had to use cisterns for their water supply. One of the early preachers that lived here then found his cistern empty, so he had to load some barrels onto his wagon, hitch up the team, and go to a stream some four miles northwest of here. While he was there loading the barrels with water it started to rain and rain. Since he was a kind hearted man he decided to empty out the water to ease the load of the team. When he got within a mile of home he noticed that it had not rained so much, and by the time he got home he saw that it had not rained at all. Here he came driving thru the dust of the barnyard with his barrels empty. "Water, water everywhere" but not at home.

The other day while walking thru our small pasture I noticed that under the walnut tree there was beautiful green grass growing and under the hard maple

Dairy Farm Service Office Created

With the opening up of several new Mennonite C.P.S. units in dairy farm service and the expansion of older units, a new office has been created at Akron. This new office, the Dairy Farm Service Section, will administer the dairy units under the Director of M.C.C.-C.P.S. in a manner similar to the administration of the hospital units by the Hospital Section. William Snyder is in charge of the Dairy Farm Service Section. An attempt is being made to give more personal attention to the placement of campers on dairy farm service. Farmers to receive the men are first interviewed and the campers are then informed of the situation in which they will be placed. It is hoped that this attention will be more satisfactory to both farmers and campers.

nearby there was hardly any grass at all. I began wondering about it but did not solve the problem until several days later while reading the booklet put out by the Clearsprings, Maryland, C.P.S. which discussed and summarized the lecture they had during their "Farm and Community School." Here they said that grass would grow better under a walnut tree because it is a legume. Then I knew the reason: all legumes have the ability to take this inert material nitrogen out of the air, and thru certain bacteria that will live with their roots this nitrogen is stored in small nodules from which it is made available to what ever plant roots happen to reach it. Is it not strange that this material which makes up about eighty percent of the air, and which is of but little value to the plant as a gas, can be taken by a plant and thru the action of certain bacteria be made into a form that will cause the plant to grow much better than before? How like the Spirit of The Christ, which is as invisible, tasteless and odorless and which we cannot touch. We may also be surrounded with His Spirit and it will not be of much value to us. But when some Christian leads us to His Spirit and shows it to us in a form that we can use, then our lives will grow stronger and purer. Even though we live in the same world that we did before and breathe the same air, still it will become a better world and our lives will be richer as will all of those that come in contact with the Holy Spirit that is within us.

In my spare time and some that is not so spare, I work in my shop. Since black walnut is a native of this area it is comparatively easy to find enough boards to make some projects. After working with board in the rough for some time, one learns to see at least some of the hidden beauties in them. He comes to know which way to plane it, with the grain, what knots will show up to good effect, when there will be wavy grain and many other things about the board that will show up nicely in the finished project.

Rough wood is much like the human soul before it is attuned to the Master Carpenter. Only someone trained in the study of souls can see there the possibilities for good which may be covered with rough talk, or action and hidden by sins. Only as the soul of man is worked on by someone that understands which way the grain runs and what good abilities there are there to find, will these good things begin to appear. Then only as they allow the Master Carpenter to work on their soul completely will all of its beauty appear, and it will have its most usefulness to this world. Wood is like the soul of man in this respect also; if man sins his soul is marred. Likewise with wood; if we make a mistake in working it down then it will never be the same as we had planned for it to be. We can work out the mistake and make something beautiful out of it, but because of the mar it will never be the same as we had intended. So the soul of man; it can still become beautiful and useful but it will never completely cover up the mar of the sin even though it is forgiven. Wood, we might say, has a soul in that its beauty is brought out by working on it, the same as man's soul is shown by the work upon it of the Master of Life. Iron is not so, for if we make a mistake in working with it, we just put it back into the heat of the forge and hammer it into whatever shape we want it.

The rural parsonage enables the minister to understand just a little better what the members of the church are going thru. When crops are good or the price goes up he too will feel the effect, or when it goes down he likewise knows how they feel. When there are long, hard days of work to be done in the field, perhaps he will be a little more forgiving of a nodding head. His life is thus closely influenced by the same things that influence his parishioners. It makes an easy and common ground for conversations. Certainly in working and living with the members each comes to know more clearly just how deep his Christianity is. The rural parsonage with a small acreage is the answer to many of the problems that confront churches with just a part time minister living outside of the community. We ministers like to stress the fact that Christianity should affect our church member's action throughout the week as well as on Sunday. Would it not help a lot if we found out at least in part just what they have to face in making a living? Would it not also impress them if they saw that we were willing to work with our hands as well as with our minds? Would it not help to make our Christianity an active part of each day if they would see that the minister too was at least attempting to bring his religion into daily living, doing work which they too were doing? Did not many of the early Christians also work with their hands and yet preach also? Surely, we too can make use of the rural parsonage in the communities into which it would fit, if our ministers are educated to come into such and make use of it in a Christian Mennonite Way.

The Challenge of the Rural Ministry

By Loris A. Habegger

In analyzing the challenge of the rural ministry let it be said that this is no attempt at minimizing the ministry in urban areas, but an effort to point to significant and plentiful opportunities in our rural areas. The church has in times past not given the priority to the rural ministry which it rightfully deserves. We can state that the challenge has been outwardly recognized, but it has not caused the real concern which should be manifest if we are to face the issue. In view of this sin of omission rather than commission, perhaps it is of worth that we survey the opportunities in this field.

One of the saddest commentaries in the history of our church has been the secularization process which is making its inroads in our rural churches. The projection of the modes and mechanisms of present-day civilization into our rural church communities has played havoc with the former spirit of Christian unity and brotherhood. One watches with abated breath and anxious heart the slow but steady disintegration of the values which made our churches the lighthouse of faith, the power in the community for good, the congregation place for our young people, and the place where our men and women were brought to a knowledge of the Lord as Savior. Sadder still is the fact that this process is proceeding at an accelerated pace in our urban areas.

Perhaps the challenges at hand can best be portrayed in opportunities of direction and the privileges of learning in the rural ministry.

The greatest challenge in any ministry is, of course, the proclamation of the Lord as Christ of our lives. However, this is not always a "Sunday morning sermon" service to be rendered to the people. There are opportunities of direction where the implications of the Christian life are lived in a practical manner, and methods whereby such may be accomplished should forever be sought after by the rural pastor.

In any rural community there must be developed and fostered a church consciousness which expresses itself in church welfare, community welfare, and evangelical activity and interest.

In the area of church welfare, the church looks for leadership in establishing young people's activities, libraries, choirs, missionary societies, and mutual aid interests; all possibilities and aids in the establishment of a Christian brotherhood such as we would appreciate living in. The rural people are less inclined to the pressing influences of city life and therefore have more time for these church activities. Their time must therefore be directed into these constructive channels, and the rural pastor who is able to accomplish successfully the establishment of such activities has ample reason to view with satisfaction a task well done.

Unfortunately, rural people have been guilty of an inferiority complex. This has been precipitated by unfounded judgment placing rural occupational endeavors beneath the dignity of our urban brethren. The role played by the rural pastor in pointing out the values of rural life as living in proximity to Almighty God and placing each day of occupational labor as another opportunity of serving God can be of indeterminable value in raising the standards of the church community. The necessity of pointing members of the constituency to a cognizance of the homogeneity of their occupation and their Godly kinship is one of vital concern to the rural pastor. The poignant value of pointing this out to the young people is of special value. It is in this area that perhaps the greatest challenge is manifest to the rural pastor. Of a certainty it is THE OPPORTUNITY to help our rural people maintain their Mennonite heritage which we so desire to maintain.

The opportunity of developing young people's activities calls forth the entire ingenuity of the pastor. Rural young people have a life to offer for direction which is rich in the fundamentals of God's nature. A church program which offers them opportunity for expression and work is a requisite, not a theoretical possibility. Seeking after the needs of the young people, sensing their desires, and then directing them into constructive production for the Kingdom offers a real challenge. They can be called upon to participate actively in church interests (choirs, C.E., etc.) but projects requiring rural occupational application should be developed. Above all else, the young people must be kept at work for the Kingdom.

The common occupational interest of our rural people offers the possibility of welding them into a "little Kingdom of God" here on earth. There is not the diversified interest of urban areas, and the accomplishment comes much nearer to being a reality in a rural area.

The rural pastor should be found encouraging the young people in the service of the church and pointing them to the possibilities in full time service as well as helping them develop their educational interests.

The rural pastor can be found encouraging social activity wherein lies the cultivation of an appreciation for the fellow brethren. Bringing the church to a place of high esteem and a position of the soul-satisfying stimulus in the rural community is a worthy challenge for any pastor.

Loris Habegger is Assistant Director of C.P.S. Unit 63 at New Jersey State Hospital, Marlboro. His home is Berne, Indiana.

What does the foregoing involve and what is the recompense? It offers little opportunity for fame but rather a sense of having lived with Christ as he walked on earth with the humble, the meek, and the unworthy. It offers a sense of oneness and unity with one's people. It offers hours of toil in helping the rural people see their opportunity, sense their blessings, and in welding them into a church which is live, pulsating with real enthusiasm, and with an interest in its life and in the mutual interest which they share with other church groups in the greater work of the conference. It offers still longer hours of work in sharing the responsibility of one's livelihood by some hours of labor afield, a virtue not to be frowned upon but which has the potential of a much deeper interest in one's people and a deeper appreciation of the problems which they face.

Satisfactions That Came from Rural School Teaching

By Ruth L. Hilty

Bicycling from school on a spring evening there is time for retrospection. The closing day mirrors all of nature's beauty. The school teacher sees it, and yet does not see, for she reflects as she mechanically pedals along. "This day hasn't been one of the best, but . . . John knows how to do long division now . . . That was a nasty abrasion Jimmie got sliding into first base. Did we care for it properly? . . . Claudia told her story well—practiced telling it to her mother while they were planting peas—a wise parent to give a listening ear." Thousands of teachers are on their way home, with many similar thoughts five days a week.

In the morning you bike vigorously ahead and you plan the more difficult tasks for the day. You love life; you love it right here where you are. Many a day passes with that deep inner satisfaction in your service, and yet you never analyze why it is present. After six years of service I must face the reasons for having been content to teach in a rural school setting rather than in an urban situation. Let us accept the assumption that my life fitted more congenially into a rural school situation because I had grown up in a rural setting.

Uppermost in one's mind remain the boys and girls. These could be found in any rural community across the States—any Mennonite community like mine. A room full of fresh, clean youngsters, with the seasonal winds in their lungs, the breadth of wide open spaces in their smiles and outlook toward life, full of vigor from romping, working, and running errands.

Ruth L. Hilty taught third grade at Leipsic, Ohio, village school for two years and the intermediate grades at Pandora consolidated school for four. She now assists in the publicity department of the M.C.C.

One of the finest tributes to rural life is the reverence which those of farm heritage manifest as they recount the days "on the farm." It is a relatively simple matter to establish rapport with these people by mentioning a common heritage of the soil. The rural minister has the privilege of developing these early interests in such a manner as will challenge the youth to make their contribution to the church and community in rural areas rather than in the city.

And so the prayer of the rural minister may well be, "Lord, help me to see in these farm folks, my own people, the humbleness of which you spoke. Help me to appreciate their rich spiritual philosophy and make me learn from them. Help me to lead them to a deeper appreciation of thee through a personal acquaintance with thee and the soil of thy creation."

The pet lamb being bottle-fed, the new swing, the hay mow acrobatics make up their conversation. The marks of strain and tension detectable around the eyes and brow of a city child, the restriction of movement because of an alley, little or no yard, congestion and rush in city thoroughfares, walls and more walls, all are quite absent in the nature of a rural child. Even the pressure of war days remains quite removed from them. Probably they know too little the seriousness of the time in which they live, the hardships and dreads in areas where the soil is trampled in combat.

From the retarded or maladjusted child, who needs much love, patience and tutoring, to the child who has developed habits of resourcefulness the teacher learns to love them and they in turn love the teacher. Making the school room a family of harmony, industry, and comradely understanding is the aim of both rural and urban teachers. The angle of approach to working out this relationship is somewhat different for the rural teacher and is made easy to the degree that family units in the community are harmonious. Our Mennonite rural family has retained characteristic qualities that can well appear in a school room spirit.

The responsibility that parents of the community vest in the teacher brings satisfaction. The teacher represents the parents, the interest of the community. She is expected to uphold their standards, and establish ideals in the three institutions around which the community revolves—the home, the church, the school. The teacher feels a warmth, a strong support coming from rural parents, and can meet the parents with the same spirit. The rural community does not possess the urban disinterest in the character of the teacher, her standards, and attitude outside of the school room. One's contacts do not get lost in the swarm of home-going employees, nor does one remain a lonely stranger in a world of apartments. The rural community invites the teacher to become involved in activities of all age levels.

God keep us humble for the times that parents have come to ask for assistance or counseling, that the home and school may work together to help a child. The name of a child psychologist may never be known to rural parents, but the spoken or unspoken understanding between teacher and parent is above price.

With deep conviction and idealism I left my Alma Mater to carry the improvements in methods of education to a smaller school system where methods are unfairly branded as outmoded, caught in a rut, but where the community cannot think of hiring a teacher for fancy ideas. To apply some worthy trends in education—though some of the latest equipment may not be present, to teach more than the three R's, to add strength to the children's moral fiber, so as to awaken the creative, the dormant resourcefulness, is to enrich the weave in the tapestry of their lives.

The stone quarry, the printing press for the local paper, the signal tower of a railroad junction, the mysteries of the creek that runs nearby, the variety in the branching of bare trees, a bursting seed, a snowflake or fly leg under a microscope, all are adventures in living more easily accessible to rural youngsters. To become acquainted with the commonplace surroundings the community services is to have dealt with the verse, "and the truth shall make you free." Reward is sufficient in the dancing eyes of learning youth, the flow of easy conversation, the thought question.

The attitudes that the children catch, keep and apply in serving others can be the only indicator of how well we have succeeded. Someday when I no longer can bike, but reminisce, the satisfaction will be mine to learn where and how my charges have taken their places in the service one toward another.

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

THE RURAL COMMUNITY IS IMPORTANT

The purpose of rural life Sunday is to emphasize the significance of the rural community. Those who commemorate this day in a special way feel that the rural community has been too much taken for granted, despised or generally unappreciated.

Why It Is Important

1. The rural community is important because it is a cell in the world society. This rural cell is to human society what the physiological cell is to the human body, namely the smallest structural unit within the total body.

2. The rural community is important because it provides the potential in which Christian faith and life can be nurtured. The community is to the family what the home is to the individual, namely, the atmosphere and the environment for nurturing individual and Christian group life.

3. The rural community is important because in it primary human relationships are possible. Intimate human contacts allow for personal acquaintance and therefore concern for individual moral, spiritual, and economic welfare.

4. The rural community is important because it is the source of a nation's population. Its birth rate regularly exceeds its death rate, therefore, it is a growing population.

5. The rural community is important because it is friendly to the establishment and maintenance of the family, which is the key unit of human society and of the Christian Church.

How It Can Be Strengthened

1. The rural community can be strengthened by a ministry that understands and thoroughly approves the genius and mission of the rural church. Ministers who are bored with rural parishes should never be allowed to use them as stepping stones to "greater fields of service."

2. The rural community can be strengthened when the people in it recognize how significantly the community determines their thinking, feeling, and acting. Men are not immune to their environment. They are influenced by it whether they recognize it or not.

3. The rural community can be strengthened when the members in it recognize a responsibility for the character and reputation of their community just as they now recognize a responsibility for their families and their churches.

4. The rural community can be strengthened when the churches in it develop programs of Christian mutual aid that will demonstrate genuine brotherhood.

5. The rural community can be strengthened when the educational systems in these communities are thoroughly Christian as to teachers and subject matter.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Willard K. Claassen, Freeman, South Dakota
MAY 8—"Worship the Eternal in festal attire."
Psalm 29:2, (Moffatt)

Putting the statement that way reminds us of going to church in Sunday clothes. There is spiritual justification for one's best array for worship. But from one point of view "Sunday Clothes" is one of the tragedies of our age. Clothes alone may be made the only point of distinction between the week day and the Lord's day, between work and worship, between the secular and the spiritual. We often bring cheap substitutes for the festal spirit when we attend divine worship. Some come in overalls, bringing the work of the week along; some come in the sombre black garments of heaviness; some come in Judges' robes. "God looketh upon the heart."

MAY 9—"They know not what they do." Luke 23:34

This is a marvelous expression from the cross. It is frequently called the word of forgiveness, but it is more than that. Sin has far more serious consequences than we think. Jesus frequently taught that men's actions carried far more serious consequences either for good or for evil than was commonly thought. Does our generation know what it is doing? (It relies on much the same old technique of force used by ancient Rome.) Do we realize what grief and pain and havoc sin causes? We do not know what harm is wrought by inconsistent lives.

MAY 10—"I will give thy camels to drink also." Gen. 24:46

How things are done make a great deal of difference. That explains the marriage of many a young couple! Making happiness last does not depend on doing a few big things occasionally—but rather giving attention to the little things that make up the fabric of life. Think what this act of kindness meant to the future of this woman. Think of the great possibilities of unselfishness and kindness to us in this generation of hatefulness and strife. This added touch is the expression of the Christ-life within.

MAY 11—"Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God." Ecc. 5:1,2

Our word "reverence comes from a Latin root which means to fear; hence reverence is profound respect mingled with fear and affection. Irreverence is, of course, the absence of these qualities. How does irreverence affect our worship? It disqualifies the worshipper for meditation and appreciation. It puts a barrier between him and the appeal of a song or a word. It is extremely distracting to those who do wish to worship and worst of all irreverence is an affront to God! More than we think we show by our demeanour what God REALLY MEANS to us.

May 12—"And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch." Acts 11:26

The names that have been tacked on to the followers of Jesus are suggestive as well as interesting. A Christian is thus simply an adherent of Christ. A disciple is a learner who regards Christ as the teacher. A believer is one who by his faith in Christ is distinguished from those who do not believe. A saint is one who lives a holy, separated and devoted life toward God. Brethren is a name given to the followers of Christ to describe their relationship to each other. The elect is the name God gives to the redeemed. Do these beautiful names mean anything to me in my daily walk?

MAY 13—"For this child I prayed, and the Lord hath given me my petition which I asked of him . . ." I Sam. 1:27,28

When we think of Samuel, we think of his mother. The story of Hannah reveals some of the things which make motherhood truly great. Her own love was deepened by her love to God. Mother love is always worthy of notice but giving God first place is still more remarkable.

Her love outlasts all other human love,
Her faith endures the longest, hardest test
Her grace and patience through a life time prove That she's a friend, the noblest and the best."

MAY 14—"What will you say when you feel the sway of those you trained as allies?" Jer. 13:21 (Moffatt)

Jeremiah was what we might call a political realist. He judged all human relationships by God's standard of righteousness. He protested vigorously against making heathen alliances. Is not this same issue still a source of confusion? The church has in numerous ways called in the power of the state. We have called in wealth and privilege. We have permitted art and ritual and entertainment to substitute for a spiritual relationship to God. What will we say when we feel the sway of these pagan practices? If that should be true there is little we can say!

DR. HENRY HITT CRANE TO SPEAK AT BETHEL BOOSTER PROGRAM

BETHEL COLLEGE presents DR. HENRY HITT CRANE with his address, "VALIANT BEHAVIOR," at its fourteenth annual BOOSTER PROGRAM in Memorial Hall at North Newton, Kansas, on Wednesday, May 9, 1945, at 8:15 p.m. Dr. Crane has established himself as an author, philosopher, world traveler, and serves at present as minister of the Central Methodist Church, Detroit, Michigan. Music by the Bethel College A Cappella Choir and by Miss Rose Resnick, blind pianist, are also part of the program. The BOOSTER RECEPTION at 7:15 p.m. and the Program are given as an expression of appreciation to friends who have made generous financial investments in Christian Education at Bethel College during the 1944-45 school year. Admission by invitation. No "tickets" are for sale.

Dr. Henry Hitt Crane was born in Danville, Illinois, in 1890. He is a graduate of Boston Latin School, the oldest educational institution in America. He attended Wesleyan University, Boston University School of Theology, and Harvard University.

Dr. Crane was granted a fourteen months sabbatical leave during 1936 and '37, during which time he and Mrs. Crane circled the globe. Previous to this trip he made a five months' tour of the Orient. During World War I he participated in the capacity of a Y.M.C.A. Secretary, gaining an all too intimate knowledge of the fury and futility of war and early developing a terrific passion for the cause of Peace.

Dr. Crane has a wide range of interests. In his college days he was intensely interested in all sorts of extra-curricular activities. He was leader of a All-American Basketball Guard. Dr. Crane is a licensed private pilot. He averages better than one address a day, not only locally, but throughout the country. He is probably best known for his lectures at the many colleges from Maine to California.

Concerning Delegate Certificates

Concerning the delegate certificates of the General Conference, I am accepting the old list of names, and if the churches have any changes or additions to make, send them immediately to the secretary in a letter or postcard.—Phil. A. Wedel, Secretary, Goessel, Kansas.

JOTTINGS

Smokejumper Unit Increased

The C.P.S. smokejumper unit has been authorized to receive a total of 230 men, if there are sufficient volunteers, to train for the coming fire season. If this goal is reached Missoula will represent the largest C.P.S. camp or unit in number of assignees. This increase to 230 represents almost double the strength of last year's unit. Men are accepted for smoke-jumping after they have secured written permission from a parent or wife and have successfully measured up to a high standard of physical fitness. Smokejumpers will be chosen from all three agencies as has been the practice heretofore.

—Two ordinations: Walter D. Goossen was ordained to the full ministry on April 2, in Alexanderwohl, his home church. Rev. Phil. A. Wedel, pastor, officiated. He was assisted by Rev. C. C. Wedel and Rev. Solomon Mouttet. Waldo Kaufman was ordained in the Pretty Prairie Church on April 15, as formerly announced in these columns. Brother Kaufman serves the Bethel Church at Hydro, Oklahoma.

—Carl M. Lehman writes from Puerto Rico that he hopes to leave for the States on April 25 and spend a month there.

—The Anabaptists by R. J. Smithson and Canadian Frontiers of Settlement, Volume VII, Group Settlement by C. A. Dawson are two important books pertaining to Mennonites. These books were recently added to the Bethel College Historical Library. The first book is a very appreciative volume on the Anabaptists. It is written by a University of Glasgow professor. The second book deals with five large groups. The Mennonites are discussed as group two. The author does not seem to think that the Mennonites in Canada will for long preserve their identity.

—A recent bulletin of the First Church, Nappanee, Indiana, lists items for prayer.

—The Mennonite Church at Pulaski, Iowa, by unanimous vote re-elected Rev. E. A. Sommer as pastor for a term of three years, beginning May 1, 1945. Rev. Sommer is closing his third year as pastor.

—“Dr. McKean spoke commendably of the work done by the C.P.S. Unit there; in fact, he said that he did not see how they could operate the institution at the present time without this unit.” So reports Rev. Erland Waltner of one of the hospital doctors after a recent visit to the Mental Hospital at Mount Pleasant, Iowa.

—Dr. P.A. Penner is to be the main speaker at the mission festival of the Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, June 24.

—The Gnadenberg Church, Whitewater, Kansas, held a welcoming and praise service for Rev. and Mrs. Marvin Dirks on April 22. Rev. J.J. Voth, pastor, gave a message of welcome and praise, followed by other talks. Brief messages were also made by the two returned missionaries, who at present must refrain from making long talks. Both Brother and Sister Dirks are members of the Gnadenberg Church. The church is raising money for the purchase of new pews. The church building is sixty-three years old. It is built of stone that was obtained about ten miles east of where the church now stands. “All the hauling and much of the work was done free. David D. Schroeder, a member, supervised the building and did much of it himself. He also built the pews and the artistic pulpit, which has been replaced by a smaller one.” One might say that the congregation is 134 years old, for it stems from the Michalin Church, which was organized in Russia in 1811.

—Dr. H. A. Fast will give the commencement address at the Lehigh, Kansas, high school on May 18.

—Deep Run Church, Bedminister, Pa., Miss Martha Burkholder will speak and show pictures on Missionary Day, May 13. The church is planning to purchase the Mennonite Hymnary for congregational use.

—Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman's book in the “Mennonites and Their Heritage” series is now available. Dr. Kaufman has written on the subject “Our Mission as a Church of Christ.” Many have awaited the publication of this booklet. Copies may now be secured from the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, for twenty cents a copy, or in quantities of ten or more for fifteen cents per copy. Dr. Kaufman's book, The Development of the Missionary and Philanthropic Interest among the Mennonite of North America, is also still obtainable.

—“The World's Slow Stain” is the subject of the commencement address to be given by Dr. J.D. Unruh in Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas, at 8 p.m., May 28. With the exception of one year in which he got his Doctor's degree, Dr. Unruh has served as President of Freeman Junior College since 1933. Under his administration this growing college has become debt-free. It is a school in which various Mennonite groups participate. Dr. Unruh has a Swiss and low-German Mennonite background, he being the son of Daniel J. Unruh and Regina Gering Unruh. He was born at Marion, South Dakota, a few years after the close of the Spanish-American War. Among the schools which he has attended are: Freeman Jr. College, Yankton College, University of Minnesota, University of South Dakota (M.A., 1933), and University of Texas (Ph. D., 1939). He has served as S.S. superintendent of the Salem Church near Freeman for a goodly number of years. Since 1932 he has been a member of the Education Committee of the Northern District, and since 1935 he has been a member of the Board of Education of the General Conference. In 1940, 1941, he served as President of the Northern District Conference.

At a recent joint meeting of the Brotherhood and the Missionary Society, Mrs. A. J. Neuenschwander gave a map study on the Philippines and neighboring countries. Dr. Harvey Bauman summed up "West of the Date Line," which has been studied by the Society. Wm. H. Mohr discussed the Brotherhood topic of "The Business Man's and Wage Earner's Tithe." This is one of three sub-topics on tithing. Using the scriptures Mr. Mohr pointed out that the tenth is what we owe to God and that it is not a gift. What is above a tithe is a gift. Thoughts for Mothers

By a Mother

Ever since the proclamation that the second Sunday in May should be a special day set aside in honor of our mothers, there have been many editorials, articles, and essays written in tribute to "Motherhood."

Some of us mothers have sometimes felt somewhat embarrassed by all this praise. Certainly it requires sacrifice to be a mother, but not all mothers have all of the virtues attributed to them. Some of us do not feel that we are worthy of wearing a halo.

We do feel, however, that there is no experience in life which brings greater satisfactions and rewards,—or greater heartaches and disappointments. To be a mother is a great privilege and a wonderful opportunity. To have entrusted to one's care the nurture of a human life, an eternal soul, is a most inspiring responsibility. Mothers and fathers who dedicate their lives to Christian parenthood will also find it a very humbling experience, and will seek the wisdom of God in this task of rearing their children. In this area, too, we are "workers together with God."

Much of the work which a mother must do because she has children, and for which she gets much praise and glory, is often done from a sense of pride, or duty, or a sense of the fitness of things. It is plain common sense to keep the home clean and to prepare nutritious meals. Pure food laws, standards of cleanliness set up by our educational programs and institutions, courses in health and hygiene even in grade school, and the unwritten demands of the community, practically require it of every mother to be a good and conscientious house keeper. Otherwise she might lose the respect of her friends and neighbors.

But to bring up our children in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord" and "not to provoke them to wrath", (Eph. 6:4) that requires a different kind of dedication and surrender. That requires the honest answering of their questions which often takes more time and thought than we mothers wish to spare. We are too busy with waxing the floors or rushing off to a committee meeting. "Don't bother me," is a frequent rejoinder when a child seeks fellowship.

This commandment was given in Deuteronomy 6:4-9: ". . .these words, which I command thee. . . thou shalt teach them diligently to thy children and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, when thou walkest by the way, when thou liest down and when thou risest up. . ."

How many golden opportunities we mothers lose to help our children to grow in appreciation and understanding of truth, beauty, and goodness, to help them find Christian solutions to their problems, to learn forgiveness, forbearance, to search the Scriptures for light on their perplexities.

On the other hand, when we do take the time to ponder difficult questions and to talk things over and find good answers, how rewarding it is. Often a spiritual experience is the result of it. "How do we know it is 91,000,000 miles from the earth to the sun?" "Why doesn't everybody in the world have enough to eat?" Can you see the wonderful possibilities for spiritual nurture that lie waiting in questions such as these? "How should I know?" is an unworthy type of answer.

It must be a wonderful feeling for older mothers, who have already reared their children, to watch them walk in the paths of righteousness and to know that their children have become dependable, courageous, Christian men and women and useful citizens. What rewards could be greater on this earth?

As Mother's Day approaches again, let it be a day of rededication of all mothers to the privilege and opportunities and the challenge of Christian parenthood.

But Two Days With God

Nearly two thousand years have elapsed since the Prince of Peace was born and brought redemption from sin to mankind. Furious wars have stained those years. Mankind has hated, killed and suffered, and the majority of Christians ever since the time of Constantine have had their part in this. Yet during all this time the Holy Spirit has been at work. Defeated? Hardly. To us two thousand years full of wars may seem like a long, long time, and it is. But for God it is not so. "For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night." For God about two days have elapsed since the birth of the Prince of Peace. Unless we keep in mind how God counts time we may become discouraged with the power and direction of God as it comes into contact with the evil of this world. "The mills of God grind slowly, but they grind exceeding small." God will yet reign through his son, the Prince of Peace, to the welfare of all mankind. "Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." As disciples of the Prince of Peace, we need not become faint or weary, but we do need to be expectant and well-prepared for the reign of our Lord Jesus Christ. "Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

A Halo, or Humility?

"The child's first school is the family," says Froebel. The mother is the superintendent of that school. What kind of training the child receives in that school will largely depend upon the ability and the preparation of her who is the superintendent. Mother love is wonderful, but it needs harnessing and supplementation. A girl learns much in mothering from her own home experience. But from it she may learn wrong ways as well as right ways, thus handing the sins of the fathers and mothers down to the generations. If it takes preparation to be a stenographer, a teacher, a musician, or a social worker, does it not also take unique insight to be a good mother? That mothers, in spite of all their mother love, have perhaps failed in some respects is evident in the products that have come from American and Mennonite homes. What happens in the home largely determines what happens in the school, the church, and the community. The home is the fundamental social unit. The mother plays a large part in it.

One of the most precious things that a mother can give to a child is time, time rather than an immaculate living room, expensive furnishings, etc. What she does with that time is extremely important and that depends upon what she has learned of mothering. Opportunities, all or some of which may be, open to mothers and would-be mothers are: 1. To come through the grace of God to an experience of humility and love of neighbor that will enable the mother to fit into a divine fellowship of family, church, community, etc. 2. Training for motherhood as offered in our church colleges. 3. A parent's class in church. One such class in one of our churches is using the book Problems of Christian Family Life Today by George Walter Fiske for a six week's course. 4. Books on family life, such as are listed at the end of the article "For Mothers Only." 5. A multitude of magazine articles in public libraries. The Reader's Guide indicates the richness of material available. 6. One magazine devotes itself entirely to this purpose. 7. Discussion of problems with friends and in study groups. 8. The Bible. Time spent with children can be very purposeful if governed by integrated thinking stimulated by study. Humility in a key-person has far-reaching implications.

Report on San Francisco

The following are excerpts from Memorandum No. 2, prepared by Walter W. Van Kirk, James C. Baker, and O. Frederick Nolde at San Francisco and hurried by air mail to church papers. They interpret events from a religious angle. The excerpts follow:

"The confusion . . . of fitting so many people into their proper relationships is steadily giving way to order and concentration . . . The foreign ministers of the four sponsoring nations will serve as co-presidents of the Conference with Mr. Stettinius acting as chairman in executive committee and steering committee meetings . . . The autonomous republics of Byelo-Russia and the Ukraine shall be invited to be initial members . . . The resolution expressing the hope that the Polish government can be recognized in time to permit representation, while referred to by the press as a compromise, seems to adhere closely to the original Yalta stipulation . . . executive committee to include the heads of fourteen delegations . . . Most of the time in plenary sessions is now being devoted to addresses by the chairmen of all national delegations . . . It is hazardous to claim that a definite mood of the Conference has crystallized

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

. . . The attitude of the Conference is a serious one . . . No protest has been raised against efforts at further amendment, although a few speeches have implied that changes should be kept to a minimum . . . Recognition of the need for a security organization and for the accompanying political and economic provisions was relatively unanimous. The matter in which the desired security was to be brought about was not so uniformly conceived. The smaller nations were, in the main, more vocal in their urge that stronger emphasis should be laid on provisions for human welfare. They called particularly for a safeguarding of human rights and for more equitable economic opportunity. It may be worthy of note that references of this kind, together with mention of justice and rule under law, won more consistent applause than any other comments—with the possible exception of tribute to Mr. Roosevelt and contributions to the cause of the United Nations . . . One (rumor) of these has to do with a proposal by the United States for the allocation and government of colonial territories after the war . . . a distinction must be drawn between 'strategic bases' and 'other colonial territories' where the welfare of colonial peoples and the presence of valuable natural resources are major concerns . . . our people are continuing to undergird the Conference with their prayers . . . individuals and business corporations here are seeking to shape the atmosphere under which the Conference works. One company devoted its full advertising space, about a third of a page, to a picture of Christ and to St. Francis' Prayer of Peace. Surely, the impact of this concerted mind must make itself felt.

PRAYER OF PEACE

St. Francis of Assisi 1182-1226

Lord, make me an instrument of Thy peace.

Where there is hatred, let me sow love.

Where there is injury, pardon.

Where there is doubt, faith.

Where there is despair, hope.

Where there is darkness, light.

Where there is sadness, joy.

O Divine Master, grant that I may not so much seek

To be consoled, as to console;

To be understood, as to understand;

To be loved, as to love;

For it is in giving, that we receive.

It is in pardoning that we are pardoned.

It is in dying, that we are born to eternal life.

TO THE MEN OF MANY NATIONS WHO MEET IN PEACEFUL COUNCIL IN THE CITY OF ST. FRANCIS

"You have the prayers of millions attuned to your deliberations. What you determine will be a flame raised high for All the World—an augury of hope and faith for the Peace to come. May you visit us again when the bells proclaim the fulfillment of your historic labors."

"Seel-sorge" Work in a Large Hospital
"I am as good as my word."

While talking with a man in one of the beds at the hospital I heard the man in the next bed say to me, "Can you come over here and talk with me for a while?" On going over to him I found that he was a discharged marine. He was very nervous. In addition to that he had had some domestic trouble. As he was so nervous already he was unable to sleep, so he had taken to drinking. This only increased his nervousness so that in desperation he finally called the police and told them to take him somewhere where he could get sleeping medicine. So that was how he had landed at Cook County Hospital. His home was in Kansas City. He had a Master's Degree from College. I spent the better part of the morning with him and had the blessed privilege of seeing him accept Christ as his Savior. But while I was talking with him, he would say again and again, "If only I could forget the people I've killed in the war. They seem to stand before me all the time." When he left with a New Testament in his hand, he shook my hand heartily and said, "I certainly thank you for taking such an interest in me."

In another bed I found a colored man by the name of John Foster. A little conversation soon showed that he was not a Christian. When I asked him if he didn't want to become one, he said, "I have not quite made up my mind yet. I hate anything that is not sincere and if I make up my mind to become a Christian, I want to be a good one. If you will come back in about two days, I think I'll be ready." Two days later found me at his bedside again, and when I approached him he said, "I'm a man of my word." What a joy it was to point him to the Lamb of God. Ever after that he was always glad to see me whenever I came to see him and pray with him. After a few weeks he went home, but in another week or so he was back again in the same ward. This time he was seriously ill, and I visited him almost every day. One day I asked him how he was getting along spiritually. He said "I'm happy in the Lord and trusting him." The next morning when I came into the ward one of the patients said that Foster had passed away—ready to go.

We Too Must Repent

By H. A. Fast

“. . . Some—told of the Galileans whose blood Pilate had mingled with their sacrifices and he (Jesus' answered:—'Think ye that these Galileans were sinners above all the Galileans?—Except ye repent ye shall all in like manner perish.' ” Exerpts from Luke 13:1-3.

“Except ye repent.” These are the stirring words with which Jesus challenged his generation. After 1,900 years this challenge is still so disturbingly real and insistent that we are sure we must either heed His call and follow Him or “perish in a world-wide catastrophe” as one Christian leader put it.

This appeal of the Master became urgent to a recent gathering of leaders of the Church of the Brethren when they became deeply burdened about conditions in the world and the Church. In a spirit of profound concern they felt constrained to issue a challenging appeal to repentance to their people. This call (reprinted in The Mennonite, April 24) rings so true, is so stirring, and speaks so deeply to our own condition that we ought to accept it for ourselves as the Holy Spirit's call to earnest and heartfelt repentance. The sins enumerated there are so unmistakably our own that we can in every instance substitute “Mennonites” for “Brethren” in the article and discover that it fits perfectly.

As members of the General Conference we should on this occasion again read what we so clearly said at the Souderton Conference in 1941 about our “Position on Peace, War, Military Service, and Patriotism.” In the light of this statement we should searchingly and honestly examine our record of service, conduct, and witness during the years following. On this occasion we should also earnestly and thoughtfully try to understand what kind of a witness God expects us to bear in a time like this and in the days to come. Does it still take an argument to convince us how deeply we need to repent if we want to measure up to God's purpose and mission for us?

We need to repent of all the sins mentioned by Dr. Bowman in his challenging call but there are many other sins from which we need to repent. Our sins are legion and we cannot name them all, but lest we pass over too lightly God's appeal to us, let us enumerate some others:

1. All of us need to repent for everything we have done or failed to do that contributed to inefficiency and ineffectiveness in the work and witness of the church.

2. All of us need to repent for the lack in our personal prayer life and in our prayerful support of the whole work of the Kingdom and particularly of our part as a conference.

3. All of us need to repent for our indifference and our failure to keep vitally informed on our work and mission as a church.

4. All of us need to repent for our failure to inspire a contagious interest in and zeal for the work into which God has called us.

5. All of us need to repent for the many times we contributed grudgingly, niggardly, and as a matter of duty to the work of missions, relief, hospitals, schools, Civilian Public Service, etc., when we should have given gladly and generously out of a spirit of love and concern, even as the Lord had prospered us.

6. We also need to repent where we have squandered our material resources selfishly or thoughtlessly, without an intelligent sense of stewardship.

7. All of us need to repent for all occasions when we sowed seeds of discord, suspicion, misunderstanding and disunity; when we were hasty in our judgment, quick in affixing labels, pharisaic in our self-esteem and our scorn of others. Can any of us say we are without sin in this respect?

8. All of us need to repent of the instances when we wanted others to repent without repenting ourselves.

9. Supremely we need to repent for forgetting so often Jesus Christ, our Saviour and Lord; for putting ourselves in the center in various subtle and self-deceptive ways; for following Him so half-heartedly and compromisingly; for being so slow or so unwilling to take His cross upon us. Is there any person or any Conference Church that has nothing to repent of here?

Members of the Executive Committee of the General Conference at their recent meeting felt very deeply that our coming together as a conference would be a blessing only if our churches and our conference delegates approach the coming session in a spirit of genuine humility and penitence and of deep inner turning to God. If we approach the conference in this spirit we will offer to God for His direction a mind teachable and prayerful, a heart cleansed, responsive, eager, unafraid, and a will disciplined by faith, hope, love and ready to follow where the Saviour leads. Then we will also bring to the discussion of great, vital and even critical questions a spirit of brotherly understanding, forbearance, fellowship, and cooperation.

“Except ye repent.” Will our churches heed this call of the Master?

Do We Take a Stand on Nonresistance ?

By Robert Kreider

In June of 1945 our General Conference convenes at Newton, Kansas, to review the program and testimony of our Church. We look forward with anticipation to this as the most important conference to be held in recent years. We meet in June while our nation is in the throes of the fourth year of war. The opportunities of this conference have not been paralleled in the past. Guided by the Holy Spirit, our Conference is called to radiate brightly the light of Christian testimony in a time of world darkness and confusion.

Within our Brotherhood there are many who eagerly await a reaffirmation of the scriptural doctrines of our Church. In a day in which the voice of the Christian Church is halting and feeble and compromised, there is desperate need for consecrated folk who will speak courageously and forthrightly on the conquering convictions of the Christian faith.

At the June conference I trust that we shall face frankly, honestly, scripturally that doctrine which is perhaps the most difficult Biblical teaching to practice consistently in all of our relationships. It is our doctrine of nonresistance.

Traditionally ours has been a Peace Church. Our ancestors migrated from lands of oppression and war and conscription because of their burning conviction against military service. Our historic confession of faith, the Riis Confession, affirms our nonresistant faith. Our peace position was clearly reaffirmed at Souderton in 1941.

Let us now be completely honest one with another. In regard to Biblical nonresistance, we have not been of one mind. Our testimony has been varied, perhaps confused. Thirty-three percent of our young men choose Civilian Public Service. Fifteen percent choose noncombatant service. The remaining fifty-two percent choose straight military service. Many of our folk decline to purchase war bonds on grounds of Christian conscience; but other Mennonites, because of a sense of civic responsibility, participate and even lead in war bond drives. Some Mennonites work in war plants, while others quit their jobs in plants which turn to the manufacture of military material. Most ministers wholeheartedly support CPS and the non-resistant position; some ministers are cool if not antagonistic to CPS. Some preach and teach nonresistance; some give no pastoral instruction on this doctrine.

Amid this diversity, amid this confusion—what is the witness of our General Conference Mennonite group? We can state clearly the historic position of our Church, but can we declare what our position is now in this hour of war? Can we say that our brotherhood is unitedly opposed to participation in war? No, that we cannot say. Is nonresistance, then, only of incidental importance in the life of the Christian? Is our position, then, that nonresistance is to be encouraged as a desirable attribute of the Christian life but really of only secondary significance? Shall we let it be said that our church and church members are so lacking in agreement on this issue that to avoid the criticism of hypocrisy we should abandon our nonresistance? (Our brethren in Holland, Germany, France, Switzerland have done just that.) Shall we continue to affirm that nonresistance is the scriptural, the preferred position of the brotherhood, but beyond that permit each member to have complete freedom to pursue his chosen course? Our fellowship would then frankly embrace Christians of both pacifist and non-pacifist persuasion. Or shall we strive as a Church toward a new unity of conviction on nonresistance and a new purity of fellowship?

One should pause to meditate on this disturbing trend. What becomes of our Bible when we silently permit complete freedom of action on this Biblical doctrine of nonresistance? Shall we say that Scripture is fine and noble and true, but at the same time intimate by word and deed that the follower of Christ is quite free to be selective of those passages which he shall obey and those which he shall disregard? Shall we confess that our church is not completely conquered by the authority of the Bible?

For those who love the Church of Christ this should be a time of searching self-examination. With earnest hearts we should pray to God "to search us, and know us, try us and know our thoughts." Let us turn again to the Bible to discover anew the teaching of Christ on love and nonresistance. In June we cannot, we ought not side-step this major issue in the Church. If our Church evades the issue we lose our integrity as a Christian institution. This hour calls for our Church to give a clear, frank, ringing testimony. Christ would have us give no other.

The Impact of Deity

(A Message on the Meaning of the Ascension of Christ)

By Jacob J. Enz

The Ascension more than any other single event in the life of Jesus portrays man's nearness to God or God's nearness to man. A first glance at the Biblical record of that event would probably give one the impression that the opposite in reality is true—that Christ, the way to the Father, has been separated from man and that man no longer has the privilege enjoyed by the disciples. Nothing could be farther from the truth. If that were the case, the disciples could never have had the unflagging zeal that sent them out to conquer the world for Christ. They felt the impact of Deity! Man today still needs to feel the impact of Deity and its indispensability to the spiritual conquest of our world and our age.

A brief analysis of the records concerning the Ascension of Jesus gives evidence as to how the disciples came to feel this impact of Deity. The Gospels and The Acts reveal that in spite of Jesus' appearance to the disciples several times after the resurrection, there remained an evident uncertainty on their part until after the Ascension. (Note particularly their doubt in Matt. 28:17). The 'marching orders' given to the disciples in the Great Commission together with the promise of His power and presence helped much to give these disciples confidence. But this was inextricably bound up with the Ascension of Christ to the right hand of God. The Ascension and Pentecost were complementary events; they were two aspects of one transaction. The unquestioned confidence came over the disciples when they heard the Great Commission, a token of the Pentecost to come, and saw the Christ ascend. In other words this confidence grew out of a two-fold conviction that the Ascension was the beginning of a period when Deity in the person of the Holy Spirit would take up His abode in a new way among men, and man in the person of the Lord Jesus Christ took up His abode in heaven with God.

I

The first conviction then, of the disciples with respect to the impact of Deity was that The Spirit of God is Effectively at Work in the World. Jesus had definitely promised that the Holy Spirit would come (John 16:5-7). Christ was not really gone. Through the empowering Spirit He could now work, being unrestricted by time and space; He could and still can work wonders on a much larger scale than while He was on earth. He is working with us. This is good news! We are not alone in our task of establishing the Kingdom of God in the hearts of men. We have the whole weight of the universe on our side!

Present problems seems insurmountable. We see the chaos that has resulted in Europe; great disorder may come in our own land as the unifying effect of a common struggle wears off at the end of the war. The greatest chaos is in the hearts of men; almost hopeless arrogance and pride seems to be in the very air we breathe. Imagine the possibility of only a few of the millions of men carrying the war philosophy over into civilian life or civilians carrying 'black-market ethics over into post-war living. Then remember ". . . ye shall receive power when the Holy Spirit is come upon you." Deity is at work on the earth now! When God draws nigh to do His own work through His own men we have reason to rise up with new confidence to do His work. The old German Chorale puts it just right:

*Die Sach' ist Dein, Herr Jesu Christ,
Die Sach', an der wir steh'n,
Und weil es Deine Sache ist,
Kann sie nicht untergeh'n*

The second great conviction of the disciples with respect to the impact of Deity was that THE SON OF MAN IS EFFECTIVELY (AT WORK) MINISTERING IN OUR BEHALF IN HEAVEN. Deity is working on earth; humanity is working in heaven.

In the Epistle to the Hebrews more than any book of the New Testament the implications of the Ascension are drawn. This is evident in the sweep of the first three verses of the epistle which portray Christ descending from His glory above, making "purification for sins," and ascending to the right hand of God. No mention is made of the resurrection here nor at any other point in the book save a casual reference in the benediction at the conclusion.

In Hebrews 9:24 Christ is seen entering not a man made holy place, but ". . . into heaven itself" for us. The entering of the holiest part of the temple symbolized the unobstructed meeting and fellowship of God and His people. As Christ enters ". . . heaven itself" He draws helpless men to their true source of help in God. Deity invaded humanity in order that humanity—the true humanity of Jesus Christ—might invade Deity and bring a lost race with Him.

The Son of man voluntarily took His humanity to glory with Him. Not yet does He have the glory that He had with the Father before the world was; not yet are all things put under His feet. His present humanity is the living evidence. (For further elaboration on this point see Weatherhead's recent book, "The Plain Man Looks at the Cross.") that His ministry of intercession will continue until the ends of the earth have felt the warmth of His embrace—an embrace that can be broken only by the willful refusal to fling oneself upon the everlasting arms; and even while there is refusal the open arms of the Father eagerly await the prodigal.

This direct connection or fellowship with God through the ministry of the Man in heaven is man's only hope. It is our only hope as sinful, imperfect human beings. Here is His strength for our weakness, His confidence for our insecurity, His courage for our slowheartedness, His comfort for our disappointment and grief, His health for our sickness, and His holiness for our sin. In Christ we are at the very heart-springs of the universe!

Near, so very near to God,
Nearer I could not be,
For in the person of His Son,
I am as near as He.

Thus in conclusion the Ascension reveals God drawing ever nearer to man. Deity draws nigh to needy humanity. Earth feels the impact of heaven. How amazing His love! Paul tried to fathom it when he spoke thus in II Tim. 3:16 (as trans. by Moffatt):

"And who does not admit how profound is the divine truth of our religion?—it is He who was 'manifest in the flesh, vindicated in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached among the nations, believed on throughout the world, taken up to glory.'"

Sam Goering Writes from England

(This is the second installment of excerpts from letters to his family.)

It was snowing as I arrived at the Center; Henry Buller, looking out of the window, noticed me, and he and Glen Miller came out to meet me. Soon I was in the house. The warm fire and hearty welcome made me feel at home. I was glad I got here early enough to spend some time with Glen Miller and Joe Byler who are to leave for the U. S. in about a week. Here at the Service Center I met all but four of our relief workers the first night. They are a fine group and deeply concerned about fulfilling the mission for which they are here.

Within an hour after I got here I heard the crash of a V-2 bomb, but it seemed far in the distance. The one next day at noon was not so far away. But the general feeling seems to be that, dangerous as these bombs may be, things cannot stop because of them, and so folks are bravely carrying on.

Shepherd Hill, where the MCC headquarters is, is a ridge with large houses on it, of which our place is one. In this building they have a group of children who were bombed out of their homes besides the clothing depot and rooms for workers and helpers; so they need a lot of space. My room is on the top floor which means four flights of stairs to climb.

The children come and go. Here at the Center we have twelve now, but there are many more if we include those staying at the various places we have away from here. Some of these children come from exceptionally fine homes. The letters and telephone calls they get show that they have ties that bind them closely to loved ones.

I had an interesting little visitor this afternoon, Allen, a little boy who went to S. S. with me a week ago. On Monday he went to school and did not return. He came to stay with us because he was recovering from an illness and their home had been bombed, destroying all but two rooms. When he didn't return from school we inquired and found that he took the bus and went home. The reason was that, while he was here, a number of alarms that morning, warned people of buzz bombs, and he decided it might be safer at home. This afternoon he came with his father to say he was sorry he left without saying anything. While here the father told us how they had lost everything they had, and now are living in two small rooms that are hardly fit to live in. The other day a family I visited recently, called by phone and asked for clothing for people that had lost everything but their lives. These people know through experience how dangerous these bombs are. Yet it is surprising to see how bravely they carry on after five years of it. Each night many still take their bedding and go into the air raid shelters to sleep. I watched them tonight when we came home from town. The subways are lined with beds. . . This has been a busy week. Glen Miller and I were on the go all the time. We are at Taxal Edge—here we say goodbye to Glen Miller and Joe Byler. They go to Liverpool from here, and then back to the States. I have visited Vickerhurst, Manor, and Woodlands, and now we are at Taxal Edge, from here we proceed to South Meadows and then I will have visited all the places.

. . . This has been a quiet day compared to some others we have had recently. You may have heard that the English Presbyterians lost a group of their finest leaders when the building in which they were in conference, was hit. Baswick, a Dunkard, who is in charge of war prisoners, had just left the building, when the V-2 struck. He had gone there to tell them what the Y.M.C.A. is doing for the war prisoners. Needless to say, he felt very fortunate. Mr. Baswick invited Henry Buller and me over for supper one evening. We had pigs feet, beans and a combination salad—all prepared by him, and it was really good. He expects his wife and children this summer.

Even when danger is near we are confident that we are in His care and keeping.

THREE CHURCHES HOLD YOUTH CONFERENCE

The second Tri-Church Youth Conference of the Dalton, Wadsworth, and Sugar Creek churches was held April 13-14 at Sugar Creek.

It started off on Saturday evening by a well-planned, delicious Birthday Banquet. Each month was represented by an appropriate centerpiece with favors. Following the banquet, a worship service with Rev. Bohn of Bluffton, as speaker, was held in the church auditorium.

Sunday morning the visitors joined with the Sugar Creek congregation in worship service and Sunday School. Rev. Bohn was also the Sunday morning speaker. After an abundant basket dinner the afternoon session of group singing, conference groups, and a business session was held. The following officers were elected: Pres., Henrietta Jaherg, Sugar Creekson; Vice Pres., Elnore Rosenberger, Dalton; Secretary, Hazel Nussbaum, Dalton; Treas., Bob Miller, Sugar Creek; Ex. Com., Marilyn Daniels and Bob Krieger, Wadsworth.

A cafeteria supper was again held in the basement and the whole conference ended with the evening worship and a moving sermon by Rev. Don Smucker of Wadsworth.

Everyone will agree that these bi-annual conferences are very worth while and wish them to be continued under the leadership of the new officers.

MENNONITE BIBLE ACADEMY NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS

Sunday night, April 22, the boys ensemble was invited to the Zion Church at Elbing, Kansas, by the Christian Endeavor Society of that church. Sylvester Knowshisgun, an Indian student from Busby, Montana, went with the group and told about Indian life in Montana.

Mary Lou Rich, a sophomore student, recently won a first and a third prize in the regional High School Art Competition sponsored by The Hinkel Co. of Wichita, Kansas. Mary Lou sketched some original designs in dresses. These sketches are being sent to the national art exhibit at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Miss Lena Waltner, art instructor at Bethel College, has a class of Academy students.

Friday, May 18, at eight o'clock in the evening the Academy commencement exercises will take place in the College Chapel. Friends of the Academy are cordially invited to attend. Rev. Henry Fransen of the Buhler Mennonite Church will deliver the commencement address. Ten seniors are to receive their diplomas at that time. During the evening an exhibit of work done by students during the year will be on display in the Academy building.

NURSES AND DIETITIANS: OPPORTUNITY FOR SERVICE

In order to insure the health and well-being of men in C.P.S. camps the services of Mennonite and Brethren in Christ women who have professional training in the fields of dietetics and nursing are required. Many nurses and dietitians have responded to this area of Christian service during the past four years but there is a constant need of personnel to keep the camps staffed. At the present time there is an urgent need for six registered nurses and six dietitians to serve in the various Mennonite camps throughout the country. Women who feel the call to share in the peace testimony and witness of the church and to enter this field of Christian service should correspond with the C.P.S. Section, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

BOOKLET ON C.P.S. SERVICE IN MENTAL HOSPITAL

The work of C.P.S. men in Mental Hospitals is described in the Anniversary Review No. 2, a booklet being published by the CPS Unit at the Harrisburg State Hospital, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. Numerous interesting pictures help to illustrate the methods used in caring for the mentally ill. The aim of the booklet is to answer some of the questions about the work, that are often asked by our friends. Among the writers are physicians and a registered nurse, besides members of this C.P.S. Unit. The booklet is now at the printers—watch for further announcement.—Gerhard M. Peters, Assistant Director

"Guinea Pig" Project in Pneumonia to Open Again

An experimental project in atypical pneumonia, with C.P.S. men as "guinea pigs," will be conducted again this year under the U.S. Commission on Acute Respiratory Diseases. There will be two experiments involving fifty men each time. The first experiment will begin May 15 and will continue for two months. The second experiment will begin immediately after the conclusion of the first with a new contingent of "guinea pigs." The project will be under Mennonite administration and will be made up mostly of volunteers from Mennonite camps with a few from Brethren camps.

Lincoln Unit III Opened

Unit III of the Lincoln Farm Units in Nebraska has been set up at Waterloo. The new camp will engage in nursery work and is known as Two Rivers Nursery. Harold D. Schmidt is director of the unit.

Public Health Service in Florida

Public health service, as carried out by the C.P.S. men at the Mulberry, Florida, camp, is not confined to the building of sanitary privies. At the present time several men are engaged in erecting forty public signs in prominent places on which are painted health slogans such as: "Good Sanitation Protects Health," "Hookworm Control Begins With Home Sanitation." A C.P.S. man, Henry Meyers, is the sign painter.

The men at this camp are also beginning a project of rat extermination as a result of the increase of typhus fever. Typhus germs are carried by fleas for which rats are hosts. The extermination consists of vent stopping and trapping rats.

C.P.S. BRIEFS

As announced before, the smoke jumper unit will be increased, but instead of a strength of 230, the camp is now to receive a total of 250. The first group of 80 men will go into training at Missoula, Montana, May 1, and a second group of 80 will begin June 1.

The relief training unit at the Denison camp has been discontinued. Relief trainees will transfer out to the new hospital unit at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Farmunity is the name of the quarterly publication of CPS men at Lincoln Farm Unit 2, Malcolm, Nebraska. The first issue appeared during the first quarter of 1945.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Henry Fransen, Buhler, Kansas

MAY 8—"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Gal. 6:7.

We live in an orderly world. For everything that happens there is a given cause. Scientists assume there is something absolutely dependable upon which they base their experiments. When oxygen and hydrogen are brought together under certain conditions they will always form water. When a man plants potatoes he expects to harvest potatoes not corn. It is the same in the spiritual realm. Hate begets hate. Love begets love. "For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6:8.

MAY 9—"Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him, saying, I will; be thou clean."

No sinner ever came to Jesus asking for cleansing from sin who was not cleansed. We must not only believe that Christ could forgive our sins; we must want Him to forgive them. Our salvation rests upon more than wishful thinking. We must come as humble, penitent sinners asking for pardon. Then he will gladly forgive for "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." St. Luke 19:10.

MAY 10—"The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want."

David did not write this beautiful Psalm first and then learn to know the Shepherd later. He first became intimately acquainted with Him. Therefore he could speak with such assurance. We must do the same. Is the Lord your shepherd? Martin Luther upon one occasion said: "The heart of religion lies in its personal pronouns. Can you truly say, 'The Lord is my Shepherd?'" A little girl repeated this verse as follows, "The Lord is my shepherd what more do I want." Although she misquoted, was she wrong?

MAY 11—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength." Mark 12:30.

This passage deals with complete allegiance or surrender to God. During the past few years we have become well acquainted with the term unconditional surrender. In the military sense unconditional surrender means utter defeat; in the spiritual sense it means glorious victory. Only through complete surrender to Jesus Christ can we achieve victory over sin.

MAY 12—"... Your labour is not in vain in the Lord." I Cor. 15:58

How often we become discouraged! So frequently we ask, "What's the use?" Discouragement is one of the devil's chief weapons. But here we have a good counter weapon, "Your labour is not in vain in the Lord." Work for the Master is very much worthwhile. We need not be concerned about the reward. He will look after that. Therefore "let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Gal. 6:9.

MAY 13—"Man shall not live by bread alone." Matt. 4:4.

Normally we eat three meals a day. We are very much concerned about food for our body. But how about the food for our soul? Epictetus said "In every feast there are two guests to be entertained—the body and the soul . . . and what you give the soul remains forever." Are we not frequently starving the soul by failing to commune with God? Jesus gave us this warning, "Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for the meat which endureth unto everlasting life." John 6:27.

May 14—"And he said, My presence shall go with thee." Exodus 33:14.

Moses did not wish to begin his journey without the presence of God accompanying him. He realized that for every task, the first requirement was the assurance of the presence of God. God did go with Moses. He is willing to go with us too. To know God is with us in our undertaking is one of the greatest encouragements. Livingstone was once asked how he could stand to live alone in the dark jungles of Africa year after year. He replied it was because of this promise, "Lo I am with you always."

MAY 15—"But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; Because it is written, Be ye holy; for I am holy."

I Pet. 1:15-16.

We who call ourselves followers of Christ represent Him to the world. Is the world able to recognize our kinship to Christ? Are we earnestly striving to live as His representatives ought to live? It is a solemn truth that someone we contact may be brought closer or farther from Jesus by the way we represent him. We are His witnesses. "Be ye holy; for I am holy."

Our Ministry of Education

By J. H. Langenwalter

"WHAT IS THIS CHILD GOING TO BE?"

The question raised in Luke 1:66 has been translated in various ways. Back of each attempt to bring out the force of this question there lies a consciousness of the value of a child. John the Baptist was not the only child concerning whom this kind of question has been raised. Parents, worthy of the name and the privilege, and their friends, ask such questions whenever a home is gladdened by the arrival of another member of the human family.

A serious consideration of this question made the Church the Mother of Education many centuries ago. There came a time when two facts brought about a change in the direction of the education of youth. In some instances the organized churches failed in their task. Others saw more clearly the need and took over the task of educating childhood and youth. The other fact was that the groups of Christians, known collectively as the Church, had started something which was greater than they could carry to a successful end in every phase of its possibilities.

Days of prosperity have often made people in general less conscious of the responsibilities and the opportunities which were theirs in the matter of training childhood and youth for life in its larger meaning. Times of stress and distress have tended to make them more conscious of the need for the right kind of training.

We are now living in an era when there is much questioning about the needs for better training. There is an alertness which one welcomes. Youth in the service and out of it are asking questions regarding the opportunities for training in order that they may be the better able to serve as teachers in Sunday schools, Daily Vacation Bible Schools and in the field of Week Day Religious Education. Parents also are wondering about the possibilities. They see the trends as a result of the conditions in the world today. They love their children and want them to have a better chance at the greater things of life than have been available. Our schools and colleges are offering courses in order to help young people face the educational tasks of the home and the church. These courses do not only concern themselves with the study of the Bible but also with the best in teaching methods. They also deal with information of real value in the home.

It has long been a problem as to why so many teachers in the public schools declined to teach in the schools provided by the local church which they attended. The excuse generally given was that a heavy teaching program during the week made them feel the need of a change. Perhaps many of them did not realize the true reason. The opportunities and encouragements of teaching in the public schools are so much greater than they are in the schools provided by the church. In this matter the teachers are on one end of the line and the children on the other. Is it necessary that this condition should continue to exist? The church has long maintained that its most sacred duty is the training of its children. Whenever she has done her best to live up to this ideal, she has wielded a wholesome influence far beyond her membership. Whenever she has lost sight of her opportunity, she has found that others have stepped in to do less than she could have done. Often they did better what they undertook than the church was doing.

It is interesting to note how often public schools

Tentative Survey of Conference Attendance

Local Committee Requests Cooperation

Due to critical problems pertaining to both food and lodging the Local Conference Committee is attempting a survey of probable attendance.

The local Committee is printing the coupon below, in all Conference papers and other publications in the earnest hope that everyone (delegate or visitor) who plans to attend even though his plans are uncertain will fill in the coupon, turn it in to their pastor or send it direct to the Local Conference Committee.

Pastors, upon receiving these coupons, are earnestly requested to send them to the address below by May 1 (and again May 20).

This is not a registration. It does not bind you to attend. It merely gives the women in charge of food preparation and lodging the information they need.

Food rationing points, shortage of gasoline, and bedding seem to make this almost essential.

Prices of meals the last conference were: Mornings, 20-25 cents; noons, 40 cents; evenings, 35 cents. They will be somewhat higher this conference. Dormitory rooms on the campus will be 50 cents per person per night.

For accommodations in private homes the following prices are suggested: (arrangements to be made with the host) Rooms: per person per night.....50
breakfast.....25

REMEMBER: Give this coupon to your pastor or mail direct to: B. Bargen, Chairman, Committee on Registration, North Newton, Kansas.

Place a check-mark in the square of the appropriate day.

1. Which days of the conference do you plan to take breakfast at the Conference Dining Hall?
2. Which days of the conference do you plan to take noon meal at the Conference Dining Hall?
3. Which days of the conference do you plan to take the evening meal at the Conference Dining Hall?
4. Which nights do you wish the Conference to reserve a room for you?

NAME ADDRESS

have been a help toward better training for the work of the church through its schools. In many places there is an arrangement whereby children may be excused for one hour per week for religious training. In order that this privilege may be granted the excused for one hour per week for religious training. At first this seems like a hardship. In the end it is a blessing. It helps to live up to the statements so often made by Christians: "The best is none too good for our children."

In some communities the churches join in an effort to train their teachers. This is a very valuable experience for the community as a whole. It is a case of practical neighborliness in the field of Christian living.

The laws of the States have to be taken into consideration, but where there is a will there is a way. When our churches become concious enough of the problem which confronts them in a day like this, they find a way.

Another encouraging feature in the work of religious education lies in the fact that so many of our students get the vision of better things while training for life. That is true of those in service. They are compelled to think as they never have before and many of them realize as never before that those who call themselves Christian have an obligation to the common human rights that every child has a right to be well born and well reared. The churches have long taught that. Their present obligation is to live up to the opportunity more greatly.

JOTTINGS

—Pretty Prairie, Kansas: Rev. P. P. Tschetter conducted preaching services at the Bethel Church near Inman, Kansas over the period of April 8 to 13.

On April 15 Bro. Waldo Kaufman was ordained into the ministry. Rev. Phil. Wedel officiated in the ordination. Rev. P. P. Tschetter, Dr. Ed Kaufman, and Dr. H. A. Fast also spoke words of encouragement and admonition stressing the sacredness of the calling. Bro. Kaufman assumes his new charge in Hydro, Oklahoma, May 1.

April 17, 18, 19, we had the pleasure to have Rev. H. P. Fast of Orienta, Oklahoma, with us—for our Bible conference—Sam Schrag —"The Church in the News" was the theme of a recent evening service by the first Church, Nappanee, Indiana. Two features were: "Significant Denominational News Bulletins," and "Significant interdenominational News Bulletins." A third feature was a panel discussion on "The Church and World Security."

—The Bethel College Fellowship Committee of the Lorraine Avenue Church, Wichita, recently sponsored a program by some students of Bethel College, accompanied by Willis Rich.

—The C.P.S. Quartet from the Denison, Iowa, camp recently gave a musical program in the Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota. Director Lester Garig brought a message.

—Relief clothing collected in the Mountain Lake community by Boy and Girl Scouts and others is to be sent through the M.C.C., which according to a church bulletin has been highly approved by the U.N.R.R.A.

—Rev. Erland Waltner is to speak at a high school commencement in Winkler, Manitoba, and to some churches at Bretna and Altona, May 21-25.

—Bethel College Church: A reception will be given for Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Dirks, in the Student Union Room, Sunday evening, May 13, 7:30 p. m. The Dirkses will give informal talks of their internment experience.

—Elmer W. Baumgartner, who teaches a Sunday School class as large as some whole congregations in our conference, will give the commencement address at Freeman Junior College on May 18, at 8 o'clock. His subject is "The Reality of Life." Mr. Baumgartner will also speak at the Alumni Banquet which is to be held May 17. His talk that evening will be on "Requisites for Leadership." Mr. Baumgartner has been connected with the First Bank of Berne for over twenty-five years. He is also a member of the Board of Publication of the General Conference.

—Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander is to spend about six weeks in Canada this summer in the interest of Home Mission work.

—West Swamp Church, Quakertown, Pa., On April 15 the worship service was varied by having "The Good News" Quartet favor us with selections. One of the men also talked to us. They also held meetings at Flatland and Bethany and at the Old People's Home at Frederick.—Arlene Rosenberger —Fairfield Church (Pa.) joined with other churches on April 22 in praying for peace and for the success of the United Nations Conference. Robert Geigley is expected home in April.

—Bulletin, Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pa., "Four cars and a truck went to the clothing depot at Ephrata on Saturday, April 14, to see the clothing center and to take the clothing (2,026 lbs. of clothing and soap) we collected. Seeing the soap and shoes put into boxes for shipping, the clothing sorted and put in A-1 condition all proved educational and inspiring. Those who went felt that the clothing center well expressed the Christian way of life in concrete terms."

—The Deep Run (Pa.) Church also joined in prayer on April 22 for the San Francisco Conference.

—Hebron Church, Buhler, Kansas: On April 29 Rev. Walter Gering showed pictures of Puerto Rico and gave a talk. Winton Stucky, a former "Smoke-jumper" also showed pictures and told about the work.

—Second Church, Beatrice, Nebraska. On May 6, Deaconess Sunday, two of the Sisters from the local Mennonite hospital brought brief messages. In the evening pictures of the deaconess work in the Lutheran Church were shown in the First Church, Beatrice.

—Madrid, Nebraska: Rev. John G. Unruh and family arrived at their new home at Madrid on April 20. The First Church gave a reception to them on the evening of April 21. It consisted of a short program, some refreshments served by the ladies aid, and a shower consisting of $21.25 in cash and a lot of groceries.—P. A. Regier, Sec.

—Rev. C. H. Dirks has made a valuable contribution as pastor of the First Mennonite Church of Hutchinson. The church has made definite progress in growth since his arrival as pastor in that city in 1936. The General Conference Minutes of 1935 report 111 members for the Hutchinson Church. In a special membership bulletin issued by the church in 1944, there were 154 members listed. For many years it received financial aid from the Home Mission Board, but the church has become entirely independent, not having received any assistance for several years.

Rev. Dirks' service has reached out beyond the confines of his congregation. He has been closely linked up with the various conference activities: the Ministers' Conference, Young People's Work, the Sunday School Conference, and also chairman of the Home Mission Committee of the Western District Conference.

In all these endeavors he will be missed as he leaves for his new pastorate in Portland, Ore. Undoubtedly he will find a large field for constructive service on the West Coast, and as he leaves the middle West, his many friends will remember him prayerfully.—By a member of the Home Mission Board.

—Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Fast, members of the First Mennonite Church, north of Butterfield, are scheduled to leave for their mission field in Cuba early this summer. The way has opened for them to go out under the "World Mission," which is a faith mission, supported by a number of churches and friends throughout America, and is headed by Rev. Sidney Correl, with headquarters in Dayton, Ohio. Half of their support, however will come from their home church. Mr. and Mrs. Fast are in Dayton, Ohio, at the present time, where Mr. Fast is teaching in the Bible school, sponsored by the World Mission Society. At the same time he is taking some classes, including Spanish, at the University of Dayton.

REPORT ON WORKERS' CONFERENCE HELD AT GEARY, OKLAHOMA

The Bible study was very interesting and inspirational. It was preceded by a season of prayer that touched us deeply. In the S. S. Superintendent group discussions we learned that we have been neglecting the individual and doing too much group work. The Geary church was a splendid host, and those two fellowship meals will always be a pleasant memory.

WOMEN'S BUSINESS MEETING

The Women's Business Meeting at the General Conference is arranged for Saturday afternoon, June 2, beginning at 1:30 P.M. instead of at 7:00 P.M. as previously announced in these columns and again inadvertently in the May issue of Missionary News and Notes.

Mrs. W. C. Voth, Sec.

"WORDS TO YOUNG CHRISTIANS"

The above words are the title of a book. This book was written in German by Prof. C. H. Wedel, former teacher and President of Bethel College, and bore the title "Geleitworte an junge Christen." It was widely read because it was interesting and helpfully instructive, especially for young Christians. Later the book was translated into English by Dr. Theodore O. Wedel, a son of the author, and given the title "Words to Young Christians." Again it enjoyed a good sale until the first edition was exhausted.

A new edition of this interesting and helpful book has just been completed. It is unabridged and pleasingly attractive in an artistic paper cover. The book was written especially for young people of the Mennonite faith and contains a brief outline of Mennonite history and doctrine as well as sound advice to young Christians. Dr. Theodore O. Wedel says in his preface: "This little book of advice to young Christians was among all his writings the one which he was happiest in leaving as a legacy to his church and his friends."

The book is especially suited to be presented as a gift to young converts and to all who have completed the catechetical instruction and have united with the church. The price is forty cents for single copies. A liberal reduction will be given when purchased in lots of ten or more copies. For sale by the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana, and the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

Flatland—The church service on April 15, was in charge of the Young Men's Quartet from the C.P.S. Unit at Norristown, Pa. —Corr.

Deep Run—The church council decided to purchase copies of the Mennonite Hymnary for the use of the congregation. The Conference Correspondent agrees with the following statement in the bulletin which reads as follows: "We do not hesitate to say that this is one of the finest hymn books available. It is finding its way into an increasing number of Mennonite churches."

East Swamp—The pastor notified the congregation that The Gospel Messengers have been notified that their broadcast would cease as of June 1.

Souderton—Miss Ruthabel Rickman of New York gave a recital on Sunday evening, April 8. Friday evening, April 13, Grayce Kaneda, a Japanese-American spoke in the church auditorium and showed a movie "Challenge to Democracy" depicting the life of her people in this country. April 14, members of the church visited the clothing depot at Ephrata. Second, Phila.—Mr. Peter E. Boyko of the Pocket Testament League spoke Sunday evening, April 22. As an Easter gift, the Service Men's committee sent an eight month subscription to "The Christian Digest" to each person in the service.

Fairfield—The churches of the community held a memorial service in honor of the late President Roosevelt and service of prayer for the nation on April 15. Rev. Stoneback, pastor of the Fairfield Mennonite Church spoke on the text: "In the year that King Uzziah died, I saw the Lord sitting upon a Throne."

West Swamp—The memorial marker, erected near the spot where the first Mennonites of this community settled and built their first church, will be dedicated on Sunday afternoon, May 13 at 2:30 o'clock. The service will be held in the West Swamp church and there will be three speakers on the theme "The Faith of Our Fathers," as follows: Dr. E. E. S. Johnson will speak on "Faith Tested in the Past;" Rev. Harold D. Burkholder will speak on "Faith Tested in the Present," and Rev. Howard G. Nyce will speak on "Faith Tested in the Future." Then there will be a brief service at the marker site.

Happy Birthday to you! Late in the afternoon of the day before he celebrated his eightieth birthday, Mr. Joseph B. Bechtel, Deacon of the First Church, Philadelphia, for fifty-three years, heard this song from a large group of friends as he opened the front door of his home.

Note: Rev. Howard Nyce has asked us to announce that hereafter all churches should send their bulletins and jottings direct to "The Mennonite," North Newton, Kansas. Thank you, Brother Nyce, for the work that you have done as correspondent.—Editor.

By P. A. Penner

Some believers who claim to have the indwelling of the Holy Spirit have demonstrated this, to their own satisfaction, by questionable manifestations. There are those who believe and teach that speaking "in tongues" is a, if not the, sign of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. We have had such Christians in India. Close observation of their lives did not reveal anything startling, nor was their service outstandingly fruitful. I recall one family that came to Calcutta, India, as missionaries. This family refused to study the Bengali language, but insisted that God would give them the language, because, they said: "We have the fullness of the Spirit." This family never acquired the language of the people to whom they claimed to have been sent. When all "their substance" was gone and they were reduced almost to poverty, kindhearted friends in India paid their passage home.

Others, perhaps of the more emotional type, demonstrate the professed indwelling of the Holy Spirit in a physical way. A certain posture of the body, rolling on the floor, crying, shouting, praying audibly are some of the manifestations, and hence the name "holy rollers" has here and there been applied to them. Here again a case from India. The name of the late Pandita Ramabai is a household word in the Christian communities in India. She was a highly educated Marathi lady. Becoming a widow at an early age and as such, experiencing the pitiful lot of Indian widowhood, her heart naturally went out to the thousands of child widows of her country. It is, therefore, no wonder that after her conversion, with her inherited means, she opened a home for the suffering child widows. Many hundreds of child widows were not only rescued from poverty, insult and shame, but were gloriously converted. Together with my father I visited this institution, "Mukhti"—meaning Salvation—near Poona, in 1906 during the great revival that touched many Christian centers in India. The Pandita was in charge of this institution. In the spacious church, partly erected by the approximately six hundred inmates of the home, we, my father and I, attended morning devotions. After a brief message by the Pandita, opportunity for prayer was given. At first only one widow led in prayer; the second began before the first widow had stopped praying, then a third, a fourth, and within a space of not more than four or five minutes all of those present prayed audibly, some of them even very loudly. Some of the widows stood with swaying bodies; the majority were kneeling; others, true to Indian fashion, touched the floor with their foreheads; some were crying; etc. The praying was like the surging of the sea. Father and I stood near the open door and saw and heard what we had never seen nor heard before. A strange, never-to-be-forgotten sight! Imagine a congregation of hundreds of widows praying audibly at once. Because the Marathi language was used, I did not understand the import of the prayers. As we turned to leave, my father said, "The Lord knows his own." He was right. This whole manifestation was claimed to be the visible result of the presence of the Holy Spirit in the hearts of these Christian widows. Though it may be reasonably questioned whether this physical demonstration is a necessary proof of the indwelling of the Spirit, yet I withhold criticism, the more so because of the zeal for God and the power in the messages of these Christian widows. For years after this event, the maturer widows of Mukhti, according to reliable reports, continued to tour the numerous villages around Mukhti with the message of salvation.

A spirit-filled life is a normal, not an abnormal, life. Our Lord Jesus Christ is the best proof of this statement. We read: "And Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost . . ." Luke 4:1. "Full of the Holy Ghost," and yet nothing abnormal is noticeable in life and conduct. His life was serene, radiant, and contagious. Once, and only once as far as we know, a woman in a crowd of listeners, interrupting him in his discourse, would have him shout: Hallelujah! Amen! She failed. In his usual calm voice he merely said to her: "Yea, rather blessed are they that hear the Word of God and keep it." Luke 11:27-28

God clearly indicates the character of a normal spirit-filled life. In Gal. 5:22-23 we read: "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness (kindness, R.V.), goodness, faith (faithfulness, R.V.), meekness, temperance (self-control, R.V.)" in contrast to the "works of the flesh." It is to be noted that the word does not say fruits, but fruit of the Spirit. All enumerated characteristics are one fruit: a cluster with nine berries. "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, etc." All of them. The permissible division, sometimes made, that the first three of these graces are in relation to God—love, joy, peace; the second three are in relation to our fellowman—longsuffering, kindness, goodness; the third for our individual life—faithfulness, meekness, and self-control, is man-made. Paul evidently wishes to say that if anyone desires to be a Spirit-filled Christian, then all of these characteristics must be seen in the believer's daily life.

It is possible for a believer to have one or more of these characteristics and yet not be a Spirit-filled Christian. Have we not met a brother who claims to have peace, but when it comes to goodness he is so good that he cannot get along with individuals or the church? Here is another who claims to have love, but he is leagues away from kindness. His uncharitableness and rasping criticism cut to the quick. A third claims to have joy, but his longsuffering fluctuates according to circumstances, not unlike a fever chart.

No, a Christian who has one or two, or even more, of the graces mentioned in Gal. 5:22-23 but does not have them all, is not, according to St. Paul, a Spirit-filled Christian. I would use a homely illustration. I hold in my hand a costly Japanese vase. Its colors of blue, lavender, rose, pink are exquisite. Accidentally, it drops to the hardwood floor and is shattered into many fragments. One person picks up a blue colored fragment; another, one of lavender; a third, a rose colored piece; etc. Yes, each one has a piece of the precious vase, but no one can truthfully say that he has the vase. "The fruit of the Spirit is love, peace, longsuffering, kindness, goodness, faithfulness, self-control." Everyone of them. "How satisfying, how invigorating, how joyful is the Spirit-filled life. Love, joy, and peace fill the soul. Kindness, goodness, and faithfulness control the life. They are ours and realized in us as fruit of the Divine Presence in us."

If Paul actually means what he says, and I think that he does, then some Christians may feel somewhat discouraged. They are conscious of the fact that they fall short of living a victorious life. They feel their lack of love, the absence of continued joy, the intermittent peace, etc., and yet they long for a radiant contagious life. In a word, absence of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. How can He become ours? To this longing Jesus says: "If ye being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him." Luke 11:13. "But," says someone, "I have asked him and yet my prayers remain unanswered; they apparently only reach the ceiling. Why?" May I suggest two possible reasons.

First: Failing to take God at His Word, but rather depending upon feelings, expecting a miracle to happen. There is to my knowledge no statement in God's Word that feelings have anything to do with the request for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit is as much a gift of God as salvation through faith in Jesus Christ. Both are ours for the asking.

Second: The possibility of a loose connection between God and the seeker, some pet sin. "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." Ps. 66:18.

But though feelings are no infallible proof of the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, yet the result of this fullness of the Spirit has been beautifully expressed in these lines:

*"Joybells ringing,
Songs and singing,
Fruitage of a God-filled life;
Love and Joy, and Peace and gladness,
Naught of sighing, naught of sadness,
Naught of bitterness or strife."*

It is to be noted that Gal. 5:16 enjoins us to "walk in the Spirit," which evidently means to manifest Him in a constant and consistent daily walk: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, down through Saturday, and not only on Sunday morning. He is to be manifested in business, in the office, on the farm, in the school room. Everywhere.

In conclusion. The indwelling of the Holy Spirit brings with it constant prayerful vigilance. Paul does not warn us without reason when he says: "Grieve not the Holy Spirit." Eph. 4:30. "Quench not the Holy Spirit." I Thess. 5:19. And Christ warns: "Blaspheme not the Holy Ghost." Matt. 12:31. Whether non-Christians only can blaspheme the Holy Spirit or also Christians is a much debated question and the discussion of this controversy is not within the province of this meditation.

Correct Address is Important

"In order to avoid any possible confusion in the delivery of mail addressed to delegates and visitors at the General Conference it is extremely important that such mail be addressed correctly. Due to the fact that the General Conference Headquarters are located in Newton, but that the Conference itself will be held in North Newton, on the Bethel College Campus, extreme care must be taken to address all mail intended for delegates and visitors in the following form:"

"Please note the underscoring of the word 'North' Newton to avoid delay of mail addressed to the Newton Post Office."

Men Full of the Holy Spirit

When people do not get along together, men full of the Holy Spirit are urgently needed to better the relationships. In those days when the early church was growing very rapidly, there arose a murmuring among the Greeks against the Hebrews. It seems that because of race prejudice the Greek widows did not get the daily ration of food as determined upon. Men refused to let the Holy Spirit have its way in this matter of food distribution. When the leaders became aware of this, they asked the body of believers to look around for some men whose function it would be to bring the two opposing groups into right relationships. It was suggested that the men to be elected be of honest report and full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom.

Here we are particularly interested in the phrase "full of the Holy Spirit." Webster suggests that the word "holy" is akin to the Anglo Saxon word "whole." In other words the multitude elected men full of the wholeness spirit to bring wholeness to a body which was beginning to divide into parties or parts. Division is not God's will. If there is to be any separation, it is to be for the purpose of separating from forces that are divisive. Jesus ate with sinners but he never cliqued with the Pharisees who esteemed themselves so much better than the sinners and even cursed the multitudes. God's will is wholeness within the individual and within human society.

Today nation murmurs against nation, but unless they become as one whole (one world) there will not be enough bread for someone. In this hour we are in desperate need of men full of the Holy (wholeness) Spirit who can bring about those relationships that make bread available to all in spite of any group prejudice that may have existed in the past. "Am I my brother's keeper?" asks a sinful mankind. Yes, definitely so, says Holy God, our Father.

We Must Stand to Gain

What position will the coming General Conference take towards war and participation in it? This is an important question, for the statements that church bodies make on this question frequently reveal some of the best thought upon the part of those who are church leaders. Lest we forget what the conscience of church bodies has declared in times past, let us review the statements of some prominent church groups. It was said by: The United Lutheran Church in America in 1934: We believe that the material losses of war, the fears engendered, the consequent hatreds and immeasurable suffering and sorrow resultant from international conflicts make war a devastating calamity for both victor and vanquished. We further believe that through the growth of public confidence in the agencies and instruments for international peace the way can be opened, under the providence of God, for the substitution of the peaceful processes of adjudication and arbitration in place of armed conflict in the settlement of international disputes.

International Society of Christian Endeavor in 1935: "We resolve to go forth from this great gathering of Christian youth, united in the common purpose of building a world based upon Christ's principles of justice, understanding, tolerance, and brotherhood among men and among nations. In such a world, war belongs only to history!"

Evangelical Synod of North America in 1933: "We declare our conviction that international warfare and the Gospel of love and brotherhood which we profess are incompatible. The methods used and the passions aroused by war both outrage Christ's conception of a Kingdom of God in which men should trust, love and forgive one another. We therefore pledge ourselves to support every movement which looks toward an organization of the nations for the elimination and outlawry of war; and to use every means to create the spirit of international goodwill among our people. We furthermore declare that we will not, as a Christian Church, ever bless or sanction war. We make this declaration of abstention as a Christian communion and do not intend it to bind individuals unless and until they accept it personally. We do mean to commit our Church to the fundamental proposition that to support war is to deny the Gospel we profess to believe."

General Council of Congregational and Christian Churches in 1934: "... the cleavage between the way of Jesus and the system of war is clear. We of this Council are convinced that we must now make this declaration: 'The Church is through with war.' We of this Council call upon the people of our churches to renounce war and all its works and ways and to refuse to support, sanction or bless it. The mind of our Church (in so far as this vote reveals it) has moved to this solemn conviction."

The Northern Baptist Convention in 1935: "Modern war and its attendant evils . . . is incompatible with the gospel of Jesus Christ, and in every respect contrary to God's plan of love for all mankind. . ."

Yes, perhaps, these church bodies have lost some ground during the war, but that is not surprising, for

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

they were not strongly established in the faith of non-resistance through hundreds of years. In fact, it is enheartening to note that the Christian Church has not retreated more than it has. The Christian Church, as a whole, has not put its hand of blessing upon this war as it did upon the First World War. Its conscience is against war.

What a calamity it would be if now the Mennonite Church with a peace testimony hundreds of years old should retreat and lose ground. It must not, it cannot be, if we would truly pray "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done." We must stand to gain. As a General Conference we must stand to add to, to fill full, our position towards war and participation in it as adopted at our last session in Souderton, Pa. We must stand to gain or we shall fall in sin.

Tentative Survey of Conference Attendance Local Committee Requests Cooperation

Due to critical problems pertaining to both food and lodging the Local Conference Committee is attempting a survey of probable attendance.

The local Committee is printing the coupon below, in all Conference papers and other publications in the earnest hope that everyone (delegate or visitor) who plans to attend even though his plans are uncertain will fill in the coupon, turn it in to their pastor or send it direct to the Local Conference Committee.

Pastors, upon receiving these coupons, are earnestly requested to send them to the address below by May 1 (and again May 20).

This is not a registration. It does not bind you to attend. It merely gives the women in charge of food preparation and lodging the information they need.

Food rationing points, shortage of gasoline, and bedding seem to make this almost essential.

Prices of meals the last conference were: Mornings, 20-25 cents; noons, 40 cents; evenings, 35 cents. They will be somewhat higher this conference. Dormitory rooms on the campus will be 50 cents per person per night.

For accommodations in private homes the following prices are suggested: (arrangements to be made with the host) Rooms: per person per night.....50
breakfast.....25

REMEMBER: Give this coupon to your pastor or mail direct to: B. Borgen, Chairman, Committee on Registration, North Newton, Kansas.

Place a check-mark in the square of the appropriate day.

1. Which days of the conference do you plan to take breakfast at the Conference Dining Hall?
2. Which days of the conference do you plan to take noon meal at the Conference Dining Hall?
3. Which days of the conference do you plan to take the evening meal at the Conference Dining Hall?

NAMEADDRESS

CHURCH

The General Conference

By C. Henry Smith

Eighty-five years ago, a handful of far-seeing leaders of the Mennonite church in America, leaders of several small and scattered congregations throughout the East and Middle West, such men as John H. Oberholtzer of Pennsylvania, Danial Hoch of Ontario, Ephraim Huntsberger, of Ohio, and Daniel Krehbiel and Christian Showalter, of Iowa, conceived an ambitious idea for the Mennonite church, which if carried out to its conclusion, would mean much for the denomination as a whole—namely the unification of all the Mennonite churches of America into a working organization through which all the activities, spiritual and cultural, might be carried on.

The first general meeting for the discussion of this far-reaching project was held in the month of May of the year when Abraham Lincoln was first elected to the Presidency of the United States, in a little crossroads meeting house, long since disappeared, in southeastern Iowa. While the idea was big, this first meeting was a modest affair, consisting of only two local churches in Iowa, and two representatives from Pennsylvania. But several of the chief sponsors of the idea were there: Daniel Krehbiel and John H. Oberholtzer. And leadership almost always is responsible for the major share of any difficult enterprise. A big idea always has its first inception in the mind of some far-seeing individual. In those matters that time declares to be right the majority at first is always wrong.

These men laid the foundations for a united Mennonitism broadly and wisely. The goal they set, and the means for attaining that goal has been altered but little by later leaders to this day. The General Conference today is still building on the foundation and following the blue prints first specified by these pioneers of Mennonite unity in the little Iowa meeting house some eighty-five years ago. In fact, a history of the General Conference movement is merely the story of the gradual and steady unfolding of the plans and objectives of the founders. There have been no radical changes, nor revolutionary turning points since. At this and several other meetings it was resolved:

1. To invite all Mennonite churches of America to share in this enterprise. Each congregation was to retain its independence as a governing body, and maintain its own church discipline. The union was to be one for promoting common activities only. The only test of fellowship was to be a common belief in the traditional principles of Mennonitism: regeneration, baptism upon confession of faith, rejection of the oath, and the doctrine of non-resistance.

2. The whole purpose of the movement was to sponsor such church activities and institutions as would build up the spiritual life of the churches, promote the unification cause, and train efficient leaders to carry on the work. Specific objectives to be aimed at were the establishing of a mission board, the appointment of a traveling minister whose concern it would be to represent the unification cause among all the churches, the sponsoring of a church paper, which had already been established by private enterprise, and the establishing of a training school for prospective ministers and church leaders.

As just indicated, the history of the General Conference movement is largely the carrying out and amplification of this original program. Let us examine briefly what progress has been made during the past eighty-five years along these lines.

NUMERICAL GROWTH: The General Conference has had a steady though slow growth from the beginning. The first meeting in Iowa consisted of just three congregations with a handful of members. Each succeeding session of the conference, however, witnessed a few new additions, at first largely from the Oberholtzer following in Pennsylvania, and later from recent European immigrant groups. The Bavarians in Illinois and Iowa were charter members; the first Swiss congregation, that of Berne, Indiana, under the leadership of S. F. Sprunger, joined in 1875; the first Russian contingent, that of Alexanderwohl, represented by David Goertz and Heinrich Richert, were added the following year; The Bluffton Swiss congregation and that of Dalton, Ohio, together with the original Amish congregations at Trenton, Ohio, and Noble, Iowa, joined in 1893. By this time the number of congregations had grown to fifty, eighteen of which were from Kansas. At the last session of the Conference held at Souderton, Pennsylvania in 1941, there were one hundred and fifty congregations represented from the United States, and sixty from Canada, the latter largely from the more recent immigrants from Russia, and many quite small. The most recent addition was a Russian immigrant congregation in Mexico. The entire membership at present is approximately 35,000.

THE MISSION CAUSE: The mission cause, both home and foreign, has always played an important role in conference deliberations. Two imposing tasks confronted the early conference sessions—the preparation of workers and the choice of a suitable field of work. It was not until 1871 that S. S. Haury, a Wadsworth student, offered himself as a candidate for the mission cause. After some years of investigation, including a visit to the Indians of Alaska, it was finally decided in 1880 to make the Cheyennes of Indian Territory the objective of the first missionary effort. Work among the American Indians has remained a prominent part of the Conference mission program. Later stations were established in China, and India. The first collection for the mission cause, in 1875, amounted to $390. In 1941 the collection for missions for the three year period ending in that year amounted to approximately $325,000.00, eighty thousand of which was for Home missions.

PUBLICATION: No cause can prosper without adequate publicity. Oberholtzer, realizing this fact, started as early as 1852, the first of a long list of later succeeding Mennonite periodicals, the Religioeser Botschafter. In 1881 the Conference elected a Publication Board which in the course of time took over several of the religious papers that had been started as private or district conference enterprises. The Bundesbote became a Conference paper in 1881, and The Mennonite in 1902. The Mennonite has had a steady growth, especially in recent months through its one hundred per cent church subscription plan. But the Bundesbote, due to the growing disuse of the German language among the younger readers, has lost steadily in its subscription list except among the more recent immigrants from Russia in Canada. The Board also publishes a full supply of Sunday School literature, and various Mennonite books of a devotional, missionary, and historical interest.

EDUCATION: These early leaders were wise enough to realize that the faith of the fathers could not be perpetuated without a trained leadership; and to this end one of their earliest tasks was to provide a training school where the distinctive principles and doctrines could be taught the future leaders. They were perhaps wiser in this respect than our leadership of today. The result was the establishment of the Wadsworth school. During ten years, from 1868-1878, this institution trained many of the early missionaries and ministers of the church. After its close the Conference took no further direct interest in the conducting of an educational institution. Such colleges and Bible schools as were later established were sponsored either by private initiative or an congregational or district conference enterprises. In recent years through a new union seminary board there has been some interest in the establishment of a very much needed Mennonite seminary, but thus far this project has not made much progress.

RELIEF AND CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE: The work of relief, and the support of the whole Civilian Public Service program is one of the more recent, and perhaps one of the most significant of all the Conference projects. In this work the General Conference has joined other Mennonite bodies through the Mennonite Central Committee.

The Mennonite Central Committee is not only the central controlling organization for carrying on the relief work of the different Mennonite groups, and for supporting the rather heavy, but far-reaching Civilian Public Service program, but also the clearing house for the promotion of the traditional peace doctrines still officially held by all the different Mennonite bodies, though by no means universally practised by their members.

In terms of finances the large work of the Mennonite Central Committee is expressed, not in terms of thousands, but in millions.

WHAT OF THE FUTURE: Has the General Conference reached the numerical limit in its expansive program? It is not likely that there will be many future additions from detached congregations, or from large bodies of Europeans immigrants. Most Mennonite bodies are now well organized in conferences of their own, but there is a possibility that entire conference bodies with little to keep them apart may see the advantage of affiliation with other groups in a larger Federal Council of Mennonites. In fact, the Central Conference is now considering such a step. There are several other conferences, and in time there will be more, who differ from the views and practises of the General Conference very little, or none at all, in their fundamental Mennonite principles; and there is little reason for refusing such an affiliation of separate, regional groups, with local autonomy intact, but united in their educational, publication, missionary, and their common relief and peace efforts.

The splendid cooperation now prevailing among the different branches in carrying out a common relief program, and in administering the work of the CPS camps, shows what might be done in other fields. One thing only is still needed to preserve the traditions of the past and to promote the cause of Mennonite unity—a strong training school for the ministry and church leadership, soundly Biblical, and unequivocally committed to the preservation of the traditional doctrines of historic Mennonitism—the faith of the fathers.

Bring Sugar

During this time of rationing it is difficult to receive sufficient allotments of sugar to meet all our needs for the serving of meals during the week of the General Conference. The Women's Association of Bethel College is responsible for all meals during the conference. The women would greatly appreciate having all delegates or visitors who plan to take most of their meals at the Dining Hall bring along one cup full of sugar. This may be turned in at the Registration table. Sincerely, A. Theodore Mueller, Chairman, Foods Committee.

BEGINNINGS

Life is a continuation of beginnings. The Author of Life is the Great Beginner. That is what makes Him and His work so interesting. Man was not intended to set an end for his possibilities. If and when one does that he has taken the interest out of his life. He has limited himself and the possibilities of his usefulness.

In School Life

We speak of commencement—beginning—at the close of a school year. That is not as strange as it may seem at first! Seniors are not through preparing for life when they have finished certain prescribed work. They are just beginning to gain the practical training for which their school days fitted them. They are just entering upon the most interesting experience of learning to live under conditions which afford them less and less opportunity to lean upon others and more and more opportunity to try themselves out. That is a very important period of beginning and has well been termed commencement.

While people in all kinds of schools are being graduated—sent forth to begin a new and more valuable experience in living others are beginning their work in school. College graduates and beginners in Daily Vacation Bible Schools are both facing the interesting experience of making an important start. That start is of vital importance to each one of them. Any one who is at all interested in the progress of human beings in accordance with the orderly arrangement which God has provided for them pays more attention to this similarity than he does to the superficially apparent differences. To him all people are beginners—learners of new phases of truth which is intended to make men free.

In the School of Life

Parents are subject to the same orderly arrangement to which their children are held. Without thinking much about it, they look upon the beginner in the grades as a child of the home. They take the same attitude toward the graduate from primary, secondary, collegiate or graduate schools. That fact weighs more heavily than do the differences in age or quantity or quality of training. So long as parents take that attitude they are still growing—are still beginners. They realize of course, that their children are not and cannot be duplicates of themselves in every respect. They recognize the differences but they live with and for their children on the basis of the growth upon which God intended them to live. They are not jealous of their children. They continue to be jealous for them in a very meaningful sense. They stand by their children through guidance or by means of opportunities for which they can provide. They remain young in spirit. Youth understands that kind of spirit better than it does the attitudes of people who deal mostly with finalities.

What is true between parents and children is no less true between “neighbors” whom they meet on the highways and by-ways of life. It is inspiring to see one person taking a keen interest in the achievements of others. Such an one does not belittle his neighbors. Neither does he feel inferior because what he has, and what he can do are different from the possessions and the achievements of others. They are thankful for that which another can do even though they cannot do it themselves. Such a person is educated in a real sense no matter how many or how few may have been the years spent in school rooms. He is still growing—still a beginner. He is not done. Jesus evidently had in mind when He said, “My Father worketh hitherto, and I work.” So long as anyone is working he is growing; he is beginning. That gives him a zest which helps him overcome more temptations than all the rules he may choose to follow.

Desire for a Better Start

Not all good resolutions are made on New Year's Day. Some of the best ones are made when people realize that they are making another start. That is why commencement time is not only an occasion for joy but also for serious thinking and new determinations to meet one's opportunities in a better way than ever before. That is also true of parents who provide for the opportunities of their children.

Too often the opportunities of children and youth have been handicapped by those who had ceased to get an inspiration from new undertakings. All provisions for the educational needs of our children rise or fall in proportion to the inspiration which parents and neighbors get out of the growth of childhood and youth. Any visitor who has an interest in coming generations can see that without words when he looks at the provisions which are made for the training of children—of all ages—by homes, churches and the communities.

Explaining why things have not been done is usually little more than an attempt to excuse one's lack of interest—a kind of confession that one has ceased to be a beginner of new and interesting, as well as valuable attempts at helpful, useful and wholesome living.

MARIE FAST IS REPORTED MISSING

Marie Fast, who has been doing relief work in the Near East for the M.C.C., has been reported missing and presumably lost at sea. This is according to a cable message relayed to her brother Dr. H. A. Fast, North Newton, Kansas. Miss Fast entered relief work in 1944 and has been stationed in Egypt for some time.

Unconditional Surrender

As the radio vibrates with the triumph of victory because a foe has signed to the demands of an unconditional surrender, one's heart is stirred with the thought of man's greater surrender to the Conqueror of the Cross—the Christ!

Who knows how many of the vanquished who, today, have laid their swords before the victor, are negotiating a heart surrender to the Christ of the Cross? He who heard Israel in its cry to Him when her need was great, shall hear again the cry of a people that return to Him.

Sad is the story of the human race in its rise and fall of empires. Doubly sad is the story, for as yet neither the ruins nor the ashes of a nation's faded glory have taught us the lesson of continued surrender to the God of us all. Again, and ever again the wine press of His wrath has trodden down the ripened grapes of a people's sin. How often, since the days of Noah, must the Heart of God have "grieved because of man and repented that He had made him!"

There is one Empire that passeth not away—a King never to be dethroned! This King, the Christ and Conqueror of man's soul, goes forward through the ages in His triumphant victory march, ever expanding the borders of His Kingdom. Who knows, perhaps from empires crumbled into dust, He builds the stronger walls within His lands.

In this the hour of despair, man either cuts the thread of life or sends to God his cry of anguish. God answers with the Crucified who, at the Cross, negotiates the terms of peace—demanding nothing less than unconditional surrender. Blessed is the soul that is conquered by the Christ!

Germany, it is said; waited too long to surrender to her victors. Grimly she fought upon herself death and desolation—even the loss of the freedom of her will. What a price to pay when she knew that surrender was her only hope to life, to peace!

Is it any different in our spirit life? There is no other way to life—to peace of heart in God—than by the signature of the will to the terms that the Conqueror of the cross holds out to us: an unconditional surrender! The terms shall ever remain the same.

FAREWELL MESSAGE FROM HARVEY AND ELLA BAUMAN

622 Juniper St.,
Quakertown, Pa.
April 30, 1945

Dear Friends;

With a deep sense of conviction that I Cor. 3:11 is the only foundation which can be laid for man's salvation and a new order for lasting world peace we again face "homeward" towards India, the land of our adoption. We are fully convinced that if we had spent more money and effort in the evangelization enterprise in the past century, we would not have had to send our armies and navies into the Pacific. May God forgive us where we have defaulted and give us the courage, faith, and determination to consecrate our all to Him in the future.

These nearly three years in America have been happy and busy days.. We trust they have been mutually fruitful to us all. We wish to thank one and all for your kindnesses, courtesies and help in making our furlough pleasant. Three children, Albert, Harvella, and Betty are returning with us. Kenneth and Clara Ann will remain here. Kenneth is in C.P.S. Unit No. 143, Spring Grove Mental Hospital, Catonsville, Maryland. Clara Ann is a freshman in Bluffton College. We will feel this separation, but can with confidence leave them here knowing that the Lord will sustain them in every way.

We covet your prayers as we sail and start our work in India for the third term. We realize as never before what conditions are in America. Medical practice has given us a knowledge which nothing else could have. People yearn for the ministrations of Christian doctors and nurses. They also are hungry for the undiluted Gospel message. We will be praying for America as earnestly as you for India.

May God's blessing be with you all. Our next letter will probably be from India, and we hope that can be written soon.

Yours in His service,
Harvey R. Bauman

Our Mennonite Relief Work in the Middle East

By S. F. Pannabecker

Just now Brother Baltzer and myself are in one of those inevitable periods of waiting. For over a week we have been on call on an hour-to-hour basis. At any moment we may get notice to leave for our port of embarkation. On the other hand we may have to wait another week. In the meantime we busy ourselves with short walks and odd jobs that may be dropped if necessary or finished hurriedly.

I arrived here early in November after a month's voyage and Brother P. P. Baltzer, of the Mennonite Brethren in Kansas, arrived the latter part of the same month. Since then we have been together. While our ultimate destination is China, present conditions made it advisable to spend some time at different relief centers enroute. The past three or four months in the Middle East have been exceedingly profitable to us and, I believe, also worthwhile to the M.C.C. work in this area.

Our Mennonite staff in this vicinity now numbers twelve. All are working in UNRRA refugee camps, five being in one camp and seven in another. All but two of these workers have arrived since August of last year and five of them since our arrival in November. Thus the last half year has been the period of initiation for most of them. It has also been the period of inauguration of the Mennonite relief work as we have it here. Credit for the preliminary work and organization goes to Brother J. N. Byler and our two first workers, Delvin Kirchofer and Dr. Richard Yoder. The latter two were present from the very beginning of the refugee camps and are recognized as having made as large a contribution to this work as any individuals connected with it.

From the beginning there has been the hope of organizing a specifically Mennonite work, independent but in association with the larger relief agencies. To date we have failed to find the opening for this particular endeavor. On the other hand the UNRRA refugee camps have presented needs for the type of service which we have been prepared to render. So it is that all our staff is at present under UNRRA assignments.

The type of work assigned to our workers varies but all of them have positions suited to their qualifications. Five are engaged in medical work. Of these, one is chief medical officer in one of the camps, three are nurses and one is laboratory technician. Another serving as dietitian is in a closely related field. The Welfare Division claims five more. Two of these are director of welfare activities in sub-camps, one is supervisor of shop work, another assists in children's activities and the direction of women's sewing, and another is engaged in registration preparatory to repatriation. One of our men is also engaged in connection with supplies and accounting.

The opportunities for personal contact with refugees varies but it can be said that not one of our workers is not vitally concerned with activities for the care of unfortunate war sufferers. At the same time they have left personal impression on refugees and on my brief visits to the camps I have received repeated testimonials of their thoroughness and self-sacrificing service. UNRRA officials have also highly commended their work and agreed that they fill an important niche in the refugee program. This is attested by the fact that UNRRA has voluntarily proposed to put all of them on the regular basis as to travelling, vacation, and separation allowances and other privileges available to regular UNRRA personnel.

The conditions of service are not all ideal. Mennonite standards as to smoking, drinking, dancing, and clean language are not common in circles in which we move. The religious emphasis is almost entirely lacking and even a sacrificial social interest is not too evident. The close association of UNRRA with the army and the necessary dependence on the latter for certain services such as transportation and supplies has raised the question of possible inconsistencies. We feel, however, that none of these conditions has vitiated the testimony of our staff to Mennonite ideals.

A spirit of unity and loyalty has in a way been furthered by the evident difference of standards. Regular weekly gatherings for prayer and devotions are held at each camp beside occasional get-togethers for social or other purposes. Two conferences of the whole M.C.C. staff in the entire area have been held and a third is scheduled for the middle of March. The fellowship in worship, deliberation over common problems, and planning for the future helps weld the group into a single body even though separated in places of work.

My own contribution in this program of relief work has not been large but there have been certain things it was possible to do. Participation in the conferences was a pleasure as was the privilege to assist in clothing distribution at one of the camps. Negotiations with UNRRA officials over various questions were not uncommon, letters and reports took some time, consultations with workers was an occasional privilege, while welcoming new arrivals and entertaining staff members on their intermittent visits to the city was a pure joy.

Apart from our official duties there has been much opportunity to study the local situation in this important center of the world and to visit points of historic interest. This in itself has been quite an education. As missionaries we especially appreciate the kindness of an American missionary who took us in his car on a Sunday morning tour of several typical Protestant churches as well as different schools and institutions.

The high point of our whole stay was the privilege of spending ten days in Palestine where we trudged, day after day, through the city of Jerusalem, with its many memories, and over the hills that surround it. Trips to Nazareth and the Sea of Galilee and to Jericho and the Dead Sea, as well as railway journeys over other parts of the Holy Land, gave us further opportunities to see and touch those places whose names have been familiar from childhood. The Old and New Testaments will always have a new meaning after having visited the land of their background.

We are ready now to move on to points farther east and nearer the place of our proper assignment. The experience here has helped us visualize some of the problems we may meet there and see how they are handled here. I am convinced that you may be proud of your workers in the Middle East without exception and may feel assured that they are doing a worthwhile work—one that shall stand to the credit of the Mennonite church and, what is more, be a true Christian witness and a force in the Kingdom of God.—Via M.C.C. Headquarters, Akron, Pa.

PLAN FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY CONVENTION

The third executive meeting of the E.D.C.E. Union was held April 25, at the home of our vice-president, John Moser.

The treasurer reported that we needed $58 to finish our goal of $500. Our 50th C. E. convention will be held June 17, afternoon and evening instead of the usual May 30. An interesting program has been arranged, with panel discussions and reminiscence by Dr. E. S. Johnson. Rev. E. Byler will be the main speaker of the evening. Let us give this anniversary convention our full support with prayers. We hope to see a large number of our young people present. It was also decided to give $25 to the Retreat Committee.—C. E. Corr.

YOUTH JOTTINGS

—The Iowa retreat program was planned by leaders of the four C. E. societies and their pastors on April 29, when they met at Donnellson. The retreat is to be held at Wayland this year, July 28 and 29.

—The Wayland young people enjoyed a swimming party at the college pool in Mount Pleasant on April 10.

—The Eden C. E., Moundridge, Kansas, has planned a picnic.

—Ernest Lichti of Reedley is President of the California Mennonite S. S. and C. E. Convention for the coming year. Elmer Friesen is First Vice President. Other members of the Executive Committee are: Mrs. Leah Dirks, Elaine Franz, and Loraine Schroeder.

—Wichita: The Y.P.C.E. spent a very enjoyable evening skating at the Y.W.C.A. Later the group went to the church where doughnuts and soft drinks were enjoyed by all.

—Young people of Hydro, Bergtal, Cordell, and Bessie, Oklahoma, churches had a youth rally on May 11 and 12 at the Bergtal Church, Corn.

—Beatrice, Nebraska: The men's chorus of the Farm and Community School (C.P.S.), Lincoln, gave a sacred concert on April 29. The Beatrice Fellowship sponsored a social gathering in the afternoon preceding the concert. C.P.S. men went along to various homes for Sunday supper.

A CHURCH MESSAGE TO THE AMERICAN DELEGATION

NEW YORK, April 26—A statement sent to each member of the American delegation at the United Nations in San Francisco expressing the "prayerful support" of the churches of America was made public here today by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Transmitted by the Council's president, Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, the message to the delegates voiced the hope that the movement toward world organization "shall be advanced at San Francisco in such a way as to invoke the moral and creative forces of mankind and not rely primarily upon repressive force."

"The highest aspirations of people everywhere seek expression through you and your colleagues," asserted the inter-church body. "There may be some among our fellow-citizens who expect you who are delegates to serve only immediate and narrow national interests; but we believe that they do not represent the dominant desire of our people. The highest interests of the world and the highest interests of our nation coincide."

How One Church Promotes Knowledge of It's Church School

From the May 6 bulletin of a church in the Pacific District Conference come some encouraging announcements about accomplishments, future plans, and needs of Bethel College. The following are extracts from this bulletin:

ACCOMPLISHMENTS:

During the fifty-one years of its existence Bethel has graduated many Christian business men, teachers, doctors, farmers, preachers, and missionaries.

Bethel College has provided all but one of the regional directors of C. P. S. and also the main director of C.P. S.

It is safe to say that half, and probably more than half, of the present ministers in the General Conference received their training at Bethel.

The larger part of our foreign missionaries have come from Bethel... also our Relief workers.

Financially, in twelve years there has been a decrease in debt of $109,000, and an increase in net worth of $650,000. The debt on August 1, 1944, was $33,000.

Bethel College has a new Memorial Hall that is entirely paid for, which would be a credit to any campus. Its dining rooms will seat 1000 and its auditorium will seat 3000.

Bethel has a three-story, well-equipped Science Hall, one of the best in the North Central Association.

Gifts last year came from 2433 donors totaling over $122,000. This means an average gift of $50.15. 1033 gave between $1 and $10; 14 gave between $500 and $1000; 6 gave between $1000 and $2500; 4 gave between $2500 and $5000; 2 gave over $10,000.

THE NEEDS OF BETHEL:

1. A new library.
2. A new boys' dormitory for about 200 men.

3. $25,000 a year in gifts to balance an annual educational budget of about $100,000.

4. The old debt of $33,000 to be paid off by August 5. More students from our churches first, the end of the fiscal year.

6. Understanding and praying hearts of our church people.

SOME FUTURE PLANS OF BETHEL:

1. To increase the student body and strengthen the faculty.

2. To see that every student receives individual attention from a faculty member.

3. To provide more Christian teachers, ministers, and missionaries.

4. To work in close harmony with the churches and church leaders.

5. To provide speakers, musicians and programs of a religious nature for the churches.

6. To organize a Bethel College Fellowship in all churches of the Bethel College area for the purpose of furthering mutual understanding and helpfulness between these churches and the college. These Fellowships furnish energy in the form of interest, prayers, good-will, students and financial contributions. They are made up of friends of Christian education, many of whom have never attended college.

"We need education plus Christianity and we need Christianity plus education. We need a fully-orbed Christian education of mind, heart and body, so that individuals will not only know what is good, but will also have within themselves the living Christ who will tell them what is known to be good and right and eternal."

Bethel College needs our support. Above are facts that you may know your college better; its accomplishments, its needs, and what it intends to do in the future. Support your college by prayer and gifts. The next bond drive will be on within a week. Why not buy Civilian Bonds now for paying off the old Bethel College debt.

IN MEMORIAM

Maria Catherina Martens, daughter of Michael and Maria Sophia Seiler, nee Hermann, was born January 22, 1859, at Laub, Russia. When about twenty-five she migrated to Beatrice, Nebraska, where she joined the Mennonite Church. In 1890 she married Johann Martens, who preceded her in death in 1922. Maria Martens passed away March 29, 1945.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tschantz, seventy-nine, died March 28, at her home in Bluffton, Ohio. Her husband John H. Tschantz preceded her in death in 1928. He was one of the first trustees of Bluffton College, and Mrs. Tschantz continued to be interested in young people and Christian education. Three daughters and three sons survive, Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker, Mrs. D. W. Bixler, Mrs. R. S. Gerber, and Clyde, Irving, and Amos.

Emma Goertzen Wiens, daughter of Henry and Susie Loepp Goertzen, was born December 29, 1914, near Inman, Kansas, and died March 21, 1945. She became a member of the Hebron Church in 1930 and later joined the Hutchinson Church. In 1936 she married Albert Wiens, who with three children now survives her.

Edward Unruh, son of John J. and Helena Voth Unruh, was born February 20, 1888, at Peabody, Kansas, and passed away March 18, 1945. He attended the Hillsboro Preparatory School and also Bethel College. He was baptized in 1908 by H. R. Voth. In 1915 he married Elizabeth Regier, who with two children now mourns his departure.

Elizabeth Unruh, daughter of John and Helen (nee Vouth Unruh) was born June 8, 1869, in Nikolai Village, South Russia. In 1874 she migrated with her parents to Marion County, Kansas. She was received into the Alexanderwohl Church in 1891. She passed away March 2, 1945.

TWO NEW WORKERS IN NEW FIELD

For some years, an increasing number of Mennonites, from some of our General Conference Churches, have been going into the mountain regions of Kentucky to do mission work. These workers have gone into this region without any Board backing. Their support came largely from their home church or its auxiliaries such as the Sunday School, individual classes, C. E. organizations and missionary societies,

The Board of Home Missions has been studying this movement for some time. Last fall Rev. J. E. Amstutz, Trenton, Ohio, a member of the Board, was sent by the Board to visit a number of these Mennonite workers on their fields. On this tour he visited Rev. and Mrs. Carl Walstead, Barbourville, Kentucky. Mrs. Walstead comes from one of our Mennonite Churches. Rev. and Mrs. Abraham Unruh, Manchester, Kentucky, Miss Elsie M. Pfister, Hyden, Kentucky, and Miss Margaret Slotter, Hoskinston, Kentucky, were visited. In addition he went as far as Paint Rock, North Carolina, to observe the work done by Miss Elsa E. Grantland, who is already working with our Board.

He found that there was truly a large and needy field. Much of the work at present is done through the public schools. Permission is given to the mission worker to conduct classes once or twice per week in Bible stories and Bible memory work. Always the workers conduct one or two regular Sunday Schools each Sunday. The two ministers visited are in the process of building churches.

For several years, Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, has been a main support for both Miss Pfister and Miss Slotter. This Church has agreed that from now on they will send their regular support for these two members through the Board of Home Missions. A few other churches in the Eastern District Conference have sent some gifts to these well-known workers.

It is with pleasure that we introduce the two new workers to the readers of our Church paper and we as a Board hope that many of you will put these workers, as others, on your prayer lists.

Miss Elsie Pfister, Hyden, Kentucky

Miss Margaret Slotter, Hoskinston, Kentucky

The names and addresses are given since some of you may desire to write to these new workers. Already a Junior C. E. Society sent some Testaments into this new field.

The work among these mountain people is not done on a denominational basis. We do hope and pray that many a child can be won for Christ and through the children many parents.

Yours for an enlarged outreach for Christ,

A. J. Neuenschwander, Sec.

CORRESPONDENCE

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Halstead, Kansas

The week of March 18-23 was set aside for a special emphasis on our religious needs. We were privileged to have Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, a former pastor of our church, as speaker. He used the theme, "The Passion of Christ Before Palm Sunday" which he presented in the way of a Bible study making it very helpful to everyone.

On the evening of March 25 we were happy to have as our guests members of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, Newton, who rendered a fine program. Following the program we enjoyed a social hour together in the basement. All who attended felt that this was an excellent way in which to become better acquainted and to better understand our fellowmen of another race. We were immediately invited to be their guests in the near future. So on May 6 the young people of our church presented a program to a very appreciative audience in the Colored Church. Again a most pleasant social hour followed in the basement.

Easter was observed with a Three Hour Good Friday Union Service from 12:00-3:00 p. m. The service was arranged in seven periods using the seven last words of Christ. The Lord's Supper was observed during the morning worship service on Easter Sunday. In the evening the C. E. society gave a candlelight service which recounted the last week of Christ's life.

Our pastor, Rev. D. C. Wedel, served the two churches at Beatrice, Nebraska, April 15-20. In his absence Ernst Harder, our assistant pastor, was in charge of the morning worship service.

The Men's Sunday School Class rendered a program on Sunday afternoon, April 22, at the Bethel Home for the Aged. Several of our members have lived in the Home for some time.—E.R.M., Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Wadsworth, Ohio

A committee is busy soliciting pledges for the organ fund. The Minerva Kauffman estate paid $200 to this fund and also $200 to the church for foreign missionary work.

Captain Hawthorne of the Salvation Army spoke on the evening services April 15. D. A. Lehman of Rochester, N. Y., sang several numbers at services March 25 and also led a "Songspiration" in the evening.

The traditional Easter Sunrise service and breakfast were well attended. The play "He is Risen" was given by the young people.

The pastor addressed the Wayne Co. C. E. on Smithville Sunday afternoon, April 29. Further engagements include the Christian Workers' School, Harrisburg, Pa., April 30 to May 2, and the Mennonite Central Committee, Chicago, May 4 and 5.

Mrs. Baumgardner and her two adopted Indian children from the Hopei tribe of Arizona will be the speaker at the mother and daughter banquet May 12 in the church basement.—Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Hillsboro, Kansas

We are happy to announce that Rev. and Mrs. H. T. Unruh have consented to further serve our church for a period of five years. In September they will have completed three years of helpful and living service in our midst. The Lord has richly blessed us.

Seventeen members have been added to the church, ten through baptism and seven by letter.

In April we observed child consecration. Eleven parents brought their infants to receive for themselves and their children a special blessing.

Mid-week Bible classes for children have terminated and a fine program was given showing some of the splendid work that had been done during the winter months.—Mrs. Jacob Bartel, Corr.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

CHINA PRAYER COVENANT

"Prayer changes things!" Do you believe that? The Chinese Christian leaders do. All China has been going through terrible things. Our Christians too have suffered very severely, but they are not giving up. They still live in hope. Their eyes are fixed upon our precious Lord and Savior. They are working and praying. Some of the reports are wonderful! However, the burden is heavy and the situation almost unbearable. They want their country once more released from Japanese control and in our Mennonite mission field also from the hands of the Chinese communists. The situation looks despairingly difficult, even dangerous. However, they have learned by experience, that prayer changes things. That is why they have fixed April 15 as the day of China Prayer Covenant. They are praying themselves, but they also plead with you to enter into the covenant and help pray for the salvation of the China millions. Do make a vow before God today that you will pray some every day for China and its salvation in general, or better yet, specifically for some of the Christian leaders. You know already the President Chiang Kai Chek and Madame Chiang, who do give some time to the Christian cause, but here I like to present the names of a few full time Christian workers. Man and woman that have in the last decade shown themselves as faithful soldiers of the cross, and are now calling for prayers.

EVANGELISTS AT LARGE

1. Chao Te Li of Peking. A man of faith. Lay evangelist with power.

2. Tung—of Peking. He travels throughout North China, preaching Christ.

3. Dr. Soong of Shanghai. American educated. Fully consecrated to the Lord. He travels throughout China. Thousands attend his Meetings. Hundreds are saved. Now he is sick with T. B. in Peking hospital.

4. Wang Ming Tao of Peking. He started an independent church there, which now has over one thousand members. He also holds meetings all over North China. Many get saved.

Mennonite Mission-field Workers

1. Rev. Chang Ching—Well educated and fully consecrated. A Bible man and pillar in the church. Now pastor of the Kai Chow East suburbs church.

2. Rev. Wang Wan Chu—A good Bible teacher and faithful preacher. Now superintendent of Tung Ming and Chang Yuan counties.

3. Rev. Sun Chung Sheng—Pastor of the Lung Wang Miao Church. Also superintendent of the Taming, Nanlos and Tsingfeng counties. He is friendly and faithful.

4. Rev. Li Kuang Ming—Superintendent of the country churches of the Kai Chow county. First a school teacher, then evangelist. Now pastor at large. A consecrated man.

5. Rev. Wu Tung Hsin—After resigning his position in Chang Yuan, he helps spreading the gospel at home in Taming.

6. James Liu—Superintendent of the Hua Mei High School at Kai Chow. He is a faithful church leader.

7. Dr. Hu Hsing Yu—Our only Chinese doctor and Superintendent of the Kai Choco Hospital.

8. Wang Jui Ting—Superintendent of the School of Nursing at Kai Chow.

9. Ku Tung Ching—Secretary-Treasurer of the Kai Chow Hospital.

10. Wang Chi An—Evangelist-preacher of the Kai Chow City Church.

11. Kuan Yoa Hsu—Evangelist-preacher of the Tung Ming Church.

12. Ma Hsiang Chieu—Evangelist-preacher of the Kao Tsun Church.

13. Tsao Chien Hsun—Evangelist-preacher of the Tsingfeng Church.

14. Le Ching Hsien—Evangelist-preacher of the Taming Church.

15. Chien Feng Chih—Evangelist-preacher of the Nanloa Church.

16. Mrs. Tuan—Bible teacher and church-worker, Kai Chow, Eastsuburbs.

17. Mrs. Kuan Yoa Hau—Bible teacher and church worker, Kai Chow Eastsuburbs.

18. Mrs. Wang Pao Loa—Bible woman in the Kai Chow county.

19. Mrs. Wei—Bible woman and deaconess in the Kai Chow City Church.

20. Chang Li Te—Bible woman in the Chang Yuan country.

21. Mrs. Kao and Mrs. Tien—Volunteer workers in the Tsingfeng Church.

22. Mrs. Li Chun Chih—Bible woman in the Nanlos district.

23. Mrs. Sun Chung Sheng—Bible woman in Lung Wang Miao Church.

24. Mrs. Lu Poa Ai—Bible woman in the Taming Church.

25. Miss Hsieh Chun Chih—a consecrated single-lady of God's Kingdom.

Besides the above list of workers there are again as many, who are temporarily on home-leave, but who help along wherever they can. Its only a question of living that keeps them from full-time.

There are thirty-three churches in our mission field. The total membership of these is about 2,500. Besides these adult Christians, there are a large number of young people and children in these Christian homes.

Please choose definitely one worker for your object of prayer, then consecrate yourself for a daily intercession until a great deliverance shall come to China! Do not refuse this call across the Pacific. If you cannot give much time, you surely can and will give some time—even if it be only five minutes.

RELIEF NOTES

Cable Reports on French Conditions

Samuel Goering, who left England, March 18, and entered France with Henry Buller, returned to England, April 18. Brother Goering cabled the following message from London, April 19, regarding his investigation and contacts in France:

RETURNED WEDNESDAY. FOUND COMMITMENTS MADE FOR EIGHT HOMES. THREE OPERATING NOW WITH APPROXIMATELY 200 CHILDREN. ENTR' AIDE ASSIST EQUIPING PLACES. CAUTION AGAINST OVER EXPANSION. AGREED SUPPORTING PLAN IN GENERAL PENDING YOUR APPROVAL. INVESTIGATED WIDE AREA. CONDITIONS TRAGIC MANY PLACES. VISITED WIDMER, NUSSBAUMER, VOLKMAR, AND OTHERS FARTHER NORTH. IMPOSSIBLE VISIT GERBER. VOLKMAR WILL

Shipments Enroute to Paraguay and Middle East

A shipment, labeled for the Mennonite colonies in Paraguay, is valued at $2,575.95. It consists of medical supplies for Drs. Schmidt and Lohrentz, and books purchased for the Fernheim Bible School.

A shipment is also enroute to the Middle East. It contains shoes, soap, and clothing, weighing 20,520 pounds and valued at $16,240.22. This shipment had been processed at the Newton clothing center.

More Dutch Children Evacuated to England

Another camp has been opened in Sheffield, England, to care for Dutch children being evacuated from the liberated areas of the Netherlands. Peter and Freda Dyck, who are serving on the staff of a similar camp at Hull, England, informed Edna Hunsperger: "Another 500 children have arrived at Sheffield camp. Unfortunately thirty of the girl leaders and teachers had to stay behind (in the Netherlands) on account of their papers not being in order. This will mean a very serious handicap in the staffing of the camp owing to the labor program in this country."

Child Feeding Center Being Equipped at Itacurubi

Elizabeth Keeney is now at Itacurubi engaged in creating a feeding center for the school children of that area. Her letter of April 13, 1945, presents some problems that arise in establishing her work in Paraguay:

"But that about which I am most enthusiastic is Itacurubi. For it is here that I hope to set up the child feeding project in the school. True enough, the kitchen is a five-by-five-foot enclosure with no shelves, no tables, no chairs, nothing in it. The well is non-useable at the present time. There is no definite method for boiling the milk without scorching. There is no stove or oven for cooking. But we do have the full cooperation of teachers, colony administration, and the "directors" of the school. So with some planning, diligent work, and God's ever present strength and guidance—the children of Itacurubi will be fed!

Seek Clearer Policy Regarding Side Camps

Albert Gaeddert, director of Mennonite C.P.S. camps, together with C.P.S. representatives from other agencies, conferred with officials of Forest Service, National Park Service, and Soil Conservation Service, in San Francisco and Portland, regarding the anticipated expansion of side camps on the West Coast during the coming fire season. An effort is being made to work out a clearer policy regarding the administration of such units and to improve the management of the projects. These contacts with the government agencies were imperative in light of the shift of 500 men from the eastern camps to the western units, many of which will serve in side camps.

Unit in Oregon to Open

Selective Service has approved the setting up of a 20-man C.P.S. unit in Tillamook County, Oregon, for dairy farm service. Men to enter this county will be chosen from California and other western camps.

C.P.S. Cooking Schools Over

By the time this note is printed the two cooking schools conducted in Mennonite base camps will have ended. The school at North Fork finished their work April 15; the Luray school will close May 11. Men attending these schools received practically two months of supervised kitchen work and class room study in principles of cooking and nutrition. Twenty-seven campers were enrolled at North Fork and fifteen at Luray. Mrs. Jacob Goering and Mrs. Harry Wenger were in charge of the North Fork and Luray schools respectively. They were assisted by the dietitians from near-by base camps, by the business managers of the camps, and various other personnel. Members of the school are being assigned to base camps and side camps to serve as dietitians and cooks.

TO REMIND US

Our rural Vacation Bible Schools are now in session and soon our city Bible Schools will open their doors.

We wish to remind our churches that complete Vacation Bible School materials can now be purchased from the Bethel College book store and the Herald Publishing Company.

The ten-year Vacation Bible School course chosen by the Western District Committee, is an all-rosen course, published by the Old Mennonite Conference. The course is complete in teacher manuals, pictures, and record and certificate materials.—The Education Committee of the Western District Conference

BETHESDA CHURCH, HENDERSON, EXTENDS WELCOME

The Conference days are drawing nearer. The Northern District Conference will be held in the Bethesda Church May 27-30. All those planning to be present at the conference please notify the undersigned as soon as possible. Also state whether you are coming via bus, train or car. Due to the fact that the General Conference will follow the Northern District Conference we are hoping that many can make it possible to stop off at Henderson on their way to the General Conference. We welcome you all. In the name of the church, A. W. Friesen, Pastor.

TO DELEGATES AND VISITORS MIDDLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE, MAY 26-29, PULASKI MENNONITE CHURCH, PULASKI, IOWA

For the benefit of distant delegates and visitors planning to attend the Pulaski session, the local committee on transportation submits the following schedules as effective in this area at the present time.

Pulaski is on paved highway No. 2, seventy-five miles west of Burlington, Iowa, and fifty-seven miles west of Ft. Madison which is on the Santa Fe out of Chicago.

From Burlington to Pulaski the week day schedule by Burlington railroad is leave Burlington at 7:15 a.m.

From Ft. Madison to Puaski, the Burlington Trailways daily bus schedule is, leave Ft. Madison 9:00 a.m., 5:30 a.m., 5:49 p.m.

From Ft. Madison to Pulaski, the Arrow Coach bus line daily schedule is leave Ft. Madison 7:05 a.m., 5:30 p.m.

From Ottumwa to Pulaski, Arrow Coach lines daily, leave Ottumwa 10:45 a. m., 3:35 p. m.

Those who expect to go to Newton from Pulaski will find what appears to be a simple, direct route through Ft. Madison. The two local bus lines together offer five buses from Pulaski to Ft. Madison daily, and from Ft. Madison to Newton, direct on the Santa Fe, if you are informed, there are eight trains daily. The schedules in detail on this route to Newton which seems to be by far the easiest and best from here, will be posted in our church building.

The local committee will plan to meet all Pulaski busses on Saturday and to be helpful wherever possible.

JOTTINGS

Bergfelder Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: A C.P.S. quartet from Denison, Iowa, sang several selections during the morning worship of April 29. —Corr.

—A week-end rural life conference was held at the Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio, May 5, 6. William H. Stauffer discussed "The Romance of Rural Life," and "Mennonite Communities, Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." Winfield Fretz talked on "Helping Our Young People Get a Vocational Start in the Small Community," and "Christian Witnessing in the Rural Community." He also showed pictures of the Mennonites in Mexico. This church is planning to hold week-end conferences from time to time.

—Rev. P. P. Wedel, who suffered from a light stroke some time ago, wrote on April 30, "I have not occupied the pulpit since March 18. However, I plan to preach next Sunday, and then perhaps every other Sunday for some time."

—"Atrocities and Atrocities" was the subject of a sermon based on Amos 1:3-11 and preached by Rev. George Stoneback of Fairfield, Pa., on April 29. In the evening this church showed another film in the life of Paul series. It was on "The Grace of Forgiveness."

—Wayland, Iowa: A quartet from the C.P.S. camp at Denison, Iowa, gave a program in our church on April 15. The quartet was on a tour of churches in eastern Iowa.

—A report has it that Miss Aganetha Fast, who has been visiting the Fort Collins, Colorado, C.P.S. camp as Matron-at-Large, has had the misfortune of breaking her leg.

—Rev. Marvin Dirks, as well as Dr. P. A. Penner, is to speak at mission festival of the Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, according to the latest bulletin announcement. Halley's Pocket Bible Handbook has been recommended to the Sunday School teachers of this church.

—A new edition of The Story of the Mennonites by C. Henry Smith is to be printed.

—About 2,000 people attended the Bethel College Booster Program and heard Dr. Henry Hitt Crane lecture on "Celebrating Victory." There were also numbers by the college orchestra, by the a cappella choir and by a blind pianist. Admission was by invitation.

—Berne, Indiana: The offering on the morning of April 29 went for C.P.S. In the evening Rev. Gerald Stucky spoke on "The Meaning of Love," and at the following Wednesday night service Carl M. Lehman spoke of the C.P.S. work in Puerto Rico and showed colored slides of the work. Plenty of clothing is being gathered for M.C.C. relief.

—Christmas cards, hand-screened and tinselled by hand, will be on display at the coming General Conference, it is stated.

—The Alexanderwohl Church has "fellowship" meetings for the men in service when they come home on furlough. Rev. C. C. Wedel reports the men as saying "These hours of free social gatherings help us as nothing else."

—Bethel College Alumni Program is to be held on May 28 this year. The business session is to begin at 2:30 p. m. in the Student Union Room.

—Second Church, Beatrice, Nebraska put the Sunday School statistics of the last quarter to good use by showing in the church bulletin the per cent attendance and the collection for each member of each class for the quarter.

—Emmanuel Church, Moundridge, Kansas, is putting special emphasis upon prayer by the whole church for the welfare of the church. The pastor opened the emphasis with a sermon and an announcement in the bulletin for prayer during the week. The program also included pastoral visits to each home of the church during the week. The emphasis during the second week is to be on confession and reconciliation. The specific objective for the first week was "... that the spirit of Christ may have preeminence in the life of each member and that as a church we may work together in unity and love."

—Wadsworth, Ohio. At the close of the morning services, Sunday May 6, Rev. Smucker startled the congregation, by asking that we accept his resignation after the services of July 1. The church council at their meeting Monday evening, May 7, accepted the resignation of Brother Smucker with regret and wished him Godspeed in any new work that he takes up, including his further studies at Princeton, New Jersey and senior deacon George W. Brown was asked to contact prospective ministers to succeed Bro-

GENERAL CONFERENCE

(After considerable study and repeated revision, the following two "Suggestions" are to be presented to the next session of General Conference for consideration. They are being published now in our two church papers so that delegates may have time to weigh them.)

General Conference Recognition of Organizations and Institutions

(A suggested procedure)

The General Conference has found it advisable to discover ways of identifying individual ministers and congregations as belonging to the Conference fold, and activities such as missions, relief, publication, etc., as being part and parcel of its work. In order to avoid confusion, would it not be equally desirable for the General Conference to have some recognized procedure whereby organizations and institutions (such as hospitals, Bible Societies, orphanages, mission stations, schools, etc.) could establish official relationship with the Conference by making written application for such approval and affiliation, including the privilege to solicit financial support from General Conference congregations?

Such application should be made through the respective General Conference Board or standing Committee which is charged with the oversight of the general type of service the applying organization or institution represents. If this Conference body, after examining the aim and work of the applying organization, or institution, favors such recognition it shall report its findings with recommendations to the Executive Committee of the General Conference for general review. If the Executive Committee, after careful consideration, also favors such recognition it shall report its findings and recommendations to the General Conference in session for consideration and action. Naturally, Conference congregations will wish to abide by Conference action regarding the recognition of organizations and institutions.

In order to properly weigh the advisability of such General Conference recognition, consideration should be given to such questions as:

1. What is the proposed aim, scope and character of the work, and how does it harmonize with General Conference aims and methods of work?

2. Is there sufficient need for the proposed organization or institution in our Conference enterprise?

3. To what extent would its work overlap with that of organizations and institutions already serving our Conference or its potential service area?

4. Is the Conference financially able to carry the proposed work?

5. Does the organization or institution profess wholehearted adherence to the General Conference constitution and work, and to the Statement of Doctrine as approved by it in 1941?

6. Is the organization or institution prepared to arrange for a majority representation on its Board of Control to be nominated, elected, or appointed by our General or District Conferences?

7. In general, how would recognition of the organization or institution under consideration affect the best interest and the peaceful upbuilding of Christ's cause in our Conference and among our churches and people?

Ministerial Ordination

(Suggested General Conference Qualifications and Procedure)

Frequently ministers and others inquire as Conference regulations concerning ordinations. Our Foreign Mission Board and several of our district conferences have already undertaken to set up certain standards for those who are to be ordained. A study of this important question resulted in the following suggestions for clarification and future guidance.

1. Any person looking forward to ordination for Christian work needs to be a consecrated Christian who feels the call of God to do the work of a minister of Jesus Christ.

2. Young people who later expect to work in our Conference at home or abroad, are urged to attend our Mennonite schools so that their training will be in line with Mennonite faith and practice, and that they may become acquainted with those with whom they are to work.

3. In the light of the needs of our time, which call for an increasing measure of general training, it is recommended that, if possible, a general college course or its equivalent be completed before ordination. Further special training for Christian service at home or abroad, is recommended whenever possible.

4. Ordination should take place only after a person has been appointed to a definite field of service.

5. Before ordination, the candidate should have served in a church, or churches, under the supervision of some constituted conference or church authority for about one year if possible.

6. Letters of recommendation or statements regarding the candidate, his work and his fitness, should be available from each of the following:

a. A statement from the candidate's home church indicating his standing as a church member.

b. A statement from the church or station at which the candidate has last served, regarding the type and quality of his services.

c. A brief autobiography together with a statement of the candidate's Christian experience leading to his call to the ministry.

d. A statement from the schools the individual attended above the eighth grade, including a customary transcript, also other records from school files pertaining to health, mental tests, personality traits, extra-curricular activities, and so forth.

e. A statement from a recognized physician regarding the candidate's health.

f. A written statement from the candidate as to his agreement (1) with the Statement of Doctrine as approved by the General Conference in 1941, (2) with the Mennonite peace principles, and (3) with the work of our Conference, its Boards and institutions; and his willingness to support the same.

7. Each Congregation, District Conference Committee, or General Conference Board, after having obtained the above records and papers, is urged to arrange for a personal interview with the candidate before deciding on or making arrangements for his ordination.

8. The ordination proper should be performed preferably in the candidate's home church or congregation he is then serving, by the proper church or conference authorities.

9. The candidate shall supply the General Conference secretary with a complete record of all material listed in paragraph six above pertaining to his qualifications.

10. Any General Conference minister who hereafter ordains an evangelist, minister, missionary or elder, shall within thirty days report such ordination to the General Conference secretary, giving the following information:

a. The full name and address of the candidate.

b. The conference church of which the candidate is a member.

c. What conference congregation, board or committee has approved of or authorized the ordination.

d. The office to which the candidate was ordained—evangelist, minister, missionary, etc.

e. The purpose or the work and place for which this candidate was ordained.

f. The signature and post office address of the person who officiated at the ordination.

A Vision of the Future

I hear in the heavens above me
The sound of a music strain
The sound of the motors leading
The West-bound Mission plane.

I feel in the air that surrounds me
God's Spirit, a moving force;
That guides the people around me
Along a righteous course.

The Prince of the air has been conquered
He leads the sheep no longer
They follow the living shepherd
Daily growing stronger.

I see in the Mission Chapel
A story on silver screen
A story of love in action
Of heathen now made clean.

I see there men and women of faith
Who have leaped the ocean wide
Who have healed the broken hearted
On every country side.

The Lepers are unclean no longer
The cripples walk on their feet
The blind now have open vision
The dumb sing music sweet.

I see the prison doors opening
The captives are now set free;
Love is overcoming evil
By Jesus' Great Decree.

I see in the future before me
A new kind of public school
Where the ways of Christ are studied
And His Word is the rule.

New Men of Vision are now ruling
The destinies of mankind,
Men who live by faith and pray'r
Pure in heart and mind.

No longer patriots are shouting
And National Anthems ring
For loyalty has been transferred To Christ the World-wide King.

The Coming General Conference

Extensive preparations are being made for the 'Thirtieth Session of the General Conference, which is to convene at North Newton, Kansas, from 9 A.M., May 31 through Tuesday, June 5. A welcome program is scheduled for the evening of May 30. (See Mennonite of April 10 for Conference program.) Several hundred delegates will be housed on the Bethel College Campus; others will be accommodated in private homes in Newton. Meals will be served in the large dining hall of Memorial Hall, where the conference sessions will be held. For the first time in its history, the Conference will convene in a Mennonite "hall."

Delegates will have the opportunity to visit surrounding Mennonite communities, the Kauffman Museum right across the road from Memorial Hall, Conference Headquarters at 722 Main, Newton, the Mennonite Historical Library at North Newton, the Newton and Goessel hospitals and other points of interest.

"Christ in All" is the Conference motto. To the extent that this very appropriate thought is expressed in those who attend the conference, to that extent will God's will be done at this session. Much will depend upon the quality and quantity of work done by boards and committees preparatory to the conference. But when once met for business, receptivity to the direction of Holy God, who is love and light, is of supreme importance.

Pictoscript Is Successful

Some time ago we referred to Pictoscript which is the picture version of the Scriptures. Intended as supplementary material for Sunday School, it uses the "comic-style" picture and caption for telling Bible stories. The first quarterly set, which came out shortly before April 1, centered on "Stories Jesus Told." The selection, telling, and picturing of these stories was done in a very appealing way. Pictoscript is issued by Young Readers Press, Inc., Steinway Hall, 113 West Fifty-Seventh Street, New York, 19, N. Y.

A Time For Sobriety

Notable was the sobriety of the American people after the news came that armed conflict had ceased in the European area of the war. Perhaps, the disillusionment with the results of the First World War and the terrible losses suffered during this war had something to do with the mood of the people. Sobriety is befitting at such a time as this. This hell in Europe, which we have called war, has not been a prayer of "Thy Kingdom Come; Thy will be done." Christ made it clear that His kingdom would not come by such activities as we have witnessed. No wonder that men are sober. We have sown hellish deeds. What will the harvest be? Of the fact that bad seed will produce bad fruit there can be no doubt. Revolution, mass murder, starvation, disease, hatred, etc., are facts which follow war. Where darkness has reigned in men's hearts, this war will bring more darkness. The pain and terror of this war will drag many down into the depths of bitterness, agony, and despair.

But there is also a hopeful side, which we hope will triumph. "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Those who give their paramount loyalty to Him, who is Love, can let the pain of this war spur them on to new service for the King of Kings. To the degree that men love God and prove themselves loyal to his purpose can this war be utilized for good. This terrible sinfulness should make men more repentant and receptive than ever. The terrible futility of war should make the way of cooperation more imperative than ever. The darkness of war can accentuate the light if we love the light.

Need For Faith

Without faith on the part of men world cooperation cannot come. Especially does it behoove those who call themselves Christians to exercise faith in the "dream of San Francisco." It does not take much to be cynical or pessimistic. But neither does God grant great results on such a basis. Morgan Harris in Motive challenges us by writing, "Ask yourself: Had I been alive then, would I have. . .voted for Lincoln in 1860?. . .helped establish the Union in 1787-9?. . .given of my gold to finance Columbus? Do you think you would have? The majority did not vote for Lincoln. Patrick Henry and many others voted against the Constitution. Columbus pleaded for ten years before he got the $150,000, his voyage cost—and he put up a third of that himself. What makes us hope that we would have been on the side of Discovery, Freedom, Union. . . then? How does your record read? What are you doing now for a constitution for the United Nations?" In regard to some people who had little faith in what Christ could do, it is stated: "There he could not do many miracles owing to their lack of faith." How can a modern miracle of cooperation in peaceful ways come unless Christians the world over ask in good faith for it?

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

New Worker in New Location

For the sake of efficiency and coordination in the Lord's work, a number of missionaries in the Kentucky mountain section labor together and in a missionary council decide on the location of the workers, so that the field might be best covered. This is an arrangement similar to the mission council in India, in our field.

Recently it was decided that Miss Elsie Pfister set up her headquarters in Incline, Kentucky. Her co-worker, Miss Margaret Slotter, remains at the same place where she had worked for some time, Hoskinson, Kentucky. These two workers conduct Schools, teach Bible stories, and Bible memory verses in the public schools.

Church-Home Bought

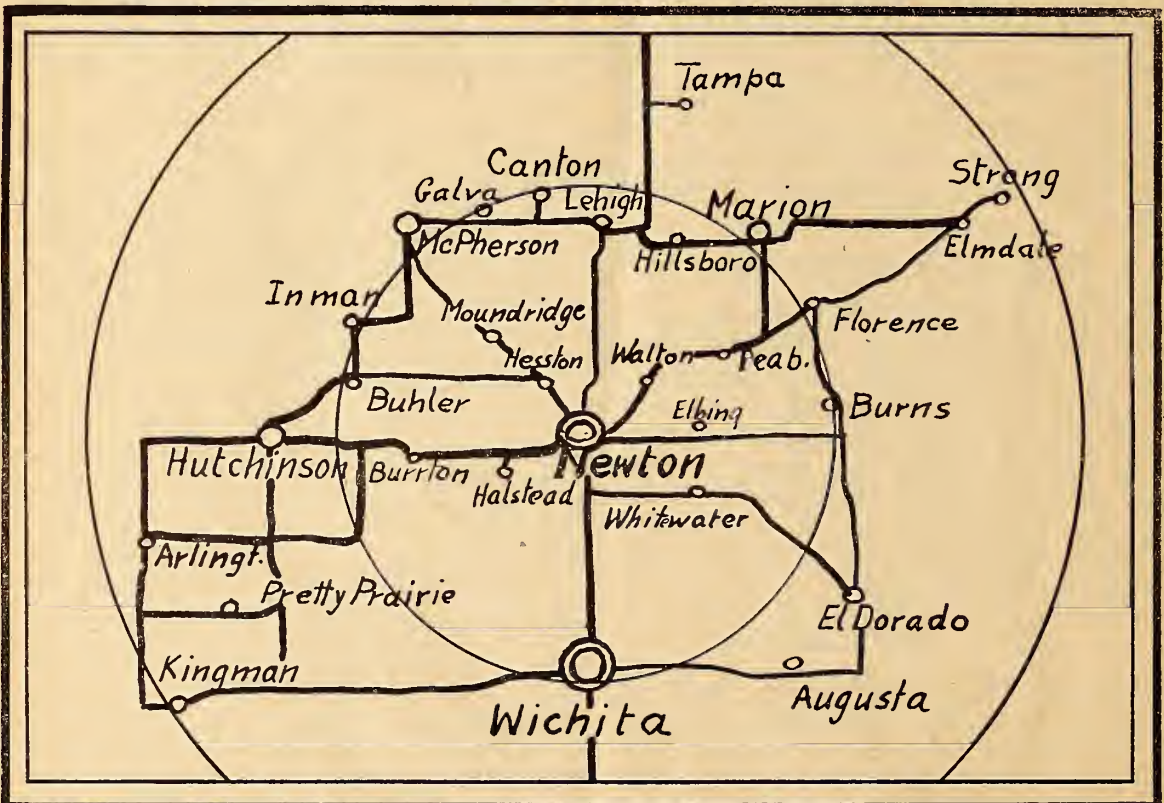

The United Mennonite Church, Toronto, Ontario, has been worshipping in rented quarters since September, 1943. The quarters were quite satisfactory for the regular Sunday Services, but it was difficult to hold evening meetings. In February when they had a week of meetings, with Rev. J. J. Plenert as speaker, they had to meet in several different halls and one night the service could not be held because they could not secure a place.

The group was drawn together into a unit in the face of the difficulties that confronted them, and when they prayed unitedly and earnestly the Lord opened a place for them. The Committee that was appointed as an outgrowth of the series of meetings, soon found a good brick building that is to serve as a church home on the first floor and pastor's home on second floor. The building is in a good residential section of the city and can easily be reached by the Mennonites in the city. The local group through their trustees bought the building for $6,000. The Ontario Mennonite churches promised to make contributions for this building, and the Board of Home Missions was able to grant them a loan.

Some alterations are to be made, but the local men

Emphasizing the Work of the General Conference

By John E. Fretz

Attending a business men's luncheon recently, I was surprised when instead of the customary speaker, four splendid young men arose and introduced themselves as members of the Mormon faith, sang a number of hymns, showed several reels of motion pictures depicting the constructive work being done by the Mormon church, and in conclusion each gave a ringing testimony as to what it meant to him to be a member of that faith.

Undoubtedly, their sincerity and zeal made a favorable impression, but it also made one squirm in the seat and wince now and then, at the realization that here once again, a strange doctrine, alien to our interpretation of Christianity, was being presented for consideration of all who would hear and listen to it, while we of the Mennonite faith, with a far greater testimony to give, keep so strangely silent.

What I mean to say is that the whole work of the General Conference is a worthy one and needs to be emphasized to the point where the average church member is aware of its extent and purpose. As a layman I have long felt the need of more definite contact between the various Conference boards and the local church member. (Brother H. A. Fast served in this capacity under the name of "Field Secretary" several years ago.) Since this is such a splendid link between the Conference boards and the local churches... a means to keep up constant interest and stimulate activity on the part of the lay constituents and to make the work of the Boards more effective, much thought should be given to it.

In his presentation of the work, aims and extent of activities of the Conference, Brother Fast used charts, etc., as a visual aid in bringing his messages, and to this may well be added such additional material as motion picture films depicting the work of C.P.S. and relief work, young peoples' retreats and by all means our missionary work in all fields at home and abroad. The representatives or field Secretaries themselves must be "missionaries" in every sense of the term, with a zeal for preaching and teaching the gospel and arousing members to a sense of their stewardship of life.

If, being a Christian today means anything, it must mean everything! One cannot help but feel that such contact work would encourage our young folks to dedicate their lives to the Lord's service; it would give each one an "over-all" picture of the church at work, and prove to our faithful workers in the mission fields that we at home are just as active about the Master's business even though we have not left our communities. It is simply the application of the old truth that we must sow before we can reap.

In the field of our publication work there is a definite need for a small Mennonite Church History for our boys and girls. Perhaps it could be written as a "Story Of Our Forefathers." Certainly it should be presented as a narrative so that "story telling" would be made easy for the individual child or the teacher who uses it. If the cost of preparation were too great for our Board to undertake at this time, perhaps it could be published as a joint venture with other branches of the Mennonites.

Another valuable publication would be to have our Board collect and put into book form, the many interesting incidents and experiences reported by our missionaries and frequently published in the Foreign Mission section of The Mennonite, by Rev. Richert. Such material would be invaluable in teaching our boys and girls the application of "The Great Commission" and serve to prepare them for the work of the church in the years ahead.

In the matter of our Young People's Union, it would be helpful if each of the Conference Boards would prepare material (at least once each year) adaptable for meeting programs. This material could include an explanation of the functions of that Board or any special project or work being done during that period. Constant contact with the work of the Y. P. should be kept up at all times, since this work may well be considered an "understudy" for all our Conference activities.

The Evangelism Committee is to be congratulated for its publication of the booklet Power through Prayer where emphasis is rightly placed upon prayer, the greatest need of the Church. It should prove a blessing to many.

Undoubtedly, much thought must have been given to these problems by those concerned. The Mennonite is doing a fine work as a medium and so also are the members of the various Boards as individuals, particularly in their local conferences. Since most of these men are full time pastors or teachers precious little time is available for any additional duties.

MARIE FAST EVIDENTLY LOST AT SEA

Last week we reported that Marie Fast had been reported missing, presumably lost at sea. According to the latest information there is only the very faintest hope that she may still be alive. Marie Fast, Dr. Richard Yoder and four other UNBRA workers had accompanied some Jugoslav refugees from Egypt to Jugoslavia. On the return trip the ship suffered an explosion. Miss Fast and a British officer were thrown into the sea when one end of a life boat that was being lowered gave way. No other boat managed to take them in, and they disappeared in the darkness of the night. We hope to bring more detail about this sad tragedy in the near future.

History of the Deer Creek Mennonite Church

Sunday, August 27, 1944, marked the forty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Deer Creek Mennonite Church.

The first Mennonite families came to the Deer Creek vicinity shortly after the opening of the Cherokee strip in 1893. The first families were those of Daniel Krehbiel, Jacob Haury, Menno Beudler, and Henry Wicke. Mr. and Mrs. Wicke were not Mennonites at the time of settling here but joined later. All four families came from the Halstead and Moundridge communities in Kansas.

Within the next few years other Mennonite families settled here, coming mostly from Kansas and Iowa. In the spring of 1898 the town of Deer Creek was laid out almost adjoining to the farms on which some of the Mennonites had settled.

The group immediately felt the need of spiritual fellowship and worship. They met for services in a school house a mile west of Deer Creek. Visiting pastors came to serve them from time to time among whom were Rev. Christian Krehbiel, Rev. Valentine Krehbiel, and Rev. Wilhelm Galle of Kansas, Rev. Christian Ramseyer of Orienta, Oklahoma, then traveling minister for the Oklahoma churches, and Rev. John Baer of Summerfield, Illinois.

In the summer of 1899 the group felt strong enough to organize as a congregation. On August 27, 1899, a meeting was held, presided over by Rev. Wilhelm Galle of Moundridge, Kansas, and the Deer Creek Mennonite Church was formally organized. A charter was drawn up and signed by those who wished to become members of the newly organized church. A short while later a constitution was adopted by the congregation.

The charter members were Mr. and Mrs. Dan Krehbiel, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Dester, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Haury, Mr. and Mrs. John Staufer, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Dester, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dester, Mr. and Mrs. Justus Hohmann, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Hohmann, Mr. and Mrs. Adam Lugenbill, J. C. Peters, Christian Eberle, and Christian Goebel.

The congregation first held services in the school house one mile west of Deer Creek, and later in the school house in Deer Creek. In 1902 the group built a church house in Deer Creek and it was dedicated to the worship of God, our Heavenly Father, by Rev. Manassas Moyer, the pastor of the congregation at the time. In the winter of 1931 the building was enlarged and re-dedicated on Easter Day, April 5, 1931.

The first regular pastor of this congregation was Rev. Christian Goebel who was elected from the membership first as evangelist and on the day of organization was ordained as pastor by Rev. Wilhelm Galle. In order to more fully prepare himself for the pastoral duties, Rev. Goebel attended Bethel College, but ill health soon overtook him, and he was never able to serve the congregation in the capacity as a pastor.

The following pastors have served the congregation.

As ill health prevented Brother Goebel from serving as pastor, Rev. Manassas Moyer and family moved here from Fortuna, Missouri, and Rev. Moyer served as pastor until his sudden death on December 7, 1903.

On February 14, 1904, Brother J. C. Peters was called from the congregation to serve as evangelist and was ordained to this office by Rev. H. R. Voth. The following year the congregation elected him to serve as pastor and he was ordained to this office by Rev. Voth on July 30, 1905. Rev. Peters served as pastor until July, 1908, when he accepted a call to a work in Canada.

In July, 1908, Brother J. F. Moyer was called as evangelist from the congregation and was installed as evangelist by Rev. Peters. On September 5, 1909, Rev. Moyer was ordained as pastor by Rev. H. R. Voth and served as resident pastor until the fall of 1911, when he left to attend Bethel College. He continued to serve the congregation from time to time until the spring of 1912 when he resigned.

The congregation extended a call to Rev. John Lichti of Lucein, Oklahoma. On September 29, 1912, Rev. Lichti took up the duties as pastor of the congregation and served until August, 1920, when he resigned to become pastor of the Medford Mennonite Church.

For an interval of a year and four months the church had no resident pastor and was served by several visiting pastors.

On December 4, 1921, a call was extended to Rev. Gerhard Friesen. He accepted the call and began to minister as pastor in March, 1922. In August, 1927, he resigned to take up further study in Witmarsum Seminary.

The above two pictures show the church and the parsonage.

A call was then extended to Rev. A. S. Bechtel of Summerfield, Illinois, who took up the pastoral work here on April, 29, 1928, and served until March 14, 1937 when he resigned to accept the call to the Mennonite church at Hanston, Kansas.

The present pastor began to serve here on September 5, 1937.

The congregation has never had a rapid growth, but rather a continual one. In the course of years since its beginning a number of families have moved here and moved away again. The present membership is 115.

The church has an active Sunday School; Christian Endeavor Society which meets every other Sunday evening; Women's Mission Society which meets the first Thursday of every month except in July and August and a church board which meets once every quarter.

Much interest has always been shown in foreign and home mission work. Two from the congregation have gone to the foreign mission field, namely Herbert Dester and Mrs. E. G. Kaufman, formerly Hazel Dester. Three have been called as pastors, namely Christian Goebel, J. C. Peters, and J. F. Moyer.

Throughout the years since the organization of the church a keen interest has always been shown in Christian education, and a large number of the young people have attended schools of our own denomination, especially Bethel Academy and Bethel College.

Looking ahead into the future years may God continue to bless this congregation, and may those who worship here find that inner peace and joy in Christ and heed His words found in Matthew 16:24. "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me."

Meditations on the Mennonites

By J. Winfield Fretz

A GOOD NAME

The wise and the God-fearing man knows the value of a good name. He knows that it is harder to establish a reputation than it is to lose it. He knows the truth of the ancient proverb that a good name is to be chosen in preference to all other human treasures. What applies to an individual also applies to a church or a religious denomination. For the sake of reminding ourselves that the Mennonite Church enjoys a good name in America I wish to relate two short incidents, one from history and one from a recent experience of a friend. These incidents should humble us and make us ask whether we personally have added or detracted from the reputation of the church to which we belong.

Farmers Not Fighters

In his Memoirs, Peter Jansen, a prominent Nebraska Mennonite of fifty years ago tells of a personal visit he once made to the White House during the administration of President McKinley. A matter of business took Jansen and several other Mennonites there. While at the White House the President introduced the delegation to a number of famous Americans of the time. One of them was General William T. Sherman. The President in introducing the Mennonites said to the general: "General, these people are of no use to you; they won't fight." General Sherman smilingly answered: "That is all right, Mr. President, we have seen too much of fighting. We want people who can populate and cultivate the prairies of the west."

How Those People Hate War

A young woman, an elderly gentleman, and a young man were standing in the aisle of a crowded train. All were strangers to each other. The conversation drifted to religion and churches. The young lady intimated that she had been attending a Mennonite Church in the little Kansas town where she had been living. The elderly gentleman said he was a minister in the Church of the Nazarine and knew something about Mennonites in his own city. Said he: "The Mennonites are fine people but my, how they hate war." And then as an after thought he added: "We hate war too but we can fight when we have to fight." There was a momentary halt in the conversation and then the young man spoke up and identified himself as a Mennonite and as one who hates war. He was a CPS man on his way home to spend a short furlough. There was another period of silence; this time a prolonged period. It seemed as if the elderly minister were weighing the unconscious testimony he had given. The young man too was weighing the statement. He was the only man from his church in CPS. The rest of his friends in the church were in the army and the minister and the congregation militantly opposed to CPS and vigorously supporting the present war.

A VALUABLE CONTRIBUTION

Mrs. Jacob J. Regier, Newton, made a valuable contribution to the Bethel College Mennonite Historical Library. Her father was the well known Elder Gustav Harder (1856-1923) of Whitewater. During his forty years in the ministry he preached many a sermon, but only for Sunday worship services but also for funerals, weddings, birthdays, etc. These sermons, all neatly written and preserved, were given to the Historical Library. They contain a wealth of historic material.

Tentative Survey of Conference Attendance

Local Committee Requests Cooperation

Due to critical problems pertaining to both food and lodging the Local Conference Committee is attempting a survey of probable attendance.

The local Committee is printing the coupon below, in all Conference papers and other publications in the earnest hope that everyone (delegate or visitor) who plans to attend even though his plans are uncertain will fill in the coupon, turn it in to their pastor or send it direct to the Local Conference Committee.

Pastors, upon receiving these coupons, are earnestly requested to send them to the address below by May 26.

This is not a registration. It does not bind you to attend. It merely gives the women in charge of food preparation and lodging the information they need.

Place a check-mark in the square of the appropriate day.

1. Which days of the conference do you plan to take breakfast at the Conference Dining Hall?
2. Which days of the conference do you plan to take noon meal at the Conference Dining Hall?
3. Which days of the conference do you plan to take the evening meal at the Conference Dining Hall?
4. Which nights do you wish the Conference to reserve a room for you?

Food rationing points, shortage of gasoline, and bedding seem to make this almost essential.

Prices of meals the last conference were: Mornings, 20-25 cents; noons, 40 cents; evenings, 35 cents. They will be somewhat higher this conference. Dormitory rooms on the campus will be 50 cents per person per night.

For accommodations in private homes the following prices are suggested: (arrangements to be made with the host) Rooms: per person per night.50

REMEMBER: Give this coupon to your pastor or mail direct to: B. Barga, Chairman, Committee on Registration, North Newton, Kansas.

Wed. May *30	Thur. May 31	Fri. June 1	Sat. June 2	Sun. June 3	Mon. June 4	Tue. June 5	Wed. June 6

Are you coming as a delegate? Yes _____ No _____
 Is your coming reasonably certain, conditions permitting? Yes _____ No _____
 What day and time do you plan to arrive? _____

Local Student Peace Group

North Newton, Kansas

On the average ten students participate in the local Student Peace Group. Our projects have been limited, but we have derived much pleasure from discussions. The group is sponsored by Mrs. Verna Goering who, through her recent experience in the C.P.S. units, is very capable of discussing and interpreting some of the questions we have dealt with.

These informal meetings take place in various homes on the campus. The discussions since Christmas have centered mainly around the current questions of the Peace Time Conscription Bill. Mr. Roy Henry presented a book review on War, Peace and Non-Resistance by Guy Hershberger. With the valuable assistance of Rev. and Mrs. Lester Hostetler we had a lively discussion on the pros and cons of peace time conscription. To supplement this discussion, we had Mr. Wilis Rich present to give us the positive aspect of this question. Mr. Rich suggested a practical two-year service plan which would involve only those who volunteered for the projects, and thus would differ in that way from the alternative service plan in which all must partake that are called. This proposal has since received considerable thought and deliberation. Later in the winter, Dr. Langenwalter re-inforced our immature conclusions by probing into this question with pertinent scriptural passages.

During the week-end of March 10th our group accepted an invitation from the M.C.C. to listen in on their conference concerning the Peace Time Conscription Bill. We found that the views of M.C.C. and C.P.S. delegates, who have studied the complications of the bill and weighed the question, added to our insufficient conclusions.

In actual projects we served the college and academy students a chili supper and forwarded the proceeds to a Negro school at which a few C.P.S. men are stationed. A few Saturday afternoons were devoted at the Clothing Depot in Newton to packing, mending and cleaning garments.

Our group senses the need for group education in all communities. As college students we seem to be able to locate many troubles but find it difficult to actually combat the need. So to help clarify our thinking, we are meeting in such a group in order that we might acquaint ourselves with the difficulties before us. When facing these problems mentally now, it will cause us to think conditions through more rationally when we actually encounter them.

We find I Timothy 4:11-16 (American Translation) a very fitting thought for our group.

"This is what you must urge and teach. Let no man look down on you because you are young, but set those who believe an example in speech, conduct, love, faith and purity. Until I come, devote yourself to the public reading of the scripture, preaching and teaching. Do not neglect the gift you have, that was given you with predictions of your work, when the elders laid their hands upon you. Cultivate these things, devote yourself to them, so that everyone will see your progress. Look out for yourself and for your teaching. Persevere in your work, for if you do you will save both yourself and those who listen to you."

PLEA FOR WORLD ORGANIZATION TO SHORTEN THE HORRORS OF WAR

The sub-joined Minute, adopted by the two Philadelphia Yearly Meetings of the Religious Society of Friends, in joint session on Saturday evening, March 24, 1945, was referred to the officers of Friends' Peace Committee for distribution. It is sent to you for your information. The Minute follows:

"The two Philadelphia Yearly Meetings of the Religious Society of Friends in joint session on Third Month 24th, 1945, are deeply moved by the ruthless bombing of cities in Europe and Asia resulting in the death of hundreds of thousands of defenseless civilians, including women and children. These bombings have revealed more clearly than ever the utter savagery and frightfulness of modern war. But the injury and suffering and death of the victims of these bombings are by no means the only evil, terrible as these sufferings are. For ourselves as part of the Christian Church we are deeply and contritely concerned at the moral callousness in our own country which permits such descents into barbarism with scarcely a protest from those who profess to be followers of Christ, the Prince of Peace. It is becoming increasingly evident that the war method of combating evil deadens our consciences and results in a constant lowering of our moral standards. The very evils against which our country fights have infected our own lives. We appeal to all men everywhere to use their influence to hasten the ending of this carnage by urging the leaders of the United Nations to announce peace terms so reasonable that they will command the confidence and support of the whole world. We dedicate ourselves once more to the removal of the causes of war and to the organization of the world for peace on the basis of justice and cooperation."

YOUTH JOTTINGS

YOU'LL BE GLAD YOU DID

The work being done by Civilian Public Service men in mental hospitals is described in the Anniversary Review, published by members of C.P.S. Unit No. 93, Harrisburg State Hospital, Harrisburg, Pa. The emphasis of this large sixty-four page booklet centers around the care of mental patients. Many interesting photographs vividly illustrate various aspects of mental hospital work. Writers include not only C.P.S. men, but also the hospital superintendent, a psychiatrist, a medical doctor, a registered nurse, and other specially qualified individuals. It is professional and accurate, with the Christian point of view predominating throughout. All who have an interest in the activities of C.P.S. men in mental hospitals will find this booklet very interesting and informative.

Get your copy of this fine booklet by sending your name and address with your remittance to Gerhard M. Peters, C.P.S. Unit No. 93, Harrisburg State Hospital, Harrisburg, Pa. The price is $1.00 per copy, or eighty-five cents each in lots of ten or more. Order your copy now; you'll be glad you did!

TO DO WORK AMONG MIGRANTS

North Newton, Kansas: Katharine Andreas is planning to work among agricultural migrants in one of the North Central states this summer. This is under the sponsorship of the Mennonite Women's Service Committee, which is working together with the Home Missions Council of North America in this project. A worker's conference will be held in Benton Harbor, Michigan, June 4-9. From this conference new workers are sent out as assistants to regular workers in the field. Workers are to help employers, churches, other community agencies, and the migrants themselves in providing a more adequate standard of living for the migrant.

—The Walton Mennonite Christian Endeavor Society had a special program Sunday evening, May 13. The program committee arranged for a "Play-night" in which old and young took part in wholesome recreation. The little children enjoyed playing outside. Others played ping-pong and the older folks tested their wits on checkers and monopoly and other wholesome games. At 10:00 o'clock, the ladies of the Mission Society served refreshments of cocoa, sandwiches and cookies. A wholesome Christian fellowship was enjoyed by all. Members of the program committee are Mrs. George Koehn, Ervin Peters and Duaine Ruesser.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By David L. Habegger, Busby, Montana

—"Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: No man cometh unto the Father, but by me." John 14:6. God is revealed in many places beside the Bible. He is revealed in the way we live or in the way our fellow Christians live. The Christian life is often referred to as the way in the Bible. God is also revealed in truth. The philosophers are always seeking truth, and many find God revealed therein. Life reveals God. The biologists who study various types of Life can see the powers of the God who produced life. But even with all of these revelations, one must still come to Christ and accept his salvation to come into the presence of the Father.

—"But by the grace of God I am what I am." I Cor. 15:10a. Today we often hear of the "selfmade man." Men who in a worldly sense have made themselves rich and have by their own achievements climbed the social ladder. Are such men the type that should be pointed out to others as successful in life? Have they really accomplished something of a lasting worth? The Apostle Paul knew where to put the credit for all that he was and for all that he had accomplished. The grace of God working in a man that is willing to be used of God can accomplish much. Where do we truthfully place the credit for what we are and what we have done?

—"Let no man despise thy youth; but be thou an example of the believers in word, in conversation, in charity, in spirit, in faith, in purity." I Timothy 4:12. So often young people are timid and afraid of criticism from their elders that it takes a long time for them to accomplish much. Here Timothy is told not to be ashamed of his youth, but to stand out and be an example. We all know that we would not want someone to follow us in all details as to what we say, and how we say it, in our acts of charity; in the spirit in which we do things, the faith we show in God and our fellowmen, and in purity of thought, speech, and living. Youth is the time to start on the right road in all things and to try to exceed all that has been done before us.

—"Abstain from all appearance of evil." I Thess. 5:22. Many people have a motto or a verse to guide them through life. Here Paul gives one which will help many people who wonder how far they can go into something and still not do wrong. In this we should also take into consideration other people's views. If we do something that may cause someone to stumble, are we not to be held accountable? Or we might say, "Am I my brother's keeper?" The true Christian must be concerned about his fellow brethren and try to uphold them in the faith as well as walk uprightly and humbly before God himself.

—“How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, . . .” Romans 10:15b. The good news of Christ our Saviour does bring peace into the heart, but it should do more than that. It should bring peace into one’s life. We should be at peace with ourselves which is felt in our hearts. We should be at peace with our brothers and kindred which is manifested in the way we treat them. We should be at peace with all people, even our so-called enemies, which will also be revealed in the way we treat them and by the spirit of Christ within us. If we have the peace within us, we should be actively at peace with all men.

—“Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.” John 8:32. This verse is often quoted by many people. It seems as if it is taken for granted that anyone can be set free by being told the truth. This verse is not the complete sentence in itself, as the verse preceding it says that Jesus was talking to those that believed on him. Here Jesus said, “If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free.” It now sounds reasonable that the believers shall know the truth and thus shall be set free from all besetting sins. The rest of the chapter shows that many were told the truth but were not made free. Being told something does not bring the knowing of it. The truth shall be revealed when we continue to study and live the word of God.

—“And the Lord, he it is that doth go before thee; he will be with thee, he will not fail thee, neither forsake thee: fear not, neither be dismayed.” Duet. 31:8. To the students that are graduating or leaving school to go into some life work, this promise is very fitting. But this promise need not be only for those that are beginning, but also for all true believers in God. When we are in the valley of gloom or despair, we should realize that God does not forsake his own, but that he is willing to help us if we but follow his guiding light. “Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path.” Psalm 119:105. We can turn to the word of God and after reading it we should meditate and pray, asking God that we may have the strength to do his will. Then we will “fear not” neither be dismayed.”

—“Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.” Matt. 6:9b How often our prayers lack the praise and honour due our God. If he is willing to watch over us day and night, is willing to protect us from all evil and harm, is willing to stay by us when we weaken so he might strengthen us, is willing to do whatsoever we ask in his name and all the other countless things that he does without our asking, should we not praise him. We should have as our aim and our goal the verse in Psalm 34:1. “I will bless the Lord at all times: his praise continually be in my mouth.”

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

MESSAGE FROM REV. AND MRS.
A. L. JANTZEN

Greetings in the name of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ to all of you who shared our joys and trials with us through your interest and your prayers. “Blessed be God, even the Father to our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort; who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God. Who delivered us from so great a death, and doth deliver; . . . ye also helping together by prayer for us, that for the gift bestowed upon us by the means of many persons thanks may be given by many on our behalf.” II Cor. 1:3,4,10,11.

We herewith express our sincere gratitude to all of you who have so faithfully upheld us with your prayers. “More has been wrought through prayer than this world has ever dreamed of.” “The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.” We have experienced the truth of this over and over again. Word comes to us from my individuals and groups to the effect that “we have prayed for you daily,” or “at every prayer meeting.” May we assure you that we have felt the effect of your prayers many times, and only in eternity will we be able to see the full effects of mutual intercession. May we assure you, too, that we never ceased to pray for you.

Prayer is more than a psychological reaction. There is a God who hears our prayers, who wants to be asked, even though He knows what we need before we ask Him. But because He knows what we need—far better than we know it—He can do for us “far abundantly above all that we can ask or think.”

Let us continue to pray for one another. May we ask you to pray with us that God’s purpose for our lives may be fulfilled from moment to moment and day by day. He has kept us and brought us back safely to our homeland and loved ones for a purpose. May that be fulfilled.

May we also especially continue to pray for our Chinese fellow Christians and for the Christians in all the so-called heathen lands. They are facing many hard trials and therefore need our fervent intercession. Our Chinese Christians are “put on their own” as far as missionary help and advice is concerned. But our God is with them. As we pray for them we work with them through Him. Let us never forget them, not even one day. Our neglect may have its lasting evil consequences even as our prayers have their lasting blessed effects.

Will you join with us in praise to God for His wonderful keeping and deliverance for us and our fellow missionaries and for the hundreds of others who had this same joy. We are well and regaining strength and weight rapidly. The Lord be praised.

Sincerely,

Albert and Wilma Jantzen
Grace Joan and Lyman

MOTHER'S DAY

My dear Mother:

I am continually thanking my God that he has given to me a mother like you are. How I praise God that because of your prayers, service and your love and instruction God has considered me worthy of being in His service. If you had not come to India, perhaps I would be a leper, perhaps I would be today a non-Christian without hope, perhaps I would be a low down sinning woman. But thanks to your mercy, I am a disciple of Jesus.

While I was yet a non-Christian my mother died and since then you have been my mother. On this mother's day I want to open to you my grateful heart.

Sgd: Ashin, Champa, C. P. India

The above letter was written to Mrs. Penner for Mother's Day by Ashin. Here is a brief history of her:

The first two converts from among the lepers were Sirkanti and his wife Bushwara. They had three untainted children, two girls and one boy. The oldest girl, Lalatin, absconded from the Bethesda Leper Home. During her absence in Calcutta she met and married a leper lad by the name of Philip. From him she most probably contracted leprosy. Years later both Philip and Ashin returned to Champa with a girl named Ashin, untainted. Fearing that Ashin might contract the disease if she remained with the leprous father and mother, they asked us to take her into our Home for untainted children. We did so. She received her education in our Mission, was converted and then took a complete course in nursing in the Mission of the Disciples of Christ, then returned to Champa to give her services to our hospital under the Drs. Bauman. While working for them, she was married to Benjamin John, a school teacher in our Mission. When the Drs. Bauman and family went to the U. S. on furlough, Ashin and her husband moved to Basna and are now working for the Mission at that place. Ashin as nurse and Benjamin as teacher. They have two lovely children, none of whom is a leper. The family is happy in the home, the Lord and the service. Has it paid?

Ashin is the writer of the above letter.

have agreed to do the work gratis. After waiting so long for a permanent place of worship, the hearts of the Toronto group are filled with joy and gratitude to God for helping them to get a church home.

Rev. S. S. Baumgartner

Rev. S. S. Baumgartner, 3425 S.E. Grant Street, Portland, Oregon, passed on to his reward. Relatives received word of his death on Sunday, May 6, so his home-going was no doubt on the fifth. He was seventy-six years old. From 1917-1941 he was a member of the Board of Home Missions and filled his place with distinction. His keen analysis and insight into a problem and his abiding faith in the guidance of God in all matters made him a valued member of the Board. In 1937 he moved to Portland where he and his family united with the Alberta Community Church, and to his end he was a faithful helper.

CORRESPONDENCE

FAREWELL SERVICES FOR BAUMANS

On Wednesday evening, May 2, a very impressive service was held in West Swamp Church. The occasion was a farewell service for Drs. Harvey and Ella Bauman and three children, Albert, Harvella and Betty, who will leave for India very soon.

The two older children will remain in this country; Kenneth, who is at present serving in the C.P.S. hospital unit at Spring Grove State Hospital at Cantonville, Md., and Clara Ann, who is a freshman at Bluffton College.

The service was in two parts. First, the baptism of Harvella and Betty, the two youngest daughters of the Baumans. The baptismal message was given by the pastor, Rev. Neuenschwander.

Second, the farewell messages. Rev. Freeman H.

Drs. Harvey and Ella Bauman and Three Youngest Children

Drs. Harvey and Ella Bauman and three of their five children are on their way back to India. The three children who are returning with their parents are left to right: Harvella (13 years), Albert (14 years), and Betty (12). Kenneth (19) is in C.P.S., and Clara Ann (18) is at Bluffton College. For a picture of the whole family see the previous issue.

Swartz, Pastor of Eden Mennonite Church, Schwenksville, and a good friend of the Baumans, read a paper on "What the Baumans Have Meant to the Eastern District Conference."

Rev. Howard G. Nyce, Pastor of First Mennonite Church, Allentown, and Upper Milford Church, and member of the Foreign Mission Board spoke on the subject "What the Bauman's Return Will Mean to the Workers and Our Field in India."

Both Dr. Ella and Dr. Harvey Bauman made a few farewell remarks.

HEREFORD MENNONITE CHURCH Bally, Pennsylvania

April 8th was a memorable day for the Hereford Mennonite Church, Bally, Pa. A whole day of services was held, having Miss Martha Burkhalter bringing the mission message. She spoke during the morning worship services of her work in India as principal of the school in mid-India and presented the plans for a proposed new school building, which were passed on by the Foreign Mission Board.

This was the birthday of our oldest living church member, John W. Bauman of Sassamansville, and we paid tribute to him during our noon meal together with all our members who are 80 or more years, namely, Isaac Yoder who is 83, Mrs. Mary Hoppens who is 81 and our honored guest who was 85 years old on Sunday. Each one of these folks was handed a cake and a bouquet of red and white carnations. Mr. Bauman's brother, Samuel and wife from Milford Square, Pa. together with their son Dr. Harvey and Dr. Ella Bauman also were with us—this day being the fifty-second wedding anniversary of Samuel Baumans and the Fifty-sixth anniversary of Samuel Bauman joining the Hereford church, later transferring his membership to West Swamp.

Special recognition was also paid to John H. Lashaw who was our chorister from 1897 to 1944 when he was forced to resign because of his failing eyesight. Surely someone who gave so many years of continued services deserves recognition. Mr. Lashaw was also handed a bouquet of red and white carnations and a lot of letters which were written by friends and members of our congregation. All organizations of the church were represented and extended greetings for the occasion. He was also presented by beautiful framed salutations from our church which were done in Spencerian writing with a beautiful border done in pen and different colored inks. This took the writer 70 solid hours of work to complete but it was a beautiful piece of art listing the different capacities of service our honored guest served under such as chorister, now our Chorister Emeritus, Sunday School Supt. and now our Deacon since 1926. These greetings were signed by our pastor, Sunday School Supt., Ladies Aid Society President and President of the Sr. C. E. Society.

Miss Burkhalter who has served three terms in India took over the work that Miss Anna C. Funk, a member of the Hereford Church, laid down when she gave her life in the wreck of the Titanic on April 15, 1912. Her first term in India was spent in the school Miss Funk founded in India, and at the afternoon session she spoke of Miss Funk's work she had done and the foundations which were laid by her, for she was the first single lady missionary going out under the Conference.

During the noon meal our Ladies Aid Society pledged $100. to Miss Burkhalter for her school in India. Ralph Berky told us he planted a little white pine seedling into the church ground to commemorate the occasion—this seedling is one saved from the old pine monarch which was felled by lightning last summer in Oswin and Cora Funk's woodland—the home of Anna Funk; a stately pine which must have seen and admired at times by Anna Funk.

To make the event more profitable to the Ladies Aid Society we observed everybody's birthday by receiving their birthday money.—Mae Latshaw, Press Agent

MEDFORD MENNONITE CHURCH Medford, Oklahoma

The Medford Church was in a festive mood on Mother's Day when an all-day praise service was held in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Albert Jantzen, who were ordained here eight years ago as missionaries. The weather was excellent. The two morning messages were brought by Rev. A. G. Schmidt, Pastor, and Rev. Jantzen. The former based his on Psalm 121, and the latter on James 5:16 and Romans 8:28, pointing out there is a belief of the head and a belief of the heart. Dinner was served cafeteria style on the grounds.

In the afternoon Rev. John Lichti, our former pastor and father of Mrs. Jantzen, took us back to 1937 when the Jantzens were ordained and to 1938 when they sailed for China. He said he did not think they would live to see their children again. Mrs. Jantzen spoke for an hour and told of the trip from the states to the mission field by boat, rickshaw, etc., by the way of Hawaii and Japan. Rev. Jantzen gave a very interesting talk of their internment and their life in the camp, bringing it out clearly by the aid of a blackboard on which he had the outline of the camp. His talk lasted an hour or more. The whole event was a very blessed one for our congregation. The Lichti's children were all here.—Pete Neufeld, Deacon

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH Philadelphia, Pa.

Mr. J. B. Bechtel served as deacon since April 28, 1892. In recognition of his fifty-three years of service, Rev. J. J. Plenert preached on the theme "A Pillar in the Temple of God," on April 29. Letters from several Eastern District Conference Pastors were read, followed by words of commendation by Rev. Plenert as he presented Mr. Bechtel with a lovely basket of fruit, a symbol of the fruit his labors have borne. Thanking the congregation, Mr. Bechtel challenged our members and especially the young folk to upright living and faithfulness in serving the Lord. On October 18, 1892, he was elected as the first president of our Christian Endeavor. He served as Sunday School Superintendent for fourteen years. He has always been active in Eastern District and General Conference. He has been active in the Sunday School Union, also in the Federation of Churches of Philadelphia ever since its beginning. —Mrs. Howard S. Weiss, Corr.

SIXTIETH ANNIVERSARY

The Hanston Mennonite Church will celebrate the sixtieth anniversary of the beginning of the congregation on Sunday, May 27. There will be the morning worship service, a basket dinner in the church basement and an afternoon anniversary service. This afternoon service will be somewhat informal in character. An historical sketch will be read and there will be music numbers and probably remarks and reminiscences by different ones present. A cordial invitation is extended to all who can come and enjoy this anniversary day with friendly folks of the Hanston church.

Not Jottings this Issue

Spring house cleaning is also here for The Mennonite, and that means no jottings for this issue. For some time we have not been able to bring considerable material because of lack of space. We would like to catch up now when there is a little chance so that we may have more room again by conference time. Jottings are to reappear next issue.

RELIEF

Three-Weeks Study Program for Relief Appointees

A training school for appointed relief workers will begin June 11 at Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana, and will continue for three weeks. Bro. P. C. Hiebert will be the director of the school. This study program will be separate from the college summer-school program. An orientation course the relief workers will study Mennonite concerns in relief work and examine specific relief cases and problem situations.

Appointments for Relief Work

At the May 5, 1945, meeting of the M.C.C. executive committee eleven workers were appointed for various areas of relief need. Vera Yoder, R. N. whose appointment was held in abeyance until her sister arrived from the African mission field, was reappointed. Sister Yoder is now at Akron preparing to leave for the Middle East.

Relief workers appointed for England include: Susie Peters, Niagara Falls, Ontario; Evengeline Matthies, Virgil, Ontario; Mary Miller, Hesston, Kansas; Ella Schmidt, Upland, California; Harry Willems, Leamington, Ontario; and George Neufeld, Waldheim, Saskatchewan.

The service of Verna Zimmerman, R. N., Ephrata, Pennsylvania, has been loaned to the M.C.C. by the Mennonite Relief Committee for work in India.

Sarah Frances Miller, Sugar Creek, Ohio, is assigned to teach in Puerto Rico.

Beulah Roth, R. N., Salem, Oregon, and Evelyn Egli, R. N., Manson, Iowa, have been appointed to enter relief work. Their area of service has not yet been designated.

Secretarial Worker Sails for England

Arlene Sitler, who was the former secretary in the Kitchener, Ontario M.C.C. office, is now enroute to England to become secretary in the office at the London Mennonite Center.

Message Arrives from Worker Enroute to India

Titus Lehman, R. N., who sailed approximately four weeks ago for India by the way of the Pacific, sent the following message via California:

ENROUTE, WELL.

Serving as Nurse at Taxal Edge

Ellen Harder shares some routine activities that are part of her daily schedule at the Mennonite convalescent home for boys, Taxal Edge, England. We quote excerpts from her letter of April 12, 1945:

"March 5 I came here to the boys' convalescent home. There is never a dull moment in a home of twenty boys from eight to fifteen years of age. I arise at 7:45, the bell rings for the boys at 8:00. I have to see that they get dressed, washed, combed, and have their beds made properly by 8:30 . . . When 8:30 comes and we are all ready for breakfast, there is a mad rush down the stairs. We have devotions, then a heaping plate of porridge, followed by toast with bacon, sausage, or baked beans, and an egg on Sunday . . . The boys have duties like drying dishes, peeling potatoes, feeding hens, and sweeping. Twice a week they go to the village . . . on Sunday everyone goes to some church . . . After tea, between 5:30 and 6:10, they have baths, then go to bed to read or write until 8:30, when there are prayers and lights out."

FOODS FOR RELIEF

Of the five basic food needs in Europe, generally, we hope to provide for three in considerable quantities. They are animal proteins (meat products), fats (lard, tallow, etc.) and sweets (jams, jellies, preserves, honey, sorghum molasses, etc.). In addition we hope also to supply vegetable protein foods such as dry beans and peas, and canned peas and shell beans, and perhaps some milk products such as home made American cheese. Developments in the proposed program will be announced from time to time. Persons interested in contributing food for relief are invited to write to, Director of Food for Relief, Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa., for instructions on how to proceed. Suggestions from interested persons as to foods which would be practical in a relief program will be welcomed.

Food needs in the Netherlands

A touch of history and geography will be helpful in understanding Holland's situation. In pre-war times it has approximately 9,000,000 people living on 12,800 square miles. That makes it about equal to Pennsylvania in population but with its people crowded into one-fourth its size. Three regions of the country need to be distinguished. The north is mainly agricultural and not densely populated. Then come the great centers of Netherlands history and culture—Amsterdam, Rotterdam, The Hague, Utrecht, Leyden, and Haarlem. In the south lies the smallest of the three regions, consisting of liberated

Holland, in Allied hands under Allied care since the fall of 1944.

The most terrible food need, of course, lies in the densely populated middle section. According to an April (1945) eye-witness: "The suffering of the past winter in the 'hunger provinces' was without parallel. Picture if you can life in a city swept bare of food, with the electric current off and no gas, precious little fuel for heat, a few shops open only a couple of hours each day, streets deserted, schools closed most of the time. Young and old are dying in Holland today. No one asks why they die because the reason is obvious enough: it is starvation. People say, and no man can contradict them, that by early summer the entire population of the 'hunger provinces' will need medical care. Food is not a shortage in Occupied Holland; it just doesn't exist as we think of it. At The Hague they eat tulip bulbs boiled like onions. Two slices of dry bread—with no butter, milk, or other beverage, just two slices of dry bread to start the day." In once prosperous Rotterdam deaths by starvation have risen above 1200 monthly. In Amsterdam eight out of ten infants are dying soon after birth, conditions are so bad. Other cities tell similar stories. The 1941 daily ration per adult of 1700 calories, in itself below the 2000 basic minimum of sound nutrition, has decreased since D-day to less than 1000 per person in Occupied Holland. The almost unbearable privations endured by the 7,000,000 Hollanders in Occupied Netherlands have weakened their bodies to that disastrous point where susceptibility to many diseases like tuberculosis, scurvy, rickets, etc., is extremely high.

Although the final liberation of Holland is imminent and may have been accomplished before this appears in print, building up bodies wracked by hunger is a long-time process. We may properly expect food and medical supplies to be rushed to the starving, ailing Hollanders as soon as the Allies take over; in fact even as this is being written, Germany has granted permission for food, ships, and trucks to pass through the German lines to aid the people. Yet all efforts of the military authorities UNRRA, Lend-Lease, and other governmental organizations cannot hope to do the job completely. There will still be plenty of room, according to their own statements, for private relief agencies to help out. The Netherlands Red Cross has already indicated that it will welcome any and all processed and dried food that can be sent. In general the most concentrated and nourishing foods will be useful; in particular are needed baby foods, cereals of all kinds, meats and fats and dried fruits and vegetables.

This brief description of conditions in the Netherlands should be of particular concern to Mennonites of North America, when they realize that almost 100,000 Mennonites—men, women, and children—were living in the Netherlands when the war broke out, and that most of them were concentrated in the hunger provinces. Stricken Amsterdam had 14,000 Mennonites, The Hague—5,500, Rotterdam—2,600, Utrecht—1,100, Arnheim—1,000, and Leyden—900.

Any aid American Mennonites may send to the Netherlands will not only benefit Hollanders in general, but will probably go in part to fellow-Mennonites in distress.

C. P. S.

Fifth Year of C.P.S. Begins

May 22 will mark the beginning of the fifth year of Mennonite Civilian Public Service. On this date, four years ago, the first nine Mennonite assignees arrived at C.P.S. No. 4, Grottoes, Virginia. The future duration of C.P.S. is still pretty much a matter of opinion, but it is significant to note that on the beginning of the fifth year the war in Europe has come to an end and the first definite steps for the demobilization of drafted men are being taken.

Discharges from C.P.S.

Selective Service has expressed its willingness to release men in C.P.S. who have reached the age of forty-two or over. This has come about as a result of the announcement of the War Department to release men of this age in the armed forces. In C.P.S. this would involve sixteen men, half of which are in Mennonite camps.

More recently the War Department has announced its intention to discharge about 2,000,000 men in Europe now that the war has terminated there. It is not known at the time of this writing whether a parallel discharge of men will take place in C.P.S., but heretofore Selective Service has indicated that the demobilization of C.P.S. will likely take place on the same percentage basis as that of the armed forces.

Peace Section Notes

A Word About the End of the War in Europe

It has happened that the end of the war in Europe has been announced the day these notes are being written. As a group of Christians who have prayed for peace this news comes as an answer to our prayers. We rejoice that a halt has been called to organized violence and hate in Europe. But our feelings will probably be mixed ones. We will be under no delusions that the sowing of hate will result in the fruit of reconciliation and amity. We will not be happy that a nation has been crushed and devastated.

MENNONITE AID NOTES

Just off the press and ready for distribution is Mennonite Colonization in Mexico by J. Winfield Fretz. Besides having historical value, the book is a fascinating story of the author's visit to the Mennonite colonies in Mexico. In this book Mennonites of United States and Canada will have an opportunity to become better acquainted with their not-too-well-known, 12,000 brethren in Mexico. The book has sixty-five pages with several pictures and a map sketch. The price of a single copy is 20c, and in quantities of ten or more, 15c per copy.

The Voice of the Silent Dead

Years ago the women of the South strewed wild flowers on the graves of their fallen soldier loved ones. This practice spread rapidly all over the land. Soon everywhere the graves of the soldiers were being decorated on certain days. May 30th was set aside for this purpose and made a national holiday. After a while the soldiers of the Spanish-American and the First World War were also included. Countless thousands commenced decorating the graves of their loved ones, whether soldiers or not.

Today many a graveyard is a scene of activity on Memorial Day and the day preceding. As people work among the graves, their departed ones become very real. They can almost see them and hear them. It then becomes very real to us what the writer of Hebrews says in chapter eleven, the fourth verse: "He being dead, yet speaketh." It seems every one that lies buried is speaking to some one. The tiny infant speaks to its parents who felt so wounded when it left them, and the old grandfather continues his messages of advice and encouragement and warning.

As we read Hebrews 11 we discover that all these men spoke to the writer: Abel, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, and Moses. It seems they continue to speak the language and the message they used during their life time. Isn't it thus with our loved ones?

A group of people walk through the cemetery. They come to the grave of their Pastor. They stand still and read the inscription on the stone, and he begins to speak to them. His life comes before them and they see him in the pulpit and hear a message. As they stand around the grave he may have a different message for each. The message that impressed you in his life time may be spoken to you now.

Parents are decorating the grave of a tiny infant taken from them. It seems they can hear it say, "I thank you that you loved me and were good to me." They listen again and it seems they hear it say, "Unless you become as a little child, you will not enter the kingdom of God."

Children may be playing back and forth in a cemetery and they come upon the graves of a few children. It sets these playing children thinking, and the song comes to them:"

*"In that beautiful place He has gone to prepare For all who are washed and forgiven;
And many dear children shall be with Him there,
For of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."*

A beautiful young Christian girl was buried. As a group of her friends walk past her grave-stone they hear her as they had while she was still living:

*"Saviour, while my heart is tender,
I would yield that heart to thee.
All my powers to thee surrender, Thine and only thine to be."*

Many messages in a cemetery come from the middle-aged group. In the midst of labor they lay down to rest. What they say to others of middle life, is this:

*"Work, for the night is coming,
Work through the sunny noon;
Fill brightest hours with labor,
Rest comes sure and soon;
Give every flying minute
Something to keep in store;
Work, for the night is coming,
When man works no more."*

Here in this grave lies a tired and weary pilgrim. Those standing about the tomb knew him well. It seems they hear a quivering voice:

*"Asleep in Jesus! blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep;
A calm and undisturbed repose,
Unbroken by the last of foes."*

Thus, "He being dead, yet speaketh." After you and I will have left this earthly abode, what will we be speaking to those that are left behind? In Westminster Abbey there is a monument to John Wesley, bearing this inscription: "God takes away His workman, but He carries on his work." Thus the departed continues to speak.

Eternal life is the goal toward which we strive. The voices of the dead beckon us to travel the right road. As we meditate upon those who reached the goal we notice this about their lives:

*"They marked the footsteps that He trod,
His zeal inspired their breast;
And following their incarnate God,
They gained the promised rest."*

Yes, verily, "He being dead, yet speaketh."

Report of Sea Incident in Which Marie Fast Was Lost

(The report given here was prepared by G. Richard Yoder for the Mennonite Central Committee. The date of the letter containing this report was May 5 and the place of mailing, Italy. It might be well to remember that all reports to date have indicated that Marie Fast has been missing and have held out a slight hope that she may have been rescued or found. —Publicity Office)

Having been the only other Mennonite representative on board the ill-fated ship which was sunk on the night of May 1 and 2 it becomes my very solemn and sad duty to report to you in some detail concerning the circumstances which relate to that incident and resulted in the tragic loss of one of our numbers—Marie Fast.

You will, no doubt, have long since received the sad news via cable by the time this reaches you, and I am hoping that this letter may come through in much shorter time than any I could send from Egypt. It is now more than eighty-four hours since our ship was hit by a high explosive and there is still no news or information from Marie and one other passenger with whom Marie was last seen after both had been thrown into the water during the lowering of their life boat. There is, therefore, only the very faintest hope that they may still be alive. Not only will she be a real loss to her family and hosts of friends but also to us her co-workers and to the cause which we represent. She will be mourned by all far and near. The remaining passengers and the ship's crew and staff feel deeply in this great tragedy and sorrow.

Marie and I, together with four other UNRRA personnel, had just completed a special assignment to Yugoslavia. It had been a unique and thoroughly pleasant experience in many ways. Marie had specially volunteered for this assignment and had given herself wholeheartedly in carrying out her duties. She had told me how much she valued the experience and of her earnest desire to have another similar opportunity in the future. It had been my first time to work with Marie and I found her a quiet, unassuming and pleasant person always congenial, hardworking, never complaining and thoroughly conscientious. The loss of Marie has come as a great shock and especially since others of us here might have shared a like tragedy. I praise God for his deliverance and watchful care over all those of us who have survived.

The accident occurred shortly before 2 a.m. during a cloudy and somewhat stormy night. The seas were running fairly high with occasional breakers and very great waves. The difficulties of launching life-boats successfully was considerable. Most of those on board were suddenly awakened by the great noise of the explosion and by the violent trembling of the ship.

For a few seconds I lay quietly in my bunk not being able to realize what had happened. But when the alarm bell rang I was up. I remember grabbing my bathrobe and life-jacket and running out of my cabin. But I am not certain whether I went on deck immediately and returned to my cabin for a heavy coat, trousers, cap, shoes, flashlight and fountain pen, or whether I only went part way and then returned. After having grabbed these things I ran up to the promenade deck where there seemed to be considerable confusion. Already the ship had listed by about 20 degrees and then quickly straightened herself. When I got on deck I thought of Marie and the other American nurse the only two ladies on board. They were on the opposite side of the ship from my cabin and I asked others if the ladies had been seen on deck. No one had so the second steward and I rushed to see if they had been aroused from their cabins. We found the cabins deserted, and knowing the ladies were already on deck and were no doubt being looked after, we hurried back to our side of the ship. Some of the boats were already being lowered and several of us scrambled over the rail and climbed into the one which was next to be let down. There was some difficulty in letting her down and all on board were ordered back on deck while she was chopped free. We scrambled on a second time and were gradually lowered to the running seas. Again there was difficulty in getting her free from the ship but fortunately the hook holding her automatically broke and with great effort the crew on board managed to push her farther out and prevent the tossing sea from smashing us to pieces or onto a second lifeboat or from capsizing and throwing us into the water.

The night was dark. It was impossible to make out any details of outline beyond a few yards. There was a swift current from front to aft of the main ship. This carried all boats past the stern and beyond. It was impossible to prevent drifting with the current. The only thing possible was to keep the life-boat heading into the great waves to prevent her from capsizing. To do this someone had to man the oars constantly. After an unpleasant seven hours our lifeboat reached the shore and we landed in the water rather dramatically as our boat was being dashed upon the rocks. Very fortunately no one was seriously injured and the thirty-three of us in this life boat were able to reach a village unaided after approximately a mile's walk.

The details relating to Marie I can only give you second-hand from the U.N.R.R.A. officer who is our leader and who was present and assisted the two ladies during the ship's evacuation. As I have heard it told

THE DEATH OF MARIE FAST seems so tragic and unnecessary, but it also comes to us with a blessing, for in it Christ shines forth. She, as a disciple of His, journeyed to a far-off land to serve with humility and love people who were not of her own nation or tongue. On a dangerous voyage undertaken for the welfare of these people, she gave her life. No frantic attempt to save herself at the expense of others marks her passing. Somehow there is a glorious radiance in the darkness of the night in which she disappeared, a radiance in darkness that always comes where the light and love of Christ have the opportunity to shine forth. Through the death of Marie Fast there will very likely come a message to young and old that could not have come otherwise. To those critical of the motives of those who seek to be peacemakers there may come a glimpse of what peacemakers can be like and often are. Death may bear spiritual fruit that life alone cannot yield. "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit."

REPENTANCE AT SAN FRANCISCO does not seem to be equal to its hope for a world of peaceful cooperation. Generally the nations do not seem to be in contrite penitence for specific sins. There is a general realization that the nations of the world have gotten themselves into a terrible mess by their past policies. Like a little boy who has let slip the butter plate he was carrying and wants to carry a new one without washing his slippery fingers, so the nations with great enthusiasm seem to feel that they will carry the peace this time without stopping to wash their slippery fingers. Before there can be growth in peaceful activity there must be a recognition and confession of the causes of war. The great powers are not seeing themselves very sinful. How can they avoid a repetition of sin in that case? Or are we to believe that they were not sinful to begin with? We hear much of Germany's sins. But what about reparation exactions, high tariffs on our part, and a general failure on the part of the democracies to give the Weimar Republic a chance? To the degree that the nations at San Francisco repent and confess their sins, to that extent can we have hope for a more peaceful world. Unless ye repent . . . ye shall again likewise perish.

GENERAL CONFERENCE is about here. Confering together makes possible progress that separated individuals can not bring about. The purer and the truer the Christian fellowship, the greater is the chance for significant accomplishments. Great problems should be considered at this conference. Any hobby riding or airing of petty grievances on the part of delegates will be as monkey wrenches thrown into the solving of these problems. Conference time is short. May self-importance be so minimized and reverence for each other be so extended that conference may truly work as one smoothly functioning body.

THE SPIRITUAL TOLL OF THIS WAR should particularly concern those who would be peacemakers. In this issue we present the first installment of an article on this subject. Dr. David D. Eitzen, the author, presents some insights to us that should help us to deal understandingly with the resentments and aggressions of many troubled persons who will find it difficult to return to a useful and wholesome part in civilian life. The article should help us to be better neighbors to ex-service men and greater friends with them as we rub elbows in religious activities.

THE MOTTO of The Mennonite is "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ." This motto used to be carried on the first page. Now it graces the editorial page. In comparing the general front-page appearance of The Mennonite with that of similar church papers it was observed that there was a heavy mass of type on the top of the front page of our paper, which seemed to detract from its possible attractiveness. In seeking a remedy it was obvious that some of the type must be taken away. While considering this possibility we also came to the conclusion that the great majority of readers had undoubtedly become so used to overlooking the same motto in the same place that they would look at it anew if it were changed in place and printed somewhat differently. Furthermore, we wished to claim it more definitely as the editorial policy of the paper. The editorial page seemed appropriate. Comments indicate a new awareness of this significant motto. We are glad that the founders of The Mennonite chose this motto.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

REPORT BY V. E. NICKEL

Wymark, Saskatchewan

"And there was an enlarging, and a winding about still upward . . ." Ezek. 41:7a

Oh, how much enlarging of the room for Jesus is needed in my own heart and life! How much we need an enlarging of our battle against sin, our selfishness, our zeal for His service, our field of service, or staff for service, our vision, and our passion for never-dying souls. We ought not to rest content in the mists of the valley, when upward the fresh, pure mountain air of Christlikeness on the summit challenges us.

Our Lord has given us a bountiful harvest, so that it has been possible to establish four new places of worship—Blumenhof, Schoenfeld, Rhineland, and Gull Lake. We heartily thank the Home Mission Board for their help. The other three churches—Neville, Wymark, and Swift Current—have been improved and renovated. Praise God for every gift given for His cause and in His name. Above all else, let us praise God for every soul that has been saved and every saint restored. That is the aim and purpose of all our efforts. Brother George Elias was with us for one month. During that time we were able to visit fifty-nine homes. The Lord showed us visible fruits. We tried to reach the scattered families who cannot attend regular places of worship. One family, with whom we spent one whole afternoon, said farewell with tears in their eyes and said it had helped them more than many services. One mother said, "I am so glad you came because I was on the verge of despair. Now the light shines through again." We believe that this is one of the most necessary duties and privileges of the church. "Feed my lambs," and "Feed my sheep."

Two workers, Brother J. J. M. Friesen and Brother David Quiring, were ordained. Praise God for sending us Brother John Loewen to help on the staff of the Bible School and also in pastoral work. Praise God for all the faithful Sunday School and Christian Endeavor workers. Praise Him for all the faithful ladies who work in the sewing circles. Praise Him also for all the quiet and unseen workers who intercede in prayer for everybody and everything.

Local Mission Work: We conclude a fruitful year in this branch of service chiefly among children and young people. We can see visible fruit in increased attendance and souls saved. We conducted a scripture memorizing contest for which we gave as prizes good story books and Bibles. For this winter we are conducting a Bible-question contest. Praise Him for giving us Miss Anne B. Quiring, our local missionary.

Prayer

1. Pray that the new churches may be fully completed. Pray that the need for a new church or Bible school in Swift Current may be met. It is very unsatisfactory to have both the church and the Bible School in the same building. We have neither a church nor a Bible School.

2. Pray for increased church attendance. May 1945 be a year of regular church attendance for many more people.

3. Pray that many more Christians may become tithers—in which I unreservedly believe—so that greater things can be done for the Lord in 1945, and that all our obligations can be met, I Cor. 16:2.

4. Pray that the Lord will use the mission camp which has been bought to His glory and the salvation of many souls, and that many more of His stewards may support it so that our obligations can be met. If any interested person desires information about this project, it will be gladly given by the writer.

5. Pray that the home visitation work may be blessed and increased.

6. Pray for a genuine, heaven-sent revival in our entire church. Oh, friends, let us agonize in prayer that souls may be saved and Christians restored, established and consecrated. Let the lamp of prayer burn brightly in 1945. II Chr. 7:14

7. Pray for our local mission work. This is a field where scores of children have never been in a Sunday school. Pray them into the fold, and pray that the Lord will open the hearts of the parents so that they will allow and assist their children to come to Christ. Pray in the necessary funds for this work. We will require about $800.00 for this work in 1945. We trust the Lord to supply this need.

All of this (December 30, 1944) is prayerfully submitted together with warm Christian greetings in the name of the Emmaus Mennonite Church of Swift Current and districts by,

The Lord's servant by His grace,

The Spiritual Toll of the War

By David D. Eitzen

The wars of history coincide with plagues and epidemics. And this war eventuates a spiritual influenza which challenges all robust Christians to prayerful vigilance and sacrificial service. We who are dedicated to the redemption of war are by no means immune to these microbes but, we like Israel, as a remnant in a world of power-mad Nebuchadnezzars, are to recognize the voice of God—"Ye are my witnesses, saith the Lord, and my servant whom I have chosen." (Isaiah 43:10)

The vivid pictorial and editorial representations of the war today give most of us quite a realistic appreciation of what happens when one of our fighting men is wounded by a bullet or a piece of shrapnel. But what of the man whose wounds no picture can show—the man whose mind has been crippled by the shocks and strains that he has had to go through? The over-intensified glamorous version of war which comes to us each day by our headlines and excited voices of radio announcers is far removed from the actual fighting conditions which cause these emotional and spiritual wounds. While American commentators were running out of adjectives rhapsodizing on Rommel's defeat, the Britons were wildly ringing church bells, one soldier of the Eighth Army says, "We were shivering in the rain and wishing we had a hot meal and a dry bed. The rain had made the desert as mucky as a mud flat at low tide and digging a place to sleep in was a long discouraging task. As fast as we shovelled, the wet earth oozed back into our holes, but I at least had a roof over my head by virtue of getting first claim on a tail board of a blown-up truck. For supper—not having had any lunch—we opened cans of cold corned beef and packages of hardtack. We could not brew tea or warm ourselves by a fire because that would attract the deadly attention of Rommel's defeated army. The battle of Egypt was over, yet I can remember how difficult it was to sleep that night, not because of exhilaration but because I was so bitten by fleas I could not stop scratching."

People's limits of endurance vary, but everybody has a breaking point. Of this generation's young men 19 per cent were rejected at induction centers because they were emotionally too unstable for the rigors of war. Of all battle casualties 48 per cent are labeled as neuropsychiatric, and according to Colonel Leonard Roundtree, Chief of Medical Division of the Bureau of Selective Service, 80 per cent of the military medical problems require psychiatry. The United States Navy Bulletin for January, 1943, states that 55 per cent of all beds in military hospitals are neuropsychiatric patients.

The incidence of emotional breakdown in this war is very much greater than that of the First World War. This is explained in various ways. In the first place this war is much severer than the First World War. During the First World War the soldier fought from fixed positions in trenches where he had protection from enemy fire and where he had hot food much of the time. Now our men are constantly on the offensive. They fight in the open, their only protection a fox hole, an occasional tree, or some natural protection like a rock or mound. They fight through steaming jungles where they battle insects as well as the enemy, or they come in from the sea and make landings in the face of direct fire. They carry their food with them and eat it cold out of cans. They are always on the move, there is no time out for a few days' rest or gaiety. It isn't practical to rotate troops in the midst of battle. The men must keep on fighting until they have won a campaign.

As far as causing emotional breakdown is concerned, a very serious difference between this and the former one is that during the First World War many men genuinely believed they were sacrificing to make the world safe for democracy. The thoughtful young soldier of this war is confronted with the fact that the former war did not yield democracy and peace. To be forced to defy such undeniable spiritual facts often precipitates a conflict in the soul of the soldier eventuating in a nervous breakdown. The soldier quoted above writes as follows, "For more than a month I have put off writing to a young New Zealander who lost his arm at El Alamein. During the two weeks he and I occupied beds side by side in a hospital in the desert outside Cairo, we spent long hours discussing our respective countries. He had complete faith that out of this war would come a bright new world. That is what he is fighting for. He is waiting for me to tell him how I find things here in America. He, like millions of other men, is waiting for the tangible confirmation of his faith. I wish that I could do it."

In the first World War these neurotic results were called shellshock. It was then assumed that the individual must be suffering from the effects of concussion on his brain or nerves. But this is a mistaken diagnosis. The hurt that these men have suffered has been to their feelings or emotions and occasionally to their ideas. Physically, except for exhaustion, they are as sound as ever. All of us have feelings which we cannot control by will power. Among the strongest of these feelings is the basic obligation of man for self-preservation. One gets an idea of how strong and uncontrollable this impulse is from the difficulty one has in keeping one's eye open while someone is trying to take a cinder out of it. God wisely created man with an autonomic nervous system whose sole obligation is to protect the organism and promote its growth. If the unconscious mind cannot get him out of danger any other way, it may even paralyze or blind him. In common parlance we often speak of one's feelings being hurt or of his hopes being shattered. There is something in all our minds that is vulnerable to attack and can be seriously or even incurably wounded. Dr. Edwin McNeal, a psychiatrist, at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, now in Los Angeles, reports that a great number of psychotics resulted among those who were left to clear away the wreckage and bury the dead. Most of these psychoses were schizophrenia or schizophrenic-paranoia. Particular problems which this emergency caused or accentuated were alcoholism, juvenile delinquency, prostitution, and homosexuality.

This feeling apparatus with which God has equipped our personality and which acts very much like a thermostat controlling the heat of our homes, can be conditioned to make false responses. The famous physiologist, Pavlov of Russia, demonstrated that in his classic experiments with a dog who salivated when he saw the meat offered and after having heard a bell toll in conjunction with the appearance of meat, he finally salivated by merely hearing the bell and without seeing the meat. In a similar fashion our feelings can be conditioned to respond in a faulty way by virtue of severe experiences in our past. By way of a crude illustration from childhood this will suffice. A little youngster remembers his grandfather's barn and horses and cattle and other aspects of the farm. One day when his father is gone and he is amusing himself in the father's den, he gets hold of these blocks that serve him so well in making corral for the cattle and the barn etc., etc. Then the father comes home but for him these blocks are books consisting of pages with personal notes in the margin, some of which have been torn out by the youngster, accidentally to be sure. The father therefore feels constrained to impress upon this child that this was a wrong act. (Say he is that composed.) So he decides to make this impression upon the child by speaking to his autonomic nervous system and at a particular area of his anatomy. If this experience is repeated a number of times this child may get the impression that books are not to be used for playing in that fashion. This would be wholesome. But he may also make this unfortunate conclusion: "When I am enjoying myself, when I allow my imagination to dictate my actions, and when I am creative, then I am bad. Therefore, I am bad." This is the foundation of the famous inferiority complex and is due to unfortunate conditionings.

The warrior is prone to make similar organismic conclusions from the hostilities which envelop his day and night during warfare. Many a sensitive soul cannot help but make an unconscious conclusion that the world has it in for him and that he must either avoid it or fight it to protect himself. The sensitive youngster of our age of progressive education is not able to stand up under the rigors and horrors of modern warfare described above. But when he breaks under the strain, he is prone not to make an objective evaluation, namely, that as a jungle guerilla fighter he is a good high school teacher of Latin or algebra, but rather, "I am inferior—I do not have what it takes." The core of a healthy personality is to have an inner unshakable assurance that "Despite my particular personal inadequacies I have cosmic significance." Behold the words of Paul, "We are laborers together with God."

This breakdown of man's sense of worthy selfhood eventuates in unfortunate compensatory behavior. The most usual type of such behavior is to vindicate a feeling of rightness in expressing aggressiveness.

Now there is a normal aggressiveness. To love is to be supremely aggressive albeit in behalf of the other person and not in self defense. It is this self defensive type of aggressiveness which is unfortunate and which defeats the aggressor's own ends of self-preservation. The philosopher Thales of pre-Jesus' days is quoted as having said, "One sight the world will never see, a dictator growing old." Saul who, by virtue of Stephen's death, had come to feel more and more insecure about his dogmatism and finally broke on the road to Damascus, heard this indictment "It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks."

Professor E. K. Wickman made an extensive study of children's behavior and the teacher's attitudes toward them and came to the conclusion that it was the tendency of teachers to greet aggressive behavior on the part of children with aggressiveness in return, which in turn would have the net effect of increasing aggressiveness on the part of the child.

The regimentation of the Army is foreign to our democratic way of life, for it thwarts the achievement of a sense of self-sufficiency. Many a soldier will feel after the war, "Now that this unalterable but intolerable condition is over I want the joy of watching someone else do K. P."

The frustrated ex-serviceman will further express his tendency for compensatory aggressiveness in terms of pseudo-selfconfidence which might be described as adolescent negativism. Many a young man when he left had always been part of his family and had never really been away. Now he has been away and has proven himself as a resourceful and relatively self-sufficient individual. In the meantime he has also acquired skills and interests and visions and has probably become an expert, but he will not feel too secure in this new relationship of self-sufficiency and therefore will have much need to reassure himself of his newly discovered selfhood. This will, for the rest of us, be a painful attitude of boastfulness and cockiness. The registration results at the University of Southern California last week are that 90 per cent of some 5000 civilian students indicated a church preference and only 12 per cent of 800 returned servicemen did.

This pathological type of aggressiveness will also express itself in terms of resentment as he discovers the cleavage of his income with that of the civilian, especially the war profiteer, or for the 4-f who stole the affections of his fiancée.

Another sick type of aggressiveness will be caused by the fact that for several years these tender minds have lived by the undebated philosophy that might makes right. Their sensitive need for love and affection and understanding and cooperation will have been stifled and in self protection their minds will have jelled into what they will call "realism." To love will seem very unnatural. One soldier broke his engagement because he felt after bombing a ship and killing all members of the ship that he was no longer a fit candidate for the tender relationships of love and marriage.

LETTER FROM THE NEUFELDS

Leopoldville, Congo Belge
West Central Africa
March 19, 1945

Dr. P. H. Richert
Newton, Kansas

Dear Brother Richert:

"The ways of man are before the eyes of the Lord and He pondereth all his goings." Proverbs 5:21.

We can testify to the truth of these words as we consider His leadings during the last four months. Little did we realize when we left home that our journey would take such a long time but we have felt very definitely the leading of the Lord. We believe that the long wait in Lisbon has been of great benefit to us.

On November 26 we left Philadelphia on the Portuguese steamer "Serpa Pinto" and after a twelve day voyage arrived at Lisbon. There were many things of interest as, for the first time, we set foot on European soil. We were pleasantly surprised to meet Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger and the Misses Eleanor and Augusta Schmidt. A few precious hours we spent with them and we also saw them leave for their Field.

Our stay in Lisbon lasted just nine weeks. It seemed that there must be some way but, nothing became available until the ninth of February. On this day we embarked on the last lap of our ocean voyage which lasted another four weeks. We first set foot on African soil on Sunday, March 4 at Point Noire in French Equatorial Africa where our boat unloaded cargo. There were mingled feelings as we saw for the first time, the land to which we are called. We were thrilled at the strange sights, yet we realized the great responsibility given to us to bring light to these dark people. Pray for us that we might be true lights for Him, Who is the light of the world.

On the ninth of March we disembarked at Matadi and the next day we arrived at Leopoldville. At present we are waiting here for our river boat which is to take us to Port Franque. It is to leave here on the 24th and will arrive at Port Franque on the 1st of April which is Easter Day. From there Rev. Roy Yoder, treasurer of the C.I.M., will take us to the Field. Thus it will likely be another two weeks before we reach our destination. But we can now see the end of our journey. If these schedules are carried out, we will have been on the way almost 20 weeks. Still we are thankful to be this far along on our way for we realize that many people have been on the way longer than we.

One of the hardest problems for us to face is the fact that no news has come through from loved ones since the 21st of November. However, we are expecting that letters will be awaiting us at Charlesville. We also hope to have our freight shipment there when we arrive.

Yours, in His Service,

George and Justina Neufeld

REPORT BY ALIDA SCHRAG

Dear Mission Board:

Greetings with Psalm 103! Indeed the Lord has again blessed in the past year, and we have need to say with the psalmist, "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name; bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits." May God give us grace not only to bless his name with our lips, but with our lives as well.

My language study in the hills of Landour continued until about the middle of September. My stay up in that beautiful spot of God's creation was most profitable one. Besides getting a good start in acquiring the Hindi language (thanks to the grace of God) it was my joy and privilege to meet a good number of missionaries from various parts of this great land, not only to meet them, but to enjoy blessed fellowship with them. Then there were the spirit-filled messages of God, whom I had the privilege of hearing repeatedly, and indeed it was good for my soul to be present as they broke the bread of life to their hearers. My heart overflows with joy and praise to our heavenly Father for the rich experiences I had with Him in Landour.

After coming to the plains, my language study was again resumed with a new instructor and has continued ever since, expect a week's most welcome and refreshing vacation, this being the Christmas season. When one studies language, language and more language, I assure you, a vacation once in a while is a wonderful tonic. However, I do praise the Lord for the way he has kept on encouraging me in my studying, keeping the thought before me that this language is only a means of bringing lost souls to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ. With this motive in mind, one cannot help but try to do one's best.

Besides doing language study, it has been my privilege to help out an hour or two at the hospital every day. This gave me good opportunity to get acquainted with the work as well as with the most prevalent diseases here. Indeed, there is much to be done for these people physically as well as spiritually. May the Lord send more laborers into the harvest for the harvest is truly plenteous, but the laborers are few.

Yours in Him,
Alida Schrag

REPORT OF SEA INCIDENT

the two nurses climbed down the rope ladder to enter a life boat which was already in the water. Before Marie had a chance to enter someone had cut her boat free from the main ship and it drifted quickly away. Marie re climbed the ladder and was seen on the deck again in a matter of seconds or half a minute. So the officer assisted her into a life boat (together with a British officer) which was immediately opposite the deck rail. Someone on the upper boat deck immediately began lowering this life boat but before it was half way to the water one end suddenly fell free thus hurling both bodies into the sea. Both had their lifejackets on and both were seen again on the surface of the water. No one heard Marie speak. No one knows if she may have been seriously injured during the fall but the British officer returned an answer back to the officer on the deck saying that he was all right. He was the type who was very calm and self-possessed and he seemed assured when he spoke from the water. He was seen floating by the side of Marie practically hand in hand as the swift current carried them sternward and on into the darkness.

The officer on deck grabbed a cork life-saver and running from the higher to a lower deck to keep pace with them in the current threw the life-saver into the water. Fortunately it landed immediately in front of the two in the water and the officer was seen to take hold of it.

The officer and other nurse who also witnessed the incident affirm that there were several other boats not more than a few yards from the two but as the waves were so high and the current so swift no one could steer a boat in their direction.

The ship's captian is supposed to have seen the two in the water immediately when they were alongside the ship and had a raft cut loose and thrown into the water in the hopes that they could manage to cling to or climb on to it.

The strange thing is that although there were many boats in the water and all were carried by the drift in the same direction no one surviving seems to have any knowledge of hearing any voices or of seeing the two bodies in the water after they had once disappeared into the darkness. While the water was cold and the sea was high still it seems that a person might have survived several hours in the water and thus have been sighted and picked up after dawn by the rescuing ships; or they might even have been carried to the shore in the matter of a few hours since we were always in sight of the land. It seems very possible that they may have survived in the water only a short time, otherwise certainly their voices might have been heard or their bodies seen and rescued. A search has been continuing in the water and along the shore line but up to now nothing further is known. The authorities here presume that they are lost. It is a very unfortunate and sad tragedy indeed. It is too early for me to have any very constant perspective about these things.

North Fork Cooking School

By Mrs. Jacob D. Goering

The second cooking school sponsored by the Mennonite Central Committee terminated April 15 after two months of kitchen work and classroom activity on the part of twenty-seven C.P.S. men. The cooks participating were from western camps. They were Aden Horst, Waldo Wiens, Denison; Jacob Guhr, Mulberry; Delmar Gingerich, Edward Pankratz, Ft. Collins; Wesley Voth, Willard Diener, Colorado Springs; Clifford Streid, Ray Schrock, Emil Ropp, Terry; LeRoy Reitz, Dan Frantz, Belton; Andrew Schmidt, Dale Fahrdrich, Lawrence Unruh, Downey; Jonas Beachy, Levi Miller, Allen Hartzler, Hill City; Sam Headings, Lewis Delagrang, Camino; Ottis Yoder, Alex Shubin, Harold Vogt, Alvin Nisly, Three Rivers; and Maynard Book, Clair Knepp, Paul Charles, North Fork. Maynard Book worked in a supervisory capacity during this time.

All kitchen duties were performed by the members of the cooking school in rotation. Because of the large number of men enrolled there was considerable free time. This was used primarily for study and work on special projects. Occasionally some nearby rancher or other resident in the neighborhood would come to camp asking for help on some job around his house. The book-weary cooks would welcome the diversion offered by a few hours of out-door physical labor. In the main, however, the men were kept very busy with dish-washing, cooking, baking, meal planning,

Because of the rotation of duties, the practical skill gained on any one job was quite negligible. Actual day-by-day experience in a more permanent assignment will need to account for this part of each cook's training. Even so, numerous new dishes were tried, some with stunning success, but others with sad results. The campers at North Fork were unwittingly the guinea pigs. Among the more successful dishes was a genuine Russian borscht made by the one Russian Molokan member of the school. At lunch one day a definitely new dish was on the tables. What should have been egg cutlets turned out to be a cross between creamed eggs and potato cakes with a hurried addition of toast to accompany the concoction!

Classes were held Monday through Friday evenings. The first two weeks were devoted to the study of nutrition. The regular Red Cross course was used as a guide. During this time the fellows learned the actual nutritional value of foods which will enable one to determine daily needs and whether or not the usual run of complaints have any basis in fact. The class discovered that most camp menus are sufficient to keep men in good health and to provide energy for arduous work. After such a course cooks should be able to answer complaints offered by "starch objectors" and others who are suspicious of their diet.

Members of the C.P.S. cooking school conducted at North Fork, California, camp during March and April, 1945.

The next two weeks were spent in the study of principles of cookery. In this course the men learned the necessity of proper cooking methods to make foods palatable and to retain their food value. Demonstrations were held each day during this time showing the difference between cooking meat properly and at too high a temperature, or the contrast between overly cooked vegetables and those cooked for the right length of time to retain their shape, color, and food value, and other similar experiments. A number of pictures were shown in connection with these studies.

Walter Unrau and Mabrie Goins taught classes in good buying practices, record keeping, budget control, and care and cutting of meat.

Miss Naomi Brubaker, dietitian from Three Rivers, assisted the last two weeks of the school. Her discussions on kitchen management and food preservation were most interesting and helpful. Her fine personality in addition to her skill made her contributions most appreciated.

Each man worked on a special project during the school. These included special studies on meat care and cutting, baking, food nutrients, and the planning and serving of meals and others. White rat experiments were also made. The most successful was the contrast between a balanced diet and one consisting only of meat, potatoes, gravy, white bread and coffee.

The climax of the experience was the special meal prepared and served to the camp by the members of the school. Table cloths, candles and wild flowers presented a most attractive dining hall. Chicken and fresh strawberry ice cream were the highlights of the menu. The cooks and waiters made an impressive appearance in their white shirts and aprons. The after dinner program was planned by the camp social committee. Clever stunts and games helped make the evening an enjoyable one for all.

The final event was a trip to Yosemite Park which afforded an enjoyable outing, a suitable diversion for the last day of the school.

Camp North Fork benefited in many ways by the cooking school. The fine spirit prevailing among this group enhanced a good feeling throughout the entire camp. Their participation in religious and recreational activities added considerably to the enrichment of camp life.

The men are expecting to be assigned to western camps and units where an expanded side camp program is anticipated.

Members of the school are grateful to the Mennonite Central Committee and Selective Service for affording them this opportunity. As a result these men are in a position to be of greater service to their fellow campers, and are learning a skill which will be of value in the days to come.

Close of School ?

Should there ever be a "close of school" for anyone? We talk of schools closing. Courses and semesters and quarters do terminate in a formal way, but that need not stop the activity of education which was embodied in them. We speak of preparing for life. To some extent that is true, for with maturity comes the task of teaching pupils or plowing for wheat. There is less time for formal education, but he who feels that his education is over is bound to be out-dated in his education not many years hence. We live in a changing world. God desires for us growth and more growth. First spiritual birth, then spiritual growth. The more we know the greater should be our conception of what we do not know. The more we know of God, the more we ought to see of our imperfectness. Schools are institutions in which education is made available to men and women. To a large extent the success of a school can be measured by the continued education on the part of its graduates. Likewise the worth of an individual is largely determined by his receptivity to fuller truth. How ungrateful we are to God if we do not let the Holy Spirit lead us forward into all truth. May Christian education never stop for us.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Sylvan Lehman, Lima, Ohio

June 6—Psalm 5:3. "My voice shalt thou hear in the morning, O Lord; in the morning will I direct my prayer unto thee, and will look up." The writer of the Psalm knew from whence help cometh. He knew that in the quietness of the morning hour, strength is obtained for daily duties. An hour spent with the Word, and in prayer is a protective factor for eventualities of the day. The Psalmist was an early applicant at the throne, knowing it is good to begin the day with God. Let divine things occupy their rightful place. Let us aim rightly and God will answer for "the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

June 7—Mark 9:23. "Jesus saith unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth." What infinite possibilities of faith and the greatness of our need of faith these days. Many today are swept from their moorings, and the ship wrecks are the inevitable in the midst of life's storms. It is needful to watch lest we get our eyes on things, rather than on Jesus. As recipients of His grace, we find Him ready to help in every time of need. Jesus will speak peace and calm the troubled soul. Christ's power is infinite; we limit Him by our lack of faith. "Fear not, I am with thee, O be not dismayed, For I am thy God, and will still give thee aid; I'll strengthen thee, help thee and cause thee to stand, Upheld by my gracious omnipotent hand."

June 8—I Cor. 1:27. "But God has chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty." God's choices are very extraordinary. He uses the noise in the mulberry tree to bring victory to David. He takes an humble fisherman and makes him into a soul-winner. He makes a publican into an evangelist. He makes Mary Magdalene the herald of the resurrection story. He makes a persecutor of Christians into an apostle. He makes the trusting soul into a joyous witness of Christ's saving power. Christ looketh upon the heart. The apostles in the eyes of the world were seemingly foolish, yet chosen by God. To come in contact with Jesus changes the whole course of life.

June 9—Heb. 11:10. "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." Abraham had a faith that gives confidence for the future. His abode was a temporary residence. His heart was fixed on a goal that reached beyond the confines of this life. Abraham had a faith that enabled him to see beyond inconveniences of the present surroundings, looking forward in hope and confidence to that day, when forever, he would abide in "a city which hath foundations whose builder and maker is God." The testimony of Abraham reveals knowledge that earth cannot afford, a permanent residence for immortal souls; therefore he looked unto God. "What rejoicing in His presence, When are banished grief and pain; When the crooked ways are straightened, And the dark things shall be plain. Face to face! O blissful moment! Face to face—to see and know; Face to face with my Redeemer. Jesus Christ who loves me so."

June 10—Rev. 15:3. "And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb." Moses is the emancipator of Israel, from Egyptian bondage, social bondage. The Lamb emancipates from spiritual bondage. Moses is an illustration of deliverance from wrong. The Lamb delivers from sin. Moses delivers from worldly power; the Lamb delivers from evil within. The deliverance provided through the Lamb is the world's deepest need. "He hath put a new song in my mouth even praise to our God: many shall see it, and fear, and shall trust God."

June 11—I Cor. 3:21-23 "Therefore let no man glory in men. For all things are yours; Whether Paul, or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life, or death, or things present or things to come; all are yours; And ye are Christ's; and Christ is God's." It is commendable to think and meditate on our inheritance. We are to take stock of our possessions, and note the immensity of them. New strength comes to the soul when we look abroad and say, Mine! Mine! The endowment of the Church of Christ, is complete in Him. As an heir of God and joint-heir of Christ, we are immeasurably rich. Through grace we come into the family of God, "to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time."

June 12—I Pet. 3:8. "Finally, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, love as brethren, be pitiful, be courteous." This is an expression of intimate relationship. To prove a blessing unto men certain virtues must be evident in daily living. Fine characteristics imply fine character. The text implies complete submission, unconditional surrender, in order to live exemplary before men. "Keep yourselves in the love of God. And on some have compassion, and make a difference; And others save with fear, pulling them out of the fire; hating even the garment spotted by the flesh."

June 13—Psalm 32:8. "I will instruct thee and teach thee in the way which thou shalt go: I will guide thee with mine eye." Here is guidance for the path of life. The Lord guides with the glance of the eye. Some animals need to be guided with a strong hand. The Lord guides with the eye. What tenderness can be revealed in the eye. Guidance with the eye implies intimate relationship. Eye-speech is that which lovers use. Eye guidance can only be used as we look unto Him, and thus follow as He leads.

In Years to Come

*In years to come, when men have grown more wise,
A child will find, in some museum nook,
A rusty sword or twisted bayonet;
Perhaps a hand grenade, or some device
Of poison-death. Upon them he will look
With questioning. In sorrow and regret
His grandsire, at his side, will make reply:
"A sad, sad tale it is; there was a time
When fathers sped their stalwart sons to kill
On fields of battle. They were spurred to die,
If need be, that some other sons, in grime
And gore, might fall. A nation's mighty will Gave treasured wealth and life, that there might be Above one flag the proud word, Victory.
'Twas long ago—you doubt my word, I see;
But that's the tale my grandsire told to me."*

In the Name of Our Dead

An address Delivered on V-E Day at the University of Chicago

By Robert Maynard Hutchins

This is a day of thanksgiving and prayer—thanks that we have been delivered from the bloodiest war in history, thanks to those brave men, living and dead, who have been the means of our deliverance; and prayer that we may show humility, humanity, intelligence and charity in using the victory they have won for us.

It is unnecessary to say that it is our duty to remain firm to the end. And this means something more, and something more difficult, than merely persisting till the defeat of Japan. All those regulations which have been necessary to maintain the economy, to supply the troops and to prevent impoverishment will now be doubly irksome. They will be doubly necessary. We can only imagine the devastation that has been wrought in Europe. For the first time in modern history whole cities, even whole provinces, have ceased to exist.

We come now to the real test of our professed ideals, for the sake of which we claimed to enter the war. We did so, we said, not to save our own skins but to make possible a just, peaceful human society which should embrace all the peoples of the earth. If that is what we want we must now sacrifice, not our lives, but our goods to save millions of our fellow men from starvation and from the moral and political disintegration which starvation will carry with it. There are already some indications that we shall be less willing to sacrifice our goods than we have been our lives or at least the lives of our soldiers and sailors.

Will We Forget History?

Educated people now come to the test of their education. Every educated person knows enough about human nature to know that war is brutalizing and that propaganda should be received with skepticism. In Napoleon's time it was generally agreed, but fortunately not by those in power, that the French were a guilty race who ought to be exterminated. The slogan "Hang the Kaiser" seems ridiculous to us now. I venture to predict that the present excitement about war criminals will seem ridiculous a few years hence. At this juncture we can afford to remember what Edmund Burke said of us: "I do not know the method of drawing up an indictment against a whole people."

Robert Maynard Hutchins, President of the University of Chicago, spoke as a prophet of our day when he delivered the above address, which is here reprinted from the Christian Century.

We cannot support the thesis that because German leader acted illegally, therefore they should be treated illegally. Two wrongs do not make a right. It is easy to understand why Mussolini was lynched; it is more difficult to see why Americans should gloat over it. We should remember that one of the points which Job urged in his own favor when seeking relief from his own misfortunes was that he did not rejoice when his enemy fell.

We are now on the verge of forgetting history, to say nothing of Edmund Burke and Job, and forgetting common sense as well, for common sense tells us that if we do not intend to kill off all the Germans and Japanese in the world, and if we do not intend to rule them as slaves by military force till the end of time, we must treat them with justice and, if possible, with mercy. Otherwise we lay here and now the foundations of the next war. To feed German citizens one-third of what the American soldier gets, to reduce Germany, in short, to a subsistence level; to make Germany a pastoral country; to split Germany into little states, so as to base the next war on its inevitable desire to unite—all this is unhistorical and senseless enough. When we think of the dreadful poverty which Germany must undergo, even with the best of treatment, in the years ahead, and when we reflect on the political consequences to us of that poverty, we should see that it is in our own interest to do everything we can to mitigate its effects.

The Price of Peace

The most distressing aspect of present discussions of the future of Germany and Japan is the glee with which the most inhuman proposals are brought forward and the evident pleasure with which they are received by our fellow citizens. The general maxim of the educated person should be, "Judge not that ye be not judged."

The peace of the world depends upon the restoration of the German and Japanese people. The wildest atrocity stories cannot alter the simple truths that all men are human, that no men are beasts, that all men are the children of God, that no men are irrevocably damned by God, and that all men are by nature members of the human community. These truths must dictate our attitude toward and decisions about the German and Japanese people. The misbehavior of an individual man, resulting from miseducation, misdirection or stress of circumstances, does not permit us to forget that he is a man or to treat him as a brute or to act like brutes ourselves. If we are going to have one good world, the Germans and the Japanese must somehow be incorporated into it. The basis of such incorporation must be justice and mercy.

The Issue of World Organization

The educated person is under a duty not to forget his education in facing the issue of world organization. The educated person knows that it is impossible to have world organization without paying for it. He will decide the question, not by harboring the hallucination that he can have it without paying for it, but by asking whether the kind of organization he is likely to get is worth the price he will have to pay. If the organization is likely to promote war, he will rightly decide that it is worthless, and that he will stay out of it if he can. If the organization is likely to promote peace, he should be willing to give up something in order to get the organization going.

Once more, if such a man will not give up anything and yet insists that he wants peace through world organization he is a fool. The law of contradiction tells us that you cannot at one and the same time join a world organization and stay out of it. You cannot have all of the advantages of membership in a world organization and none of the disadvantages. You cannot have all the attributes of sovereignty and give up some of them.

You cannot have a world organization and decline to have the world organized. In particular, you cannot have the world organized and insist that your country will remain unorganized. You can't, for example, have an effective world court if you are going to insist that the court can't judge your country without its consent. You can't have an effective world organization if the organization can act only when it is unanimous. This reduces world organization to a delusion and a snare: it looks like world organization; it misleads people into thinking that they can rely on the world organization, when actually the world is as disorganized as ever.

Equally pernicious is the doctrine that all right lies with the big powers and that their security and spheres of influence are the primary concern of the world. This is the surest foundation for the next war. If justice and law are the cement of society, they are the cement of any world society. We cannot pretend to have a world society unless all the members of it are equally subject to law and unless the society is founded on justice, not to our allies alone, but also to our defeated enemies.

An unjust peace and an unjust world organization make the next war inevitable and make it likely that the next war will be unjust. The sense of injustice is the best excuse for fighting, and an unjust world organization commits the members in advance to fight unjust wars.

In the name, then, of those who have fought and died for us, let us pray and let us work that those powers which make men human may prevail over those which relate them to the beasts. In the hour of victory let us remember that vengeance is the Lord's. With full recognition of the dangers and the difficulties, but with confidence and resolution, let us struggle forward toward the ultimate creation of the great community.

IN MEMORIAM

MARIE T. NICKEL, daughter of John and Anna (Dick) Heppner, was born April 5, 1884, near Butterfield, Minnesota. At the age of nineteen she was baptized and received into the First Church of Mountain Lake. Later she joined the Bergfelder Church. She and Abraham T. Nickel were united in marriage in 1912. For the last five years she was bedfast as a result of creeping paralysis. The call to the beyond came on April 24, 1945.

Fred Aeschliman was born in Switzerland, September 24, 1859, and died March 10, 1945. He married Rosa Rubin in 1882. They came to Washington in 1887, where both became charter members of the First Church, Colfax. Mrs. Aeschliman passed away a year ago.

Isaac Kunkel, son of Frederick and Katherine Kunkel, was born in Russia, and passed away on April 13, 1945. In 1877 he came to Parker, South Dakota, where at eighteen he became a member of the Swiss Church at Marion. Later he became a member of the church at Alsen. In 1892 he married Mary Loewen, who preceded him in death in 1925. Later he married Mrs. Mary Derksen, who now survives him.

Kenneth F. Hilty, almost twenty-seven, and from Pandora, Ohio, was killed in Belgium on January 26 while on official duty for the army. A memorial service was held for him at the Grace Church, Pandora, Ohio.

Mrs. John H. Regier, nee Susie Dick, was born near Mountain Lake, Minnesota, on May 14, 1879, and died April 21, 1945. Originally a member of the Carson M. B. Church, she joined the Bethel Church, Mountain Lake. In 1926 she married John H. Regier, who preceded her in death in 1941.

Jacob A. Ratzlaff, son of Henry Ratzlaff and Elizabeth nee Buller, was born February 11, 1888, near Burrton, Kansas. Baptized in 1909 he later joined the Bergthal Church near Corn, Oklahoma. In 1919 he married Anna Baergen, who preceded him in death in 1941. He passed away April 9, 1945.

John Albright, son of Jacob and Marie (Stucky) Albright, was born November 25, 1864, in Horidisch, Russia. In 1874 he migrated to Marion, South Dakota, where he was baptized and received into the Mennonite Church. In 1883 he married Kathern Graber, and in 1884 they came to Pretty Prairie, Kansas, where he helped organize the First Mennonite Church. In 1898 his wife passed away. In 1899 he found another helpmate in Caroline Schwartz who now survives him. He passed away April 7, 1945.

RELIEF

Relief Worker Reported Missing

The Relief Office at Akron has been officially informed by the Cairo office of U.N.R.R.A. that Marie Fast, Mennonite relief worker in the Middle East, was "lost at sea" early in the morning of May 2. However, further confirmation is still to follow. This information was later confirmed by G. Richard Yoder, in a report directly from Italy. Dr. Yoder was travelling with Marie Fast and is a survivor of the ship which sunk. Both workers were in company with other relief workers and were returning after accompanying refugees from the camps in Egypt to their homes in Europe. A complete account of the incident, as written by Richard Yoder, appears elsewhere.

Marie Fast has been serving as a nurse at the El Shatt refugee camp near Cairo, Egypt, since August, 1944. She is at home at Mountain Lake, Minnesota, where she is a member of the General Conference of Mennonites. She is also a sister of the vice-chairman of the M.C.C., Henry A. Fast.

Alsatian Brethren Share Relief Load in France

Samuel Goering has reported more extensively on the investigation tour through France, made by Henry Buller and himself, between March 19 and April 18, 1945. Excerpts from his report read as follows:

"We made a tour by car of about 2,500 miles touching the following large centers: Dieppe, Le Havre, Rouen, Paris, Le Mans, Angers, Angouleme, Tulle, Le Puy, Lyon, Macon, Dole, Belfort, Mulhouse, Colmar, Strasbourg, Nancy, Paris. We will want to center our work not south but north and east of Lyon.

"On Easter Sunday we attended services at the Mennonite church in Colmar. In the afternoon Bro. Volkmar who is very much interested in the relief program accompanied us to see Bro. Widmer near Mulhouse who is chairman-treasurer of their conference committee. He agreed to serve as treasurer for relief funds until the permanent committee is organized. From there we went to see Bro. Nussbaumer at Altkirch. All three are members of their conference committee. They wanted to know what the American Mennonites would do, and we promised them $500. a month for the present. We decided to pay over to them, from the money on hand, 100,000 Frs., or the equivalent of four months allowance so that they have enough money to begin now some worthwhile work, a children's home or whatever they think best. Some of the Mennonites have lost everything, but others lost nothing or very little. Folks who have things will, we feel, gladly give supplies or money to help along. Bro. Volkmar is willing to help in the work to get things started. He has two daughters who are graduate nurses and interested in helping along in the work. The oldest daughter has ten years of experience in the hospital and the younger has worked five years in a children's home."

Agricultural Worker Appointed for Paraguay

Alfred Lindhorst, Galt, Ontario, was appointed at the May 5th M.C.C. executive committee meeting. He will give two years of agricultural service to the Mennonite colonists in Paraguay.

Six Relief Workers Now in India

The India report submitted by J. Harold Sherk for March, 1945, contains more specific news of the arrival of two brethren: "

"We were delighted to welcome S. F. Pannabecker and P. P. Baltzer, who arrived by ship from Egypt on the evening of Good Friday, March 30."

The brethren are participating in the Bengal relief work, while negotiations continue to have them enter China at the earliest opportunity. "

C. P. S.

C.P.S. Demobilization

Now that the war in Europe has ended and the War Department has announced intention to release 2,000,000 men from the armed forces, Selective Service has also indicated that a parallel demobilization of C.P.S. will take place. Apart from the regular discharges for physical disability and other reasons and the recent ruling to release men forty-two years of age and over, Selective Service has estimated that during the course of another year approximately 900 men in C.P.S. will be discharged according to a point rating system. This point system has not been entirely clarified to date, but for C.P.S. men it will probably apply to dependency and length of service: one point for each month of service and twelve points for every child (up to three children).

But even though partial demobilization is now a reality, it must be remembered that there are no indications to date that induction will not continue during the coming year, according to the point system, at the present rate of induction the actual population of C.P.S. would be reduced by 300 men.

Shift to Special Projects

C.P.S. men in Mennonite camps are continuing to transfer from base camps into special projects, during the month of April, for example, 125 men from M.C.C. camps into special projects. This brought the total number of men in special projects, administered by Mennonites, up to 1,667. The number of men in base camps on the same date stood at 2,328. Released May 16, 1945.

HENRY HARDER NEW PASTOR AT ABERDEEN

Aberdeen, Idaho: May 20th will be the last Sunday that Rev. and Mrs. H. J. Brown will be in our midst. They have served our church for the past five months and they have been a wonderful blessing. They are anxiously awaiting the time when they can again return to the China field and take up the work which had to be stopped when the Japanese military forces occupied their territory.

Our church sometime ago extended a call to Rev. H. N. Harder of Geary Oklahoma, to become our Pastor. Rev. Harder visited Aberdeen about a month ago to look over the field and since returning home we have received word from them that they have accepted our call. The time of their arrival is still uncertain. Our hearts are filled with gratitude that we will again have a regular pastor.

Our faithful choir director Mr. Gustav A. Klempel has moved to Salem, Oregon. Mr. Klempel has served our church faithfully for the past thirteen years. Our choir, however, will not be without direction as we have another splendid director in Henry D. Becker, who has already produced a fine cantata for Easter.

The sad news of the death of Pvt. Ernest Peters, was received here two weeks ago. This death occurred in an Army truck accident in Holland.

Fourteen delegates from Aberdeen are planning on attending the General Conference sessions.

LARGE EDEN CHURCH COMMEMORATES ANNIVERSARY

Moundridge, Kansas:—On February 14, 1895, a group of Mennonites met near Moundridge and organized the Hopefield Eden Mennonite Church. On June 23, of the same year, Rev. C. J. Goering was called to the ministry. On May 13, 1945, fifty years later, over a thousand persons gathered at the Eden Church to commemorate these two events.

In the morning service, Rev. Walter Gering read a short history of the Eden Church, which he translated into English from the German original as written by Rev. C. J. Goering. Rev. Phil A. Wedel, who served the Eden Church from 1925 to 1936, and at present is pastor of the Alexanderwohl Church near Goessel, addressed the congregation on the topic "The Overcoming Church and the Overcoming Christian."

The afternoon meeting consisted largely of addresses by "native sons" in the ministry. Rev. Roland Goering and Edwin Stucky spoke for a few minutes on "My Home Church." The Rev. John E. Kaufman brought a message on "The Challenge to the Ministry" and Dr. E. G. Kaufman had as his subject "Rev. C. J. Goering." After Rev. C. J. Goering had made a few remarks, he was presented with an easy chair by the church as a token of appreciation for forty-two years of faithful service as minister and elder, and as elder emeritus since his resignation as elder in 1937.

Throughout the services, different groups and individuals served with music. Altogether it was a day full of spiritual value, and long to be remembered by all who were present.—Ellis Goering, Corr.

—Three Public Opinion surveys show that the majority of people are friendly toward Conscientious Objectors. The survey also shows that non-church members were more approving than church members, which indicates that Christians need to get closer to Christ.

The National Service Board for Religious Objectors has released estimates of the cost of operating the Civilian Public Service camps for the past four years. It cost the Mennonites over two million dollars, the Friends and the Brethern a million and a quarter each and the other denominations a half a million dollars, or a total cost to the churches of over five million dollars. The number of men in C.P.S. is over 8,000.

NUMBER 23

Children Are People

By Mrs. Willis E. Rich

June is the month when many churches observe a certain Sunday as Children's Day. There is usually a program featuring the children from the cradle roll on up. Many mothers have drilled their small sons and daughters for days so that they may make a good showing and do their part well. All the children feel very important, especially if they can wear something new, even though it is only a new hair ribbon. And the adult congregation has the delightful privilege of enjoying the program. Every father and mother whose family is represented in that group of youngsters takes a keen interest and feels a certain sense of pride. Their hearts are full of gratitude and love for their children.

Yes, Christian parents love their children. Let us consider for a while what it really means to love our children. There is sentimental love. This kind of love is revealed by doting, indulgent, adoring parents. They are "nice" to their children. This is a form of self-love, and is often very satisfying both to parents and children.

Then there is intelligent love. Parents who love their children intelligently do not think of them only as cute little cherubs but also as the men and women of tomorrow. To love our children intelligently means to want the best for them. The best means that we want them to be courageous, dependable, kind, cooperative to have good judgment to choose Jesus as their Saviour and Lord and to develop a fine noble Christian character. Parents with this kind of love will understand that they cannot shelter them from all difficulties, but must help them face problems and temptations. They must fortify them against the evils of our world and make them aware of what lies in their path. If we love our children and understand what they have to contend with, being human, subject to temptations to be hot-tempered, selfish etc., we know that they must learn the unavoidable consequences of wrong-doing, the need for repentance and forgiveness, the price of fellowship. We know that if we want them to be poised, serene, happy, pure in heart they will have much to overcome. Our children need the loving guidance and help of consecrated parents today more than ever before.

To love them also means to praise them. It works wonders to show appreciation for their efforts. Many parents think it will spoil their children to be praised. Sincere well-earned commendation is not pampering; it is a form of encouragement that even adults often need. Every one needs to feel that he is appreciated. Children are people. Most children will try harder to please and to do their best, if they get this reward. To learn to tie a shoe-string is a real achievement in a child's life. It gives him a sense of confidence. The next achievement may be to learn self-control and to sit quietly and reverently in church. His parents may help him to feel that if he is old enough to tie his shoe-strings, he is old enough to sit quietly in church. It serves as a form of promotion.

To love our children also means to fellowship with them. Doing things together, friendly comradeship between parents and children will obviate most behavior problems. Friendship between parents and children works and thrives on the same principle as friendship between any other two or several persons. Much time spent together in conversation, talking over and discussing many things, especially those of great importance to the child,—this will make for devotion and mutual love and loyalty, and bring about that family solidarity which is so important in these days of distractions and outside lures and influences.

Fellowship also comes from working together. The farm offers the best arrangement for family cooperation in work, . . . fields and woods, garden and barn-yard, carpenter and machine-shop, dairy, orchard and household. Working together offers golden opportunities to strengthen bonds of love and trains in problem-solving and industry.

Fellowship also comes from playing together. Little moments of play here and there are just as important as planned organized play at set times. Children are most appreciative of the time parents will take to play with them. One must recognize and seize opportunities as they arise. Families can have picnics together, attend programs and concerts together. Often ordinary days can become very special by small innovations. Having people in, including friends of the children, is an excellent way of promoting fellowship. Just being happy together is very satisfying. Together is a beautiful word.

Lastly, fellowship comes from worshipping together. Children can learn very early habits of praise, gratitude, confession, and an awareness of God by the parent's example. The family altar can become very meaningful by having discussions and by having all members of the family take part at least sometimes. I believe some families have abandoned the good practice of family worship because the parents remember that in their own childhood these times were often meaningless, monotonous, and merely something to be gotten over with instead of the inspiring, instructive and vital quarter hours they could have been. There are other opportunities for worship, too. In the garden at seed-planting time; on finding an unusual worm, one of God's creatures; or, when gathering the peas or the corn. Or having periods of special praise for special blessings as they occur.

I believe most parents often feel a sense of failure in rearing their children. We often feel inadequate in meeting situations in the right way. I wonder if it would not be a good practice for parents to confess their sins of the spirit to their children once in a while, and not try to keep up the false pretense that we are models of perfection. Children are quick to sense weaknesses and inconsistencies. It is not always easy to be perfectly honest, but I believe the rewards are great.

Being parents can be the most challenging and rewarding job we can have. May God give us guidance and wisdom to help our children build a better future.

ATROCITY STORIES may be considered in the light of the following points:

1. God "hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth . . ." (Acts 17:26) The Germans do not have blood which makes them innately different from the English and the Americans. God made them in his own image as well as us. If they were essentially different from us in potentiality, then the Gospel could not be a saving power to them. If people of German blood were innately inferior, then a large percentage of Americans would be likewise, for between 1820 and 1936 more immigrants came to the United States from Germany than from any other one country. If we speak of the German people as inferior then we do the same thing that we have blamed the Germans of doing in their relations to the Jews and others.

2. German culture, especially since the last World War, has undoubtedly developed some very unwholesome characteristics which led to terrible results. But have the Allies had nothing to do with the negative development of that culture? What about the food blockade that starved many Germans after the last war? What about the blame for the sole guilt of the war? What about despair-producing reparations, etc.? What about all the evil results that must come when evil is countered with evil?

3. To win a military victory over the Germans, the Allies have had to be more deadly and destructive than the Nazis.

4. Atrocity stories of the last war, as a whole, turned out to be deliberately manufactured falsehoods. Such stories are a means for promoting the war-mindedness of a people. It is easy to believe something bad about the person who is hated or feared. There were atrocities stories about us.

5. It is significant that the tremendous outburst of atrocity stories has come after the cessation of armed conflict in Europe, when we ourselves have had to stop and notice the thick blood on our hands and the many, many charred bodies that our flames have eaten. Furthermore glimpses of U.S. warfare in the Pacific tend to make the heart sick. A recent associated Press report from Guam stated: "The Shinagawa area, in which probably 750,000 Japanese live provided 'one of the happiest combinations of inflammability and congestion' that could be found for a bombing target, said a spokesman for the 21st bomber command." Frederick Libby refers to this process as "our new method of burying alive civilians by the square mile." Must we not as a nation feel guilty about this? Dr. David D. Eitzen says, ". . . when we find it difficult to be forgiving of others, we very probably cannot forgive ourselves—we are projecting our personal sense of guilt upon others." May our own nation be projecting a sense of guilt upon others?

6. Vengeance belongs to God and not to us. He sees to it that all sin entails its own punishment. We are too sinful to administer just punishment. Christ taught us to pray, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." That prayer becomes terrible to the individuals who refuse to forgive.

7. "I saw it with my own eyes" stories written by local boys who are across may be accepted with the knowledge that human observation is very fallible and especially so when handicapped by limited time and unfamiliar conditions. Who produced what in Europe is not always very clear—even in the atrocity pictures of the famous magazines. One such showed Allied soldiers laying out nearly three thousand dead bodies along a bombed street for burial. Question: Were the Germans responsible for these many dead or was it allied bombing that killed them? To believe everything that is printed hardly seems justifiable.

8. That atrocities have been committed in this war need not be questioned. War itself is the greatest atrocity that there is. But even if the sins of the Germans are exceedingly great that does not give any modern sons of thunder the right to ask God to rain down fire upon the offenders, 'For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them.' Once another military government committed an atrocity. Perhaps, we can call this the atrocity of all time because of the utter purity of Him who was so treated. It put to death in a very painful and shameful way one who had been framed and was totally innocent. This action was most savagely brutal towards such a one. It was uncalled for. It was not right that such injustice should be wrought. That atrocity is established. Was it the ground for revenge, for the extermination of all those who took part in it? Did it make those who crucified him members of an inferior race, incapable of decent civilized existence? Why didn't God strike right down and put them out of the way? Wouldn't the world have been better off without them? The answer comes from the cross: "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do. He knew what they did; they did not. He could forgive their guilt, for he was guiltless. "Father forgive them" is the Christian prayer for all around in these days—for those fellow human beings in Europe who have sinned and also for all those in and of our own land who call for bitterest vengeance and point the finger most accusingly. They do as they do because they are a part of the war system. The war system keeps a man from being his true self. As Christians we can only fittingly pray "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do." No, in His sight they do not know, although in the sight of many they may seem to. This must be our faith if we would believe in the cross of Jesus Christ. The cross and not the sword is the means of reconciliation to God and to one another. If the German people have the potentiality for Christlikeness, then let us not drive them into utter madness. Let us feed them, teach them, love them, and win their confidence until they become calm and see things clearly, maybe very clearly. To love, forgive, and redeem is Christlike. Let America be loyal to Christ, for He is The Way.

It Can Happen Here

By George S. Stoneback

Peace-time military training is presented to us in all kind of sugar-coated versions. It is a health-building, character-building program that will provide technical land college training at the expense of the government. The military aspect is so submerged that many feel that it would be a good thing—even for Mennonite boys.

This morning as I walked out to the neighboring farm where I get our milk, I watched the cloud shadows playing on Jack's Mountain. I thought of the part it played in relation to the battle of Gettysburg. I thought of the battlefield which lies just beyond the hill to the northwest of us. Our county is very proud of that battle-field. It likes to remind the world that during World War I, the army camp located on the battle-field (Camp Colt) was commanded by none other than the brains of the defeat of Germany—General Eisenhower. As I walked home, I felt that I had received not only two quarts of milk—but a warning for my people. Let me tell you why:—

Eisenhower's ancestors, like many of our Mennonite fathers, came from Switzerland, by way of York, Pa., and then on out to the Middle West. His ancestors were River Brethren. His mother was opposed to war because of religious conviction as well as because of what she had seen when the armies of the North and South marched back and forth across her Virginia homestead. Years later she pled with her sons: "Don't ever get into a war, my boys. Christ forbid you should be soldiers. Promise me now!" Her boys promised.

Some years later (they were living in Kansas at the time), Dwight graduated from high school. He had been a good football player and hoped to play in college. Someone suggested that he go to college free of charge and play on a real football team if he went to West Point. So he applied for admission and was accepted. "But West Point is the army!" his mother protested. "Don't worry, Mom. There will never be another war. I'll just get some good engineering courses, play football a little, then resign as soon as I can after graduation and come back to peaceful Kansas." Since it was not to be real military training for a military career, his mother consented to his going.

Dwight got his engineering courses, but he still has not returned to peaceful Kansas. Another war did come—and another. During World War I Dwight commanded Camp Colt, training tank troops. Just as he was getting ready to sail for France, the Armistice was signed. After the war he stayed on in the army in spite of the fact that he received no promotion. When the army began to maneuver in the south at the beginning of this war, Eisenhower was there. His tactics were so original that he was rapidly promoted to the top of the military pile, where he told the troops to "Fight like hell!"

Draw your own conclusions.

SAND OR ROCK

*I built my house upon the sand;
The shining sand of earthly fame,
The shifting sand of means acclaim;
The glittering worthless sand of gold,
The quick-sand of ambitions bold,
The sands of pleasure swift to run,
The sands of beauty in the sun;
I built my house upon the sand
The house I built came tumbling down,
Because 'twas built upon the sand.*

*I built my house upon the Rock;
The rock of love's imperial plea:
The Rock of God's all-wise decree,
The rock of truth immutable,
The rock of faith's firm citadel:
The rock of glad obedience,
The rock of God's own providence;
The rock of hopes that never die;
Of promises that glorify;
God's rock that stands the final shock,
I built my house upon the Rock.
The house I built is standing still.
Firm-founded on the Father's will.*

The Spiritual Toll of the War

By David D. Eitzen

(In the first installment of his article Dr. Eitzen showed how war tends to lead to the breakdown of a "man's sense of worthy selfhood" and how this then results in unfortunate compensatory behavior. He declared "The most usual type of such behavior is to vindicate a feeling of rightness in expressing aggressiveness." Next he showed how this compensatory aggressiveness might manifest itself in ex-servicemen. In this, the concluding part of his article, he goes on to show how yet other frustrated ex-servicemen may engage in still other behavior that is problematic. —Editor)

By virtue of a different background and therefore an entirely different type of temperament, another young service man also frustrated will respond in ways quite opposite to the behavior described above; namely, that of self-pity and retreat. Such an individual has become rather permanently discouraged. He is thoroughly convinced that he can never succeed. Hence the only remaining face-saving way out is to be a martyr.

Many soldiers have been officers and others have been heroes. They will be like the little girl, who, when asked what she would like to be when she was grown up, replied, "A returned missionary." But in civilian life they will be mere neighbors. This will cause some to feel hurt and unappreciated.

And then there is the handicapped man—what excuses for self-pity he has! He will not only need a whole range of technical aid, specialized medical treatment, artificial limbs, vocational re-training, and special vocational replacement, but he must also make an inner adjustment to his changes status. He must learn to accept himself intellectually and emotionally.

Besides those who will express their frustration in terms of compensatory aggressiveness and those who will characteristically withdraw from the conflictful aspects of reality, there is another class of people who will express their frustration in a spirit of fatalism. We may consider a man's basic attitude to be constructive and healthy whenever it is really helping him to move ahead as a self-governing independent person who wants to stand on his own feet and who recognizes that his welfare and the rights and welfare of others are bound up intimately together. Everybody has his days of discouragement but the wish to carry on is always dominant with him if he is healthy. But the class of whom we are now talking will have given up the fight. And what an excuse for such an attitude they do have.

In the first place they were selected for their 1-A bodies, minds, and emotions. Truly they now no longer are that. Here is the young husband who has no hands to butter his bread. Blessed is that wife who so loves her mutilated husband as to teach him to butter his own bread in his own way. It is reported that some boys at the front suddenly become so overwhelmed with this dreadful prospect that they stand up in the foxhole and allow themselves to be shot down.

Others of this class will be like a geranium plant that spent the winter in the basement of a house. Their personal resourcefulness and initiative have been blighted by the regimentation of army life. Everything was uniform—their clothing, their hair-cut, their shoes, their food. Never did they face the problems of choosing between two gaudy neckties. Of the married men in the service 45 per cent have never been on their own. Will they not face a serious personality problem when they come back to establish their homes?

Restlessness and aimlessness seems to be the most marked characteristic of returning servicemen. In one study it was discovered that 70 per cent of that contingent were exceedingly restless. A typical statement made by one of the men is as follows. "I am too restless. I am more nervous now than when I was in combat. I have bad dreams at night, dreams of my buddies being shot down and things like that." Another puts it in this fashion, "I've been more jittery since I returned than I was in combat. I'm restless and I can't keep still. I must be on the move." Tension capacity or patience is one of the chief marks of a mature personality. This for very many of the servicemen has disappeared. To act now, whether with the enemy or with a lady—that is their impulse.

The most deadly microbe to spiritual health is that of concluding that life does not make sense. This is as much as to say "there is no God." The Fortune Magazine for December, 1943, spoke of "The Psychiatrist's Dilemma." "The best way the psychiatrist knows to foment the necessary emotion and foster hatred of the enemy is by propaganda, but that's exactly what the enemy does. The problem then is, can democracy vindicate itself by democratic methods? In order to overcome a Hitler by force means that one must become a worse Hitler than the Hitler whom one fights. To be fully aware of this problem and to grapple with it courageously is a mark of spiritual health, but to be aware of it only subliminally gives rise to anxiety and the next step is an emotional breakdown."

Not only is the thoughtful soldier perplexed about the war issue itself, but what a blow in his face to perceive the outspoken racial prejudices when he comes home. Frankly, does it all make sense? Is his sacrifice going to eventuate in the kind of social relationships which will obviate open hostilities? The young person thus frustrated is the ready prey for a demagogue. He constitutes the raw material for an American revised version of Nazism. Or he may retreat into what might be described as 'seagull religion,' that is to say, he will expect God to furnish a miraculous seagull for all his problems. Following the First World War, apocalyptic types of religion spread and multiplied.

According to the bulletin of the United States Medical Department for February, 1944, many soldiers expressed their frustration in terms of sexual perversion and alcoholism.

The supreme cost, spiritually speaking, is the destruction of the wheat germ—that which makes a wheat kernel wheat and not mere dirt—that which makes man that aspect of the world created in the image of God—his desire for love and his capacity to love. The soldier will find it difficult to give affection, having long been in a situation where this was unnatural. He will find that physical sex appetites have tended to become divorced from romantic and affectionate feelings. He will be prone to be impatient, restless, bitter. One man put it this way, "The hardest thing for a woman to learn is to put up with a combat man." One of the symptoms of this maladjustment will express itself in unwarranted suspicion. The soldier is sexually frustrated. Furthermore, he is affected by barracks talk of sex and infidelities and no doubt a bit guilty about his own unfaithfulness whether that exists in thought only or in overt behavior. This guilt he is prone to project onto his wife or fiancée, even when he knows beyond all shadow of intellectual doubt that his wife is true to him. The wife at home is subject to the same kind of psychology. Then too, the soldier has lived exclusively in a male world with multiplied temptations for prostitution and homosexuality.

Because of these factors there can be no doubt that the post-war divorce rate will be high. During the first six months of 1944 in Los Angeles County 16,578 marriages were contracted and 11,797 divorce petitions were granted; roughly speaking, a ratio of 11 divorces to 16 marriages.

To be sure, not all of the emotional and spiritual results of the war will be unfortunate and negative. Suffering is prone to produce insight. In fact, many of us do not gain insight except through suffering. Frankly, it is in the hell of war that a Catholic priest, a Jewish rabbi, and a Protestant minister forget their theological differences and minister as brothers to the spiritual needs of fellowmen. One soldier confesses that life at the front makes for communal existence. Food, clothing, blankets and water are shared without hesitation—and what is more important, without ceremony. Packages received from home are divided—each man feeling that it is his fortune that indeed he is a brother of the next man. The survival of the fittest is not the rule at the battlefront; the strong help the weak. There is no room in battle for bickering over who owes whom what. Such supreme insight is rarely achieved outside suffering. To understand the four levels of life; namely, egocentricity, justice, mercy, and humility is rarely achieved in the pursuance of a Ph.D. degree, but at the battlefront these young men experience their basic need to be one with each other.

The emotional attitudes and spiritual tone of returned servicemen and women will play a determining role in the country's political and economic policies for years to come. If we are not able to deal understandingly with the resentments and aggressions of millions of infantile personalities who are frustrated in any attempt to return to a useful and a wholesome part in civilian life, the consequences may be extremely serious. Human material of this sort will be ready-made for the demagogue, and group hostility will probably be increased, both on the domestic scene and internationally. Racial and religious minorities will undoubtedly suffer. It will be far more difficult to strengthen the democratic process or to obtain rational solutions of public problems.

Just before I left for this assignment, my father wrote me a letter in which he admonished me to exalt Jesus Christ. This is a sobering exhortation. How does he fit in here? Jesus' saviorship was established on the cross. The cross lifted him above humanity. On the cross he towers o're the wrecks of time. His redemptive love broods over the Gehenna of our immorality.

Work Performed by C.P.S. Men

According to a four-year report of C.P.S. from the National Service Board, C.P.S. men under all agencies have performed the following amount of work from May 15, 1941, to December 31, 1944:

In Agriculture

- 259,191 man days on dairy farms.
- 70,190 man days by dairy testers.
- 66,338 man days on Agriculture Experiment stations.
- 126,137 man days on emergency farm labor.

On Camp Projects

- 35,977,333 trees planted; 29,881 acres.
- 394,064 man days fighting fires and fire prevention.
- 452,482 rods of fencing built.
- 1,638,022 cubic yards of ditching, excavation for dam construction.
- 14,442 man days emergency work, flood control, rescue, tornado, etc.

On Special Projects other than Agriculture

- 805, 628 man days by men in hospitals.

WOULD YOU THINK IT?

By Elizabeth W. Thiessen

In December when you friends at home have snow and ice, we are enjoying our gardens. Not only do we enjoy eating the fruits and vegetables but we enjoy watching things grow. We are able to raise practically all the vegetables that you raise in the summer. The mystery of creation and growth is revealed over and over again after we plant the humble seeds in the ground.

I have a new appreciation of our gardens since visiting the Oraibi Mission Station in Arizona. When we were on furlough, we visited the Rev. John Suderman family at the Oraibi Mission Station. I noticed they had no garden plot; only a few peach trees grow here and there. So I wondered why? Mrs. Suderman said one woman had asked her in a letter, "What do you have in your garden?" And she answered, "Not a blade of grass!"

As a part of our Scripture class-work we sometimes ask the students to write out prayers in their note books. The following prayer was written by one of the non-Christian students in the ninth class.

A Prayer

"Our heavenly Father! We are thanking Thee that Thou dost give us a long life. We thank Thee that Thou hast kept us well and we are still found alive. We thank Thee that we are passing a happy life and we are praying to Thee. We thank Thee that Thou art giving us our daily bread. We thank Thee that Thou art giving us glorious time to do our duties.

O God! We are thanking Thee that Thou hast given us the golden opportunity to pray to Thee. We are praying for our brothers who could not attend this golden time. O God: Give good wishes to them who are going towards bad works. Give a long life to our friends and parents. Cure them who are sick and cannot come to school.

We are praying that we may not proceed towards bad works. Give Thou us good ideas that we can remember Thee always. O God, help us in our study that the subjects which we are learning may be kept in our minds. Works which are done by us should be according to Thy will.

We are thankful to Thee that we are in peace in this war time. Give them good ideas that they stop this war, because many people are dying and many things are destroyed in vain. O God! lead them in good ways that they must not wish to fight with each other; because after all, we all are brothers and we must not give our blood uselessly. We must go by Thy will but not by ours. Amen."

Dear Ones in Christ,

Shortly after going to Landour for language study last May, an Indian Christian language teacher approached me. He asked me what country I was from, what denomination, and what branch of the denomination. I gave him the information, whereupon he told me how he felt about denominations—namely, "Each denomination is a flower in God's garden."

This thought would not leave me. First I began to wonder what kind of a flower the Mennonites are and then the question followed, "What kind of a flower am I?" The Holy Spirit showed me that I was practically dead spiritually, a parched, withered flower that made God's garden ugly. I could hardly believe it that I had been a Christian for so many years, had had access to the Living Water and The Bread of Life, Oh! how humiliated I was, but the Holy Spirit kept on working and showed me that I had been limiting God all through the years by looking unto Christians instead of looking unto the Living Christ. I had formed a Christ for myself. He had wanted to live in me all these years, and I wanted to live and tell Him how to use me for His glory. Christ just did not agree with me. If I would quit trying and let Christ take control, then He could use me for the glory of God. He alone can glorify God. Christ living in me is the only way for He is the Son of God who came to do the will of His Father. Dear readers shall we continue to limit God by not letting His only begotten Son, the Living Christ lead us all the way through the garden of Gethsemane and say with Him "Not as I will, but as Thou wilt"? This is the victory, even our faith in Christ as the only begotten of the Father—not in creeds or doctrines or denominations or men, but in Jesus, the Son of God who loved us and gave Himself for us on the cross of Calvary, shedding His own precious blood to pay the price of the sins of every human being who ever was and shall be born into this world. "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you. And when He had said this, He breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost." John 20:21,22 There is only one Way in which God can use us for His glory, only one Way, that Way is Jesus Christ, the Son of the Living God. He must increase, but I must decrease. Brethren, let us let the Holy Spirit keep us alert to the powers of darkness. Let the Holy Spirit keep our hearts and minds attuned to the voice of Jesus, the Word who became flesh and dwelt among us. Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me." John 14:1. Where is our faith?

In prayerful remembrance,

REPORT BY JACOB H. JANZEN

Waterloo, Ontario

Time flies on at a maddening rate of speed. March is drawing to its close. The cold winter seems to be over,—and we have spent it right here in Waterloo, Ontario, Canada enduring all its cold weather and abundance of snow. We had planned differently but the good Lord sometimes simply ignores our wishes and directs things in His own inscrutable ways. He knows everything so much better than we do, and we find it extremely hard to understand him. We have given up to pry into his wisdom and are content to believe that He, in every case, does what is best for us.

But sometimes we see with our own eyes how well He means, even leading us along roads which we would not have chosen.

Last summer we had lived for nine years side by side with our good neighbours here. We understood one another so well since the head of the neighboring family was afflicted with a bothersome heart disease like my wife and I are. As neighbors we often talked about how hard it was on us always to be so careful not to over-exert ourselves, and how we were getting sick and tired of treating ourselves like soft boiled eggs.

Medical men advised them as well as us to go to a milder climate, at least for the roughest months of winter, and to take it quite easy for a while. In this respect we were in the same situation.

But our neighbours had enough money to comply with the doctor's orders while we had to do a lot of figuring and arranging things until we found out we could not do it, as things did not turn out as we had expected.

Friends tried to help us, but all to no avail. We had to stay at home and to face what was coming our way.

Our neighbours sold their beautiful home here and moved to Vancouver, British Columbia, where Mr. E.'s heart attacks seemed to bother him less than here.

And there, at the beautiful West Coast of Canada, our good friend was buried last week, while we are still here! We heard the Lord clearly telling us: "See! Your wellbeing does not depend on your having your way on doctor's advice. I know the thoughts that I think toward you, thoughts of peace, and not of evil, to give you an expected end."

Here we got over that winter nicely. I had my furlough, anyway—to be free from responsibilities, for a while. The Brethren Jacob J. Braun of Waterloo, and Peter Born of Winkler, Manitoba, took over and have been a real blessing to us, and to our whole church. We praise the Lord for the faithful services of these two brethren.

Our young Brother Herbert Enns took my place as a member of the Committee on Military Problems in the Conference of the Historic Peace Churches, and is doing splendid work. Young people have so much more pep, and they have, humanly speaking, the future at their disposal and can do things. May God show them the right way and give them strength to walk it faithfully.

Brother J. J. Braun has been teaching the Catechism Class, thus helping to reduce greatly my routine work, and during the first quarter of this year I have made only twenty-eight public appearances as compared to thirty-six in the same period last year.

At present I am getting in the harness again.

Visitors to Ontario Churches

Our different Ontario churches have been served during these three months of the year, also, by several traveling ministers and missionaries. Brother J. J. Plenert of Philadelphia, Member of the Home Mission Board, visited our Toronto Mission and put it on its feet again for another year of service. Our young missionary there, Brother Arnold A. Fast, gives all his time and strength to the mission and does good work. The Lord has blessed many by that mission. Unfortunately Brother Plenert could not visit the other Ontario churches.

But the Brethren P. H. Richert and Gerald B. Stucky served our congregations in the interest of foreign missions. We have been greatly blessed by their services, and, although the two brethren were not here at the same time, they still did good team work for us and for the missions: the old experienced leader and the young missionary full of energy and good will. They both have warmed our hearts toward missions which, among other things, was evident also by the proceeds of the collections which were taken up on the occasion of their services here.

Book of Sermons

In my direct service under the Home Mission Board I have now completed the manuscript for my new Book of Sermons, in German, under the title SIEHE, DA IST EUER GOTT, (Behold, thy God). It is now in the hands of the printer and will, I hope, soon be on the market. May God bless my humble efforts and make the book a blessing to many.

The Home Mission Board of the Conference of the Mennonites in Canada has undertaken to finance the publication of the book for which I, at this occasion, wish to express my sincere thanks.

1945 All-Mennonite Youth Camps

The times comes on apace for the 1945 All-Mennonite Youth Camps, to be held June 18-24 at Camp Alexander Mack, near Milford, Indiana. Sunday schools and young people are urged to begin making plans for this outstanding week.

The purpose of the summer camps is to provide Mennonite youth with a week of Bible and general religious instruction and inspiration in a surrounding which will also supply the restful and recreative aspects of a vacation. In years past the Retreat has made a lasting impact upon the lives of many young people, and has supplied them with an inspiration which has been carried with them throughout the year. Those who have attended the camp in the past are accordingly its most ardent supporters.

An Expanded Venture

The Retreat this year will consist of two separate camps, one for senior young people of high-school age and above, and one for those in grades six to eight. This is the first time a camp has been operated for the younger group. The two camps will run simultaneously, and both at the same place. They will, however, have separate organizations, separate housing, courses, instructors, etc. The vast facilities of Camp Mack make this easily possible.

The Camp

Camp Mack is the best-equipped camp in the Mid-west. It represents a $100,000 investment on the wooded shores of beautiful Lake Wabec. It offers everything one could desire by way of playgrounds, boating, swimming, and unusual natural beauty. It is an ideal place to hold a Retreat which will inspire and quicken young people spiritually, morally, and physically.

Courses, Instructors in Senior Camp

A list of the courses and some of the leaders for the senior camp include:

- Rev. Harry Yoder, Carlock, Ill.—Dean
- Rev. J. N. Smucker, Bluffton, Ohio—"Prayer—A Source of Power"
- Rev. Jacob Enz, Nappanee, Ind.—"Living Lessons from an Ancient Prophet"
- Rev. Forrest Musser, Pandora, Ohio—"Making Christian Decisions in the World Today"
- Rev. John Suderman, Berne, Ind.—"The Mennonite Mission to Indians"

Rev. Wm. Stauffer, Sugar creek, Ohio—"Living a Christian Life in an Unchristian World"

Prof. Russel Lantz, Bluffton College—Music Appreciation Chorus

Mrs. Jacob Enz, Nappanee, Ind.—Orchestra

Rev. Don Smucker—Camp Pastor

Mr. Don Bowen, Topeka, Ind.—Athletic Director

Miss Marie Mishler, R.N., Bloomington, Ill.—Camp Nurse

Mrs. Don Smucker will have charge of daily publication of the camp paper.

Courses, Instructors in Junior Camp

A list of the courses and some of the leaders for the junior camp include:

Miss Mary Kathryn Ramseyer, Smithville, Ohio—Dean

Miss Gladys Eigsti, Bloomington, Ill.—"Bible Story Hour"

Mrs. Forrest Musser, Pandora, Ohio—"How Our Church Came to Be"

Rev. Jacob Enz, Nappanee, Ind.—"The Bible—My Guide for Life"

Mrs. J. N. Smucker, Bluffton, Ohio—"Choosing Our Friends"

Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker, Bluffton, Ohio—"The Church at Work"

Mrs. Russel Lantz, Bluffton, Ohio—Handwork

Mrs. Harvey Bauman, Pandora, Ohio—Music

Miss Mishler will serve as nurse of both camps

Rev. Robert W. Hartzler of R. R. No. 1, Goshen, Ind., is general chairman of the Retreat organization and inquiries should be addressed to him

Expenses

The expenses for a week's attendance at either of the camps will be $10.50 this year. This will include board and room and use of all equipment at the camp. In the past the Sunday-school organizations of various churches have considered the Retreat a part of Christian education, and have accordingly made a considerable effort to get young people to attend. Often they have paid up to $7.50 of a Retreater's expenses. There could be no finer investment than this in future local church leadership.

The support of all the churches is earnestly solicited for the 1945 Youth Camps.

Recovering the Nonresistant Teaching

By a Pastor

In my congregation exactly 95 per cent of the drafted men are serving in one phase or other of the Armed Forces; only 5 per cent are in civilian Public Service. I personally am sincerely committed to the historic position of Biblical non-resistance as traditionally adhered to by the Mennonite Church. I do not want to stir up strife, start an argument or create hard feelings because I sincerely love the boys from my church who are in service and I feel deeply for the parents of these boys. However, our local congregation as well as our Conference and our entire denomination faces a problem from which we can not run away.

In order to face this problem I decided to discuss it in a small group at our mid-week Bible study and prayer service. Two members were asked to take several questions and comment upon them. Even though not in sympathy with the non-resistant position of the Church these members graciously accepted the topics. Following these brief presentations there was open discussion of the total question involved in this issue. The principles which I suggested as ones on which the discussion should proceed were these: "Love to overcome hate;" "Good to overcome evil;" and "Truth to overcome error." The following questions and comments were presented. I was greatly surprised at the small amount of discussion that followed. As a result of the comments and the questions I was rather thoroughly convinced that the members of my church were not opposed to Biblical non-resistance; it was a matter of their unfamiliarity with it. I was rebuked for my failure in having taught this doctrine more resolutely, and I regretted that my predecessor had not only not taught it but had taught against it.

For the benefit of my fellow ministers who may be in similar circumstances I wish to share the following questions and comments that were used in this one instance as a method of beginning to educate my members on the teachings of the Bible as regards their obligation to their government in time of war.

1. Explain I Chronicles 22:8 and 28:3. What lessons do these scripture passages have for us today?
2. Is there any passage of scripture telling Christians that one of their obligations to Government is to be soldiers?
3. Explain Luke 9:51-56. How can one destroy life and save life at the same time?
4. Can Japanese Christians fight against Chinese Christians and yet live up to I John 4:20-21?
5. Do you think the Mennonite doctrine of non-resistance has any scriptural justification?

6. Do you think it is right that some Mennonite churches discipline those members who do not stand by the Peace doctrine?

7. Explain Romans 12:17-21. What is meant by "Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord"? Can evil be overcome with good?

8. Explain why God ordered Israel to destroy its enemies while in Matt. 5:44 Jesus said: "Love your enemies."

9. If the powers that be are ordained of God as stated in Romans 13:1, then why should Christians seek to overthrow another government? Should German Christians have obeyed their Government when ordered to fight?

10. If it is wrong to try to improve the social welfare of the world by doing good, why is it not wrong to try to improve the social welfare of the world by fighting?

11. Do you think ministers should encourage young men to take up arms, rather than encourage them to refuse to kill?

12. Do you think the practice of allowing individual liberty of conscience as practiced by the General Conference is compromising non-resistance?

13. Is there a double standard—one for individuals, another for nations?

14. How can we justify making the truths of the N. T. apply to only limited areas?

15. Can you picture Jesus Christ, our example, as a soldier?

16. How can love and understanding be promoted in our church in spite of differing opinions on our obligations toward Government?

17. Suppose some of the Japanese living in _____ were to come to our church would we make them feel welcome?

18. How shall the pastor handle the doctrine of non-resistance without antagonizing local feeling and still meet his God-given requirement of preaching the full truth of the Bible?

19. What is the responsibility to our boys in the army, navy, and C.P.S. camps after the war?

20. How can we demonstrate a stronger testimony to the outside world inasmuch as people expect us to be peaceful Mennonites?

Other Biblical references to consult on this problem:
Luke 1:79 tells us that Christ came "to guide our feet into the ways of peace."

Rom. 14:19 tells us, "Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace."

Heb. 12:14 "Follow peace with all men."

James 3:18 and 4:1-2 "The fruit of righteousness is sown in peace of them that make peace." "From whence come wars and rumors of wars?"

Erect Memorial Marker At Quakertown, Pa.

Early in 1944 the matter of erecting a suitable memorial marker in memory of the early pioneers, was presented to the Brotherhood chapter at Quakertown, which is made up of members from West Swamp, Springfield, Bethany, and Flatland. The project was proposed by Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander and soon found favor with the men.

A communication was sent to the East Swamp chapter of the Brotherhood and they too took up the matter with enthusiasm. These two chapters sponsored the project, and they assumed the leadership in gathering the finances needed.

The following men were appointed to serve on the Committee: Thomas R. Schimmel, Paul Sell and Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, from the Quakertown chapter and Clarence Croman, William Cope and James Gerhart from the East Swamp chapter.

This Committee studied memorials of a similar nature and finally secured the service of Mr. Charles J. Schell, East Greenville, Pa., who makes cemetery memorials and grave covers, to furnish the desired marker.

The memorial marker was erected late last fall. Recently the ground around the marker was landscaped and suitable shrubbery planted.

EARLY MENNONITE HISTORY

Mennonites from the Palatinate in Germany came to America and settled in Mildford Township, Bucks County, as early as 1717. Felty Clemmer, formerly a Bishop in the Palatinate, emigrated to America. Others followed him in search of a place where they might worship God according to the dictates of their conscience. Other Mennonite groups settled farther down toward Philadelphia, particularly in the Germantown and Skippack districts. In 1725 the record shows that Rev. Clemmer was present at a Conference, from the "Great Swamp." In 1729 he was naturalized as an American.

Among those first family names we find: Hiestand, Shelly, Musselman, Yoder etc.

Worship services were first held in homes, but according to tradition the first log meetinghouse was erected 1735 on a tract of land given, to the Mennonites, by William Allen, an English landowner.

As nearly as it is possible to locate the site, it was located about a half mile east from the present West Swamp Church, on the Brick Tavern road.

Separate Places of Worship

No doubt, on account of the land in the immediate vicinity of the church being swampy the settlers established their homes on higher ground, and in due time these settlements established their own places of worship.

WEST SWAMP CHURCH

In 1790 the first building was erected at the present location of West Swamp Church. The building was either of logs or frame, and was used for worship services and the conduct of public school. This building served till 1819 when a stone building was erected, which served for the same double purpose until 1873 when the present stone building was built. Rev. John H. Oberholtzer, one of the founders of the General Conference, served here as Minister. Rev. A. B. Shelly, longtime Elder, is still remembered by many of the older residents in this community.

The present Pastor, Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, assumed the leadership in October, 1934, and has served since that time. In 1915 the membership was 170, but in the last thirty years the membership increased rapidly, being 240 now. The Church is active in every phase of activity, such as Sunday School, Christian Endeavor, Missionary Society, and Brotherhood.

EAST SWAMP CHURCH

In 1771 land was deeded to the trustees of "trustees of the religious society of Mennonites at East Swamp." The building that was erected burned, and a log building was erected. This second building was partitioned for a school and worship. In 1850 a brick structure was erected. Under all probability there were burials at East Swamp before 1771 as this was the original burial ground due to the low land around the old meeting house.

East Swamp was served by the same pastors as West Swamp until 1906. Membership was fairly evenly divided until 1899 when Bethany was organized. Not having a resident pastor for many years the church membership came to a low mark.

In 1921-23, J. J. Hagenbach was one of the many supply pastors who helped to keep the spark alive. He started weekly Bible studies and encouraged Bible reading and prayer meetings. This laid the foundation for future growth.

In 1925 Rev. Nyce, then a seminary student, took charge. The church has enjoyed steady progress and has made gains from barely 50 to 200 in twenty years. The church was remodeled in 1926; enlarged in 1937 and again in 1944. On April 29, 1945, the last notes were burned. The church has been active in all church organizations and conference affairs. Since December, 1942, a weekly radio-broadcast has been sponsored by the young people under the leadership of the present pastor, H. D. Burkholder. The pastors serving the church since its rebirth in 1925 are: Rev. H. G. Nyce, 1925-29; W. S. Gottshall, 1930-38; H. D. Burkholder, 1938-45. The present pastor is leaving on May 27 for his new charge in Los Angeles, California. Rev. A. H. Shultz from Henderson, Nebraska, is the new pastor elect.

SWAMP CHURCH

Swamp congregation apparently dates to 1717, the present building to 1847. The history to that year was embodied in the East and West Swamp account. Progress in membership was varying. The ministers serving since 1847 were Jacob Beidler, Abraham Young, John A. Beidler, and the present ministers John G. Gehman, ordained 1919, and Abram Yoder, ordained 1935. In 1919 the membership was thirty-one. The Springfield members were added to this communion membership, but since Springfield again has its own communion, there is now a fifty-eight communicant membership. Sunday School attendance varies from 70 to 105. Perpetual care fund for cemetery was started 1900.

There are three preaching services a month and young people one a month. Sunday school every Sunday.

Sam Goering Writes from England

I went on a trip to Wolver Hampton with Peter and Frieda Dyck. Wolver is northwest of London. We went to see a Dutch Children's Camp with five hundred youngsters. They all looked happy and well cared for. Peter and Frieda leave for Hull tomorrow, where they will help along with the second group of five hundred, coming about March 8. . . .

Today we had three alerts, the first one at one o'clock in the morning. That meant getting the children out of bed and into the shelter. Little David thought it was morning, and just did not see why he could not dress, instead of going to bed again. It is always a relief when the "all clear" sounds. The V 2 come so fast that no alert is possible. This afternoon I had a chance to see how powerful these really are. I went with Morris Lambert, a boy who came to us because they lived near where one landed. His father is in Greece and his mother was injured, he escaped unhurt. We went to a place where one of these bombs hit. The rocket made a deep crater at the intersection where it struck, destroying the houses on all four corners. You will realize the force of the blast better when I tell you that as we walked away from the place, I counted a hundred houses that had the windows, not cracked, but broken, before we came

Some Questions Concerning Peacetime Conscription

By Eldon Graber

Some of the basic arguments that have been advanced for peacetime conscription are: first, it would result in the improvement of the health of the nation; second, conscription will teach discipline and help to mold character; third, it would help develop leadership and would foster education of our young men. Let us examine each of these issues to see if they justify the adoption of a year's military training.

Would Peacetime Conscription Improve the Health of the Nation?

This argument often raised by Army men attempts to point out that all inductees would benefit from a year's military training. But is this actually the case? Army doctors find that at the age of eighteen years or older, many troubles which make men unfit for army life are already so far advanced that a quick cure is impossible. The Army can do nothing for men suffering from mental deficiencies, neurological disorders, heart trouble, or crippling injuries. Surely, the Army will not conscript such men. Those in older or younger age groups would not be affected at all and no program is even contemplated which would improve the health of our women and girls. We fail to see how any great improvement could result from a program of military training.

Such an authority as the late Lieut-Colonel H. J. Koehler, holder of the Distinguished Service Medal, has stated: "The use of the musket as a means of physical development is more than worthless. It is, in my opinion, positively injurious. I deny absolutely that military drill contains one worthwhile feature which cannot be duplicated in every well-regulated gymnasium in the country today. A thorough physical training develops all the necessary soldierly qualities and does it without injury."

Hanson W. Baldwin, noted writer and military analyst, has written in the March 1945 Harper's Magazine: "Conscription would not strike at the root of our physical and mental deficiencies; only a widespread program in the schools and improvement in the home can do that . . . The school and the home, the medical profession . . . and public health associations must shoulder this responsibility. It is not an Army or Navy function."

Discipline and Character Education

Although discipline as defined by the Army is "attitude characterized by willing and cheerful obedience to orders, by a scrupulous conformity to standardized procedure, neatness of dress, and by respect for superiors," no educator or leader is willing to accept the Army as a character-building institution. Intelligent democratic discipline implies emphasis upon self-control rather than control by fear or blind obedience to form. No one knowing the Army can describe the standards of morals and habits formed there as uplifting.

Professor Williams of Columbia University has said: "Military drill fails to offer sufficient opportunities for self-testing activities, and for give and take situations, all of which are essential laboratory experiences in the development of the spirit of co-operation, loyalty and good sportsmanship." As in the case of physical health, it is a mistake to think of our military services as reform schools or as institutions for character building. The nation's moral health must be built and preserved by the home, the school, and the church.

Leadership and Technical Education

Experience in this war has shown that many of our young men do not have the basic qualities of leadership—especially that type of leadership needed by the Army. This lack of leaders and a certain amount of technical education could be obtained through a year's military training—so says the Army. But could it? There is not enough time in one year to educate and to give military training. Even if the army would teach technical training, it would in a short space of five years or less, be out-dated; as would, perhaps, some of the leadership training.

If the year's service is to be military training, it ought to be justified on such grounds; and as such, it could understandably be under the direction of the Army. But if this service is to be educational in nature, then the Army would not be the proper agency to administer it. On the other hand, federal control of education is viewed by many as a dangerous trend. Very few, indeed, believe that a year's military training would produce peacetime leaders.

So far nothing has been said of those who object to participation in such a program as a matter of conscience. Surely, the passage of such a compulsory service act will not alleviate the problem of the conscientious objector. Neither will it be favorable to those who depend upon farming as a livelihood. Young men who are employed on farms, or those who are operating them, can not always arrange to be absent from their work for a period of twelve months.

Surely, our concept of a lasting peace ought to be built around some other type of program. A durable peace cannot be built upon a plan that teaches men how to fight. Such a peace cannot be maintained without any effort on our part. Now is the time to plan for the future. Now is the time to set up and put into action a program for the peace of tomorrow.

to one that had no broken panes. The tremor can be felt for miles around. Fortunately, not near as many bombs come now compared to a month ago. How we hope and pray that this war may soon be over. How very fortunate and thankful the people in America should feel that they have escaped the bombing of this war . . .

Several of the Mennonite boys visited us at the Center, Kenneth Wiens and John Bartch from Newton, Kansas. John told me of their little baby whom he had never seen. Another boy was Dale Grismore from Bluffton, Ohio. All fine boys, and we greatly enjoyed their visit. I have the names of a number of others that I hope to see. Henry Buller and I hope to leave for France in a few days.

"A Workman That Needeth Not to be Ashamed"

By Erna J. Fast

In II Timothy 2:15 Paul admonishes his co-worker and friend to "give diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the Word of truth." Sunday after Sunday we as teachers stand before our classes "handling" this Word which God has given us. Are we fully aware of the responsibility which is ours as teachers? We have something supremely worthwhile to share with our pupils. Are we diligent and conscientious in preparing ourselves adequately for such a vital task?

Dr. John W. Suter of the Washington Cathedral has offered four needs which every teacher of religion must consider. He suggests these in the order in which they are needed: (1) to know God, (2) to know your pupil, (3) to know your subject matter, (4) to know how to teach.

What does it mean "to know God"? We say that we recognize God's power and greatness in nature; we study the laws of nature to learn how to abide by them; we learn of God's love and care by observing His beneficent provision for all things created. In the study of the scriptures we come to know God, for here we have His revelation of Himself through the history of the Hebrew nation. Here, too, He speaks to us through the Holy Spirit, who reveals the laws by which man must live. But is this enough to know God? The first requirement of every Sunday School teacher is to know God as He has revealed Himself through our Lord Jesus Christ. This can only be achieved through a personal relationship with Him, just as it is necessary to have personal contact with friends in order to know them. This personal relationship can come only through Him who said, "No one cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6). Thus, to be a true "workman" for God demands a living, vital relationship with the Father through His Son, Jesus Christ our Lord.

We may know our pupils by name and have some information about their personal and social backgrounds. Does this fulfill the requirement as stated above? We need to understand the problems and joys of our pupils. We must be ready to recognize the steps in their development as Christian young people. We, as teachers, are largely responsible for bringing them to the place where they will commit themselves to Christ, and then to help them to grow in their Christian faith. How can we do this unless we know each individual pupil as a person and establish a personal relationship with him? One hour on Sunday morning is not sufficient time in which to fulfill this second requirement of a teacher—"to know your pupil."

When there is a vital relationship with God and a thorough and sympathetic understanding of each pupil, then comes the time to master the subject matter. This demands persistent and diligent study, not a hurried and superficial scanning of the lesson just before the class session. The teacher's main textbook must be the Bible; no other book can take its place. However, in order to be well-prepared every teacher needs to utilize all possible sources of help—maps, pictures, and books. Regular attendance at the weekly or monthly teachers' meetings is also imperative. When we recognize that we are dealing with the most important phase of our pupil's life—his soul—we cannot but do our utmost to fulfill our obligations as teachers.

How to teach. This requirement is fourth on the list, but this does not by any means indicate that it plays a minor role. To the contrary, it is very important that we know how to make the subject matter vital and applicable in the lives of our pupils so that they will attain to a mature and full Christian faith. Teaching is not "spoon-feeding," neither is it re-juggling already accumulated knowledge so it will fit into a particular theme or subject. The responsibility of every Sunday School teacher is to present some great, dynamic truth of the Bible in such a way that it will become a vital and real part of the actual life of the pupil. How can this be done? Only by making that truth live in the personal experiences of the pupil. It is an art to be a real teacher, to know how to crystallize in the minds and hearts of the children the great truths of God's Word. Jesus is our Master Teacher; He has shown us how to ask questions, use parables and stories, and deal with individual problems. He has revealed to us the qualities of a "workman that needeth not to be ashamed." Let us go to Him to learn how we may become such teachers as He would have us be!

IN MEMORIAM

Mary Harms, daughter of H. H. Harms and Elizabeth Klaassen Harms, was born January 6, 1895. For two years she attended the Hillsboro Academy. In 1912 she was baptized by Rev. G. N. Harms in the Gnadenberg Church. Her mental health began to fail in 1915. For healing she was committed to the Evangelical Emmaus Home, Marthasville, Missouri. On April 25 she wandered away from the home and became lost in a woods, where her body was found on May 5. She was buried in Emmaus Cemetery.

Carolina Lehman Hofstetter, daughter of Peter C. A. and Rebecca Lehman, was born February 4, 1863, and died April 10, 1945. In 1888 she married William Hofstetter, who preceded her in death in 1935. She was a member of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Fortuna, Missouri.

Mrs. Peter C. Heinrichs, nee Margaret Wall, was born in Fuerstenau, South Russia, January 20, 1876. She came to York County, Nebraska, in 1879. In 1894 she was baptized and received into the Bethesda Mennonite Church. In 1900 she married Peter C. Heinrichs, who now survives her. She passed from this life on May 3, 1945.

Mrs. Leona Quiring, daughter of P. R. and Margaret Vogt Ratzlaff, was born March 20, 1921, near Corn, Oklahoma. She was baptized in 1935 and received as member of the Bergthal Mennonite Church. In 1938 she married Rheinhart Quiring, who with two children now survives her. She passed away April 29, 1945.

RELIEF

Director Visits Mennonite Colonists

In a letter, dated April 20, Willard Smith, director of M.C.C. interests in Paraguay, tells about his recent visit to the Mennonite colonies. He writes, "Economically, conditions in Fernheim are bad this year. At first it was too dry and then after the rains came, worms and grasshoppers started on the crops. The cotton probably will not be a fourth or fifth of what it was last year. Other crops suffered also. The crops in Friesland are also poor this year though they have not suffered from grasshoppers."

Brother Smith reports that the colonists in the Chaco are talking less of leaving Paraguay and going back to Europe. They are talking more of building churches, schools, and homes. The new hospital at Fernheim has been completed and a small mental asylum, with a capacity to care for seven or eight patients, is about completed. One of the big needs of the new hospital is X-ray equipment for which funds are not available.

Goodwill Visit to Brazil

Willard Smith, in company with two ministers from Mennonite colonies in Paraguay, flew by plane from Asuncion on May 14 to visit the Mennonite colonies in Brazil. He will be gone for a period of two weeks. The purpose of the visit is to keep in touch with the brethren in Brazil and to share mutual concerns and interests.

Worker Returns from Paraguay

Robert Geigley, Mennonite relief worker to Paraguay, arrived at his home, Fairfield, Pennsylvania, May 18, after a two-month trip by steamer from Asuncion. Brother Geigley completed two years of relief service in Paraguay particularly in relation to service projects in behalf of the native Paraguayans.

Staff for Puerto Rican Unit Appointed

Following a number of changes and the arrival of Harry Martens from the States, the executive committee of the M.C.C. recently appointed the following workers to serve in administrative capacities:

Harry Martens—Director

H. Clair Amstutz—Assistant director and medical director

Carl Lehman—Business manager

Justus Holsinger—Director community building program

Mrs. G. D. T. [unclear]—Matron

New Members Give for Puerto Rican Unit

Carl Lehman, P.S. member of the Puerto Rican unit, recently had thirty days of furlough in the States during which time he was married. Sister Lehman, nee Sarah Frances Miller, Walnut Creek, Ohio, accompanied her husband to the island where she will serve as a teacher in the public schools. She came from Miami on May 24.

Mrs. [unclear] and Mrs. H. Clair Amstutz, with their children, have also joined their husbands in Puerto Rico. They left from Miami on May 12.

C. P. S.

Fourth Anniversary Observed at Grottoes

Members of the C.P.S. camp No. 4, Grottoes, Virginia, the first unit to be administered by Mennonites, observed the fourth anniversary of C.P.S. on May 10. The camp really opened on May 22, 1941, but the celebration was shifted to May 10 so that the seventy-eighth anniversary of the Mennonite movement moving to western camps could be celebrated. A program relating to the early days of C.P.S. and a meal in Pennsylvania German style were part of the occasion. Several students from the Mennonite School and Roy [unclear] from the [unclear] office were present to take part in the program.

Members for Puerto Rican Unit Selected

Unusual interest on the part of C.P.S. men has been shown in the project and special school opening at Tiffin State Institute, Tiffin, Ohio. More than 125 men from Mennonite camps have volunteered for this twenty-five-man project. At Tiffin, Mennonite C.P.S. men will have their first opportunity to serve in a hospital for the care of epileptics. Progressive measures for the rehabilitation of epileptics will be carried out. Natural surroundings will be provided for patients, wards and attendants will be dispensed with and administration will be carried out on the plan of an institute rather than follow the pattern of the typical state mental hospital. C.P.S. men will serve in maintenance positions and work on the large farm connected with Tiffin Institute. A special school in church music for the off-time interest of the campers is being organized by the M.C.C.

Hymn Booklet for Conventions

“Choice Hymns from the Mennonite Hymnary” contains over seventy of the best hymns from a song book that has been acclaimed throughout the General Conference. The seventy hymns are representative of the various kinds of hymns in the Hymnary. The cover, good paper, and a convenient size make this booklet especially suitable for use at conventions and similar gatherings. It was prepared at the present General Conference. Single copies are fifteen cents, twelve copies are $1.45 per dozen. Order from the Mennonite Publication Office, 722 Main, Newton, Kansas.

—Rev. John B. Boehr terminated his service at the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Kansas, on May 27, and resigned in order to continue his school. Rev. and Mrs. Boehr, whose ultimate goal is foreign mission service, want to continue their education very likely either at Ohio State or Western Reserve. Brother Boehr is considering doing graduate work in either sociology or religious education.

—“Uncle Davy” Richert of Bethel College was awarded an honorary doctor's degree at the recent commencement exercises at Bethel College. Dr. Richert is professor of mathematics and astronomy at Bethel and has taught them there since 1915. He has contributed to scientific journals. He has also served as editor of the Bethel College Bulletin. While at Oberlin in 1908-1909 he learned to know Robert Maynard

The Heavens Are Telling

By D. H. Richert

The spectacle of the starry heavens is the privilege of everyone who has eyes to see. In order to know and love "the silence that is in the starry skies," one should follow the advice of the famous American astronomer, the late Professor Simon Newcomb, who recommended everyone to go alone on a clear, sparkling, moonless night to a hill in the country where there is a wide horizon. On such a night the eye beholds the stars of many degrees of brightness and of varied shades of color, shining steadily from above and twinkling near the horizon, while some brilliant planet may be a prominent object in the field of view.

As one keeps on watching, the stately motion of the stars becomes apparent as the earth turns beneath them. The pleasure of observing the skies is the greater for those who have often watched the stars and have come to know the constellations, so that each hour brings new and familiar stellar friends to view. It is not surprising, therefore, that the shepherds of old, watching their flocks by night, with the starry heavens above them, could not help but exclaim: "The heavens declare the glory of God." Yet little did they know how to interpret what they saw. They thought of the stars as tiny lights fixed on the blue sky rotating around us completely once a day. They did not know that everyone of these stars is a sun, most of them even much larger than the sun. Neither did they know that those stars are so far away that, from the nearest of them, it takes light four and one-third years to reach us. Now light travels with a speed of 186,000 miles a second, and one year has 31,558,000 seconds. The distance that light travels in one year is called a light-year. Hence the nearest star is four and one-third light-years distant.

As to the sun itself, it is only one of the smaller stars, yet its diameter is 864,000 miles. If the sun were as close to the earth as the moon, it would fill one-fourth of the sky and it would take six hours to rise. Even though the sun is only a small star, it sends out a tremendous amount of radiant energy into space. It is an interesting fact that although we do not use solar energy directly to drive our machines, most of the useful work of the world is done by energy that originally came from the sun. For example, the winds that drive our windmills are due to the unequal heating of the atmosphere by the sun. Similarly, water is available as a source of energy only as it plunges over precipices after it has been raised up by solar radiation and transported far by the winds. All the work done by man depends upon the food he eats, and hence the energy used can be traced to the vegetable world in whose countless cells solar energy is stored. Animals too, whose meat we eat, get their energy that way. Since coal and petroleum are of vegetable origin, their locked-up energies also come from the sun in some far-off geological ages. If full use could be made of solar energy, enough of it falls on the roof of an ordinary dwelling that could furnish, in a few hours, the household with electricity for a week. If a layer of ice thirty-nine feet thick could suddenly be clamped about the surface of the sun, that ice would melt in one minute.

Such is the energy of but one little star, the sun; what must be the energy sent out by a whole galaxy of stars! In our galaxy, which occupies a lens-shaped portion of space 3,000 by 30,000 light-years, there are about forty billion stars, all of them suns similar to our sun, only most of them much larger. But what is beyond our galaxy? Our galaxy, that is, the galaxy of which the sun is a member, is only one among many others. Way beyond the starry heavens that we can see are millions of other galaxies of stars which go by the name of spiral nebulae, so called on account of their shape. The nearest one is so far away that it takes light 900,000 years to travel that distance. Most of them are millions of light-years distant. One of the remarkable characteristics of these spirals is the way they are distributed in space. Many of them group themselves into cluster-cells, each cluster-cell containing from 2000 to 4000 such galaxies, and 30,000 such cluster-cells are within reach of our modern telescopes which penetrate space to a distance of 500,000,000 light-years.

We believe with the late Dr. Frost of the Yerkes Observatory when he said: "It cannot be questioned that every increase of our appreciation of the creation must enhance our respect for its Creator; and every expansion of our knowledge, due to deeper study of the universe with powerful instruments, can only add reverence to our respect."

DESTERS MAY POSSIBLY RETURN THIS YEAR

*"It seems to me I'd like to go
Where the bells don't ring nor whistles blow,
Nor clocks don't strike nor gongs don't sound,
And I'd have stillness all around.
Not real stillness, but just the trees
Low whispering, or the hum of bees,
Or brook's faint bubbling over stones,
In strangely soft, and tangled tones.
Sometimes it seems to me I must
Just quit the city's din and dust
And get out where the sky is blue;
And, say, how does it seem to you?"*

By Eugene Field

Dear Friends,

The above verse may well refer to Ellengowan, our missionary rest home in Landour, where we are now staying. It is indeed a haven of rest. Almost every morning now in October, we can see the snows by going a few steps above the house. Bells and gongs need not trouble us. 'Stillness,' yes. A fifteen minutes' walk gets us to the, 'Brook's faint bubbling over stones,' or waters rushing over boulders. Landour, with its surrounding hills, is a place of pines, ferns, wild roses, and rhododendrons. And the half has not yet been told.

We are having a most restful stay here in Ellengowan. Besides the rest, stillness, beauty, and coolness, there are apples, pears, peaches, and some of the good meats which we do not get on the plains. Of course we cannot indulge in all these without restriction, but just a taste, you know.

We should be going on furlough next month, but because of the shortage of doctors and the difficulty and uncertainty of travelling, we plan to stay some months longer. We hardly expect to leave India before the spring of 1946.

We are quite well. These few weeks in Landour have done much to refreshen and restore us. We rejoice that Dr. Samuel and his wife, also a doctor of five years' experience, are coming to help out at Jagdeeshpur. Pray with us that their ministry may be one of blessing to our community.

(The latest hospital reports show a 50 per cent increase in income and a 30 per cent increase in the number of patients (over the previous year), making it around 3,000. That shows how busy the doctors are and how they need a furlough, which is overdue. By this time the two doctors Bauman will likely be there, and Dr. and Mrs. Dester may not have to wait until 1946, as he expects.—P. H. Richert)

J. R. DUERKSEN REPORTS

Jagdeeshpur, Via Raipur, C. P., India

April 12, 1945

Dear Brethren of the Foreign Mission Board,

The first three months of 1945 have gone by so fast, it seems like three weeks. It is impossible to report all that happened in detail, and if it were possible, you would perhaps not want it that way.

The Indian Church Conference at Janjgir was the first great blessing of the year. For the Jagdeeshpur area it meant the ordination of two elders, namely Trano Nidhi Paul for the Antioch church and Abhaya Das for the Emmanuel church. Hanok Masih was ordained to be the minister of the Salem church. Besides this the Elders Committee examined three of our Indian brethren and authorized their respective churches to ordain them as deacons. Two of these have since been ordained.

The last day in Janjgir was a rally day for all the evangelistic workers of our mission and most of our workers were present. At the same time all the teachers of our mission had special meetings. For the evangelistic workers there were reports of what the Lord had enabled us to accomplish and the presentation of the needs at each station. Helpful and inspiring messages were given by Rev. Thiessen and Rev. Isaac and Mr. P. A. Banwar. There were also seasons of prayer and thanksgiving. All this was done in preparation for the many evangelistic camps in the villages of our whole mission area. After that all went to work, each in his own field.

In the Jagdeeshpur area we had five different groups of workers, who in these three months have had their camps in twelve different places. In eighty villages the Gospel has been preached and in many of these villages intensive teaching has been done. The result was that forty-seven persons were led to Christ and they have been baptized. The names of three more villages were added to the list of those in which there are Christians. The total number of such villages is now 104.

With the Apostle Paul we would say, "For a great door and effectual is opened unto me, and there are many adversaries." We thank you heartily for keeping us all going.

CONTAMINATION?

The two Bible women and I had entered the village owner's courtyard to sing and tell the story of Jesus. Over the courtyard wall were some clothes drying after having been washed in the village pond. Close by to one side of the yard I saw two beds on which vegetables were drying. I recognized one of the vegetables as red peppers, but the other I did not recognize, so I started towards the bed with the view of finding out what it was when one of the Bible Women whispered to me, "Please don't go." I turned the other direction and we sang for the women of the

GENERAL CONFERENCE convened for its thirtieth session in Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas, May 31 to June 5, with Brother C. E. Krehbiel serving as chairman. The weather was very favorable. Wednesday, the welcoming day was replete with heavy cumulus clouds gracing the blue Kansas sky and a warm soft atmosphere that bespoke the warmth in the hearts of those who had invited the conference and worked long and hard to prepare for it. Some days were cloudy and cool, but there was no drenching rain to make matters inconvenient or difficult. The nights were good for refreshing slumber. Nature, dressed in green, showed visitors how pretty Kansas can be. Furthermore the conference met at "the crossroads of America," for North Newton is not far from the geographical center of the United States. Newton is an important rail center and lies on important highways. It was a convenient place for delegates to assemble. The Western District with its sixty or so churches and 12,000 of the U. S. General Conference membership of 28,000 provided a rich source of fellowship. Mennonites of the U.S. were glad to see a goodly number of Canadian delegates at this session. More Canadian churches were received into the conference. Perhaps, the air-television age will bring us ever more together. The words "Mennonite Church of North America" may take on a new significance in the not too distant future. A total of 161 churches were represented at the conference, with 591 delegates, and 1,223 votes. The spacious main floor of Memorial Hall seats about two thousand people and was about filled every day. It is estimated that on Sunday night, when the choirs of the various churches gave a musical program, over 3,500 people were present. Loudspeakers in the balcony and in the basement dining rooms enabled all to hear the concert. On the average about one thousand people were fed at the noon meal. The last day there were possibly over 1,200. The entertaining churches provided large servings of tasty food at moderate prices. Morning and evening meals were served cafeteria style. The women in the kitchen could listen to the conference proceedings by means of loudspeaker. Many delegates and visitors found accommodations in the campus dormitories, others in surrounding homes. The old college dining hall was the center of exhibits, and the college chapel afforded a second auditorium when needed. Delegates expressed the opinion that all these facilities could hardly be excelled anywhere in our conference. This conference kept on time pretty well. A commendable feature of the session was the little pamphlet containing the reports of the various boards and committees and distributed to the various delegates early in the conference. Thus one did not have to take care of many loose sheets of separate reports of various sizes. Resolutions passed at this conference numbered eighty-five in comparison with seventy-nine at the Souderton session. An interesting panel discussion was held on the evening of the last day of conference. The conference considered many important matters. It adopted a program of mutual aid. This is to be worked out by a Board of Mutual Aid. Undoubtedly, this program will become of very vital importance to the conference, for it touches upon the essence of Christian brotherliness. The program is new to us. It looks good. We look forward to the contribution that it can make to our conference. The conference also resolved to cooperate with the M.C.C. in the establishment of a mental hospital if the M.C.C. undertakes such a project. Further, the conference resolved that if this is not possible then "General Conference go ahead as a Relief Board to establish" such an institution. This is action on a need that has been felt by many, especially in these last years as Mennonite young men became increasingly aware of the necessity of adequate care for those who suffer from mental illness. Let us hope that the emphasis will not only be curative but also preventative in this field, spreading out to a ministry of counselling that can bring a great blessing of wholeness to many. Significantly the conference re-affirmed its position on war and military training, and it did so with enthusiasm. That particular day session of conference drew the largest attendance. Conference also adopted the Executive Committee's recommendation having to do with ministerial ordination. This recommendation lists qualifications and procedure. The conference also adopted an amendment to the constitution which reads: "The General Conference stands ready to unite with any conference of Mennonite churches where such union can be achieved agreeable to both parties." This enables the Central Conference to join as a conference when they are ready to do so. Conference also voted to have another "Mennonite Preaching Mission" this year. Coordination of conference activities has been advanced by the adoption of various recommendations of the Coordination Committee. In the publication realm there is to be a continued emphasis upon the 100 Per Cent Church Paper Plan. Conference accepted the invitation of the First Church of Berne, Indiana, to hold the next session of conference there two years from now. In this and the next issues you will find Resolutions of the Thirtieth Session as submitted by the outgoing secretary, Rev. Phil. Wedel.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

9. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 1 of the Executive Committee report which reads as follows: "That the Minutes and Reports of the session at North Newton be printed and distributed as in previous years two to each vote, and that the churches be requested to take one offering to pay for same and send the offering to the Conference Treasury. (Boards and Committees are requested to supply the Secretary with copies of their reports in both languages.)" P. A. Wedel, Walter Temple.

10. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 2 of the Executive Committee report which reads as follows: "Recommended: In order that the fine spirit and the liberal gift of Mrs. Leisy (See appended letter Ex. B) be properly recognized by the Conference itself, and be made a part of the Official Record, the Conference hereby makes the following resolution of its Executive Committee its own: 'That we accept with hearty thanks the very liberal offer of Mrs. Elva Krehbiel Leisy to present the Krehbiel building, 722 N. Main Street, Newton, Kansas, to The General Conference of the Mennonite Church of N. A. for Conference Headquarters, the building to be called "The Krehbiel Building."—If at any time the Conference should sell the building, it is understood that Mrs. Elva Leisy shall have the first opportunity to purchase the same and that the name of brother H. P. Krehbiel and the name of Mrs. Matilda E. Krehbiel, her parents, shall be memorialized in some other manner satisfactory to Elva Liesy and the Executive Committee of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of N. A.'"; and Conference further instructs its Secretary to transmit a copy of this action, signed by the President and Secretary, together with the most hearty thanks of the Conference, to Mrs. Elva Krehbiel Liesy."

To the Executive Committee of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America
C. E. Krehbiel, Chairman,
Newton, Kansas.

Dear Brethren:

In memory of my dear parents, Henry P. and Matilda E. Kruse Krehbiel, I herewith offer to the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America, as an outright gift, the lot and store building situated at 722 Main Street, Newton, Kansas—described as Lot three in Block twenty-nine, city of Newton, Harvey County, Kansas—to be used as General Conference Headquarters, the transfer of this property to be made when the same has been turned over to me.

If this gift is accepted now, I offer the free use of the front room of said building, including the vault, back to the present partition—about seventy-five feet—until such time as the property is legally transferred to the Conference.

My desire is that this building be known as "The Krehbiel Building." If for any reason the Conference should deem it wise to dispose of said property, it will be appreciated if written consent first be obtained from me or my heirs.

May God's blessing rest upon the work of our Church during these troublesome times.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) Elva Krehbiel Leisy (Mrs.E.E.)

P. A. Wedel, C. C. Wedel

11. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 3 of the executive committee report, which reads as follows: "That the proposed Amendment (Exhibit C) be taken up and acted on on Saturday morning in connection with the report of the Historical Committee."

(Exhibit C)
PROPOSED AMENDMENTS

Recommendation of the Executive Committee to the Session of General Conference May 31, 1945
Proposed Amendments:

1. That Article "39 Treasuries" of the General Conference Constitution be declared void, and be replaced by the following:

"39-Central Treasury"

The General Conference has a Central Treasury located at the General Conference Headquarters. To this Treasury contributions for any and all Conference purposes shall be sent there to be booked and to be used for causes specified by the contributors.

Offerings, gifts, bequests, etc. will be received for:

The General Conference Treasury

Home Mission

Foreign Mission

Publication

Education

Relief

Peace

Church Unity

Placement

Doctrine and Conduct

Ministers Aid Fund

Tract Distribution

Other pertinent causes

Out of the General Conference Treasury the expenses of the Conference connected with its sessions, the printing of the session minutes, and such other expenses as cannot properly be paid out of other treasuries, shall be defrayed. Orders on this treasury shall be signed by the president and the secretary of the Conference.

To carry on activities delegated to them each conference board and, or committee is authorized, on orders signed by its respective chairman and secretary, to draw on funds in its favor with the Central Treasury.

Upon request the Central Treasury shall report to each participating body the standing of its account.

Any undersigned contributions received shall be subject to (annual) allocation by action of the Conference or its Executive Committee.

Upkeep and current expenses of the conference headquarters shall be chargeable equitably to all participating bodies.

The Conference Executive Committee shall employ the Manager of the Central Treasury, who shall be in full charge of the Conference headquarters. In consultation with advisors from the Executive Committee, the Manager shall employ necessary office help.

Those employed in this office shall be placed under bond in amounts satisfactory to the Executive Committee.

All Endowment, Annuity, Permanent and Temporary Trust Funds shall be in charge of and invested by the Conference Board of Trustees.

Any part of the Constitution in conflict with this Article is hereby declared null and void.

2. Amendment to Constitution proposed by the Unity Committee at 1941 session (Res. 10)

"Under 'Admission' under Article 13 of the Constitution, add: The General Conference stands ready to unite with any conference of Mennonite churches where such union can be achieved agreeable to both parties." P. A. Wedel, J. C. Kaufman.

12. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 4 of executive committee report which reads as follows: "That Conference consider attached suggestions (Exhibit D) entitled 'Ministerial Ordinations'."

(Exhibit D)

MINISTERIAL ORDINATION

(Suggested General Conference Qualifications and Procedure)

Frequently ministers and others inquire as to Conference regulations concerning ordinations. Our Foreign Mission Board and several of our District Conferences have already undertaken to set up certain standards for those who are to be ordained. A study of this important question resulted in the following suggestions for clarification and future guidance.

1. Any person looking forward to ordination for Christian work needs to be a consecrated Christian who feels the call of God to do the work of a minister of Jesus Christ.

2. Young people who later expect to work in our Conference at home or abroad, are urged to attend our Mennonite schools so that their training will be in line with Mennonite faith and practice, and that they may become acquainted with those with whom they are to work.

3. In the light of the needs of our time, which call for an increasing measure of general training, it is recommended that, if possible a general college course or its equivalent be completed before ordination. Further special training for Christian service at home or abroad, is recommended whenever possible.

4. Ordination should take place only after a person has been appointed to a definite field of service.

5. Before ordination, the candidate should have served in a church or churches, under the supervision of some constituted conference or church authority for about one year if possible.

6. Letters of recommendation or statements regarding the candidate his work and his fitness, should be available from each of the following:

a. A statement from the candidate's home church indicating his standing as a church member.

b. A statement from the church or station at which the candidate has last served, regarding the type and quality of his services.

c. A brief autobiography together with a statement of the candidate's Christian experience leading to his call to the ministry.

d. A statement from the schools the individual attended above the eighth grade, including a customary transcript, also other records from school files pertaining to health, mental tests, personality traits, extra curricular activities, and so forth.

e. A statement from a recognized physician regarding the candidate's health.

f. A written statement from the candidate as to his agreement (1) with the Statement of Doctrine as approved by the General Conference in 1941, (2) with the Mennonite peace principles, and (3) with the work of our Conference, its Boards and institutions; and his willingness to support the same.

7. Each Congregation, District Conference Committee, or General Conference Board, after having obtained the above records and papers, is urged to arrange for a personal interview with the candidate before deciding on or making arrangements for his ordination.

8. The ordination proper should be performed preferably in the candidate's home church or the congregation he is then serving, by the proper church or conference authorities.

9. The candidate shall supply the General Conference secretary with a complete record of all material listed in paragraph six above pertaining to his qualifications.

10. Any General Conference minister who hereafter ordains an evangelist, minister, missionary or elder, shall within thirty days report such ordination to the General Conference secretary, giving the following information:

a. The full name and address of the candidate.

b. The conference church of which the candidate is a member.

- c. What conference congregation, board or committee has approved of or authorized the ordination.
- d. The office to which the candidate was ordained—evangelist, minister, missionary, etc.
- e. The purpose or the work and place for which this candidate was ordained.
- f. The signature and post office address of the person who officiated at the ordination.

P. A. Wedel, G. G. Dyck.

13. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 5 of the Executive Committee report, which reads as follows: "That Conference consider attached suggestions (Exh. E) entitled "General Conference Recognition of Organizations and Institutions."

(Exhibit E)

GENERAL CONFERENCE RECOGNITION OF ORGANIZATIONS AND INSTITUTIONS

(A suggested procedure)

The General Conference has found it advisable to discover ways of identifying individual ministers and congregations as belonging to the Conference fold, and activities such as missions, relief, publication, etc., as being part and parcel of its work. In order to avoid confusion, would it not be equally desirable for the General Conference to have some recognized procedure whereby organizations and institutions (such as hospitals, Bible Societies, orphanages, mission stations, schools, etc.) could establish official relationship with the Conference by making written application for such approval and affiliation, including the privilege to solicit financial support from General Conference congregations?

Such application should be made through the respective General Conference Board or Standing Committee which is charged with the oversight of the general type of service the applying organization or institution represents. If this Conference body, after examining the aim and work of the applying organization or institution, favors such recognition it shall report its findings with recommendations to the Executive Committee of the General Conference for general review. If the Executive Committee, after careful consideration, also favors such recognition it shall report its findings and recommendations to the General Conference in session for consideration and action. Naturally, Conference congregations will wish to abide by Conference action regarding the recognition of organizations and institutions.

In order to properly weigh the advisability of such General Conference recognition, consideration should be given to such questions as:

1. What is the proposed aim, scope and character of the work, and how does it harmonize with General Conference aims and methods of work?
2. Is there sufficient need for the proposed organization or institution in our Conference enterprise?
3. To what extent would its work overlap with that of organizations and institutions already serving our Conference or its potential service area?
4. Is the Conference financially able to carry the proposed work?
5. Does the organization or institution profess wholehearted adherence to the General Conference constitution and work, and to the Statement of Doctrine as approved by it in 1941?
6. Is the organization or institution prepared to arrange for a majority representation on its Board of Control to be nominated, elected, or appointed by our General or District Conferences?
7. In general, how would recognition of the organization or institution under consideration affect the interest and peaceful upbuilding of Christ's cause in our Conference and among our churches and people?

P. A. Wedel, William H. Stauffer.

14. RESOLVED, That we add one half hour to the afternoon session, extending the time from 4:30 to 5:00. J. S. Schultz, E. J. Neuenschwander.

15. RESOLVED, That we strike out section six from exhibit E under recommendation 5 of the Executive Committee report, which reads as follows: "Is the organization or institution prepared to arrange for a majority representation on its Board of Control to be nominated, elected, or appointed by our General or District Conferences?" E. J. Claassen, P. J. Boehr.

This amendment was tabled by the following motion:

16. RESOLVED, To lay on the table recommendation 5 of the Executive Committee Report until the next session of the conference. E. J. Neuenschwander, P. J. Boehr.

17. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 6 of the Executive Committee report, which reads as follows: "Question: Would it not be wise, beginning with the next session of Conference, to limit the time any one may serve on the same board or committee to two consecutive terms of nine years each, provided that such person may be elected into any other board or committee immediately or into the same board or committee after a lapse of a triennium?" A. J. Neuenschwander, Walter Temple.

18. RESOLVED, That in as much as brother P. P. Wedel has served for 12 years as a member of the Foreign Mission Board and for ten of these years he was its faithful and efficient chairman and now because of ill health finds it necessary to resign, Be it resolved that we as a conference accept his resignation with deepest regret and express to him our heartfelt appreciation of his labors on our Foreign Mission Board. He served both ably and with great devotion. We pray God to strengthen him in body and spirit and preserve him for yet many years of service in the cause of Christ and the church. P. H. Richert, T. A. van der Smissen.

19. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 1 of the Foreign Mission Board report, which reads as follows: "We recommend that the conference accepts the plan of cooperation with the Congo Inland Mission in the Belgian Congo in Africa, as presented under another heading above." P. H. Richert, J. C. Kaufman.

20. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 2 of the Foreign Mission Board report, which reads as follows: "We recommend, that the conference accepts the resolution of the last Board meeting to open a new mission at Bogota, Colombia, as recommended by our delegates to South America," P. H. Richert, P. J. Boehr.

21. RESOLVED, That we as a Board go on record as favoring the sending of our volunteers for missionary service in Ecuador, South America, only after having exhausted all possibilities of entering Colombia. P. H. Richert, T. A. van der Smissen.

22. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 3 of the Foreign Mission Board report, which reads as follows: "We recommend, that our evacuated missionaries from China be retained on our list, but be temporarily released to accept other work, preferably under the M.C.C. for relief work." P. H. Richert, H. N. Harder.

23. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 4 of the Foreign Mission Board report, which reads as follows: "In view of the increased number of applications for foreign mission work, we recommend that we offer to the churches one or more of our available missionaries for a few days or even a week of intensive mission study courses, including a course in stewardship and in inspirational mission addresses, especially in churches that have not had as much information on missions as most churches have." P. H. Richert, A. J. Neuenschwander.

24. RESOLVED, That we recommend to the General Conference of North America that it approve the plan of cooperation with the Bergthal Church in their mission in Mexico. P. H. Richert, P. K. Regier.

25. RESOLVED, That the whole report of the Foreign Mission Board together with the treasurer's report and the report of the auditing committee be adopted. E. G. Kaufman, John Bartel.

26. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 1 of the Home Mission Board report, which reads as follows: "Whereas the Board of Home Missions has found it desirable and to advantage to purchase property in Canada for the purpose of carrying on the work, but to date, this property had to be secured by Canadian men acting as Trustees; therefore we recommend that the General Conference give direction to the Board of Trustees, complete the started task, to Register or License, the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America, as it is required in the different Provinces where property is held. This is recommended to facilitate the direct ownership of property by the General Conference. Be it further recommended, when the above is completed, that the Trustees be directed to have all legal papers so written as to give clear title to all properties held in Canada." A. J. Neuenschwander, Jacob Gerbrandt.

27. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 2 of the Home Mission Board report, which reads as follows: "Whereas the 'Bible Institute and Visitation Program' of last fall proved such a blessing to all General Conference young men in C.P.S. Camps and Units, and to many others, and since the Executive Committees of our General Conference Boards, in joint session in Chicago, voted to carry out a similar program in 1945, with the Board of Home Missions assuming the leadership. A new group of leaders to be used and the program is to be called the 'Mennonite Preaching Mission' this year. The plan is two fold, namely, Bible study and a brief presentation of all General Conference activities. Therefore, we recommend that in order to realize a closer cooperation in our churches, that all District Home Mission Committees secure the interest of all their churches in this program through prayerful and financial support, and also assist in arranging the itineraries of the leaders that are to visit their District." A. J. Neuenschwander, H. J. Dyck.

28. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 3 of the Home Mission Board report, which was tabled by recommendation Res. No. 29. It reads, "Whereas during the past four years, the Board of Home Missions has sought to discharge the duty placed upon them at the last General Conference regarding the Colonization work; by appointing and engaging Rev. William H. Stauffer as Field Representative, to make a general survey and study of what is being done, and to discover the possibilities for Colonization work in the General Conference. This special effort resulted in such a general increase of interest, in our churches and among C.P.S. men as a post-war program, that we soon discovered that this kind of work is more in line with the Relief Board and in agreement with the program of said Board. Therefore we recommend that hereafter the work of colonization be assigned to the Relief Board of the General Conference." A. J. Neuenschwander, P. J. Boehr.

29. RESOLVED, To lay recommendation No. 3 of the Home Mission Board report on the table until the Mennonite Mutual Aid Committee reports. H. A. Fast, Elmer Basinger.

30. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 4 of the Home Mission Board report, which was tabled by Res. No. 31. It reads as follows: "In view of the evident need that exists and will develop further, with the end of the war when C.P.S. men are to be mustered out and in view of need among our young people to establish themselves in the post-war reconstruction period; we recommend that all churches support in a whole-hearted manner the General Conference Mutual Aid Organization that is being planned and formed, by giving funds to this cause and by encouraging this work through prayer and interest." A. J. Neuenschwander, J. H. Janzen.

31. RESOLVED, To lay on the table recommendation No. 4 of the Home Mission Board report until the Mennonite Aid Committee reports. A. J. Dyck, C. H. Dirks.

32. RESOLVED, To adopt the whole report of the Home Mission Board report including the treasurer's and auditor's report. C. C. Wedel, John Bartel.

33. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 7 of the Executive Committee report, which reads as follows: "Would it not be wise, beginning with the next session of Conference, that if a conference board or committee engages one of its own members on full time, the one so employed shall resign as a member of such body and that the Conference Officers fill the vacancy by appointment as provided by the Constitution?" This motion was lost. Dan J. Unruh, Olin Krehbiel.

34. RESOLVED, To table recommendation No. 7 of the Executive Committee report. This motion was lost. C. C. Wedel, John C. Mueller.

35. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 8 of the Executive Committee report, which reads as follows: "Would it not be wise to have the Executive Committee designate or fix a day annually as 'Conference Sunday?'" A. J. Dyck, P. J. Boehr.

36. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 9 of the Executive Committee report, which reads as follows: "Would it not be wise to authorize boards and committees to have a joint session annually or once in three years if that is deemed advantageous for their work?" A. J. Neuenschwander, Ed. Kaufman. It was tabled conditionally by Res. No. 37.

37. RESOLVED, To table recommendation No. 9 of the Executive Committee report until the Report of the Coordination Committee. (The chair later declared this resolution taken care of by recommendations of Coordinating Committee.) Olin Krehbiel, H. A. Fast.

38. RESOLVED, That the whole report of the Executive Committee be adopted. Howard G. Nyce, John Bartel.

Many French Mennonites Passed Thru Fiery Furnace Writes Sam Goering

68 Shepherds Hill
London, N. 6, England
May 16, 1945

To the Mennonites in the United States and Canada

Dear Friends:

During my recent trip to France I visited some of the Mennonites there. On April 1 we attended the Easter morning service at the Colmar church where Brother Volkmar and Brother Kramer are pastors. In the afternoon we went by car to Modenheim, near Mulhouse, to visit Brother Joseph Widmer who is president of the Mennonite General Conference in France. We also visited Brother Nussbaumer of Altkirk and Brother Mueller near Nancy. Brother Nussbaumer is a son of the late Brother Nussbaumer of Switzerland.

All the Mennonites in France have gone through the terrors of this war. Many lived for months in cellars and dugouts. At the time we were there some were still away in concentration camps, others had been deported into Germany to work camps, some were taken along when the German army retreated, some were crippled, others killed. Shortly before our visit Brother Volkmar conducted a funeral service for five persons killed during action. These were all from one family. Many sustained heavy material losses, and some lost everything. Many fields are still planted with mines which experts must remove before the land can be cultivated again. We will long remember our visit there at a time when the soil of some of the Mennonite communities was still a battle ground, and troops were still moving day and night toward the battle front. We enjoyed the hospitality and Christian fellowship of these brethren in the faith. Many of them have passed, as it were, through a fiery furnace, yet they say that God has sustained them and given strength in the hour of trial. One of the brethren who had suffered much, read for family worship, and with the most serene assurance, the passage—Romans 8:31-39:

“What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? He has spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea rather, that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us. Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? Shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as sheep for the slaughter. Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord.

These Mennonites are sending greetings to the Mennonites of North America. We will want to remember them prayerfully as well as others in war stricken lands. From reports that we get here conditions in Holland are very bad. I want to take this opportunity to thank you for the interest you are showing in this work. May God bless you all richly for the support you give. Remember us who are out on the field in your prayers.

Young People's Union Officers' Report

June 2, 1945

Young People and Friends:

We are grateful to the Lord that we are able to gather for this meeting and together face the work of our Young People's Union. Youth problems are prevalent in every community. This is a special challenge to us as young people to consecrate our lives to do God's will that we may be vessels "meet for the Master's use," and that we may point others to the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world. This, we believe, is the only solution to the youth situation.

Our boys are expecting us to stand by them during these trying times. We have given suggestions to the District Representatives for the local societies to maintain a systematic contact with them, and also to pray for them. Some societies have been sending devotional material, which we continue to recommend.

Another phase of our work which we feel cannot be over-emphasized is the use of the Fellowship Prayer Calendar. In 1942 one thousand revised calendars were printed for distribution among societies who had not received them at the 1941 General Conference session. In 1944 the calendar was again brought up-to-date and arranged in a folder style, very convenient for carrying in a Bible. Eight thousand five hundred of these were printed and practically all have been distributed in the various districts. Much can be accomplished through united prayer, and let us not fail to uphold and support God's servants in this way. God is faithful and is not slack concerning His promises. What a challenge to us.

The use of the Follow-Up system has not been encouraged, as we, together with other responsible leaders, felt it was not practical during these unsettled conditions. Standards for Mennonite Young People's Societies are still available and contain some worthwhile and helpful suggestions.

Besides general support of Home Missions, Foreign Missions, Civilian Public Service work, and Relief, we have especially urged the districts to give prayerful and financial support to the Canadian project of the purchase of the Rosthern Experimental Farm. This was undertaken by them in order to have a youth center in their district. It is in the process of further development and a report on it will probably be given by the Canadian representative. Through the cooperation of several districts it has been possible for us to send them a total of $760.07. We praise the Lord for the splendid interest shown and for the progress that is being made on this Farm.

We also wish to express our sincere appreciation to the districts who have so willingly cooperated in other tasks before us. While we have not accomplished as much as we would have liked to, yet we praise the Lord for what has been done and for the interest and support of our young people. The activity of the individual society really determines the standing of our Conference Young People's Union, and we again challenge each one to whole-heartedly seek to know and to do God's will.

We also submit the following recommendations:

First: That the young people's societies be encouraged to meet the challenge of opened mission fields at the close of the war.

Second: That the incoming executive committee and district representatives meet before the close of Conference in order to become acquainted with each other and to discuss the work before them.

Third: That the funds for the Young People's Union of General Conference be handled through the Central Treasury at Newton.

Respectfully submitted,
Ted E. Claassen, President

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Orlo Kaufman, Paso Robles, California

"Come unto me . . ." In life as we know it the one that can help must be sought after. And the greater his helping power the more searching is necessary. And after you have found him you must meet certain requirements before he will help you. If you cannot meet them he feels free to refuse to help you, and the more he is able to help the more he expects of you. But Jesus, the all sufficient helper, the one who sacrificed all and therefore can help all invites you, He seeks you, He makes no demands of you; you need simply come to Him and He will help you.

"Come unto me . . ." There are those who would offer help, but they ask you to join this movement, support this institution, use this product, but they would not have you come to them, and so they do not touch the deepest needs of those who labor and are heavy laden. They would build hospitals, old people's homes, orphanages, support missions, but they would not have you come to them. Jesus on the other hand says come unto me and dwell with me. He who has made the great sacrifice surrenders himself anew inviting you to come and dwell with Him.

"Come unto me, all ye . . ." He offers His help to all. He makes no requirements that must be met, He calls all, no He seeks all, no matter what age, race, financial status, social position, or nationality; these do not matter, He seeks all because He can help all. When man offers help he selects those whom he would help, he would not help everyone; no, man would only help those who are in his social position, financial status, whose skin is the same color, whose need is not too offensive, but He who can help all stipulates no conditions, He invites all.

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, . . ." But what does it mean to labor and to be heavy laden? How does he define labor and being heavy laden? That is where He failed us for He did not define it. No, He did not fail, for he did not wish to define it, for to define it would limit it. He did not define it because He did not want to exclude anyone. All who feel the load of labor and of being heavy laden are invited by Him to come and rest.

" . . . and I . . ." Jesus Himself invites you to come to Him. He who was one with our God and Father, who dwelt with men, who had no place of His own to lay His head, who was despised and rejected of men, who suffered the death of the cross, who was raised to be at the right hand of God and lives forevermore, He it is that invites you. It is He who labored and was heavy laden for all and so can lift the load from all that invites all to come and rest.

“... I will give you rest.” You are to dwell with Him, He will give you rest, for He can meet the need of each one separately and yet of all. He does not need to leave you while attending to others as does a physician in a hospital, no, he abides with you forever, never leaving you. He deals with each one as though he were His only patient, He meets your every need and yet meets the needs of all.

“... I will give you rest.” Jesus Himself will give you rest. He overcame all that would prevent you from resting and so he can give rest to each and to all. He was tempted as we are tempted, He was lowly as the lowliest, He was despised and rejected by all, He was slain as the great of criminals, but God raised Him and so He can give you rest, even eternal rest. To trust Him, to be obedient to Him, to accept Him is to rest. Let us heed the great invitation and find rest to our souls.

A Correction

Those of our readers who have a copy of the book by Dr. Hershberger, War, Peace, and Non-resistance, will perhaps have read the bibliography at the foot of page thirty-eight, where reference is made to my Brief Catechism etc., and it is stated that this pamphlet teaches that “War was basically right under the old covenant.” This is not correct. My view as expressed in this booklet is that war is basically wrong even in the Old Testament and that only in exceptional cases war was right, namely when God ordered it as a punishment for people who were ripe for it, just as capital punishment was right only when executed according to God’s clear command. Most of Israel’s wars, including most of David’s wars, were wrong because they were not ordered by God. So wrong were most of David’s wars, that he was not even permitted to build the temple. Such a view of war is, of course, only possible for those who believe in the prophets of the Old Testament, who made a real theocracy possible even under human kings, provided these kings were humble enough to follow the prophets, instead of rebelling against them as Saul did or ignoring them as David sometimes did. The Urim and Thummim also were mostly ignored, i.e., by the kings. David sometimes used them, I Sam. 30:7, 8, but not always.—P. H. Richert

Meditations on the Mennonites

J. Winfield Fretz

FAITH OF OUR FATHERS

Faith of our fathers living still
In spite of dungeon, fire, and sword,
O how our hearts beat high with joy
When-e’er we hear that glorious word!

Each Sunday the words to this splendid hymn are sung in hundreds of churches throughout the world. We wonder sometimes what people think of as they sing these words half from memory. Are they thinking of the “faith” they are singing about as their own faith, or is it looked upon as something which only their fathers possessed? One can easily get the impression that it is sung with the latter interpretation. We of this day glory in our fathers’ faith and get a sense of strength and a thrill from it vicariously. As we sing these familiar words we seldom give the impression that the faith is still living in us so strongly that we too would be willing to face dungeon, fire, and sword in defense of it. Rather we give the impression that this faith is something that happened in the past, something that is already accomplished. Like the accounts of the pioneers fighting the Indians, it is thrilling to read about those episodes, but we are in no way expected to face any similar dangers for the faith today.

Our Faith

It would be well for each one of us to examine our faith to see whether it is the kind of a victorious faith that our children will care to sing about. How much is our faith costing us? What are we paying for it? It seems to me our present day faith is mighty shallow, so shallow that it is in grave danger of drying up. This is true for liberals and conservatives alike. We have A faith but not THE faith of our fathers. Our faith lacks the clarity of objective, the depth of passion, the fiery zeal and the courage that enables us to face the dangers and conquer the fears that characterized our fathers’ faith. Like the ancient Hebrews in the time of Joshua we live in a land for which we did not labor, in houses which we did not build, and eat from vineyards and orchards which we did not plant. In short our faith has not been strengthened by challenge. It has been softened by prosperity, comfort, convenience, and popularity. Our fathers’ church was a suffering church but we don’t want a suffering church today. We want to have a popular church and be popular people. Many have found this possible by rationalizing with Daniel Poling who says: “True Christianity is an uncompromising ideal, but the world we live in does not accept the Sermon on the Mount as its code of conduct. Christianity, then must be regarded as a great goal rather than as a present reality.”

RELIEF

Additions to Northwest European Relief Unit

Arlene Sitler has arrived in England to fill a secretarial position at the London Mennonite Center. Her cable message, SAFE, WELL, AND HAPPY, was dated May 26.

Martha Rupel, R.N., Pasadena, California, left for England following a farewell service at Akron Headquarters, May 28. The Brethren Service Committee has loaned her services to the M.C.C. for an indefinite period. Sister Rupel has worked among refugees in Spain, and served for four years in C.P.S.

(The M.C.C. relief program in England, Holland, and France will hereafter be designated as the Northwest European relief program.)

Mines are Hazards to Re-Organizing Life in France

Henry Buller reported May 5, 1945, on his scouting efforts for homes that could be opened to care for large numbers of homeless refugee children. He recounts a visit to the village of Blamont, near the Swiss frontier, to which two Mennonite girls had returned to reopen a children's home with a capacity for twenty-two children. The house seemed to have suffered most from looting of bedding. Brother Buller continued,

"They once more had three children and more were on the demand list. Even though the home did not seem to have suffered too much as a result of the war it seemed too risky to open again because the garden which spreads in terraces about the chateau is mined. About two weeks before our visit a man who eliminated over 400 mines in the village, was killed when he accidentally stepped on a spot which he didn't think was dangerous. I offered the girls the possibility to come to a home of ours until their own garden had been de-mined."

Samuel Goering added the following comment:

"Mines . . . are going to be a problem in France for many years. Everywhere we went people spoke of these dangerous mines. The son of Bro. Joseph Widmer suggested we send a team of mine diggers out. This is a job for experts. All mines are underground and can not be seen. Some mines must be pressed or stepped on four times before they go off. Until fields and places used as military quarters are de-mined, incidents like the one mentioned will continue to happen. All our workers for France or Holland need to learn as much as possible about mines before going there."

Book on Mennonite Relief

The History and Principles of Mennonite Relief Work—An Introduction, a forty-one page book prepared by Bro. M. C. Lehman has recently come off the press. The book tells briefly the story of Mennonite relief service and points out the significance of the relief program of the church. Relief study groups and prospective relief workers will use the book as a class manual, but it will also be of interest to anyone seeking to familiarize himself with the history and principles of Mennonite relief service. The book has appeared at a time when the ministrations of the Christian relief worker is sorely needed.

Single copies of the book may be bought for 20c;

in quantities of ten or more, the cost per copy is 15c. A student's edition, with a syllabus and annotated bibliography added, has also been printed. The cost of this latter edition is 30c per copy; in quantities of ten or more, 25c per copy.

Women's Summer Units Open

The Women's Summer Service Program, sponsored by the M.C.C., will open the last week in May and the first week in June. Approximately eighty girls will serve in five units. With the exception of the unit at the Akron Headquarters Office, all the girls will serve in mental hospitals. The location of the unit, name of unit leader in charge, and approximate enrollment of the various units is as follows:

Location	Unit Leader	No. Enrolled
Cleveland, Ohio	Luella Smith	20
Ypsilanti, Michigan	Lois Gunden	15
Wernersville, Pennsylvania	Miriam Barge	7
Poughkeepsie, New York	Edna Ramseyer	25
Akron, Pennsylvania	Mrs. J. N. Byler	15

Book on Amish in C.P.S.

Two C.P.S. men, David Wagler and Roman Graber, members of the Old Order Amish group, have compiled in book form a collection of articles on camp life, work projects, unusual events, and C.P.S. stories. The 140-page book, titled, The Story of the Amish in Civilian Public Service, while prepared for reading in Amish circles, will be of general interest. The book is written simply, sincerely, and without a note of rancor. It may be procured for one dollar per copy by ordering from C.P.S. 24, Unit III, Boonsboro, Maryland.

Incident at Poughkeepsie

Members of the C.P.S. unit at Hudson River State Hospital, Poughkeepsie, New York, recently had the experience of standing firmly on implications of their peace beliefs when four employees at the hospital were discharged as a result of testimony given by the C.P.S. men. The discharged men were relieved of their employment when the hospital superintendent found them guilty of abusive treatment of patients. The matter was further complicated, and the C.P.S. unit received considerable local publicity, because two of the discharged men were veterans, one from World War II. The C.P.S. men had opportunity to declare themselves opposed to violence and abusive treatment on the wards of a mental hospital as well as on the battle front. They recommended to the hospital authorities that the discharged men be forgiven and offered another opportunity to serve in the hospital.

Church leaders and other local community leaders respected the action of the C.P.S. men and expressed their willingness to help the C.P.S. men in the difficult situation. The American Legion, protested strongly against the presence of C.O.'s in the hospital and demanded an investigation regarding the terms under which C.P.S. men were employed, making sure that members of the unit were not being coddled or given preferential treatment.

A Lesson from History

By Earl E. Salzman

In the twenty-fifth chapter of II Chronicles is a bit of Hebrew history that we might do well to make special study of in these days. Amaziah the king of Judah won a notable victory over the Edomites and came back in glorious triumph to Jerusalem. Then the chronicler says, "Now it came to pass, after that Amaziah was come from the slaughter of the Edomites, that he brought the gods of the children of Seir, and set them up to be his gods." Amaziah won a victory over his enemy, then he worships the god of his enemy. In the next verse we read, "Wherefore the anger of the Lord was kindled against Amaziah, and he sent unto him a prophet, which said unto him, why hast thou sought after the gods of the people, which could not deliver their own people out of thine hand?"

That story seems long ago and far away but how easy that can be used to show what is happening among us today. War is just that. We declare we hate what our enemies do, we detest their ways and ideas, and in the end we do the very thing for which we condemn them. We say we are fighting Nazism and Fascism but what are they in their essential nature? They mean the extreme concentration of all power in the hands of the state. It is against this the war is fought, but in the drift of fighting a totalitarian state we become a totalitarian state ourselves. Nietzsche once said, "When you fight a monster, beware lest you become a monster." "Why seek ye after the gods of the people, which have not delivered their own people out of your hands?"

Peacetime military conscription is a question now up before congress. If this bill is enacted it is the equivalent of having lost this war. Let us remember it is down this road our enemies traveled and against which the war is fought. Universal military service is pictured in glowing terms. We are told it will develop self-control, contribute to the physical health of the nation, furnish employment, develop the moral and spiritual life of the nation, etc. Someone has aptly said, "We need to watch that kitten, it has a way of growing up and turning out to be a tiger." Listen to Maxwell S. Stewart, a war veteran: "Our conscript is not patriotic, he is cowed and submissive though inwardly he is seething with rebellion. This attitude may, as the military men insist, make a good soldier, it does not make a good citizen."

To set up peacetime military conscription is Amaziah all over again. We condemn our enemies for worshipping this god. Will we now take this god and worship it for ourselves?

The Good and Beautiful

By Arthur F. Ortmann

Let's plan for the good and the beautiful, for the best. One day our boys will be coming home—what kind of a home will it be? What kind of a community? What kind of a church life will he find?

Men are planning the future of the world. We are not directly charged with that responsibility, but we too have a planning job to do, a special responsibility, and it is big and important enough to ask for the best that is in us. This job requires the cooperation of everyone, young and old. Everyone should be greatly interested in the future of our country. What kind of a world shall our boys and girls grow up in? We must not only plan how and what we shall do to make our own community better after the boys come back home, we must begin today.

How about starting at home? Is there quarreling, unfriendliness, a sort of gloomy spirit in the home? The good old hometown! With many gone away to defense jobs, stores are closed, lots gone to ugly weeds, windows broken, unpainted buildings, speaking of bygone days, with not a ray of hope for the future.

How about the good old cooperative community spirit? Is there a friendly, neighborly spirit. Strong hearts of faith, courage and hope that shall reach out to help many a one that has been marred and hurt by war to find his rightful place among men again in the community he left but a few years ago.

He will be anxious to be back in his own home church, having been in places surrounded by death, his heart longing for spiritual fellowship, and once again to hear the Words of Life from the lips of his own pastor, to hear the choir sing songs of hope, peace and joy, to feel once again that he does belong, yes, he is one again with those he left. Life will take on a new meaning because we cared enough to carry on and to plan for the good and the beautiful, the welfare of the body, soul, and Spirit in our community.

CONTAMINATION?

household and told the story of the Rich Man and Lazarus. Later I asked, "Why did not you let me go see what was on that bed?" The Bible woman answered, "Those were cooked peppers, and if you had touched them, they would have been defiled and not fit for the people of the house to eat. Besides there were clothes drying near by. Some Hindus consider wet clothes untouchable; others feel that if you touch clean dry clothes, they have to be washed again before they can be used, so it's best to just stay away."

The bus in which my husband was a passenger stopped at a certain village to take on passengers. Near by was a Brahman tea stall. Being thirsty, my husband decided to satisfy his thirst with some tea. As is our custom, for sanitary reasons, he took his own enamel cup and held it out so the Brahman could pour the tea directly from the pot in which it had been brewed into his clean cup. Setting the cup on the counter, he reached into his pocket for some money to pay for the tea, when the Brahman said to him, "You are our enemy." My husband, looking surprised, asked, "How's that?" He was told that he had defiled the tea stall by setting his cup on the counter. He begged pardon and asked if there was anything he could do to make things right. The bus driver, standing near by, said, "No, there is nothing you can do. The next customer who comes will not have seen you set your cup down there, so it won't matter."

I needed some eggs and asked our peon, who is a Hindu, to bring some from the bazaar. He did not say anything, but took the money for them. When he returned later in the afternoon I asked him if he had found some. "Yes," he said, turning to a woman coolie standing next to him, "here they are. I do not touch eggs, so I hired this woman to carry them for me." "How can anyone be contaminated by carrying eggs," I thought to myself.

Ah, that our Hindu brethern might know that "those things which proceed out of the mouth come from the heart; and they defile the man. For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies; these are the things which defile a man." (Matt. 15:18-20)

QUARTERLY REPORT

4th quarter 1944

Early in October it was my privilege as relief director to visit the Mennonite Brethern Mission in Hyderabad because the annual meeting of M.R.C.I. was to be held there. When I returned from there I went to Yeotmal where I met my wife and both of us attended a spiritual life convention at that place. After this I returned to Calcutta. Conditions were steadily improving there and our relief work was gradually being reduced. During the second half of November I was able to attend our missionary conference at Champa, but went back to Calcutta shortly afterwards. About this time the three relief workers, Kauffman, Burkholder, and Beyler arrived and before the Christmas holidays I was able to transfer all accounts as well as remnants of relief work over to them. After arriving home I learned that a fourth relief worker, Harold Sherk, had arrived at Calcutta. He is to be the new director in my place according to M.C.C. orders. By correspondence he has been given all authority and the other men are helping him to get his bearings. Now my duties as a relief worker have ended.

Mrs. Isaac has been able to do her work without interruption during this quarter. We thank God for this. She has had to dismiss the matron from her girls' boarding because of misconduct which was demoralizing the institution. Perhaps suspicion without final proof had much to do with Mrs. Isaac's sickness of the previous quarter. Since the matron's departure, conditions in the boarding have greatly improved.

At our November missionary conference we have been re-stationed to Mauhadih. Our actual going there will depend on the arrival of Miss Augusta Schmidt who is to take the girls' school here at Janjgir. Our estimate is that it will be March before we make the transfer. During January and February I shall be touring in the Janjgir area.

Sincerely yours,

J. F. and Anna Isaac

IN MEMORIAM

Ernest Peters, son of John and Anna (Dalke) Peters was born May 28, 1913, at Corn, Oklahoma. In 1943 he married Ruth Schmidt. To them was born one daughter. Ernest was killed in a truck accident at Gnadau, Germany, on April 17, while serving in the U. S. armed forces. He was a member of the First Church, Aberdeen, Idaho, at the time of his death.

Jacob B. Schmidt, son of Bernhard and Maria Heerfurth Schmidt, was born July 6, 1878, in Marion County, Kansas. In 1900 he became a member of the Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church after having been baptized by Elder Peter Balzer. In 1908 he married Helena Ens with whom he shared life for nearly thirty-seven years. The end of this life came on May 14, 1945.

Mrs. John H. Koehn, nee Marie Wedel, daughter of Karl and Eva Koehn Wedel, was born December 22, 1866, in Mesiliski, Wolhynien, Russia. In 1874 she migrated with her parents to McPherson County, Kansas, where she became a member of the Emmanuel Church upon baptism. In 1886 she married John H. Koehn, who preceded her in death in 1937. She answered the summons of the Lord on April 21, 1945.

Rev. P. J. Wiens Answers the Lord's Summons

Rev. P. J. Wiens passed away June 7 at the Bethel Deaconess Hospital, Newton, Kansas. Rev. Wiens served as missionary in India from 1906 to 1937, when he retired. In recent years he had worked in the Mennonite Historical Library, North Newton.

REQUEST FOR CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE GENERAL FUND OF THE WESTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

For the past six months contributions have been coming in for our Revolving Church Building Fund while our General Fund has been somewhat neglected. Not all bills of the W.D.C. have yet been paid so we kindly ask our churches to plan at an early date to take collections or individual contributions for the General Fund of the W.D.C.

At our last session of the Western District Conference it was resolved that one of the main fundraising projects would be to have each member contribute $1.00 for the Revolving Church Building Fund. So far not half has come in. May we also ask those who have not yet contributed, or who have only contributed in part, to do so soon.

During this month while the bond drive is on some church members may wish to give or assign a bond for either one of the above funds. You may assign the bond to, or register it in the name of THE WESTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE OF THE MENNONITE CHURCH OF NORTH AMERICA.

Please send all contributions through your church treasurer or direct to Mr. Ferd Neufeld, Burrton, Kansas, who is treasurer of the W.D.C.—A. Theodore Mueller, Secretary, Board of Trustees of the W.D.C.

An Open Letter to Dr. Hutchins

(Concerning "In the Name of Our Dead" by Robert Maynard Hutchins, President, University of Chicago, on V-E Day; reprinted in The Mennonite, May 29.)

Doctor Hutchins, in your address on V-E Day, among many splendid things, you say a few things, I (undesigned) must question you. Under subhead "Will we forget," you "predict" that "the present excitement about war criminals will in a few years seem ridiculous." You mean, the United Allies' prosecuting these obvious criminals is a ridiculous matter? Then the killing of Dillinger a few years ago on the streets of Chicago by the F.B.I. was also a ridiculous matter? Further on, you declare this prosecution by the Allies is "illegal?" Then you declare the entire war against these international criminals was illegal? And who ever "intended to kill off all the Germans and Japanese?" (Like the Nazis murdered the Jews) Who ever in this country (in their responsible position of military authority) wants to do anything but justice to these war criminals?

So you call the many times over substantiated (published) reports of most horrible treatment of inmates of scores of concentration camps in Germany "the wildest atrocity stories"?! These multi-murderers you call "human," that "no men are beasts"? No, they are not mere "beasts," that would be an obvious misnomer; let us call them demons! Did you ever read the great German poet, Schiller's "Lied von der Glocke," where he compares your "human men" with worse than beasts— "Gefahrlich ists, den Loew zu wecken; zu fuerchten ist des Tigers Zahn; allein das schrecklichste der Schrecken, das ist der Mensch in seinem Wahn!"

Most humbly, your Nobody,

CORRESPONDENCE

ALEXANDERWOHL MENNONITE CHURCH Goessel, Kansas

Pentecostal Sunday again was a special Sunday for our church as it has been all through the years. But probably it was a more momentous occasion than it ever has been in the past, at least for the last several years. On this Sunday the church, by the grace of God, reaped a large harvest in that seventy-six young people were baptized and taken in as members of the Church of Jesus Christ. May these young people stand firmly on the foundation of the Lord Jesus Christ who is "the same yesterday, today, and forever."

Because the baptismal services were given first place the Sunday School lesson was discussed on Pentecost Monday.

On May 27 the church took the Holy Sacrament of the bread and wine with so large an attendance that some had to find a place in the balcony. Thus as a church we were privileged to honor our Lord and Master in being obedient to His invitation to come, partake, and be blessed in showing forth His death until He comes. The church was decked with flowers brought as a memorial for our late elder, Rev. P. H. Unruh.

These are the days of Bible Schools. Our church, too, and some of the surrounding district schools offered Bible instruction, so that in all more than 120 children of the community availed themselves of this opportunity. Bible instruction was offered in the church, in the Gordon School, in the Green Valley School, and in the Steinbach School.

REPORT ON RECENT SESSION OF THE NORTHERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

By John P. Kleinsasser

The Northern District Conference convened at Henderson, Nebraska, May 26-29, 1945. The Lord gave us some very nice conference weather. It was a missionary conference. "Missions" was the main theme. The motto was, "Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields," John 4:35.

Conference Chorus:

"The Lord has work to do
But he has to do it through me;
How much he does depends
On the kind of servant I'll be.
His hands and feet, His witness,
His ears and eyes to see—
The Lord has work to do,
But He has to do it through me.

The chorus number, "Thank You Lord for Saving My Soul," was the most popular.

The main speakers were: Rev. Alfred Habegger, who brought several messages on "Mission Work Among the American Indians." Rev. Habegger is a missionary to the Cheyenne Indians in Montana. Rev. W. C. Voth of Kansas, who brought messages on "South American Missions." Rev. C. H. Dirks of Kansas, who brought messages on "City Mission Work." Rev. A. P. Waltner of South Dakota spoke on "How May Sunday School Workers Get the Mission Spirit into the Sunday School?" John C. Mueller of South Dakota spoke on "Missions in Relief." Mrs. Alfred Habegger of Montana spoke on "Reaching our Indian Children." Miss Agnetha Fast of Minnesota spoke on the work in the C.P.S. camps.

The Conference passed a resolution urging the members to write personal letters to their Congressmen and Senators opposing peace time military conscription.

The next Conference will be held at the Salem Mennonite Church of Freeman, South Dakota. The following are the newly elected officers:

President—Willard Claassen, Freeman, S. Dakota
Vice-Pres.—George Dick, Bloomfield, Montana.
Sec.—John P. Kleinsasser, Freeman, South Dakota
Treas.—A. A. Penner, Mountain Lake, Minn.
Statistician—Waldo Flickinger, Alsen, N. Dakota
Business Com.—Ben J. Nickel, Butterfield, Minn.
Evangelization Com.—J. J. Regier, Freeman, S. Dak.
Examining Com.—Arthur Ortman, Warroad, Minn.
Education Com.—Erland Waltner, Mountain Lake, Minn.

Peace Com.—E. J. Waltner, Hurley, South Dakota

—Dr. E. E. S. Johnson, pastor of the Hereford Mennonite Church, Bally, has been devoting his life work to teaching, preaching and the gathering of historical papers and documents, which are being preserved in a building at Perkiomen Seminary. The building has become entirely too small because of the large amount of material which he has accumulated. It has been the ambition of Dr. Johnson for some time, to be able to erect a modern library and museum. Several weeks ago this ambition came true when Mr. Wayne Meschter, of Philadelphia, gave $100,000.00 for the purpose of erecting a modern library and museum at Pennsburg. This should be of particular interest to us as Mennonites, because of the fact that a number of papers and documents which can never be replaced pertaining to the Mennonites are being preserved there at the present time. In the new building a lot more space will be available for this purpose. It is Mr. Meschter's wish that all of the material be preserved in the new building. His mother was a Mennonite, so naturally he feels very kindly towards them. This gift is very commendable and will be a living memorial in the years to come.—Bulletin, Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pa.

—UNIVERSAL MILITARY CONSCRIPTION IN PEACETIME will be the subject of hearings beginning June 4 before the House Committee on Post-War Military Policy. According to the release from this Committee, "The hearings will be on the broad general subject and will not be on any particular bill or proposal. . . . Efforts will be made to cover adequately every school of thought. Persons and organizations wishing to testify during the hearings should place their requests with the Honorable Clifton A. Woodrum, Chairman, Committee on Post-War Policy, House of Representatives, Washington 25, D. C.

—The Henry A. Toews family has received its passport according to a report by Rev. C. E. Rediger. June 20 is the tentative sailing date. The family plans to sail from Philadelphia on a Portuguese steamer.

—Bergfelder Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: On May 20 six young people were baptized and received into the Church of Christ. Rev. August Ewert officiated.

—Rev. J. M. Suderman reports that over $400.00 worth of books, etc., were sold at the publication exhibit at the recent conference session.

—Rev. P. P. Wedel was recently honored by his congregation with a program and a fellowship dinner in view of his forty-one years of service to the First Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge. He has resigned from the Foreign Mission Board of which he was chairman.

—Rev. Orlo Kaufman, who became ill and had to be taken to the hospital during conference, was able to leave the hospital on June 8.

—Dr. P. J. Wedel has been confined to his home for some time because of illness.

—Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf left Lisbon, Portugal, for India on June 5. She has been detained in Lisbon for some time.

—Sister Sarah Rempel has resigned as Sister in Charge of the Mennonite Deaconess Hospital, Beatrice, Nebraska, and Mrs. Ursula Frantz has resigned as Administrator of this institution.

The Kingdom of God in the Home

By

Mrs. Willis Rich

The picture above shows a father's hand holding a child's hand. It tells us several things about the relationship between a father and his child. On the part of the father there is a feeling of responsibility, of protection, of loving concern. On the part of the child there is willingness to be led, confidence and trust, a feeling of safety and security. It is symbolical of the relationship between our Heavenly Father and His children. Poetry has been written on this theme: "Take Thou My Hand, O Father," (page 561, Mennonite Hymnary) and "Hold Thou My Hand, Dear Lord," come to mind.

The picture and its symbolical meaning leads us to thoughts of a happy home. One of the petitions of the familiar Lord's Prayer is: "Thy Kingdom Come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." These two sentences have the same meaning. First there is the statement, "Thy Kingdom Come," and then there is an explanation or interpretation of that statement, namely, "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven."

Now Jesus included in this short prayer the earnest request that the will of God, which is being perfectly done in heaven, may be perfectly done on earth. It is strange that so many Christian people either overlook or misunderstand this statement of Jesus. They seem to think that all we need worry about is to get our souls safely from this earth to the heaven hereafter. This earth is a "vale of tears." Life is "labor and sorrow," our homes are very unhappy, we are not appreciated, but stick it out bravely and faithfully,—in heaven there will be everlasting bliss. And there is much truth in this. But our Saviour never left it at this. He said "Thy will be done on earth."

Now what does all this have to do with a happy home? It has everything to do with it. If God's will is to be done on earth, that includes our homes. Jesus thought we could do it, or He would not have included it in His prayer. Surrendered Christian parents, feeling their special responsibility may pray in their hearts

"Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in my home."

To be more specific: What does it mean, "Thy will be done in my home?" Do I sit back and fold my hands and wait for something to happen? Hardly. I know that I can thwart His will. I can prevent it from being done. I know that I must be doing His will.

The Kingdom of God on earth, in our community, or in our nation, depends entirely upon the surrender of the Human Race to doing God's will. Each one of us individually is responsible to see that so far as we are concerned we are willing and glad to do this. We can say like Joshua "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." But you need the cooperation of all the other members of your community, the nation, the world, to bring the Kingdom perfectly in all those areas. We know we are far from realizing this. But—in our own homes, we parents have practically complete control. That is one area where we can have the Kingdom of God here on earth. "Thy Kingdom come" can be real, just as Jesus prayed and as we have prayed many, many times. Most of us who are in earnest about being Christian parents will agree that that is exactly what we want. How badly do we want it?

If we want a happy home, all the relationships must be right. The Kingdom of God is the Kingdom where all the relationships are right,—as they are in heaven. In a happy home there is joy in another's presence and companionship, there is mutual sharing of joys and sorrows, there is ready sympathy and understanding, there is confidence and trust on the part of each in the other. All the relationships are right. There is nothing under cover, no subterfuge or deceit, no indisposition to forgive. All the relationships are right. A happy home is the nearest thing to heaven on earth that we can experience and I believe it is God's will that everyone of His children should experience it. Many who have the opportunity, spoil it. Gradually, perhaps by small and subtle ways seemingly unimportant ways, the relationships become wrong; suspicions creep in, one withholds things from the other, and the day comes when the relationships are all wrong. God wants them to be right.

If we put our heart and mind and strength to it, I believe it is possible to achieve right relationships between all members of a Christian home. We can determine to settle differences as they arise. Most misunderstandings can be dissolved by quick action if we do not let them fester.

Consider also the larger implications of achieving the Kingdom in the home. Each member of a family who has learned right relationships in the home, will find it easier to carry it over into other areas,—in business, in school, on the playground, in the neighborhood. A whole community of Christian homes where the earnest purpose of each is to live in loving relationships will make the prayer "Thy Kingdom Come," true in the community. I wonder if that is the way God will work in bringing about the Kingdom of God on earth. One thing seems certain,—we all have a part to play in making our Saviour's prayer come true. "The Kingdom of God is within you," He said.

(Prayer: Father, forgive us for having tried to live together on anti-Kingdom principles. We see the results in messed-up relationships. Thou hast set us within thy Family. Teach us to enter into loving relationships one with another, so Thy Kingdom May Come. Amen.)

TO HIM ALL LIFE WAS BEAUTY

*To Him all life was beauty. The sun upon the hills,
The sweeping shadows and the winding lane.
Morning He loved, with dewdrops on the flowers;
Evening, with sunset and soft, warm April rain.
Friends He found in lepers stumbling to Him,
Love in those who hate, grace in sinner's eyes.
Dawn He saw in all earth's new-born glory,
Twilight and darkness, and hope in human sighs.
Youth was His, and springtime, and music in the trees; Life was His, and sunshine, and the murmuring of the bees.*

*Joy in healing broken hearts; manhood's noble strife;
All the wonder and the beauty of a sacred human life.*

*He walked the common lanes, the city streets He trod,
And in His heart was beauty—the beauty born of God.*
—A. L. C.

Ten Things for which no one has ever yet been sorry are:

1. For doing good to all.
2. For being patient toward everybody.
3. For hearing before judging.
4. For thinking before speaking.
5. For holding an angry tongue.
6. For being kind to the distressed.
7. For asking pardon for all wrongs.
8. For speaking evil of none.
9. For stopping the ears to tale-bearers.
10. For disbelieving most of ill reports.

WHERE TO LOOK

If you want to be distressed, look within.
If you want to be defeated, look back.
If you want to be distracted, look around.
If you want to be dismayed, look ahead.
If you want to be delivered, look to Christ.
If you want to be delighted, look up.

EDITORIALS

SIN is primarily a wrong attitude of heart rather than a wrong deed, although it is also the latter. The fact that a catalog of a thousand pages would fall far short of listing all the different sins that man is capable of is evidence that out of the heart there cometh that which is evil. A wrong attitude can express itself in an infinite number of ways. Sin is not primarily drinking, immorality and the like, although these are tragically "wrong." Sin is primarily that attitude towards life out of which all these sinful acts arise. Sin is primarily a condition of excessive self-love. To the Pharisees and scribes who were zealous of avoiding sin, Jesus said, "And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength . . . And . . . Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself." There is no requirement greater than this for any man. It fulfills the law and the prophets. It is fundamental to the Christian life. The Pharisees put the emphasis upon deeds rather than upon the attitude of the heart. They had "works" (done for their own sake and not God's) but not a heart full of "love" towards God and man. They were superficially righteous, for they did not appear guilty of the grosser sins, but they were rotten with sin on the inside, for they were full of excessive self-love. They "enjoyed" their holiness because they loved themselves. Everything existed for their selfish purposes, even their religion. They were unwilling to look upon themselves as sinners. Sin is that condition of excessive self-love that causes inevitable shortages in the love that should go to God and fellowman. We are to love ourselves, yes, but we are to love our neighbor as much as ourselves, and we are to love God with our whole being. When too much love is bestowed upon the self then there is not enough to go around to our fellowman and God does not receive all of our love which belongs to Him. Sin is anti-love attitude and action. Sin is anti-God, who is Love. We all love ourselves too much; we are all sinners. It is from this excessive self-love that Jesus Christ would save us.

LIABILITIES and ASSETS are both used in business, but so often in life we wish for assets only. Yet are there assets without liabilities and liabilities without assets? It is a liability to be a drunkard. Yet a drunkard through the grace of God can be changed, and he can take his liability and use it as an asset in understanding and rescuing other drunkards. He who is free from drunkenness has a great asset, but his inability to feel deeply with the slaves of drink is in a sense a liability. The young man who marries the winner of the beauty contest may consider the beauty of his spouse as a great asset. Yet tempting that spouse to think very highly of herself and perhaps love herself somewhat too much, that beauty may become a liability to the young man who might have received more generous love from someone less beautiful. E. Stanley Jones points out that as a whole the wives of missionaries are not exceedingly beautiful. Perhaps, that has something to do with them being in missionary service and thus giving a ministry of unselfish love to others. Niemoeller's imprisonment was a tragic liability in a way, but through the grace of God it also came to have its asset side, for in those long years he read three hundred volumes of English literature. Bishop Bergrav, the Norwegian bishop, who also was imprisoned, wrote a book and several monographs. This reminds us of Pilgrim's Progress by Bunyan and much of the writings of George Fox, which are assets counterbalancing the liabilities of prison terms. One of the General Conference missionaries, while interned in the Philippines read volumes on theology and he also read most of Latourette's seven volumes on the History of the Expansion of Christianity, something which perhaps some of the members of the Foreign Mission Board have not succeeded in doing. High intelligence is an asset, but it can easily lead to too high a self esteem with a consequent breakdown in fellowship with others. Great wholeness of body and mind and spirit is a distinct asset, but there also may be a liability side when it comes to ministering to those who lack this wholeness. God sent his Son in human form to be tempted like we are. If that had not happened, he might not have come very close to us. We certainly need not hunt liabilities for the purpose of finding assets, but we might well remember that assets frequently are not without their liabilities and that liabilities frequently are not without their assets. The grace of God is great. Realizing His grace we can say with Paul, "When I am weak, then am I strong." It is possible that the weakest point in our character can, through his grace, become the strongest, and a hard trial can, through his grace become a great blessing.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

NATIVE INDIAN WORKER REPORTS TO BOARD

January 23, 1945

Dear Sirs:

In the name of the Indian Church Conference, I, as the Secretary-Treasurer of the Finance Committee wish to thank the Board, the patrons and the friends of the mission work in India for their fervent prayers and faithful financial support of the evangelistic and primary works. The Mission certainly entrusted the Indian Conference with great responsibility and we assure the Board that we are doing our level best to prove ourselves equal to the responsibility entrusted to us.

Last year the churches, in spite of awful dreariness and hard times, very faithfully contributed Rs 5915 rupees toward the Pastor Fund, Home Mission Fund, Widow Fund and the General Fund in addition to what they paid for their local need such, as for Primary Schools, Poor Fund, and annual grants for the Bible and Tract Societies.

Our Conference has just closed. The reports of the various pastors and committees have shown remarkable progress in different phases of the church activities. Many baptisms were reported. Two new churches will shortly be organized in the Mauhadih area, thus making a total number of organized churches affiliated to the Conference thirteen, which is very encouraging. Two brethren were ordained to the order of Eldership and one brother to that of the Evangelists. Time and space do not permit me to give a complete report of the Conference, but you will soon read it in the India Calling.

Now, as the signs of the time indicate the speedy return of Christ, and the masses of precious souls are perishing in sin, we strongly urge on the Mission Board to comply with our request for money for 1945 described in our various budgets.

When we compare the extensive field we have to proclaim the Gospel in and the handful of Mission workers on the field one can easily realize our difficulty and inability of doing so little. For example in Janjgir Tahsil alone there are 758 villages with 550,637 population. Then how much can you expect from a limited number of workers. Truly speaking the amount of our budgets should be increased rather than reduced so that more workers may be added to our list.

We have strong hope that our wise Board will sanction our budgets. Thank-you in anticipation. With greetings.

Your humble Co-Worker,
J. Walters

Why Try to Define Truth?

Truth is one of those great facts which lies beyond the realm of human definition. It needs to be discovered, studied and lived. When one approaches truth in this way he finds so much that is worthwhile that he does not ask for a definition nor does he try to produce one himself.

When Jesus said to Pilate, "Thou sayest that I am a King. To this end have I been born, and to this end am I come into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Everyone that is of the truth heareth my voice," Pilate replied, "What is truth?" John 18:37b. Pilate wanted a definition. He had missed the point in the statement of Jesus. Jesus spoke of the great conviction of being a bearer of truth in His life. Pilate simply wanted a statement. Whether he was seriously interested may never be known. So far as we know Jesus did not answer him in words. Pilate told the accusers of Jesus that he found no crime in Him. Nevertheless he delivered Jesus to His accusing hecklers over whom he had legal authority. Perhaps a definition of truth would simply have given Pilate new material about which to argue with others.

Earlier in His career on earth Jesus gave another bit of helpful insight into His attitude toward truth. John 8:31,32. Jesus therefore said to those Jews that had believed Him, "If ye abide in my word then are ye truly my disciples: and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

Jesus had succeeded in convincing some of the Jews that He was trustworthy. Again He gave no definition of truth. There was an opening to a better understanding of the greater Way of living. If He, whom we call Lord and Master, stood above, defining a word of such rich meaning as "truth," why waste the time and energy in trying to define something of which we have experienced too little as yet? Why not abide by His suggestion to live with increasing freedom, that remarkable reward of living a life devoted to truth? To do otherwise means to confine one's self within the limitations of one's own understanding.

It is time well spent to use a concordance and look up all of the references to truth which are found in the Bible. That takes one out of the realm of narrow limitations into the field of great discoveries. Here one finds richness of meaning which has been discovered by honest seekers after truth throughout the ages.

The General Conference as I saw It

By J. N. Smucker, newly-elected Conference President

The genial hospitality, thorough preparation and efficiency of the local church and surrounding communities did much to make the Conference a pleasant experience. The fairness and efficiency of the presiding officer also greatly contributed to the success of the Conference. The large attendance from the near-by churches showed a genuine interest in the work of the Church.

The reports and recommendations of the various Boards and Committees indicated that much actual work and planning had been done, and that there was vision in the minds of those in responsible positions. One was impressed with the vastness of the Church's task, but also with the tremendous possibilities that presented themselves for a forward movement all along the Conference frontier. What opportunities for greater service and faithfulness in the Lord's work are open to the Mennonite Church in every branch of Church work! The great need of the world cries out all about us for the gospel of Jesus Christ. To me, the two great words, "Opportunity" and "Responsibility" stand out from the various impressions received at the Conference.

The music presented through-out the sessions added much to the atmosphere of the Conference. Groups large and small brought the Gospel message to the assembly in song. The high point along this line came on Sunday evening when the Memorial Hall was filled to overflowing to hear the combined choruses. If we can keep the Mennonite Church a truly singing church it will have a great future in continuing to bring the Good News to a needy world.

By Jacob J. Enz, Pastor, Nappanee, Indiana

As a young minister who attended the General Conference for the first time in that capacity I have come away with mingled feelings regarding the recent sessions of that conference. To me the conference was first of all a source of encouragement and inspiration. Then too—and I believe most delegates probably agree in this, the conference was definitely a source of deep concern.

It was a source of encouragement and inspiration because there was real evidence of growth. The emphasis upon unity which goes back to the very beginnings of the General Conference was felt in a new way when not only new churches were added but also the possibility of a whole conference joining hands with the General Conference became evident. There has been growth in the scope of the foreign mission program with Africa, South America, and Mexico coming onto the horizon of our program. No less encouraging is the progress and further attempts being made toward a more adequate integration of conference activities. There has also been definite progress in other areas such as the work of the Boards of Publication and Education, but one wonders whether these groups could not do more if they had more of our interest and support. We are cutting off the supply lines to our work in the field by ignoring these needy areas.

There were areas that were matters of deep concern to me. It is strange that one of the major areas of concern is the same as one that has given us encouragement. It is in the area of unity. At a time when churches are uniting with us in a common task there are also evidences of a real need for a renewed consecration of those already within to that unity and the foundation of that unity—even Jesus Christ. This unity can be successful only where there is mutual confidence and mutual willingness to grow. To me this unity is important because I feel the real contribution of our conference to Christendom is a non-resistant position firmly rooted and grounded and nourished by a sound biblical foundation—a position sorely needed in our time. If this be a valid observation then we ought to be deeply concerned about maintaining a solid front in these times.

Despite these remarks I return to what I stated at the first. The conference was definitely a source of encouragement and inspiration to me.

By H. A. Fast, former conference field secretary, then director of Mennonite C. P. S. camps, and now college Bible teacher.

The recent session of the General Conference, in my mind, was one of the most significant I have ever attended.

1. It provided a wonderful opportunity for friendly and stimulating friendship with a lot of fine Christian people. Many of these one would meet in no other way. It is good to know that our Conference is still a fellowship at work rather than merely an ecclesiastical organization turning its own wheels.

2. It was undergirded and guided by a deep, genuine and prayerful concern for the Conference and its share in the Kingdom enterprise. There was a deep concern that we be one in heart, soul and spirit as we work at this God-given task.

3. It made us painfully aware of the fact that we are still far too human and that we have far to go before we reach the fullness of the stature of Jesus Christ our Lord. We realized that we must be much more in prayer and that there must be much higher dedication before we attain to God's requirements of us.

4. It was a Conference of outstanding accomplishment. Convening as it did in a time of war and of great uncertainty, it nevertheless manifested a faith and a courage sufficient to undertake great things for Christ and His cause. This was evident in reports and recommendations of boards and committees and it was notably manifest in the undertakings the Conference approved. Numerous illustrations of this could be given. To me it was particularly gratifying that the Conference had the vision, the faith and the courage to reaffirm in such clear-cut language its adherence to our historic and scriptural position on the question of peace, war and military training; to adopt in such a whole-hearted manner the provision for a functioning board of mutual aid; to urge and approve the early establishment of an institution for the mentally ill; to suggest a clear-cut and helpful standard for ministerial ordination; and to open a generous door for effective cooperation and eventual merging with the Central Conference of Mennonites. Forward-looking steps like these give one reason for profound gratitude.

God grant that our Conference now may have the continuing grace, courage and consecration to follow through on these resolutions and then serve our Lord and Savior and His cause with whole-hearted self-forgetful love and devotion.

On Being Saved

"In China they do not ask a man whether he is saved, they ask his neighbor."

The writer attended a revival meeting some years ago and remained in the service until the late hours of the night. After the sermon the meeting became one of high elation. There was much rhythmical singing, many prayers and not a little "shouting."

Among those who led in this service was one of the community farmers who became quite carried away in his happiness. Over and over he shouted as he raced about over the church, "Glory, glory, I'm saved! I'm saved!" All who were present rejoiced with him in his assurance.

The next morning as the writer walked the several miles to the school where he was teaching, he heard in a field above the road the strident tones of an angry voice and the sound of heavy, thumping blows as if some one were being beaten with a club. He turned at once into the field and saw before him the farmer of the evening before now busily engaged in beating his horse with a heavy club. At the same time he was roundly cursing it because it would not stand still.

The spectator wondered then whether on this matter of being saved it would be better to ask not the man, but his horse.

Salvation should save men both in this life and for the life to come. It made some changes in the lives of Zacchaeus and Mary of Magdala.

"In China they do not ask a man whether he is saved, they ask his neighbor."—D. W. Bittinger in the Gospel Messenger

The War and the Mennonites in Canada

By John G. Rempel

When the war broke out our hearts were filled with anxiety. The instinct for self-preservation so often clouds the human mind. The Mennonites in Canada were unable to march in unity. The oldtimers of Manitoba founded the so-called Aeltestenrat (Council of Elders) which represented eight Mennonite churches of the more conservative trend. They interpreted the order-in-council as extending privileges to them alone. This assumption was probably not without grounds. The rest of the Mennonites in the three western provinces: Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta and the province of British Columbia got organized too and were represented in the Western Committee.

The government of Canada was from the very beginning of the war inclined to let the Mennonites choose an alternative service. On the other hand, the enlistment of so many young Mennonites in the army was greeted with satisfaction and naturally encouraged to the utmost.

The schism among the Mennonites found its expression in the fact that the more conservative churches represented in the Aeltestenrat did not want to render any service at all under government authority if at all possible. The other churches represented in the Western Committee, of whom David Toews was chairman, were willing to render some kind of service to their country under government authority. The immigrants since 1923 who had served as ambulance men and nurse orderlies during the first great war in Russia thought of the same kind of service in their new home land. They probably did not take into account the difference in conditions here and over there. In Russia they served in compact groups under civilian authorities. For example: The All-Russian Union of Municipalities had seventy-five ambulance trains, many hospitals, field ambulances, etc. This organization alone employed about 4,500 young Mennonites.

The committees presented their cases to Ottawa. Ottawa found a compromise: the work in camps such as building roads, cutting trees in the forests of the Rocky Mountains for mine props, fighting infested trees in Jasper Park, Alberta, serving as fire brigades in the forests of British Columbia. The men in camps received 50 cents a day and board but they had to provide their own clothing.

Such a solution was looked upon favorably by our churches. The men were in groups with other C.O.'s, not of Mennonite origin. We were in a position to provide them with spiritual leaders—the camp preachers. We would have been glad for such a solution if we could have sent all our boys of military age to these camps. But they first had to appear before the War Service Board. Quite a few were not recognized as C.O.'s and were directed to military camps. Most of them sent the papers back and insisted on being Mennonites and C.O.'s. A rough guess would place the number of these rejected for Saskatchewan alone at one hundred. Most of them simply went on in their daily work as usual, some for a year or two or even more without being molested. A new War Service Board or War Selective Board settled the matter with these defaulters and none of them to my knowledge have suffered any consequences because of the default. In Manitoba perhaps not so many were rejected upon their application for C.O. status. But quite a few were jailed, some for quite long terms, because they declined to go and train at a military camp. In Saskatchewan only a few have served short terms in jail and that was in a way their own fault. Some boys asked for postponement on the ground that they were needed on the farm. Being rejected on these grounds and directed to a military camp they made another application as Mennonites and C.O.'s. They then were told: "It's too late now."

There the question might arise: Why didn't they apply as C.O.'s in the first place? The answer is: When a farm labor shortage became evident the C.O.'s were directed to farms and most of the camps were closed. The C.O. boys on the farms had to pay $15.00 to the Red Cross but received for themselves $25.00 monthly. To avoid these obligations of paying to the Red Cross some took a chance and applied for a status of a farmer only in order to be entitled to the whole sum of $40.00. When a married man once talked to me about Mennonites not being "smart" enough to dodge the obligations of paying to the Red Cross I asked him, "Is the Mennonite faith worth to you $15.00 a month?" He looked down and answered in a low voice, "Yes, certainly."

The great majority of our boys are now on farms; very few are in camps. Things have greatly changed since the first year of the war. So have the Selective Service Boards in their treatment of the C.O.'s. There was hardly a young man this year or the last year whose application for C.O. status was rejected. According to the last report I have received from Regina, the provincial capitol of Saskatchewan, there were about 20 men in camps in Saskatchewan, about 50 men in slaughter houses and 1,600 men on farms. The great majority of men on farms pay $15.00 monthly to the Red Cross. A few pay $20.00-$25.00. Married men in most cases pay $7.50 a month. This picture represents more or less accurately the situation in the other provinces too.

Now a few words about the medical corps. Nearly two years ago an order-in-council was passed permitting the Mennonites, in fact all the C.O.'s, to enlist in the Canadian Army Medical Corps. Up to that time no one with a C.O. status has been admitted into the army. According to this order-in-council these Mennonites who joined the medical corps have all the rights and privileges of the soldier and are of course subject to all of the obligations and duties of a soldier except that they are not required under any circumstances to bear arms. Perhaps a few hundred of our young men have enlisted in the army under these conditions. The first platoon of C.O.'s took their basic training at Petersborough near Toronto in Ontario. There were forty-three of them. They drilled without rifles. The records of the camp disclose the fact that this was the first platoon in more than four years in this camp that went through their basic training without a single penalty being handed out to the men. That means that no one ever was in late in the night, every one made his bed according to the rules, etc. A splendid record! Most of these men are now overseas. Some have been killed on the battlefield while serving the wounded.

These arrangements would have been of great satisfaction to us had it not been for one great draw-back as we see it. After these young men had had their basic training they were assigned to different army units and so were scattered all over the army at home and abroad. They were exposed to the influence of army life and that single, not in groups. We were unable to look after their spiritual needs. But war is war; it's a terrible thing and a grim business.

As a whole we have every reason to be thankful to God who has helped us through all these years of war and also to our government in its consideration of our faith in these eventful years. We say as a whole. We shall not forget those mothers who will tell you with tears in their eyes about a son killed on the battlefield either as a medical corps man while serving the wounded or—we shall mention it here, too—in active service. We must confess that there is a great deal of guilt on our part too that so many young men have turned away from the faith of their fathers. We have not done our duty fully. We must repent.

There is one more thing I would like to mention. It worries me a great deal. We in Canada have practically no statistics about our young men who have served or who are serving in one way or another. Our Mennonite churches in U.S.A. have brought great financial sacrifices in helping to maintain the camps for their young men. Our sacrifices in Canada in this respect are not so great. But our brother churches in the U.S.A. had a hand in the administration of the camps, and I see by the papers they have everything on record: the number of men in different camps and in other branches of service, etc. We in Canada have practically nothing. Everything is in the hands of the government. I trust that after the war a Mennonite historian will dig into the government annals of war time and provide us with the desired data.

And now, what's your opinion? Shall we survive with our faith in nonresistance? Or shall we perish? Look upon the number who have enlisted! Look upon the proud mothers who dream of their sons getting high awards and promotions! That's the way to become a pessimist. But turn to the other picture: look upon those who faithfully remain in their posts as C.O.'s so many years! Look upon those mothers who pray for their sons that they might endure. Let us hold to the faith. God still is Master of this world.

General Conference Resolutions

39. RESOLVED, That Article "39—Treasuries" of the General Conference Constitution be declared void, and replaced by the following:

"39—Central Treasury"

(Vote was by ballot) P. A. Wedel, J. M. Regier

40. RESOLVED, That the retiring president be given the assignment to prepare a synopsis of the various trust funds, sources and regulations of same, and that same be published at the discretion of the Executive Committee. Freeman Schwartz, John Raugh.

41. RESOLVED, to have the Foreign Mission Board clear up the misunderstanding occurring under the title "Incapacitated Missionary Fund," as found in the "Report of the Trust Funds." A. J. Neuen-schwander, John Bartel.

42. RESOLVED, To adopt the whole report of the Trustees including the auditors report. J. H. Janzen, Walter A. Claassen.

43. RESOLVED, That since the old seal of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of N. A. used to May 31, 1945, erroneously carried the date of May 5, 1891, the conference Trustees herewith are instructed to have the proper corrections made. H. E. Suderman, H. N. Harder.

44. RESOLVED, That the matter of recognizing the services of brother J. J. Eymann (on the Board of Trustees) be referred to the Resolutions Committee. A. E. Funk, H. E. Suderman.

45. RESOLVED, That the Resolutions Committee draw up a resolution recognizing the service of brother H. E. Suderman as Trustee of the Conference. J. J. Thiessen, T. A. van der Smissen.

46. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 1 of the Doctrine and Conduct Report, which reads as follows: "We recommend that in view of the real need for Christian literature of Mennonite authorship dealing with doctrinal and practical problems in the Christian life that such persons who are qualified by training and experience submit articles and pamphlets to the Committees on Doctrine and Conduct." W. K. Claassen, C. C. Wedel.

47. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 2 of the Doctrine and Conduct Report, which reads as follows: "We recommend that the leaders in the General Conference dedicate themselves anew to the teaching and experience of the foundational fact of regeneration through Jesus Christ and the resulting principles of conduct for which our fathers sacrificed so dearly." W. K. Claassen, C. C. Epp.

48. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 3 of the Doctrine and Conduct Report, which reads as follows: "We recommend that the Committee on Doctrine and Conduct plan a short series of programs to be used by the Christian Endeavor Societies, these programs to be built around the teachings of our church, or that it plan a series of programs for the C.E. based on the 'Mennonite Articles of Faith,' submitting complete programs, containing worship period, songs, poems, articles and illustrations in pamphlet form to each C.E. in the Conference, and also publish the same in our church papers." W. K. Claassen, J. J. Thiessen.

49. RESOLVED, That the Committee on Doctrine and Conduct be empowered to produce a book called, "Doctrines of the Bible" with the substantial collaboration of our church leaders. Don E. Smucker, Erland Waltner.

50. RESOLVED, That we begin with the Coordinating Report on Monday morning. J. S. Schlutz, A. J. Neuenschwander.

51. RESOLVED, To adopt the who'e report of the Committee on Doctrine and Conduct, including the treasurer's and auditor's reports. Henry Hege, T. A. van der Smissen.

52. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 1 of the Coordination Committee report, which reads as follows: "Duties of Executive Committee to remain as defined in the constitution. It should serve also as a steering committee to assign responsibility for needed service to some particular Board or Committee." H. A. Fast, H. N. Harder.

53. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 2 of the Coordination Committee report, which reads as follows: "In the interest of closer cooperation between Boards and a more united program of advance we recommend:

a. An annual union meeting of all Boards and Standing Committees in a Council of Boards to provide clearance for common problems, to review the work of the Conference as a total effort and to decide on budgets of Boards and Standing Committees. This Council should include the officers of the General Conference and the presidents of the District Conferences. The president of the General Conference should call and preside over the meetings and the secretary of the General Conference should keep the minutes.

b. That Boards with related interests seek ways of cooperating with one another for their mutual advantage.

c. That Boards having related interests carefully consider the advantage of cooperation in employing an executive secretary to serve their separate as well as their common interests.

d. That whatever possible and advisable conference committees be associated with some Board having interests most closely related to their own. H. A. Fast, J. M. Regier.

54. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 3 of the Coordination Committee report, which reads as follows: "In the interests of closer cooperation between the General Conference and the District Conferences we recommend:

a. A special copy of General Conference resolutions be sent after each session as soon as available to the officers of the District Conferences.

b. That it be suggested to District Conferences, that they take note of policies adopted by the General Conference, and as far as they are able, assist in carrying them into effect.

c. That District Conference Committees be asked to include as ex-officio members of their committees, a member from the parallel board or committee of the General Conference wherever that is possible.

d. (1) That the president of the General Conference be asked to visit the sessions of District Conferences and (2) to visit churches a) in behalf of Conference interests, its unity, its spiritual welfare, and its program of service, and b) in order to keep in close touch with Conference needs and problems. He should submit a written report of this work and of his findings." H. A. Fast, Paul Baumgartner.

55. RESOLVED, That we adopt the whole report of the Coordination Committee. T. A. van der Smissen, H. N. Harder.

56. RESOLVED, To adopt recommendation No. 1 of the Publication Board report, which reads as follows: "In view of the fact that through the adoption of the Hundred Per Cent Subscription Plan our Conference papers, the Bundesbote and the Mennonite, find entrance into many homes that otherwise would not be receiving them, we recommend that the Conference reaffirm its approval of this plan and urge the churches which have yet not adopted the same to do
